Tealer's 46 Points Set New Record

Big Eight Openers On Saturday

Cal, Oakland Vie With Cindermen In Triple Meet

Lou Vasquez takes his City College trackmen to the University of California this Saturday for their first triangular meet against Cal Frosh and Oakland. The Oakland team will furnish the Rams with their opening Big Eight meet.

The team is shy of veterans this year, and was hurt by the loss of Myron Zimmerman, ace middle distance runner. Ken Richter and Ron Anderson, both second-year men, will be used to fill the gap left by Zimmerman.

Hurdler James Thomas, runner-up for the High School Academic Athletic Association championship, can handle four different events. He is listed as a high jumper, low hurdler, high hurdler and 440-yard sprinter. Wilfred Gasper, 6-4½ high jump champion, also doubles as a 13-foot pole vaulter.

Bob Hammond, a single event man, runs the mile. Hammond is showing early signs of becoming an outstanding college miler.

Holders of last year's dual meet championship, City College will be putting its title on the line against such improved teams as Santa Rosa and Sacramento.

Events and men competing are listed below:

Sprints: Don Baekle, Mission; Bill Barrington, Lincoln; Roland Carr, Washington; Frank Godee, St. Ignatius; Roland Liddle, Lincoln; Don Nasser, Lincoln; Lionel Sims, Baton Rouge; Charles Stewart, Mission; Will Wilson, Washington.

Distance: Roy Buckman, Balboa; Ed Chavez, Lowell; Dave Feldman, Washington; Jim Foster, Mission; Harold Gilze, Ohlone; Bob Hammond, Washington; Pete Jilton, Berkeley; Blake Westman, Washington.

Shot—Discus: Dave Azov, Washington; Rich Holbrook, Lincoln; Pete Morgan, Lincoln; Doug Neuhery, Balboa; Mike Reid, Balboa; Rich Ittstow, Balboa.

Hurdlers: Richard Aikins, Washington; John Cressa, Balboa; Bob Guddee, St. Ignatius; Jim Guzmiran, Dallas High; Ray Herrick, Polytechnic; James Thomas, Washington; Ed Wilton, Washington.

Pole vault: Wilfred Gasper, Polytechnic; Martin Mier, Polytechnic; George Wise, Balboa.

High jump: Ron McPherson, Washington.

Guddee Seeks Full Block Membership

In order to reach this semester's goal of 100 per cent membership, Bob Guddee, president of the Block SF, last week asked students who are eligible to join the society.

The membership drive is being handled by Block SF winners representing each sports activity as follows: Rich DeConti, basketball; Roger Ferrari, baseball; Gene Craft, football; Pastor Valle-Garay, soccer; and Ken Richter and Guddee, track.

Aside from the membership drive, the Block SF is planning to hold a dance, which is scheduled on March 29 at Smith Hall, from 9 p.m. to midnight, Guddee stated.

Ram, Cub League Opener May Be Postponed A Week

Though Big Eight conference officials are mulling over the idea of moving the first Big Eight games from March 16 to March 23, Coach Bill Fischer announced, as of last week, that the Rams were scheduled to meet Santa Rosa in a double-header, at their home grounds this Saturday.

Big Eight coaches have asked for the setback in the schedule because of rains which have hampered diamond activity. Fischer was unable to release a starting line-up for the possible double bill but expressed interest in Ray Bauer, 1954 vet Frank Brinkley, Bill Flanagan, Rich Medagiia, Tom Roper and Gene Russo.

Holdovers from last year's champions include Roger Ferrari, Bob Bandettini, and Blair LeMire. Fischer's needs stem around the pitcher's mound, and Jim Datzman may be one of the hurlers to take a starting turn.

Ram Trackster Ruled Ineligible

Myron Zimmerman, the Ram's top middle distance runner last season, was declared ineligible for athletic competition last week because of a grade deficiency.

Zimmerman holds times of 49.0 in the quarter-mile and 1.59 in the half-mile, both times near the college records of 48.9 and 1.57, respectively.

A graduate of George Washington High School, Zimmerman was tutored while there by current Ram track coach Lou Vasquez, who is starting his first season with the college's track team.

Continuing to work out with the track team, Zimmerman's immediate plans in the way of future competition during the season will be limited to open events such as those featured in the Stockton Relays and the West Coast Relays at Fresno.

Golf Team Plays Modesto Friday In League Start

City College golfers will get their first test Friday when they open the golf season against Modesto at Harding Golf Course.

As of last week, Coach Grover Klemmer said, the top eight men are Dick Rose and Don McDowell, shooting in the high seventies; Larry Barr, Frank Hubert, and Mike Evans, shooting in the low eighties; and John White, Bob Charlstrom, and Bob Zimmerman, all shooting in the high eighties.

With all practice matches being called off so far, Klemmer said, he has had very little time to decide on the starting five for Friday's match.

Results of the inter-squad golf matches, held February 15 and 21 at Sharp Park, showed veteran McDowell ahead of the pack with a three match 81-85-81—247, an average of 82.3 per match.

Two newcomers, Barr and Rose, showed promise of things to come with their sterling play. Barr shot an 85 and an 82, which was very good when compared to other golfers. Rose, although playing only one game, turned in the best performance with a sparkling 80 on his first day of competition. Two late additions, Tony Agliolo and Evans, were added to the squad during the inter-squad aetion.

Fraternities Open AMS Cage League

Alpha Sigma Delta and Alpha Phi Epsilon will tip off tonight at 7 p.m. in the first game of the evening's double bill in Inter-Fraternity basketball play, Mike Monteith, Associated Men Student president, announced yesterday.

In the second game, beginning at 8:15 p.m., Aipha Kappa Rho will take on Beta Phi Beta's quintet. The league play began last night with games between Beta Tau and Gamma Phi Ypsilon, and Phi Beta Delta and last year's champions, Zeta Phi Sigma.

Games of 32 minute length, with 10 minute halves, begin at 7 p.m. and 8:15 p.m. on Tuesdays and Wednesdays. There are nine teams in the IFC league, Monteith said, with Tau Chi Sigma the only fraternity not entering a team. The nine teams are Aipha Kappa Rho, Aipha Sigma Delta, Beta Tau, Beta Phi Beta, Phi Beta Delta, Zeta Phi Sigma, Lambda Phi, Aipha Phi Epsilon, and Gamma Phi Ypsilon.

"In the independent league, there doesn't seem to be much progress," Monteith stated. "So far, there have been only four independent club petitions submitted. It is doubtful," he further added, "that there will be an independent league this semester."

The Hotel and Restaurant Department is in worse shape. In that group, there are not enough Associated Student members to organize even one team, Monteith said.

Netmen Play First Home Sets Friday

Opening its home season Friday, the Ram tennis team will meet the San Mateo netters on the Golden Gate Park tennis courts, Coach Roy Diederichsen announced early this week.

Paced by Nick Schaef from George Washington High, the team is looking forward to a very promising season, Diederichsen said. Last year the team placed second in the league, with six wins and one loss.

Other newcomers include John Isaacs from Lowell, Jim Hollister and Aron Tomil from George Washington. Other members of the team are Pete Schwartz, number five man last year and number two this year; Joe Henderson, last year's number six man; and Bob Norwood, junior varsity player from last year.

Ram Forward Stars As Team Defeats Pierce, San Diego To Gain Third Place In Tourney

By Lou Lucia

Bob Tealer amassed 46 points to break the two-day-old record of Fullerton's Jerry Pimm, who scored 35 points on the opening night, as the Rams defeated San Diego, 76-63, last Saturday night, and gained third place in the State Junior College Tournament of Champions at San Jose.

Tealer also set a half-time scoring mark by pumping 34 points through the net during the second half; a record which almost broke the total point production by itself. He made 18 of 32 field goal attempts and 10 of 12 free throws.

The 6'3" forward was rather hesitant about shooting at the beginning of the second half, even though coach Sid Phelan had ordered it.

Towards the end of the game the Rams were letting the San Diegans score at will to give Tealer time to build up the record. There was only one player who mutinied; Tealer was blocking shots. Only one foul was called against the tourney point record holder and that was on defense, so he wasn't pressing his shots. Most of Tealer's points came on jump shots from the end of the key.

These last paragraphs show that it wasn't an "all glory" performance that enabled Tealer to set a new mark but his outstanding ability. To the astonishment of no one, Tealer was named to the All-Tourney team along with Pimm, Richie Williams of Vallejo, and Dale Hyatt and Paul Howard of the Hancock, California, championship team.

On Thursday night, the Rams jumped off to a quick 12-2 lead, and built this up to a 74-65 victory over Pierce as Mai McCormick and Al Mock led the way with 21 and 17 points respectively. Sonny Skjerrheim of the Western State Conference title holders led all scorers with 24 digits.

Hancock was held to its lowest scoring mark of the tourney although the Rams lost by a 51-44 margin on Friday night, Tealer potted 19 points to take game scoring honors while Hancock's Paul Denham connected for 17 markers.

Foul shots, the main forte of the Rams throughout the season, proved the undoing of the Big Eight title holders as they missed 7 of 15 attempts while the Bulldogs failed only three times. Four of the City College misses came on the all-important first attempt, while the Hancock Ohio-staffed crew never failed on the first attempt.

With 4:40 left in the game, Stan Rosenberg drove in for a lay-up to tie the score at 40-40. The Buildogs edged ahead at 46-42, but Mal McCormick's set shot with 50 seconds remaining moved the Rams back into contention. Hancock stalled out the remainder of the game. A lay-in by Larkin Bryant and charity tosses by Denham and Diek Hiekox sowed up the contest.

By the end of the first half of the San Diego game the Rams were ahead at 36-20, and then Phelan gave the "green light" to Tealer. The rest is tourney history.

Most valuable player award went to Williams of the second place Vallejo team. Williams scored the most points during the tourney (80), and astounded spectators with his ability to score consistently while shooting with either hand.

BOB TEALER.

RAMBLINGS

By Lou Lucia

WITH everything but the statistics left in the basketball season it must be noted that the Ram hoopsters ended the regular season as the top defensive team among all Northern California two-year colleges.

This is quite an accomplishment considering that most teams try to score points by the bushel and pay as much attention to stressing defense as a skunk. And that's pretty offensive.

At the same time it must be conceded that Coach Sid Phelan's charges weren't slouches on offense. They averaged 69 points per game while holding their opponents to an average of 51 points, as they won the regular season championship.

Phelan did not receive coach-of-the-year honors, but from this statistical analysis, there was no one who was any better. The coach himself would no doubt give a great deal of credit to his players. Our personal opinion on why the Rams won the championship is through the improvement in Rich Russell, Stan Rosenberg, and the defensive ability of Doug North and Mal McCormick. Bob Tealer and Al Mock were known qualities before the season began.

This last statement is not to detract from the ability of the latter two but to show that five good ballplayers are needed, and improvement pays off.

Everybody seems to have a hand in picking an all-star team, so take five: Forwards, Bob Tealer (CCSF), and J. D. Banks (WCC); center, Jim Thomas (Mod); guards, Bill Alexander (Sac) and Al Mock (CCSF).

We second the motion of track coach Lou Vasquez when he says, "Thomas could play on any four-year college team right now." The ex-serviceman set a new Big Eight record, surpassing another Modestan, Milt Kane of 1955-56 vintage. Thomas scored 22 more points but played in one more game: the championship play-off tilt.

Twice before City College entered State Tournaments and it is interesting to note the teams and how they fared. Coach Ralph Hilisman, now dean of Student Activities, led 1948-49, '49-'50 teams to post-season tourneys. Hilisman was also a stickler for defense and one of his clubs had an average of only 44 points scored against them per game.

The '49 squad had three players who later became stars at the University of California. But even the efforts of Bob Matheny, Bob and Don Payne went awry when Grant Technological College eked out a close 56-50 win in the final game of the Sacramento Tournament.

Jim Luscotoff, now a pro star, led the Grant team while handing the Rams their first loss after 30 consecutive wins.

Toughest game (outside of the Grant Tech loss) for that season was against (who else?) Modesto. Kevin Duggan, who was injured for the Teeh game, tossed in two free throws to ice the Pirates at 43-41.

In 1950 Duggan was named All-American forward and led the Rams all the way to Kansas for the National Junior College Tournament. Sequoia was the big hurdle as the Rams finally edged the Visalia team by a 54-52 final.

Duggan's 18 points led the Rams to a 64-52 victory over Flint Junior College of Michigan in the first round of the National Tourney. The Rams were dropped in the second round by a 58-45 loss at the hands of Garden City, a Kansas entry.

Student Council Discusses Plans For Eight Government Workshops To Be Held At Saturday's Conference Meet

By Dick Moore

On the recommendation of Associated Student Vice-President Metta Weddleton to dispense with regular orders of the day, Student Council last Thursday moved directly into a discussion of the college's participation in the Regional Conference in San Jose next Saturday.

Plans were formulated to establish eight workshops to represent the college at the conference. Areas of student government to be covered by the workshops will be club activities, Associated Men Students, Associated Women Students, finance, athletics, rallies, publications and student government.

"There is the possibility that more workshops will be formed by the time the conference starts," Miss Weddleton said. Closing the discussion on the Regional Conference, the council next moved into the regular order of business.

Finance Chairman Brower Dimond released his financial report with a balanced budget to members of the council meeting. Presenting seven more budget requests, all of which were passed by the council, Dimond announced that the total AS income for the spring semester is set at $23,600.

Important budgets passed in Thursday's meeting were the following: Forum Magazine, $510; baseball, $1,332; track, $1,764.11; sophomore class, $639.50; and Campus Police, $358.99.

Council discussion on the Campus Police budget request brought out the fact that AS funds allotted to the organization would not fulfill police needs.

A heated debate arose in the midst of council's consideration of the sophomore class budget. AMS president Mike Monteith questioned the advisability of hiring Sal Carson's band for the Sophomore dance. He explained to the council that Carson was charging $260, whereas the union scale was only $200.

Previous meetings of the council had also been informed of Carson's over-scale charge for playing at this semester's freshman ball and other college events.

Commenting on the dispute, Dean of Student Activities Ralph Hillsman remarked, "Because of Carson's over-scale charges, the college administration has recommended that his band only be engaged when his price is in line with the union scale."

Books Added To Library Here

In disclosing some of the titles of books newly added to the college's library, Irene Mensing, reference librarian here, urged students to consult various bulletin board and exhibit case displays.

"Often the theme chosen for the exhibit is centered around a college activity," Miss Mensing said, "but many a time it features, as we are doing at present, an equally interesting presentation of new texts and authors."

Education As A Profession, by Myron Leberman; Pictorial History of American Presidents, by John and Alice Durant; Latin America, by Hubert Herring; The FIB Story, by Don Whitehead; Bernard Shaw, by Gilbert Seldes; and The Public Arts, by St. John Ervine are but a few of the books on display in the library's show case.

Applications For Scholarships Due In Dean's Office

Applications for five types of scholarships totaling $500 are due by Tuesday, April 16, in S-148 or S-150, according to Mary Golding, dean of women here.

Amounting to $100, the Alice Eastwood Floricultural Scholarship is available to an outstanding student majoring in floriculture. The final judging committee will include Lou Batmale, dean of Semiprofessional Courses and a floriculture instructor.

Another $100 scholarship, the Real Estate Scholarship, is offered to a woman student studying real estate at the college. Funds for the awards are raised by a party given by the Real Estate Women of San Francisco.

Two Dr. A. J. Cloud Scholarships in the amount of $50 each are offered annually to one man and one woman. It was established by the faculty in tribute to the founder and President Emeritus of the college.

Two hundred dollars, in the form of four $50 scholarships, open to two men and two women, are also available. These traditional scholarships are provided by the members of the previous graduating class.

The Dougherty Scholarship has become an emergency fund for women who are in financial need, Dean Golding said. This semester the fund is $50.

All scholarships are awarded by a committee on the basis of scholarship, need, character, and leadership. Applications should be addressed to the Dean of Women or the Dean of Men.

Forum Accepting Student Writings For Annual Issue

Poetry, short stories, and essays are now being accepted for Forum, the annual magazine of City College, which publishes manuscripts submitted by students.

Forum is interested in contributions in any literary form, including short stories, short one-act plays, essays not over 1,500 words, (serious or humorous) criticisms, poetry, and light verse. Satire or humorous work is especially encouraged.

The tentative deadline for submitting material is Friday, April 5.

Any student interested should observe the following rules when submitting a work for publication. Manuscripts should be typed on 8½ by 11 paper, and should be double spaced. Material can be turned in to Catherine Connolly, Forum adviser, or left in the Forum office in C-331A.

In some cases, works may be submitted through a student's English instructor.

The magazine, which appears each spring, is a part of the college's history. The magazine originally started as a discussion society, and when the discussion took the form of a publication, the name Forum was carried over.

It offers all students who are interested in writing an opportunity to have their work published. It also offers some editorial training for volunteers who wish to work on a magazine.

These students are invited to attend the meetings of the Forum Club, which are held Fridays in S-257, during college hour.

Louise Johnson Given Denman Scholarship

Lincoln Graduate Life Member Of Honor Federation

Louise Johnson, a fourth semester student here, is the winner of the $125 Denman scholarship, according to Dean Mary Golding.

Miss Johnson, a graduate of Abraham Lincoln High School, is a life member of the California Scholarship Federation, and a fourth semester member of the college scholarship group, Alpha Gamma Sigma.

Active in her church choir, modern dance at the college, the Forum Club, and working part time as a secretary, Miss Johnson finds time for her main interest of writing stories and poetry.

In high school her writing ability was put to use when she placed among the top six winners in a creative writing contest. She also participated in plays, dances, and was an active member of the stage-craft classes.

The money she was awarded will go toward furthering her education at the University of California, where she will major in literature and work for a secondary teaching credential in English. Miss Johnson has also applied for an undergraduate scholarship at the university.

After winning the scholarship, Miss Johnson expressed her appreciation to those who have helped her here at the college.

Established by Judge William Denman and his sister, Mrs. Mary Cheatham, in memory of James Denman, once Superintendent of San Francisco Public Schools, the scholarship is awarded each semester to a woman graduate of a San Francisco public high school.

It is awarded on the basis of scholastic attainment, financial need, character and leadership.

Freshman Dance Set For Mural Room March 23

Scheduled to be held in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel on Saturday, March 23, this semester's freshman ball promises to be one of the highlights of the college's social season, Kathy Mulligan, freshman class president, announced last week.

Dancing will be from 9 p.m. until 12 midnight, with Sal Carson and his 10 piece band furnishing the music for the evening's festivities, Miss Mulligan added.

Attire for the occasion will be semi-formal. Cocktail dresses will be appropriate for the women, and suits will be in order for the men, Miss Mulligan further added.

Those couples who have Associated Student cards will be exempt from the regular $5.00 admission charge upon presenting their cards at the dance.

There is still some last minute preparation necessary for ensuring the success of the dance, and Miss Mulligan invited the assistance of any student interested in helping.

Search For Miss SF Contestants Starts

Women students interested in participating in the Miss San Francisco contest, sponsored by the San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce, may file their applications now in Dean Mary Golding's office, according to Hiram Kaakua, college representative of the Chamber.

The contestants must have completed fewer than 30 units of college work, must currently carry 12½ units at least, and have fewer than five semesters of attendance at the college. They must also be able to sing, play an instrument or act, Kaakua said.

Working with Kaakua in the affair are Evans Ecke, Art department; Michael Griffin, Drama department, and Edward E. Sandys, dean of General Education Courses.

College Vocalists Scheduled To Sing On Six Programs

The Men's Glee Club, Treble Clef, and A Cappella Choir have a number of performances scheduled for this semester. The first is on Monday, April 15, at the Cow Palace, when the Men's Glee Club will present a short program of semi-popular numbers at the Junior Livestock Exposition, Robert Morton, music instructor here, announced last week.

Soloists, Treble Clef and Men's Glee Club will take part in the Northern California Junior College Small Choral Music Ensemble Festival on April 26 at Hartnell Junior College in Salinas.

During the first week of May, A Cappella Choir will participate in the Northern California Choir Festival at San Francisco State College. A prospective engagement is also being planned with the Kiwanis Club and A Cappella Choir will sing at commencement.

Tentatively scheduled for May 23 and 24 is an opera which will be presented by the vocal groups and soloists.

Applications for the music department scholarship which offers an award of $100 to a third semester music major with a B average in music and his other studies and who demonstrates outstanding leadership in performance courses, Morton said, are now being accepted.

A Cappella Choir officers this semester under President R. H. Hillis include Annie Boddy, Linda Cripps, Pauline Hansen, Joseph Canyon, Elaine Hall, James McClung, Larry Vargo and Thomas Miles.

Hillis also heads the Men's Glee Club, with Andrew Buonsante, Donald French, Armen Boyd and Vargo assisting.

Officers of Treble Clef are Miss Boddy and Miss Hall.

Grad Petitions Due

Petitions for graduation, which may be picked up at any time in S-126, must be filed in S-126 by Friday, March 15, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar here.

Before a student plans to graduate he should be sure he has taken the necessary courses listed in the college catalog, Miss Learnard said.

Campus Police Force Curbs Parking Problems

In the wake of last week's announcement that students without permits would not be allowed to enter the parking areas, campus police revealed that parking problems to some degree have been curbed.

"To date more than 900 parking permits have been issued to students here. The problem now is to squeeze these students into approximately 800 parking spaces.

Police Chief Bob Ford stated that with all the parking permits issued as of March 1, tagging students without the permits began March 4.

Plans for the inclusion of a new, one unit class in Firearms Training in the curriculum of the law enforcement department here were recently announced by Fred Fitzgerald, department head.

Open only to campus police officers, the new course is to be offered for the first time during the fall 1957 semester.

The course will provide members of the campus police with greater opportunity to practice and improve their firearm proficiency, Fitzgerald stressed, adding that students so far have been pursuing the training on their own time.

"In all [illegible] also be able to establish and maintain two teams for competition in matches when the course gets under way," Fitzgerald said.

Commenting further on the desire of the campus police to be able to represent the college in matches with other colleges and pistol clubs, Fitzgerald explained that individual students at the present time have to finance their own way in any matches they enter.

They participated in the National .38 Pistol Matches held in Oakland.

The first team entered was composed of Ray Neilsen, captain of the team, Jim Keane, Ralph Brown, and Bruce True. Out of a possible 1,200 points, they scored 986. Individual scores were 248, 267, 241, and 230, respectively.

Brown received two medals during the day for individual competition for second and fourth places. B. J. Wylsing also won a second place medal in his group.

In the second team effort, Robert Sorbi, Wylsing, Bob Ford, chief of the campus police, and Bruce Paglierani scored a 869. They fired 247, 231, 182 and 209, respectively.

Last Monday, 12 new men were put on duty, Fitzgerald said, to replace those men who were lost during the last few weeks. Losses include Wylsing, True and Brown, who have been appointed to the Oakland Police Department. They are now serving as patrolmen in Oakland, Fitzgerald added.

Also lost from the force are Fred Plough, who is now a deputy sheriff in Marin County, and Herman Huppert, currently a member of the California Highway Patrol.

Hotel, Restaurant Department Marks 21st Anniversary With Birthday Cake

By Louis Geisler

Twenty-one years of progress was quietly commemorated last week by the Hotel and Restaurant Department. Aside from a cake baked by the department's own students, no formal celebration was observed.

Perhaps, then, it might be well to glimpse into the past and review some of H & R's accomplishments.

"Food Course Now Offered in Hotel Class Curriculum" headlined the Wednesday, March 11, 1936 edition of The Guardsman. The first classes were held on the mezzanine floor of the San Francisco Junior College, which was located until 1940 at 540 Powell Street, a block and a half from Union Square.

The H & R department's first management experience was the operation of the Galileo High School cafeteria, which was begun March 18, 1936.

Since 1936, the department has grown from two instructors and eight students to 30 instructors and 100 students. The number of meals served per day has increased from a few hundred to over 4000.

The City Department of Health, which conducts a monthly inspection of H & R, has rated it A-1 for the fourth consecutive year.

A question might be asked: "Well, what do the students themselves get out of the department?"

Nearly 50 different courses under seven main headings are offered, giving the students a wide variety of choice. The scheduled two year program includes such subjects as human relations, letter writing, U.S. history, labor relations, taxation, accounting, design and decoration, and meat analysis, in addition to the standard food and hotel management courses.

Hotel drawing, in which students learn to read blue prints, is a second semester course. Hotel science, a survey of the principles of chemistry, physics, and life science as applied to the hotel and restaurant industry is also given.

There is even a course in hotel music, which includes drill in leading community singing, and planning musical programs for hotels, restaurants and resorts.

All of these courses give the student a well-rounded general education, in addition to specialized training. Then, too, many other advantages have been added to the department.

For instance, students are given first hand experience in running many hotels thoughout San Francisco. Also, under the work-experience program, students work for ten weeks during

Blood Drive Receives Donors March 26, 27; College Sets 300 Pints As Minimum Goal

By Raj Kristoffersen

Original among Bay Area colleges, the City College Blood Fund drive will receive donations here on Tuesday, March 26, and Wednesday, March 27, according to Phil Malnick, student chairman. A minimum goal of 300 pints of blood is set for the drive.

Donation center for the drive, which is scheduled between 9 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. on the dates specified, will be located in B-1 and B-2.

Registration will be in the small office adjoining the Associated Student Office in B-1. Donors will then be directed to the council chambers in B-2, where medical facilities are provided.

Supporting the drive, the Faculty Association recently agreed to transfer blood from the original Faculty Fund to the new account. Howard Schoon will act as faculty chairman for the newly established fund, with Malnick representing the students for the current semester.

Stressing that all students who are registered at the college are insured by the fund, Malnick outlined the procedure by which their immediate families might also be included. "A student who donates blood insures his family," Malnick stated, indicating that a member of the family may also donate in the name of the student to achieve this benefit.

"Students or family members unable to donate here on March 26 or 27, may go within the following two weeks to Irwin Memorial Blood Bank, 270 Masonic Avenue, and request upon donating that their contribution be placed in the college account. They and their immediate families will then be fully insured," Malnick said.

Employees of the college are urged to participate and become part of the fund, he added.

Time schedules, at the request of Irwin Memorial, will be posted on campus. Students wishing to contribute are requested to choose a time best suited to their class schedules and enter their names in the corresponding spaces provided.

These schedules are to act as a guide so that Irwin Memorial can provide the necessary equipment and send adequate staff to process donors with maximum efficiency.

Gamma Sigma Sigma sorority addressed 6,500 letters to parents, faculty and employees of the college last week. Alpha Phi Omega fraternity will provide coffee, and Irwin Memorial will provide fruit juice, cookies and doughnuts. Members of the fraternity will serve refreshments to all donors, Malnick announced.

Contributors under 21 years of age must have written permission from their parents or guardians. These notes may be given at the door or mailed to City College Blood Fund.

Midterm Period Ends This Friday; Grades Out Soon

First midterm period of the Spring 1957 semester ends this Friday, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar here.

The purpose of having two midterm periods instead of just one is to give students an overall picture of their progress every six weeks and to let them know if they are getting too far behind, Miss Learnard explained.

What many persons don't realize, she declared, is that the first midterm grade represents all work done in the first six weeks, and the second midterm grade covers all the work undertaken during the first two midterms. They are not two separate grades.

Under college rules, instructors are expected to notify students of their grades if the students so wish, but if a student has any problems or wants to see a list of his grades he should consult his counselor.

Veterans must especially watch their grades and their attendance, Miss Learnard added. If a veteran has to drop a class because of too many absences, his benefits decrease.

If a student is failing a course, his attendance record will be looked into. If it is found that he has been absent from class often he will be required to appear before John J. Brady, coordinator of Student Welfare, and explain his difficulties.

New Scholarship Awards Offered

Two Associated Student Scholarships will be awarded for the first time this semester, with applications being accepted no later than March 31, Dean Mary Golding announced last week.

The $125 scholarship awards will be presented to a man and woman student each semester out of regular AS funds. To qualify for these awards a student must be regularly enrolled here, carry a minimum of twelve and one-half units, and be an AS member, Miss Golding stated.

A board, composed of the Dean of Student Activities, the Dean of Women, the Coordinator of Student Affairs, the AS President, the AS Vice-President, and the Finance Chairman, will choose the candidates for the awards on a basis of 40 per cent scholarship, 35 per cent need, and 25 per cent service.

In case of a tie vote of the board, Student Council will make the final choice. Qualified students should obtain applications and send them to the offices of either the Dean of Women or Dean of Men.

Organizations To Meet At College Hour Friday

Club meetings will take place in assigned rooms this Friday during college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m., according to Ralph Hillsman, dean of student activities here.

Next Friday, March 29, during college hour, the semi-annual faculty-student coffee hour will be held. The purpose for the coffee hour is to give students and faculty members a chance to get acquainted, John Fawcett, co-chairman of the faculty student relations committee, stated.

At present, the plan is to hold the coffee hour in the courtyard between Cloud Hall and the Science Building.

Photo Department To Start New Policy

Instructional and extra-curricular groups that request photos from the photography department here must allow at least two weeks for the completion of the assignment, Bev Pasquaietti, photography instructor, announced today.

At present, the photography department has three assignments to fulfill; and, in order of priority, they are pictures for The Guardsman, pictures for the San Francisco Board of Education, and other college activities.

The only assignments accepted will fall within these categories. Groups requesting photographic assignments that are to be designated as official will have to make specific arrangements to pay for supplies used, including transportation and meals, because extra photographic assignments are in excess of the departmental budget.

Transcript Plan Goes To Council

A second proposal for a student officer transcript of record will be presented to the Student Council this week, Richard Daffner, chairman of the transcript committee, said yesterday.

"This new plan will be less expensive and will include every kind of student office on the campus," Daffner added. The plan includes separate cards which will be attached to the regular grade transcript forms.

Students wanting a record of their elected or appointed offices would inform the person in charge of these cards, and pay a nominal fee to meet the cost of bookkeeping, Daffner said.

Students transfering to higher institutions could obtain a copy of their student officers transcript and take it to the Registrar, who would attach it to the regular grade transcript, he explained.

Records will be kept by an appointed Associated Student officer and will not be connected in any way with the Registrar's Office, Daffner added.

Other members of the transcript committee are Betty Bone and Ellie Smith, sophomore representatives, and Linda McArdle, freshman repre-

College Debaters Enter Model UN

Members of the college delegation to the Model United Nations, to be held at Stanford University, will leave Wednesday, April 10, to join some 600 other college and university students, according to Thomas Dutcher, debate coach.

For four days the delegates from the college will represent the Kingdom of the Netherlands by presenting prepared arguments and questions pertaining to the actual problems of that country.

"The Model UN is set up with the idea of acquainting students with the United Nations and with the existing problems in the world," Dutcher said.

"The job of the delegates will be to represent the Netherlands on the councils, and on different committees," he added, stating that there will be no type of grading since the entire affair is for the benefit of the students.

Dutcher extended an open invitation to any student at the college who is interested in participating. Students may sign up with Dutcher in C-335B or with Bill Whitney, chairman of the group.

Cutest Couple Dance Contest Main Feature Of Frosh Ball To Be Held Saturday Night

The cutest couple dance contest will be the main feature of the forthcoming Freshman Ball, to be held in the St. Francis Hotel this Saturday, March 23, Kathy Mulligan, president of the freshman class, announced early last week.

Anyone interested in signing up for the contest may do so at the Ramporium tomorrow and Friday. The qualification for entering the contest is that one of the contestants from each dance couple be a member of the freshman class, Miss Mulligan added.

A board of judges will be chosen from officers, members and advisers of the freshman class. Couples will be graded on their appearance, personality, and ability to dance well together, Miss Mulligan announced. First prize for the contest will be two trophies, one for each partner of the winning dance couple.

It was stated earlier that students who wished to lend a hand in the preparations for the dance would be welcome, but the latest word from Miss Mulligan on this is that all plans are completed.

Appointed student officers in charge of organizing the dance, together with Miss Mulligan, are Jim Maratsos, vice-president of the freshman class; Sarah Wills, secretary of the freshman class; Darlene Enfield, publicity chairman for the dance, and Freddie Hicks, chairman for the cutest couples contest.

Holiday In Hawaii To Be This Friday's Film

A re-creation of a former travelogue by United Air Lines resulted in its new tropical film, Holiday in Hawaii, which will be shown this Friday in S-136 during college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m., according to Madison Devlin, audio visual aids instructor here.

Featuring a flight from San Francisco to Hawaii, the airline company has modernized the film, set in the islands. The "trip" includes the traditional welcome given by the islanders at the airport, followed by a whirlwind tour of Honolulu and the island's famous beaches, including Waikiki.

AMS To Sponsor Poster Contest

A poster contest, based on the winning theme from the Name-The-Theme-Contest, will be the next project for the Associated Men Students, Mike Monteith, AMS president, announced this week.

The poster contest will begin tomorrow and run until Wednesday, April 17, Monteith said. Posters must have the May Festival theme, date, time, place and appropriate dress.

Judges will be the AMS officers. They are, in addition to [illegible] Bill Allen and Chuck Zanardi, vice-presidents, Art Paul, treasurer, and Hal Dimond, secretary. Trophies will be awarded to the first, second and third place posters. Presentation will be made at the May Festival, Monteith said, along with the awarding of the Name-The-Theme-Trophy.

"The posters will be of great value in publicity," Monteith stated, "and will help to create better competition between the different college organizations."

Place for submitting posters will be announced tomorrow following the disclosure of the theme for the May Festival, Monteith added.

Blood A Precious Commodity; We Can Help Alleviate Shortage

NEXT WEEK, on Tuesday and Wednesday, students and faculty of the college are asked to participate in a campus blood drive.

Blood is badly needed in San Francisco, and we can have a hand in helping to alleviate the shortage. Each of us will be asked to donate a pint of this vital, life-giving fluid.

A minimum goal of 300 pints has been set by the campus committee in charge of this drive.

This goal is very low for a college of this size—with more than 5,000 day students enrolled. It was set this low because, as a general rule, only a small percentage of persons respond to blood drives.

The majority of people just turn to one another and quip ever so humorously, "Not me—I need all I've got!" In reality, these persons are probably afraid to give blood and joke just to cover up.

Fear of a tiny needle is uppermost in many minds. There are also those who imagine their health may be impaired.

If you are in good health, the removal of a pint of blood will not harm you in the least. The loss will be replaced by your body in a short period of time.

Then there is the group of persons who are just too lazy to bother taking part. They usually comment, "Someone else will do it—I won't be needed."

Nothing could be further from the truth! There is too much reliance on "someone else" in our society!

These apathetic persons are social parasites any way you look at it. They give little to their fellow men and usually expect the world in return.

When put down in print, these foregoing reason don't make any conceivable sense to an intelligent person.

We are not being asked for money. This is a much more personal request that is being made of us.

If we donate a pint of our blood for this worthwhile drive, we will gain a personal satisfaction in knowing it will be put to vital use.

Blood is a most precious commodity, and will save lives—perhaps our own, or that of someone in our family.

Modern Library Atmosphere Brightens Study

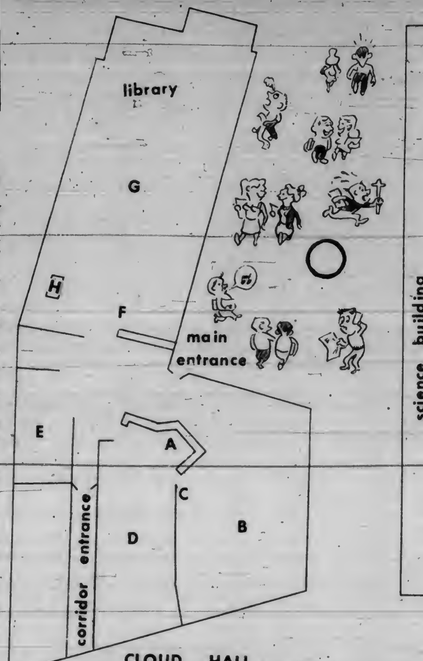

DIAGRAM OF LIBRARY, above, shows the following: (A) loan desk, main circulation desk, reserve books, and charging of magazines and two-week books; (B) reserve reading room, bound magazines; (C) entrance and exit to the open stacks; (D) open stacks; (E) periodical room and browsing room, unbound magazines; (F) card catalog; (G) reference reading room, case books, reference books, college catalogs, pamphlets; (H) reference desk.—Cartoons by George Hopkins, diagram by Parker Marinoti.

50,000 Volumes Available For Student Research

Considered by experts as one of the finest in the state, the college library with its soft indirect lighting and comfortable modern furniture lends just the right atmosphere for serious study.

Having approximately 50,000 volumes, and a seating capacity of 700, a student can usually find the book he wants and a place to study, an opportunity which has become suddenly important during this week of midterms.

Because of the many new additions to the library, new briefs and guide maps have been printed and are now available. A diagram of this layout appears to the left.

Open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. every college day, the library offers students a full day of service. At the present time it subscribes to 450 periodicals.

Reserve books, shelved in back of the loan desk, are for one or two hour use or may be charged out over night after 2 p.m.

Bound volumes of magazines are found in the reserve reading room and have to remain in the library, while the unbound magazines in the periodical room may be taken out.

Reference books, dictionaries and encyclopedias may be found in the reference reading room. Catalogs from other colleges, pamphlets (miscellaneous and vocational) are filed alphabetically by subject. Any one taking materials from the room must have the reference librarian's permission.

For journalism enthusiasts and students who like to keep up to date, newspapers are provided in the periodical room. Current issues are displayed on newspaper racks, while back issues are filed.

Most students return their books when due. However, fines are imposed on late returned books—five cents a day on two week books, and 25 cents an hour on reserve overnight books.

As is not the rule in many libraries, students have the privilege of browsing in the "open stacks" containing the two-week books, for sometimes it is difficult to choose a necessary book by reading the reference card in the card catalog.

Frank Capra's Second In Series On Tonight

By Carol Harris

BLOOD, its circulation, and the heart's role in moving it through our bodies are the subjects of Hemo The Magnificent, to be presented by KPIX tonight from 9 to 10 p.m.

This is the second in a scientific series produced in color by Frank Capra, Our Mr. Sun, which will be presented here later in the semester by the audio visual department, was the first of the series.

Hemo The Magnificent tells the story of blood from anelent man to present day scientific knowledge. Its functions and courses the blood takes are also dramatized.

Dr. Frank Baxter and Richard Carlson will star in this production which will also show animated sequences of the heart, lungs and kidneys.

A unique and enlightning poll was conducted recently by Guy Wright, radio and TV columnist for the San Francisco News.

The objective of the poll was to discover which commercials were the most distasteful to the viewer and listener. The polling was done by votes.

Capturing first place as the most obnoxious and noisy was the Hit Parade cigarette commercial.

Fabulous Features came in second. One of the biggest objections to these commercials, aside from their frequency, is hostess Dorothy Day.

Others in the top ten included L&M cigarettes, Super Anahist Cough Syrup, Blue Seal bread, Franco-American spaghetti, Playtex, Arrid, and Clorets.

A type of commercial which should be added are those which employ actors to appear as doctors and nurses. There is nothing so misleading or downright fraudulent as giving the public the impression these paid actors are professional people endorsing the product. Needed medical aid is sometimes delayed as people rely on these products which they erroneously interpret as being just what the doctor ordered.

This TV malpractice is now being curbed. A new amendment has been added to the National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasting code of good practice. The words "A Dramatization" must appear on the screen.

If the advertisers will act on the basis of this poll, perhaps the commercials will become more tolerable and television viewing will be enhanced.

H&R Students Visit Romanoff's

A rendezvous, thick red carpets, soft piano music and dimly lit ebony tables covered with tangerine tablecloths; upon each table a lamp whose flame promises romance, excitement and possibly adventure.

No, it's not the beginning of a cloak and dagger adventure but what two Hotel and Restaurant students, Dave Hagar and Jim Debson, observed while visiting Romanoff's restaurant.

They were invited to the restaurant by one of its owners, Royce Russell, who had visited the college to speak to an H&R class.

San Francisco is known as the "City that knows how." This is known by every native and is something every visitor soon learns. Romanoff's is living proof of this.

Raymond Fleureau, known professionally as Raymond, maitre d'hotel, upon meeting the habitué makes him feel as if the restaurant were built for him and him alone.

The food at Romanoff's is French cuisine and quite unlike any other. It is a gourmet's paradise and the menu is as varied as San Francisco's past.

Raymond led them to the wine cellar to display for them some of the world's most expensive vintages. He told them of each vintage in great detail and much about its background. The last stage of their visit was near, and they were led from the quiet, serene atmosphere of the restaurant to the hustle bustle of the kitchen. Here they met the man behind the magnificently prepared and so handsomely served food—Alfred, the head chef.

The visit was now at an end and the students left the place of red carpets, soft piano music and tangerine tablecloths and entered again the confusion and chaos of the city, but with a memory that will long be remembered and cherished.

Young America Finds Observant Critic Bus Passenger Unable To Tolerate Antics Of 'Alcatraz Potentials'

By Ray Davis

Traveling home in a city bus the other day, mulling quietly over . . . the anecdote which one instructor had repeated in class for the seventeenth time since the semester began . . .

The possibility of good midterm grades . . . the fecundity of a pair of cats currently making their home in the college's little theatre . . . the possibility of fair midterm grades . . . the fertility of some animals . . . the possibility . . .

Suddenly this intellectual meandering was brutally interrupted by the abrupt appearance of a shrieking mass of teen-aged hooligans who came pouring in through the bus doors.

Fighting broke out in the back seat. One of the Blackjack players had violently objected to being given a filter tip cigarette instead of the "man's kind," as part of his winnings.

Above us a group of Alcatraz potentials, sprawling in the aisle, were informatively discussing the merits and demerits of cigarette smoking. We overheard one of them, who could not have been above 14, saying "I manage to hold it down to a carton a week now."

Others in the group nodded their heads sympathetically. This at 14!! Happy majority.

Another pellet came singing in to score effectively on the back of our neck. We turned around sharply, determined to reprimand the miscreant who was using our head as a practice range. It was another outsize football hero. "Look here, would you mind aiming your . . ."

"Whassamarrer, you got trouble?" interrupted the outsize lout.

Fighting, yelling, screaming and squeaking—big ones, little ones, clean ones, dirty ones, acting for all the world like a horde of berserk Hamelinian rats, without having the sobering influence of the Pied Piper's flute to guide and control them.

Shrinking fearfully into the corner of our seat, we tremulously prepared ourselves for the ordeal ahead. Twenty minutes of Hell with these high school paroleés.

As the bus pulled away from the stop and the atmosphere calmed a little, we observed one group of the young delinquents in a corner playing "Blackjack" with assorted brands of cigarettes as the stakes, and a text book as the table.

A hulking young brute sitting beside us pulled out a "Confession" magazine and commenced to point out the physical deficiencies of a Hollywood cheesecake queen to a healthy looking girl who was leaning over our shoulder nodding dumbly and sweetly dropping the stray drops of ice cream from her popsicle down the back of our neck.

A paper pellet hit us in the ear.

Popsicle drops continued to drip down the back of our neck. Beefcake, next to us, became progressively more critical in his anatomical analysis. The fight assumed larger proportions, with a group of bi-partisan young girls joining in with the school athletic yell; and the pellets continued to arrive at regular disturbing intervals.

We reluctantly crept out of our seat and got off at the next stop. A long walk home in the rain was preferable to ten minutes more of misery with young America.

Shots At Random

By Bob Sims

EFFECTS of modern TV-Radio supersalesmanship are graphically illustrated in the musical instrument field.

A local music store proprietor recently pointed out that at the height of the Elvis Presley craze a few months ago, his guitar sales reached an all time high.

"So what instrument do you suppose is on the best seller list now? Belafonte and calypso music have surged to national popularity and with them go the bongo drums.

In fact, says the music store proprietor, bongo drums are being sold faster than blue books at midterm week.

Our only hope is that steam calliope music never attains national popularity.

Ram Basketball Successful In '56-57 Season

By John Henry

City College's 1956-57 basketball season was a very successful one for Coach Sid Phelan's basketballers as the Rams fought uphill all the way to capture the Big "8" conference title and grab third place in the State Tournament at San Jose.

By downing Modesto in the final game of the season and avenging an earlier loss to the Pirates, the Rams ended the conference race in a deadlock. Both teams finished with 12 and 2 marks. The Rams again topped Modesto in a playoff game at Sacramento and this victory gave City College the right to enter the State Tourney.

The first tourney round pitted the Rams against Pierce Junior College of Canoga Park. The Rams jumped to an early lead and were never in trouble thereafter. The next night the team faced Allan Hancock in the semi-finals.

Hancock of Santa Maria, which edged the Rams in the finals of the pre-league Modesto tourney, were considered by experts as the top two year college squad in the country. The second meeting of these two teams was close all the way until the last two minutes when Hancock pulled away to top the Rams. Hancock entered the finals and stood off a fierce Vallejo attack to win the State crown.

Phelan's charges dumped San Diego, 76-63, for third place. It was in this game that Bob Tealer, Ram forward, scored 46 points for a new tournament record. Tealer was named to the All-Tournament team for his outstanding play.

The college's starting five was a tall, hustling squad. The forwards were Tealer and Mal McCormick, and the center was 6'8" Doug North. The guards were Al Mock and Rick Russell. Mock, an experienced ballplayer, was consistently a high scorer and turned in fine floor games.

Russell boasted an effective jump shot, and was a defensive stalwart. Tealer's jump shot was deadly, and his rebounding ability made him a valuable asset to the squad. He was named to the Examiner's All-Northern California squad. McCormick was one of the top rebounders.

North was the tallest pivotman in the league and was a big help under the bucket. Stan Rosenberg was another guard who saw plenty of action. Rosenberg's ability to intercept passes and get a quick two points when it was needed made him vital to the team.

The remainder of the squad consisted of forwards Bill Wooten, Gary Merritt, center John Henry, guards Rich DeConti, Jimmy O'Connor and Al Vidal. North (6'8), McCormick (6'5), Henry (6'5), Merritt (6'4½), and Rosenberg (5'10) are all freshmen and will be back next season to help defend the titleholding quintet.

New Basketball League Formed

An Independent Basketball League has finally been formed, Mike Monteith, Associated Men Student president, announced Friday.

When the admission petitions were originally due, Monteith said, only a few were submitted, but now there are eight teams signed for the league.

There are no games this week, but next Wednesday and Thursday, March 27-28, there will be four games played in the men's gymnasium. Games between the eight league members include the Filipino Club vs. the Hotel and Restaurant Department at 7 p.m., and the Newman Club plays the Hawaiian Club at 8 p.m. Thursday, March 28, the International Relations Club vies with the Campus Police, and in the second game the Chinese Club meets Alpha Phi Omega.

In the Inter-Fraternity Council League, Monteith stated, there has been some trouble with the schedule. Source of the difficulty is the fact that Alpha Sigma Delta dropped out of the league after a schedule had been formulated which has called for the planning of a new schedule, Monteith stated.

Baseballers Open Big 8 Season At Santa Rosa Saturday; Down SF State In Practice Tilt, 7-6

A unanimous vote by the Big Eight Conference baseball coaches has delayed the opening of the league until this Saturday when the Rams will travel to Santa Rosa to meet the Bearcub nine.

Postponement of the March 16 scheduled games came about so that the various college squads could participate in more practice tilts, give the players more time to round into shape, and allow the coaches added time to judge their potential starting line-up players.

This plan will be of special assistance to Coach Bill Fischer, since the college had played only two exhibition games as of last week. The first, although a 2 to 1 loss to the Stanford Braves, left the coach with a favorable impression.

The San Francisco State game on March 12 was a 7 to 6 victory for the Rams. In that contest, infielder Rich Medaglia led the college batting attack with two hits. Blair LeMire, All-League shortstop last year, and Ray Bower, All-City prep from Galileo, blasted hard hit triples. Frank Brinkley, veteran second baseman, clouted a two-bagger.

An outstanding pitching performance was turned in by relief pitcher Bob Bandettini, who was called to the mound in the sixth inning with the bases loaded and no outs. He proceeded to retire the Gators without a run crossing the plate in that frame. Bill Flanagan, ex-Galileo ace, who was credited with the victory, and Jim Datzman, formerly of Riordan, also drew pitching assignments in this contest.

The extra week allotted the college prior to its Santa Rosa fray will enable Coach Fischer to re-schedule previously rained out affairs with Santa Clara, Moffett Field, East Contra Costa, and St. Mary's.

State RA Meet Delegates Map Coed Activities

A State conference of the California Federation of College Women was held at Hollywood in Los Angeles on March 8, 9, 10, to exchange ideas on college sport programs in the Recreational Association departments.

Delegates who attended this conference were Jean Krieg, Bev Wilson, Marge Saba and Carol Goldenberg. These students, all officers of the organization, were chaperoned by Lene Johnson, RA adviser here.

Recreation sport programs of the 31 colleges attending the convention were compared. Students have for some time been aware that few are familiar with the individual college's co-educational sports program, Miss Johnson declared.

New suggestions were made to broaden the activities of the Recreation Association. They include a play night once a month, banquets, and a larger variety of intra-mural sports.

A co-educational intra-mural program with all campus clubs and organizations is being planned here for next semester, Miss Johnson said. All students with Associated Student membership are eligible to be members of the Recreation Association.

Meetings of the Association council are held Fridays during college hour in C-105. All students interested in the sports program are invited to attend the meetings, according to Miss Johnson.

Annual Block SF Dance March 29

With the theme, Spring Swing, the college's Block SF Society will present its annual dance from 9 p.m. to midnight at Smith Hall Friday, March 29, Bob Guddee, president of the organization, recently disclosed.

Musical arrangements, according to Guddee, planned in conjunction with the Rally Committee, will be provided by the college's dance band. Admission to the event will be open to anyone upon presentation of tickets available from club members on the campus and priced at $1 for couples and 50 cents stag. Attire for the occasion is informal, Guddee said.

Further preparations for the ball will be discussed this Friday, March 22, during college hour at C-246 when the society resumes its regular meeting, suspended for the last two weeks in order to cooperate with Club Activities Board day and the Spring Sports rally respectively.

Members of the Block SF are invited and expected to attend this meeting, Guddee said, asking also the lettermen's cooperation in the 100 per cent membership drive currently under way.

Ram Track Team Wins Three Way Meet, Trounces Big Eight Foe In Opener, Edges Cal Frosh

By George Grasso

Mike Reid, with an outstanding throw of 142'9", led a City College sweep of the discus event, and paved the way for a double win over the Oakland and Cal Frosh tracksters in a three-way meet held last Saturday at Edwards Field in Berkeley.

Scores were City College 67⅝, Cal Frosh 64⅝ and Oakland 18 1/3 in the three-way affair, with the Big Eight dual meet between the Rams and Thunderbirds ending in a 79-34 San Francisco advantage.

Turning point in the meet came when Reid along with Doug Neathery, Dick Ristow, and Rich Holbrook, took the first four places in the discus event. By capturing all the points in the discus toss, City College, which had been trailing close behind the Cal Frosh since the meet started, suddenly surged into the lead.

Once they had the advantage, the team from San Francisco refused to give it up. The final score gave City College a slight upset over the Cal Frosh and a crushing victory over Oakland College.

Eddie Chavez, a plucky little two-miler, stole the show during the running of the meet's longest race. In the 8th and final lap of the two mile, he shot away from the rest of the runners and sprinted to the tape all alone.

Mike Westmore, who stayed side by side with Chavez for the early part of the race, brought home an easy second.

Two potentially outstanding milers, Bob Hammond and Stan Breed, did not meet their usual standards and were forced to run third and fourth to Terquard of Cal and Lee of Oakland. The winning time was 4:36.4.

John Cressa made a substantial contribution to the team effort by winning the 120 yd. high hurdles and taking third in the 220 yd. low hurdles.

Coach Lou Vasquez was pleased with his slight upset over the Cal Frosh, but looking at it from both sides, he doesn't out-rule the possibility that the Cal Frosh may be a little weak this year. Many members of his own team, however, were badly out of shape following two weeks of rain before this meet. In meeting the Cal Frosh, his unpracticed team defeated a squad which had seen action under a fall track program.

Netters Open Season With Panther Win

Nick Scharf led the tennis team to a convincing 5-2 opening league victory over the Sacramento team at the latter's home court on March 8.

Scharf, number one man, was the outstanding player of the match, defeating Sacramento's Fred Offenbach, 6-2 and 8-6, to ice the meet. This Friday the team plays host to the netters from West Contra Costa on the Golden Gate courts at 2:30 p.m.

The team is currently composed of Scharf, Pete Schwarz, Vic Sashin, Jim Howard and John Isaacs. Scharf and Sashin make up the doubles team, while Schwarz and Howard compose the second team.

Jayne Mansfield No Choice Over Yankees

By Lou Lucia

SPRING is when a young man's fancy turns to . . . well, if she isn't around, baseball.

This year the baseball season in the American League is all over before it starts. A foreign (Reno, Nev.) correspondent reports that the betors are taking the Yankees against the rest of the league's teams, plus free blue chip stamps, a date with Jayne Mansfield and a free ticket to a sports investigating committee hearing.

Detroit's not so Tigerish team is generally conceded to take the second spot. Since the rest of the fans are home darning their (Chicago) White Sox, (Boston) Red Sox we'll run down the rest of the league.

Cleveland's Indians will probably set up their wigwam in fifth place. That Feller that left won't detract from the [illegible] Athletics will be able to do is calisthenics; not play much baseball though. Baltimore's Orioles will be strictly for the "birds" fans. Washington's Senators, baseball variety of course, will do a lot of talking before the season; probably even cinch last place.

In the National League, Don Newcombe, a so called "no clutch" pitcher, may again lead the Dodgers across the freeway. If Roy Campanella gets his hand into the swing of things, watch out!

Ted Kluszewski could bring the Cincinnati nine some extra money. He hasn't got a white beard, but manager Birdie Tebbetts hopes he plays like Santa Claus for the 1957 campaign and puts some of that "ask for it by name" stuff in the Red Stockings. If he could get in there and pitch they'd be all right.

A World Series entry blank may be filled out by Eddie Mathews of the Milwaukee Braves. If so, though, whoever heard of an Indian beating a Yankee. It doesn't happen in the movies, and more than likely it won't happen in baseball.

Next are the "dark bird" St. Louis Cardinals, who haven't feathered their coop in the last ten years. This, of course, could depend on General Manager Frank Lane not dangling too many good worms (players) in front of the other clubs' nests. This team won't lay an egg as things sit now.

Chicago's Cubs may have reached adolescence but probably will not be big bears as of yet. A fifth place contender even if [illegible] they rating in Banks (Ernie) is high.

The Phillies of Philadelphia are rated no higher than sixth if the smoke is gone from the fast-balls of Robin Roberts and Curt Simmons. Richie Ashburn still ignites the small spark they have.

Pittsburgh's Pirates will no doubt stay low in the race, though they may steal seventh place. Of course, they still need a lot of hitting, fielding and pitching. Verhon Law may administer justice to the tickets sold by the Pirates' front office.

Unluckiest team in the league is the New York Giants. With draft calls striking at valuable men, and

Dick Rose Sparks Golfers To Win

City College's golfers began their practice season with two wins and one tie in their opening matches last week.

The first match was with Monterey at Monterey, and the next two were played in a triangular meet with East Contra Costa and San Mateo, on the San Mateo course.

Ram golfers won all but two and a half points of the 15 possible points in the Monterey match, with Dick Rose leading the team with a 76 for the 18 holes.

Other scores for the team were 80 for Don McDowell, 82 for Frank Hubert, 85 for John White, and 87 for Larry Barr. At the present time these are the five players.

In the triangular match, Rose, a newcomer to the team, was again low medalist. He shot just over par, scoring a 73. Following him were Barr with a 76, McDowell with a 77, Hubert with an 80, and White 83.

Team scores were in favor of the Rams against East Contra Costa as a team, 8½ to 6½, and 7½ each for San Mateo and City College as rival teams. In each match there are three possible points, Coach Grover Klemmer explained, one for the lowest score for the first nine holes, one for the lowest score for the second nine holes, and one for the winner of the match. There are five matches in each meeting.

AS Council Members Question Constitutionality Of Funds To Honor, Debate Organizations

By Dick Moore

Considerable debate concerning the constitutionality of allocating Associated Student funds to two college organizations, one of which is not an on-campus group, and the second which is not 100 per cent in AS membership, arose in Student Council last Thursday.

Finance Chairman Brower Dimond recommended to council members that Alpha Gamma Sigma, the college honor society, be given $278 regardless of the fact that some members of the organization were not AS card holders. He maintained that the group was active in many college activities and should be considered deserving of AS funds. On this point several council members raised questions and intimated that in allowing the group AS funds the council would be in opposition to the constitution.

After further discussion and debate, the council tabled the AGS request.

Next Dimond presented the Phi Rho Pi budget request of $800. This budget had been previously tabled by the council two weeks ago, and its second presentation to council last Thursday immediately precipitated a spirited dispute among those in attendence at the meeting.

Club Activities Board Chairman Bob Wendt pointed out to the council, "Phi Rho Pi, the college debate society, is not at present recognized by CAB as being an on-campus group."

Wendt also declared that the council could not pass the request for AS funds unless the group was on-campus.

Dimond countered arguments of Phi Rho Pi's ineligibility to receive funds with the information that the group was 100 per cent in AS membership and that the question of the group's on-campus status may not have bearing on its eligibility for AS subsistence.

Clarification of the constitutionality of both the AGS and debate society requests was asked for by members of council at this time. In further discussion of this point, Wendt added, "If the council gives funds to the debate society it will set a bad precedent for future procedure of the CAB in dealing with college organizations."

At this point the original motion to allocate $300 to Phi Rho Pi was voted on and defeated.

AS Card Sales Surpass $8,500 As Chairman Sets New Spring Goal

Associated Student card sales, as of March 13, reached a new total of $9,300 in this semester's drive, surpassing the original mark of $8,500, according to a recent announcement made by Dwane Shippey, AS card sales chairman here.

"One out of every six students is a cardholder," Shippey said. "When considering that more than 6,500 students are enrolled in the college this semester, we don't believe setting a new goal of $9,500 in card sales would be pushing our luck and hopes too far," he added.

Shippey also reminded students that for the first time special spouse cards are being issued for married couples attending the college. The card, when paid for by either husband or wife, is to be stamped as such at the student bank in Smith Hall upon identification, and serves the same purposes for either one of them as a regular AS card does.

In the meantime, another warning has been given to budgeted activities and organizations on campus. "They have to show 100 per cent AS cards in order to receive funds," Shippey said.

New Madwoman Showings Slated

Two more performances of The Madwoman of Chaillot, are scheduled for this Friday and Saturday, March 22 and 23, at 8 p.m. in the little theatre, according to Michael Griffin, drama instructor here.

Dawn Roberts will portray the Madwoman. Fulfilling the roles of the three countesses are Lin Cripps, Stephanie Koppe, and Melanie Mead. Leigh Guerra and Pat Dulcich are cast in the roles of Pierre and Irma.

The east also ineludes Bob Phaien, Nick Roomel, Larry Bryggman, Dave Titon, Ron Allen, Louis Mayo, George Cooney, Mel Rasmussen and Bob Doyle.

The play returns March 29 and 30 for its final showing.

Pistol Teams Ask Share Of Funds

Campus Police will continue to represent the college in local pistol match competition with other colleges and pistol teams, police adviser Fred Fitzgerald said this week, "as long as individual members of the teams are able to finance their own way to the matches."

Matches are held at the Oakland Pistol Club on the first Sunday of each month and the average expense for the two Campus Police teams is $60.

"All of this expense is now met by the team members," he added.

In addition the college teams would like to have regular meets with such colleges as Sacramento Junior College and San Jose State.

They hope to be sponsored in the future by the Associated Students and receive from them funds to help defer the expense of participating in the matches, Fitzgerald said.

Washington High Graduates To Honor First Principal Tonight At Banquet

Ollie Matson, a former Washington High and City College football star, will be one of the featured guests at the twentieth anniversary celebration of Washington High School tonight, honoring Ernest J. Cummings, first principal of the school.

Matson is presently a star halfback with the Chicago Cardinals.

A banquet, which already is a sell-out, will be served at 6:30 p.m. to the alumni in the cafeteria, after which a program will be presented in the school auditorium on 32nd Avenue and Anza Street.

All Washington High graduates are invited to attend this program which will begin at 8:30 p.m. There will be entertainment and introduction of all notables.

Lee Ann Meriwether and Johnny Mathis have sent their regrets that they will not be able to attend, and a telegram was received from Hal March, the school's second student president, expressing his good wishes and regrets for not being able to be present.

Other featured guests will be Ann Curtis Cuneo, an Olympic swimming champion; Washington's first championship basketball team, with its coach, Lloyd Leith, and the school's first set of student officers.

Pulitzer Winner In Lecture Here

Lecturing on the importance of investigative reporting, Ed Montgomery, the San Francisco Examiner's Pulitzer Prize winner, addressed students of journalism and criminology here last Wednesday.

He described the painstaking research behind the tax scandal of 1950 which led to the conviction of five big name offenders and won for him the coveted prize. "Five and a half months of research before one line of type" he said.

Moving behind the scenes of the Abbott case, he again stressed the research involved. Immediately upon completion of his talks he left for San Quentin to continue this ease.

Montgomery terminated his lecture with a touch of irony concerning Mickie Cohen's discovery that "these days honor among thieves is dead—just dead."

Big, Little Sisters To Meet At Social Hour

Developing of personality and friendship among Big and Little Sisters is the object of the social hours that are being conducted by the Associated Women Students, according to Darlene Enfield, program chairman.

Guest speaker for the affair scheduled for this coming Friday will be Margareth Flournoy, business instructor here. Her topic will be Personality for Business Women, Miss Enfield said.

Two other social hours are scheduled Friday, April 5 and 12.

the summer and are paid the prevailing wage rate.

Each spring, eight members of the graduating class, chosen for scholarship, leadership, and ability to represent the college, are taken on a week's tour of leading California hotels and restaurants.

The final test to determine whether the H & R department has been successful during the past 21 years is to look at the list of graduates and locate their present positions.

At least 28 past graduates have emerged as managers of leading hotels and restaurants throughout the country. Nine have become owners and operators of their own establishments.

Two former students have returned to occupy key positions in the department here. They are Lawrence Wong, now instructor in charge of hotel and restaurant placement, and Edward Nylund, department member since 1948.

Volunteers Sought To Serve At Traditional Coffee Hour

Students and faculty members will have a chance to meet informally during college hour here Friday when the Faculty Association will present the ninth faculty-student coffee hour, according to John Fawcett, co-chairman of the faculty-student relations committee.

Punch, coffee, and cookies will be served at the meeting which is to be held in the court yard between Cloud Hall and the Science Building, weather permitting.

Student volunteers are being sought to assist faculty members in distributing the coffee, cookies, and punch.

Faculty members have been sent invitations and lapel cards to identify themselves to students, Fawcett said. He also stated that every student at the college is invited to attend and take part in "conversation and free refreshments."

"Facilities will be borrowed from the Hotel and Restaurant Department and divided into ten separate departmental areas in the court yard. Each area will be marked by a poster so that locating any particular faculty member will not be difficult," Fawcett said.

Since its beginning in the Spring of 1953, the coffee hour has become a traditional social activity at the college. A characteristic of past student-faculty get-togethers has been that the refreshments disappear long before the coffee hour has come to an end.

Quakes Cause Only Minor Damage To Campus Buildings

Only minor damage is reported at the college following Friday's earthquake, and routine classes were again in session Monday morning, according to John J. Brady, coordinator of Student Welfare.

Because of the cancelled classes last Friday, some mid-term examinations were given this week. Therefore, the last day to drop a class is changed from Wednesday, April 3, to Friday, April 5, Brady stated.

Indicating that to his knowledge no one was even scratched during the excitement and that order was maintained throughout the campus, he offered a word of praise to those responsible.

All buildings on campus are earthquake-proof, reinforced concrete similar to those that successfully resisted atomic blasts, he said, and are actually the safest place to be during an earthquake.

The Field act, passed in 1936, provides that all school buildings must afford this protection.

Falling debris outside the buildings was the primary reason for dismissing classes and evacuating all personnel. Sixteen blocks of ceramic tile weighing 30-40 pounds apiece fell from under the art laboratory at the northeast corner of the Science Building, and more may have been shaken loose.

Though plaster was cracked in some of the rooms and supplies in the chemistry and biology storerooms were lost, no structural damage was reported to any of the buildings on campus, Brady further stated.

Next Friday Is Last Day To Drop Courses

Last day to file petitions for the dropping of courses is Friday, April 5, in S-121, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

Before filing the program change card with the registrar, permission to drop a course must be obtained from the counselor and the drop must be cleared by the instructor.

A time limit is set for dropping courses so that students won't waste a full semester and then drop before finals, Miss Learnard said.

Applications For AS Scholarships Due This Friday

Applications for two Associated Student scholarships must be submitted to the Dean of Women or the Dean of Men by this Friday, March 29, Mary Golding, dean of women here, announced last week.

The scholarships, amounting to $125 each, will be awarded for the first time this semester to a man and woman student who have been currently enrolled for one semester, are carrying a minimum of 12½ units, and are AS members.

AS award committee members for this semester include, Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities; Jack Brady, coordinator of Student Welfare; Bob Varni, AS president; Metta Weddleton, AS vice-president; Brower Dimond, finance chairman, and Dean Golding.

The awards will be judged on a basis of 40 per cent scholarship, 35 per cent need, and 25 per cent service. In case of a tie vote, the Student Counell will make the final choice, Miss Golding stated.

AS scholarships will be presented at a special awards assembly to be held later this semester, she added.

Block SF Society Presents Annual Dance This Friday

Spring Swing, a dance to be presented by the Block SF Society, City College Dance Band and Rally Committee, will be held this Friday, from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight in Smith Hall, according to Bob Guddee, Block SF president.

Tickets for the dance are priced at $1 per couple and 50 cents stag. They are being sold on campus by members of the organizations and will also be available at the door Friday night.

"Everyone is invited to attend the dance," Guddee said, pointing out that there will be no restrictions imposed on any student enrolled in the college. Attire for the affair will be informal, he added.

The dance, Bill Fischer, Block SF sponsor said, is an annual Spring function of the society and the Dance Band. This year the Rally Committee is also helping with the affair.

Bev Bauer, who has been serving as the assistant Rally Commissioner this semester, was recently elevated to the top position when Tilly Gandert, Rally Commissioner, took a leave of absence.

The Dance Band is under the management of Bob Kelleljian, whose officers include Gary Smith, student director; Carol Matson, secretary; Lloyd Gomez, assistant manager; Herman Boxerbaum, assistant director; and Jacqueline Haney, librarian, Meyer Cahn, faculty director, said.

Drama Group Ends Madwoman Play Friday, Saturday

Final performances of Jean Giraudoux's The Madwoman Of Chaillot are scheduled for this Friday and Saturday, March 29 and 30, according to Michael Griffin, drama instructor here.

The play is being performed both nights at 8 p.m. in the little theater.

Madwoman, which has 10 major characters and a cast of 42, has been re-adjusted slightly "in order to point up the story to a greater degree," Griffin announced.

One major change is the substitution of Jeanne Graham for Charlie Bardini in the roile of the Deaf-Mute, putting Judith Freed into Miss Graham's previous part as one of the evil "Women of the World."

Brian Erickson, the play's fire-eater, who was away last week participating in the sports car races at Turlock, in his class he took second place, will return to the cast for the final performances. His return will give the play "added warmth," Griffin said.

Cartoon Cavalcade Theme Wins AMS Contest

Cartoon Cavalcade, an Alpha Sigma Delta entry, was selected last Wednesday as winner of the first prize trophy in the Name-the-Theme contest, according to Mike Monteith, Associated Men Student president.

In accordance with this [illegible] theme, all parades, booths and other functions of the May Festival will be based on cartoon and comic-strip personages. Dress for the festival's dance, which will take place at the Cow Palace from 8 p.m. to 12 midnight Friday, May 17, will be casual or as comic-strip characters, according to Monteith.

With the close of the Name-the-Theme contest, the AMS now looks forward to the results of their new Poster contest which began last Thursday and will continue until Wednesday, April 17.

Posters may be submitted to Dean Ralph Hillsman's office until the final date of the contest, at which time they will be turned over to the officers of the AMS for selection of three winners. No entries will be returned, and AS status is not necessary for eligibility, Monteith added.

"Posters must include the winning theme and time, date and place of the May Festival," Monteith stressed.

Trophies won by Alpha Sigma Delta, and the winners of the Poster contest will be presented at the May Festival, Monteith stated.

Other place cards to be used in the May Festival's advertising campaign are being made by Parker Moriwaki, a student in the advertising art department, through use of a silk-screen process which, Moriwaki explained, consists of laying a processing film over the original poster and cutting a stencil for each color wanted.

Black, red and gold, the colors used in Jimmie Lynn's place card design of last year, will be used again this year, the counselor, and the drop must be [illegible]

San Francisco's Cinderella Girl

PAT DULCICH, an art student here, was named Cinderella Girl for the local publicization of next Sunday's CBS television production of Cinderella.

KPIX Selects Pat Dulcich In Promotion Of Musical Show

Patricia Dulcich, an art student here, is the Cinderella Girl locally publicizing the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical production version of Cinderella next Sunday on Station KPIX.

Miss Dulcich, who won the $25-a-day post as publicity girl in competition with more than 20 other contestants, was selected because of her "Fresh, little-girl-lost charm and appearance," according to Al Baccari, KPIX publicity chief.

Her dramatic and artistic background gained at the college, she is now playing Irma, the waitress, in the college's little theater production, The Madwoman of Chaillot, was also an important subsidiary factor contributing toward her selection, Baccari said.

Dressed in a billowing white dress, diamond tiara, and traditional glass slippers, Miss Dulcich calls on the Bay Area newspapers, disc jockeys, and television personalities, to "talk up" the show, and assist the aims of the producers.

Cinderella will be shown on Channel 5 from 8 to 9:30 p.m. It is pre-empting the Ed Sullivan show for this one performance, the first time in more than five years that Sullivan has had to relinquish his choice viewing spot.

Miss Dulcich came to the college a year ago from Lincoln High, bringing with her the Abrahm Lincoln Award for the best '55-'56 art student.

Her interest in the theater, developed while she was working as prop girl for the college drama department's last production, The Time Of Your Life, has led her to make tentative plans to major in commercial art, specializing in theater design.

Police To Tag In Surrounding Area

Parking and other traffic violations at the college have decreased, although students illegally parked in surrounding off-campus areas may in the future receive parking tags from the Campus Police, according to Chief Bob Ford.

Major trouble spots which involve students of the college are on Circular Avenue near Ocean and in the vicinity of the parking lot next to the Municipal Railway station on Geneva Avenue. Both of these locations are not on the campus, but Campus Police will be tagging cars in these areas, Ford announced.

Cars parked on Circular Avenue, which is a right-of-way of the Southern Pacific Railway, will be tagged or towed away by campus or regular city police, Ford said. "In addition," he added, "there is the possibility that the SP will close off the south entrance by putting a gate up at this spot."

Any car found parked on the railroad tracks or on the SP property at the present time will be considered by police to be abandoned and will be towed away.

Miss SF Pageant Registration Open, Ends On April 27

Registration for the annual Miss San Francisco Pageant opened last Monday, according to Hiram Kaakua, Junior Chamber of Commerce liaison officer here.

Contestants must be between 18 and 28 years of age, a resident or student in San Francisco for at least six months, single with no previous marriage status, and able to put on a three minute routine, displaying talent either in singing, daneing, dramatic reading, or show of design.

Women students planning to enter the contest may file applications with Mary Golding, dean of women, or Kaakua.

The Miss San Francisco Pageant is a preliminary for the Miss California Pageant which, in turn, precedes the Miss America contest in Atlantic City.

Judging in each of the contests will be uniform. The judges base their decisions on talent, swim suit and evening gown competition, intellect and personality.

A panel of judges will be selected from prominent San Francisco leaders in the fields of drama, music, art, journalism, edueation and other civic areas.

Preliminary eliminations will start Saturday, April 20, and will end the following Saturday, April 27, the final day of registration.

Sixteen contestants will enter the semi-finals Friday, May 10. From these, nine will be selected to enter the finals at the Fairmont Hotel Thursday, May 23.

IRC Members Plan For Latin American Show

International Relations Club is at present making plans for a Latin American show to be held Friday, May 10, in Smith Hall, according to Joseph M. Jacobsen, faculty sponsor.

Dances of the various Latin American countries will be featured. Such dances as the mambo, tango, Cuban dances, Guatemalan folk daneing and Mexican hat dance will be shown, and afterward members of the audience will be invited to learn the dances.

Student Government Efficiency Goes Beyond Council Attendance

EACH Tuesday and Thursday here, meetings of the Student Council, the student governing body of the college, are held.

This group, when set up, was patterned after the council type of local government, and it functions in approximately the same manner as a city council.

If each member of this type of government body does his job to the best of his ability, a smooth-running organization results.

Student Council isn't functioning efficiently this semester primarily because the members are not well enough informed on the issues that come up for consideration.

Most of the members, it appears to us, just attend the meetings twice a week; this is the extent of their participation.

Council members should first of all familiarize themselves with the student constitution, since questions pertaining to it arise often.

In last semester's Associated Student election, for example, an amendment was passed that has been totally disregarded this semester.

The amendment to which we refer provides that all elected council members are automatically members of the Finance Committee, headed by the Finance Chairman.

Committee members are supposed to investigate and make adjustments in original budget requests. The requests are then to be forwarded to the Finance Chairman, who reviews each budget prior to submission to council for final approval.

The main advantage of this amendment is that each council member becomes familiar with many of the budgets.

Much wrangling could have been avoided in council this semester if this amendment had been put in operation, and it most surely should have been.

Brower Dimond, the Finance Chairman, has a difficult post and could have used some assistance from council members—instead, he often meets resistance in one form or another.

Another subject that seldom fails to incite considerable controversy in council is that of campus clubs and organizations—any phase of the subject causes an immediate reaction.

Recently, much time was spent determining the constitutionality of allocating AS funds to two campus organizations. If council members had familiarized themselves with the AS constitution, much time could have been saved, and thus devoted to other matters.

Council membership is a full-time job—not just a matter of attending meetings.

Blood Drive Deserves Active Support

TODAY is the last day of the campus blood drive, and those who have not yet participated can still do so.

This is a very worthy drive and deserves active student support. It can only succeed if students will take an active part and not rely on others to do their share.

A minimum goal of 300 pints has been set, but if even a small percentage of the students and faculty here will respond to the appeal, this goal can be easily exceeded.

Those participating in the drive will gain a personal satisfaction in knowing that their blood will be put to good use in the saving of lives.

No . . . Midterm Blues
Spring Fever Here??

THERE was no fanfare, no beating of drums, in fact no formal celebration whatsoever. Spring, the 1957 variety, arrived on a dismal, windy, half-sunny day last week.

Rumblings of a new Suez crisis, of the banishment of capital punishment, and of poor midterm grades almost completely overshadowed the passing of another winter.

Yet the tempo of campus life appears to have somehow unconsciously caught the spirit of the new season. Even the most studious eyes are straying to the window for a glimpse of green.

An early case of Spring fever? No a lot . . . more blue book blues.

AN EDUCATIONAL NOTE appeared last week in a local newspaper illustrating the profundity many people employ in selecting their lifetime work. An important attorney, when asked how he happened to choose law as his profession, confessed: "Well, I really didn't mean to take it, I just signed up in college for any classes that came after 10 in the morning and were on the ground floor!"

The fraternity actually disscussed plans for their annual House of Blue Lights Dance and sorority sisters were members of the Kappa Phi.

Executive Secretary Joe Allen on Thursday is said to have promised to give the offer every consideration. We're wondering if he did accept the bid after 12 o'clock on Friday.

All the charming and magical characters of a fairy tale will come to life this Sunday when KPIX presents Cinderella at 8 p.m.

For the first time in eight years, the Ed Sullivan show will not be shown in order to make room for this musical color spectacular written by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein. They have created more than nine new musical numbers for this production. Julie Andrews will play Cinderella, while Jon Cypher will be seen as Prince Charming.

The fairy tale will be in its legendary setting with all of the remembered characters. Composer Rodgers stated, "We think the Cinderella story has had a pretty fair success just as it is. The plot has been used in hundreds of variations over the years, but none is better known than the original. It would be presumptuous to modernize it."

Although the story has been faithfully re-created, one element has been added—humor. King Howard Lindsay and Queen Dorothy Stickney are no longer minor characters, but have become a laughable and lovable royal couple.

Edith Adams will play the down-to-earth fairy godmother. Comic characters have been made out of the stepmother, portrayed by Ilka Chase, and the stepsisters, Kay Ballard and Alice Ghostley. Their actions are not mean, just hilariously stupid.

Youngsters and oldsters alike will enjoy this musical re-creation by Rodgers and Hammerstein of one of the oldest and most beloved fairy tales.

Science, Art In Marble, Stone

Late in 1941, one year after the completion and dedication of the Science Building, two mosaics were completed on the north and south walls by artist Herman Volz.

These giant mosaics, measuring 42 by 55 feet, represent, on the north side, the interaction of science, and on the south side the interaction of mechanics. The characters in the mosaics deal with no definite person or persons in the field of science or invention, but deal chiefly with the influence of youth and education on the whole, and its relation to the subjects.

Each day thousands of students walk by them, or stop to eat their lunch under them, never realizing what complex structures they are.

Each of the small pieces of marble used in the project had to be separately cut, sandpapered, and then highly polished before they could be installed and arranged into their scenes and characters.

About the time of the mosaics, there were a number of other artistic contributions made to the college.

In 1940, the rear of the Science Building was decorated with the two busts of Da Vinci and Edison.

Fred Olmsted, the sculptor who chiseled the Da Vinci and Edison busts, also made an outstanding contribution to the college as an artist. He is the man who painted the multi-colored murals which adorn the sides of the entrance to the Science Building.

'Happy Car' Roams Around Campus

Red, Three Wheeled Bug Has No Parking Problem

By Pat Metsack

Resembling a bubble on three wheels, a red bug with beadie eyes, or possibly an escapee from a science fiction film, the "happy car" can be spotted buzzing around on campus, the only one of its kind.

Nicknamed the "happy car" because "it makes people laugh," it's real name is Messerschmitt KR-200.

Owner and pilot of this two and a half seater vehicle, Merle Weidman, engineering instructor at the college, rides under the slogan, "Why walk when it costs no more to ride?" He added that it also saves wear and tear on shoes. The point he makes is a good one, for the Messerschmitt drives 65 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

To the parking problem Weidman doesn't even bat an eyelid. If he fails to get into a parking place on the first try he simply gets out of the car and lifts it into the space. All of these advantages and more for a mere $1,495.

Weidman became intrigued with the car the first time he saw it, and after a look at its economical values and a quick talk with his family, the investment was made.

The "happy car" weighs 460 pounds, is very compact, has a heater, a four-speed transmission, directional indicators, and cruises along at 55 miles per hour.

Having driven 6,865 miles since he bought the "happy car" in June, 1956, Weidman is justly proud of its "inner workings." It features direct steering, which means that in place of a steering wheel there is a pair of handlebars resembling those of a bicycle.

The one-cylinder engine looks like a motorcycle or an outboard motor. Anyone seeking a genuine experience may ask him to explain the procedure for reversing the car.

It seats two and a half people. (Room for Mrs. Weidman, and half of someone else.) The seating arrangement is similar to that of a jet plane, with the driver's seat in front and the passenger seat directly in back. Male students will possibly regard this as a disadvantage, but girl friends should feel safe, sound, and secure.

Questioned continually about how it runs, its price, and other minor details, Weidman has printed cards giving all the particulars about the car. He adds that it's low enough to pick flowers as he drives along.

Weidman is the father of two, and therefore needs a larger car for family outings. He has just that . . . a big car . . . a Volkswagon.

Award Winning Novelist Offers First-Hand Hints

By Ed Munson

Sherman J. Elworthy, one of the editors of the New Webster Dictionary, now instructing English courses at the college, leads quite an illustrious life.

Besides being a successful novel writer, Avery Hopwood Award in 1942 for his novel, Mightier Than The Sword, Elworthy has written radio scripts, church stories, and was even an actor at one time.

Elworthy graduated from a Michigan high school during the depression. He financed his college education by working as an actor and as a Detroit hospital administrative trainee.

Elworthy received his bachelor's degree at the Western Michigan College in 1939. In 1940 he received his master's at the University of Iowa.

He taught three years at the University of Michigan, then was an associate professor at Michigan State University. Elworthy came to San Francisco as a visiting professor, fell in love with the city and decided to stay. He has been with the college faculty since last September.

Elworthy has a ranch in Twain Hart where he lives with his wife and two children. He raises Christmas trees as a hobby, and claims, "I'm just a farmer at heart." On week-ends he grades his students' papers while at his ranch, near the ghost town of Columbia, where he and his family are reconstructing a 100-year-old building.

Among the current books he has written is Columbia, The Gem Of The Southern Mines. The book is a guide to and history of the old ghost town. It will be published in June.

Other books by Elworthy to be released soon are Short Cuts To Better Spelling, and A College Student's Reading List.

His advice to writing majors is best said with a quote: "Time is never wasted when spent writing."

"It is true," he said, "that we can't create writers here at college, but we can steer the students around the pitfalls that we the instructors encountered. The short cuts to writing learned here by the student will save him valuable time and effort.

"Writing is learned by writing."

Chavez Sprint Leads Thinclads To Triangular Meet Win Over Santa Rosa, San Mateo Teams

By George Grasso

Eddie Chavez, with an exciting victory in the two-mile run, led the City College thinclads to another double victory in the triangular meet against the San Mateo Bulldogs, 91-31, and the Santa Rosa Bearcubs, 90 1/3-31 2/3, at Santa Rosa last Saturday.

Chavez brought applause from both his team mates and his opponents for his exciting duel with Darrell Beardall, Santa Rosa's star two-miler.

Beardall had recently been voted the top cross-country star in Northern California by the sports writers association, but the Ram two-miler was unimpressed by this fact. Chavez took an early lead, and each time the loose running Beardall tried to pass him, Chavez would sprint away.

Chavez kept up a fast pace for eight laps while playing tag with Beardall. Then in the final stretch, Beardall moved out and sprinted toward the tape, and to everyone's surprise the almost exhausted Chavez sprinted, too, and kept inches ahead of Beardall as both runners broke the tape as if they were finishing a dash. Chavez ran the two mile in 10:02.

James Thomas, a former Washington High athlete, has proven himself to be one of the college's most valuable and versatile track men. At Santa Rosa, he took a first in the 120 high hurdles, then he moved down to the 180 low hurdles and brought home another first. Between his two victories in the hurdles, Thomas entered the high jump and placed second behind the Rams' Wilfred Gasper.

Past performances by Ram boxers have produced better than adequate results. In 1953 Jack Bettencourt dropped a close decision in the National Junior College Championship to the current high ranking welterweight, Spider Webb. In another bout, Jerry Stern captured the Pacific Coast Inter-College Championship at San Jose in 1949.

Two former Rams now in the pro ranks are Lou Gage, United States representative to the Helsinki Olympics in 1952, and his brother, Len Gage, Golden Gloves champ in 1953.

College Cancels Varsity Boxing For Second Year

Concentrating its efforts on intramural boxing, the college will not house a varsity team for a second straight year, according to former Ram boxing coach Roy Diederichson.

A waning interest, resulting in last years' cancellation of the annual boxing tournament, has now given Diederichson full time for his duties as tennis coach here.

In addition to intramural activities, two students have entered the Golden Gloves tournament, although Diederichson stipulated that they are not representing the college.

Roger Ruiz, a 165 middleweight, dropped a split decision to Bill Sherry of the Hunters Point Athletic Club. Ben Vitalis fought in the 112-pound class last Thursday night.

Rich Atkins and Bob Guddee, the college's one-two punch in the broad jump, both went over 21 feet to take first and second in this event. Atkins' leap was 21'8", and Guddee reached 21'6".

Will Wilson, Bob Hammond, John Orognen and Steve Pickney all teamed up for the mile relay and nosed out Santa Rosa in 3:32.3.

The team will take a week's rest, and on Saturday, April 6, they travel to Stanford University to take on the Stanford Frosh and West Contra Costa.

RA Teams Defeat Three Colleges In Basketball

Recreation Association basketball teams here defeated Monterey Peninsula College, Napa College, and Oakland College at a play day held recently at Santa Rosa.

Students who attended this play day were Carol Simpson, Julia Russell, Betty Edwards, Juanita Miranda, Esther Lisama, Reiko Takenaka, Darlene Reitz, Gloria Mountanos, Sandy Simonian, Quenn Hall, Beverly Wilson, Ariene Chew, Jewel Cole, Diane Porter, Ann Allen, Cyldenia Harper, Sue Johnson, Virginia Lea, Joan Kwock, and Carol Goldenberg.

Million Dollar Deal Might Affect Others

By Lou Lucia

LAST WEEK the Cleveland Indians turned down an offer of a million (a MILLION) dollars from the Boston Red Sox for southpaw pitcher Herb Score. The Indians believe they have a pennant-contending club and from a fan-drawing aspect there is a lot of doubt that the Cleveland organization would benefit by selling their top pitcher.

There are other angles which come into scrutiny under this story. Whole baseball franchises are sometimes bought for this amount, so there is no doubt that it is a very substantial sum. Recent court hearings have discussed "whether or not baseball is big business," and investigators must have jotted down a million notes on this attempted bartering agreement.

If Score, last year's leading strikeout pitcher, were sold, what salary could he demand from the beantown team? At the very most $60,000, if he had a terrific year of 30 or so wins. An argument that Score would be worthy of for still is, even though he wasn't traded) could be "If I'm worth a million dollars how come I can't even wrangle a $100,000 paycheck, which is only 1/10 of my worth." Apparently baseball owners believe a player is worth more than his salary. (His current salary is an anemic $16,000.)

Score is probably the best young pitcher in the major leagues, and has a chance of becoming one of the all-time greats if he keeps up his current pace. His ability is strictly on the mound and in his left arm. As long as his arm is in good shape, no regrets will be voiced by the Cleveland brass. If he turns out to be another sore-armed pitcher, Hank Greenberg, General Manager, will be crying in his dugout.

Imagine how the Philadelphia Athletics (old version of the current Kansas City team) felt when they traded Bobby Shantz as just another player to the New York Yankees this February. An earlier price tag hanging from his now sore left arm approximated $250,000 . . . easy money in old form with the Yankees, but nevertheless the Athletics lost out on the gamble of keeping him and not selling earlier.

Will Score's arm be "like money in the bank," or will he turn out to be "second Shantz"? Only time will tell. Future court hearings may rule on whether or not baseball is "Big Business"? Can baliplayers demand 1/10 of their worth as a paycheck for seven months' work?

Whatever the outcome of these questions, look for the Boston team to go shopping for top flight pitchers from other teams. This writer wouldn't be surprised if they bought a star pitcher between the time this was written and today. If not in this span of time, perhaps in the near future.

Rams Split Double Bill

Ray Bower Wins SF News Trophy For Versatility

By Nick Peters

Ray Bower, 18-year-old City College freshman, was awarded a trophy on March 8 during the S. F. News' sports night at the War Memorial Opera House, for his all-around ability as a prep athlete last year.

A tri-sport performer at Galileo High, where he earned a Block and three stars, Bower was voted on many All-City teams. As a basketballer in 1955-56 he made the All-City 130's for his sparkling defensive work as a guard. He was first-string varsity guard last season until his mid-season graduation.

He gained prominence as a gridder in 1956, winning All-City halfback honors in his second season of play. Bower was a star athlete at Galileo where his versatility was unparalleled. John Poppin, Bower's football mentor, relates, "A good mental attitude, great courage and desire, and a superior all-around quality are all typical Bower traits."

Poppin, who also coached Ollie Matson when the latter attended Washington High, compares Bower to Matson in that they both had sterling leadership qualities, yet neither was the least egotistical. "Had Galileo displayed a winning football team, Bower's abilities would have really been discovered," Poppin added.

As a sophomore in 1954, Bower was the first-string shortstop on the baseball team and subsequently went on to greater heights, being voted All-City shortstop in his junior and senior years. Bower, with his fine play at short, is credited for bringing the Academic Athletic Association diamond championship to Galileo in 1956.

Already established as a great glove man, Bower hit 6 for 12 in the championship series against St. Ignatius at Seals Stadium to help give the Lions the title. As a result of his fine play he was acclaimed the outstanding player in the series.

Lion baseball coach, Pope Illia, believes that Bower can go a long way in baseball because he has "the right attitude, tremendous abilities, and strong qualifications." A tribute to Bower's diamond prowess came on July 29, 1956, when he played for the S. F. All-Stars in the Hearst contest at Golden Gate Park diamond.

He hopes to attend the college for a while, then continue his studies at the University of California. After U. C., he has hopes of entering professional baseball.

Bower, who has already impressed college mentor Bill Fischer with his fine defensive work and practice games' .375 batting average, was named a mineh starter for the league opening Santa Rosa doubleheader last Saturday.

Baseballers To Meet Modesto Pirates; Eleven Inning Win Marks Ability Of Champions

By Lou Lucia

An extra inning 13-9 win, and an abbreviated five-inning 2-1 loss to the Santa Rosa team last Saturday at the Bearcubs' home field gave the Ram defending championship nine a split in their league opener.

This Saturday the Rams will meet Modesto at Balboa Field with two games slated, and starting time set at 12:30 p.m. Next Tuesday, April 2, the Rams will meet West Contra Costa in a single contest at the latter's home field with game time set at 3 p.m.

Showing the mark of champions, the ability to come from behind, the Rams scored eight runs in the ninth inning of the first game to go ahead of the Bearcubs. Key hits during the rally were stroked by Al Alloto and Gene Craft.

Alloto, a reserve outfielder, smashed a 350-foot triple with the bases loaded to tie the game, and Craft knocked in two vital go ahead runs with a line drive over second base. The rally didn't stop there as Tom Roper receipted for his third single while driving in Craft and Rich Madaglia, who had walked.

Santa Rosa's Charlie Perkins who had struck out 14 Rams was knocked out of the box during the rally. However, the Beareubs' Art Blunt tripled and Gregg Briggs doubled to make way for Rams' starter Bill Flanagan's exit from the pitcher's mound. Bob Bandettini took over the mound duties and was touched for a game-tying home run by Santa Rosa's centerfielder, Villard Wright. Bandettini had trouble during the last two innings but left a total of five runners stranded, while becoming the winning pitcher.

Ray Waters, Santa Rosa's all-conference basketball player, was the losing pitcher. He gave up four runs in the eleventh inning as Ray Bower and Medaglia gained life on errors, Blair LeMire and Roper walked, and Roger Ferrari singled.

With two outs in the bottom half of the sixth inning of the second game, lengthening shadows forced the umpire to call the tilt on account of darkness at 6:13 p.m. The score reverted back to the fifth inning, which was still 2-1 in favor of Santa Rosa.

Coach Bill Fischer and the players took the loss dejectedly as they didn't have time for a last inning uprising this time. Jim Datzman lost the three-hitter to the Bearcubs, though pitching a creditable five innings. The Rams outhit the Bearcubs 6-3, with LeMire and Medaglia getting two hits apiece.

Santa Rosa's two runs came on a wild pitch, and a high pop-up to the infield which went untouched.

AMS Basketball Resumes Tonight

Independent basketball league play resumes tonight after a week's break for midterm week, as the Hotci and Restaurant Society plays the Filipino Club at 7 p.m. and the Newman Club tips off with the Hawaiian Club at 8 p.m.

In tomorrow night's games, the International Relations Club meets the Campus Police in the first game, and in the nightcap, the Chinese Club vies with Alpha Phi Omega, Wednesday's games will be played in the women's gymnasium, because of the scheduled use of the men's gymnasium by the Inter-Fraternity Council, but tomorrow's games will be in the men's gym.

Last week's opening game, the Campus Police vs. the Chinese Club, was rescheduled because of difficulties in time arrangement. The Hotel and Restaurant Society defeated Alpha Phi Omega by the lopsided score of 54 to 34; the Newman Club drubbed the Filipino Club by a 32-16 score, and the Hawaiian Club won their game with the International Relations Club by default.

Officials for the league are Bob Tealer, athletic commissioner, Jim Bryant, Jim Bates and Bill Allen, Associated Men Student vice-president.

Rams Place Two On Big 8 League Basketball Team

An all-conference Big Eight team with Bob Tealer and Al Mock of City College on the first team and Doug North on the second was recently released by Harold Taggart, commissioner of the league.

The coaches voted Jim Thomas of Modesto as the only unanimous choice, while Mock was the only player to get the nod two years in a row. Rounding out the team were Ray Waters of the low finishing Santa Rosa five, and Larry Blanchard of San Mateo. Blanchard led the league in scoring with 292 points and a 20.9 average per game.

Tealer was seventh in the league, as he scored 208 points and finished the regular season with a 14.9 average. Mock was next in line with 193 points and a 13.8 average.

A second team was announced with West Contra Costa placing three men on the team, Liso Dixon, J. D. Banks, and Babe Ruth Williams. Vic DiGiovanni of Modesto and North from the Rams completed the team. Banks, the third high scorer in the conference, Dixon and Williams were no doubt picked for their strong scoring puneh and rebounding.

DiGiovanni was the play-maker and speedy defensive guard of the second place Pirate team. North, a 6'8" center, was the leading rebounder of the Rams. His total of 29 points in the Oakland game was the highest for the college five in any one contest during the regular season.

Golf Team Downs Pirates In Opener

City College golf team, coached by Grover Klemmer, swamped the highly touted Modesto Pirates in its inaugural league match, 9-6, at Harding on March 15, and will meet Santa Rosa at the Bearcubs' home grounds this Friday.

Number one man Rich Rose lost his match, ½-2½. Victories were recorded by Don McDowell, 2-1; Mike Evans, 2-1; and John White, a last-minute substitute for the late arriving Larry Barr, 3-0. Third man Frank Hubert split his series, 1½-1½.

Giving his top men a rest, Klemmer took part of his squad to Lincoln where they defeated the Washington High golfers, 8½-6½, on March 19.

Irwin Bank Mobile Unit On Campus Until 3:30 Today In Blood Fund Drive

Irwin Memorial Blood Bank's mobile unit will be here until 3:30 p.m. today to receive donations for the City College Blood Fund, according to Phil Malnick, student chairman.

B-1 and B-2 are headquarters where the staff was located yesterday and will be located again today. Goal for the drive is 300 pints of blood, but Malnick stressed that more is actually needed for insurance to those who have donated.

Directing the student's attention to the crucial need for blood is a poster demonstration located, since last Thursday, at the Silver Pole. It reads in part, "Each hour around the clock 4.56 transfusions are given from blood furnished by Irwin Memorial . . . Make up a group and give together."

Those giving a pint of blood insure themselves and their families for any blood they may need in the future, Malnick pointed out. Those persons not insured by a fund have to pay $25 for any blood they may need in a hospital if any emergency arises, Malnick stated.

Time schedules were placed around campus at the request of the Irwin Memorial staff, and students are expected to sign their names next to an hour when they are free from classes. This is not a definite appointment, but is intended to give the staff an idea of how large a turnout they can expect at a certain time so that they can have adequate facilities and a staff ready.

Malnick stressed that the time to wait for donating blood after coming from a malaria zone has been changed to six months instead of three years.

Donors will be interviewed and a blood sample taken before they will be allowed to donate blood. No one will be permitted to donate if there are any dissenting factors found in their bloodstreams.

"Giving blood does not hurt; on the contrary, it leaves you with a good feeling for having helped someone else," Malnick declared.

"The needle does not hurt and Irwin will not take the blood if there is any possibility of harm to a person's system," he added.

Those who give blood will be given badges bearing the words, "I Gave."

Six Women Aid At Deans' Conference

Approximately 1,000 deans of women and women students will meet tomorrow in San Francisco at the first convention of the National Association of Women Deans and Counselors and the California Association of Women Deans and Vice-Principals, according to Mary Golding, dean of women here.

Theme of the National Association of Women Deans and Counselors will be Education And Freedom —A Dynamic Relationship.

Women students here who will attend as volunteers in doing secretarial work are Christine Ioannou, Majel Manning, Beverly Garnero, Almarie Delaney, Marie Boyadzis and Joan Peterson, Miss Golding added.

The convention will be held from tomorrow until Monday, April 1. A similar meeting was last held in San Francisco in 1942, Miss Golding further added.

Nine Chosen For Model UN Session

Nine students have been chosen to represent the college at the seventh annual Model United Nations at Stanford University starting Wednesday, April 10, according to Thomas Dutcher, debate coach here.

Representing the college will be Harold Bence, Joel Gallin, Wallace Hardie, Carol Imbornone, Arlene Labberz, Patricia Metsack, John Pruyn, Nancy Ruzich, and Bill Whitney. Whitney is the chairman and leader of the delegation.

Students from colleges along the Pacific Coast, and from Hawaii and Alaska will be participating. Each college delegation will represent and present the viewpoints of a certain country. The delegation from the college will be representing the Kingdom of The Netherlands.

"Delegates from the college have selected councils and committees, and they will argue and discuss current problems with students representing different countries," Dutcher said.

The councils and subjects that will be discussed in the Economic and Social Council, Trusteeship Council, Political and Security Council, Economic and Finance Committee, the Social, Cultural and Humanitarian Committee, and an additional Political Committee.

Arizona Film Friday

Arizona Adventure will headline the film portion of the college hour, 10:20 to 11:20 a.m. this Friday, according to Madison Devlin, visual aids instructor here.

Featured in the film are the Grand Canyon, the Navajo reservation and two of the state's leading cities, Tucson and Phoenix.

Master Hair Stylist Gives Demonstration To Model Class Here

Denny Denlinger, master hair stylist from Don's Beauty Salon, and Sally Boyd, professional model, visited the photographic modeling class here recently.

Lecturing and illustrating with pictures, Denlinger pointed out that hair styles are not only based on face structure, but also on the function of the individual personality, figure of the person and the color of the hair. In reference to modeling, the hair style must take into consideration the type of clothing and activity, he stressed.

Specific advice on choice and use of make-up was given by Miss Boyd, who is now instructing modeling at the YWCA, followed by a hair styling demonstration on her by Denlinger. He then styled the majority of the students' hair, showing the importance of various hair styles for different situations.

Fiery Debate Marks Council Sessions; Phi Rho Pi Head Seeks Club Board Clearance

By Dick Moore

Lumberinng through two of the most awkward and fiery meetings of the spring semester, the Student Council last week passed one controversial budget and very nearly passed another, the unconstitutionality of which was either disregarded or unknown to council members.

In the Tuesday meeting, Finance Chairman Brower Dimond presented to council for the second time the highly debated budget request of the college debate society, Phi Rho Pi. The meeting was then tied up for a period because Dimond had incorrectly quoted the sum of the Phi Rho Pi request. In the ensuing confusion, question arose again as to the constitutionality and fairness of passing the budget. The point was taken up and argued back and forth among members of the council, cabinet officers and others present.

At this time, speaking in behalf of the organization, Bill Whitney, Phi Rho Pi president, told the council that his group would at once clear up the matter of its designation by Club Activities Board Chairman Bob Wendt as "not being an on-campus organization."

Opinion was then expressed by a council member that the entire matter should be discussed after Phi Rho Pi's position was set straight.

Wendt brought out the fact that if the funds were allocated despite his recommendation to the contrary, that CAB constituted powers, authority and prestige would be in great jeopardy.

After Inter-Fraternity President Bill Driscoll asked Wendt if he "thought he was qualified to hold up the progress of the school" by asking council to vote down the Phi Rho Pi request, the council finally succeeded in moving the correct amount by voted on. An attempted motion to table the matter was then asked and defeated.

Council then voted on the original request for $300 and the allocation passed.

Thursday's session again debated the previously tabled Alpha Gamma Sigma request when Dimond presented the budget, stating, "I do not recommend the passage of the honor society budget."

Gordon Beal, Sophomore Class president, then obtained the floor and argued for the AGS request. Dimond countered by saying that allowing the request to go through without a 100 per cent Associated Student membership on the part of AGS would set a bad precedent.

Intending to dissuade the council from passing the budget, Associated Men Student President Mike Monteith stated that the council members were bound to uphold the AS constitution and would not be doing so if the funds were granted without 100 per cent AS membership.

The motion was then voted on and passed with half the council voting against the measure. AS Vice-President Metta Weddleton broke the tie by casting an affirmative vote.

At this time becoming muddled in parliamentary law, the council designated the whole matter to be in a state of abeyance and the session was adjourned.

Manuscripts For Forum Magazine Due By April 19

Contributions to Forum, the college's annual literary magazine, must be submitted to Catherine Connolly, Forum adviser, or left in office C-331A during the week of April 15 to 19, Miss Connolly announced last week.

There is no limit to the amount of material a student may hand in, as long as that material is submitted before the prescribed dates to allow sufficient time for proofreading, Miss Connolly stated.

Editorial work on manuscripts prior to their publication in Forum will be done by the members of the Forum Club, either at their college hour meetings or during their free time.

Acting as liaison man between the Forum Club and William J. Eckert's art class, James Stettler is working on a new design for the magazine's cover which will replace the old "Ram" figure which has adorned it in the past.

Ad seekers are also busy in their attempts to gain advertising subscriptions from some of the business men in the area. "Local merchants have been encouraging and very cooperative," David Taylor, assistant advertising manager, stated.

Editor for this year's Forum will be chosen at a later date, either by a majority of votes from the Forum Club or on the basis of accumulated value to the magazine, Miss Connolly stated.

Publication date has not yet been set, but Forum usually is distributed in June.

Regional Conference Adopts Resolution For Veterans Workshop

A resolution was passed at the Northern California Junior College Student Government Association on March 16, at San Jose, to include a veteran's workshop in future conferences.

A second motion, proposed by the college delegates, was passed to extend the Activities Workshop to work on problems of on-campus organizations as well as social activities.

Thirty students from the college attended, and Mike Monteith was appointed chairman of the Associated Men Student Workshop, and Debbie Rudser chairman for the Associated Women Student Workshop.

Shippey Surpasses 3rd Goal, Aims For $10,000, New Spring Record

For the third time since the Associated Student card sales started this semester, a new mark has been reached and again a new goal set, Dwane Shippey, AS card sales chairman, announced here last week.

"We've had better results than we expected and planned," Shippey said in reference to passing the original goal of $8,500 on March 13, when a total of $9,300 was reached.

As of March 20, the mark was broken again when 1,901 card-holders provided the AS [illegible] with an [illegible] "tempting us," according to Shippey, to establish another goal, this time of $10,000 for a new spring semester record.

Shippey, in mentioning some of the benefits students have at the college as card-holders, said these range from free parking in the campus lots to free caps and gowns for graduates who otherwise pay at least a $5 rental charge for them.

In addition to these facilities, the AS card also provides for reduced rates and sometimes free admission to dances, to athletic events, drama productions, participation in voting in AS government elections here, rallies, plus discounts in Bay Area stores, theaters and gas stations.

AWS Presents Show, Tea Here April 11

Parisian Promenade will be the theme for the fashion show and tea to be presented by the Associated Women Students on Thursday, April 11, Debbie Rudser, AWS president, announced last week.

Purpose of the affair is to honor the high senior women of San Francisco's public and parochial schools and to acquaint them with the college, Miss Rudser stated.

AWS officers for the semester are Darlene Enfield, vice-president; Joan White, corresponding secretary; Dorothy Baciocco, recording secretary; Marilyn Schoolman, historian; and Fran Edmonston, treasurer.

Until the 1800's, public speakers in England and the United States always began their addresses with the salutation, "Gentlemen and Ladies."

Signup For Summer Classes Starts May 13

Pre-registration for summer sessions will start May 13 and end on June 7, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar here.

Students wishing to pre-register should apply at S-117 on the dates previously stated. Most students are pre-programming with their counselors now, and classes will begin on June 24. After this date, there will be no student registration, Miss Learnard said.

If a student expects to attend the summer session, he must appear at the registrar's office on June 20 to notify the office and confirm his registration.

AWS Schedules Fashion Show For April 11

With Parisian Promenade as a theme, the Associated Women Students here will hold their semi-annual fashion show and tea on Thursday, April 11, at 2:50 p.m. in the library in Cloud Hall, Debbie Rudser, AWS president, announced last week.

Tea will be served following the show by AWS members at Smith Hall, Miss Rudser said.

Purpose of the affair is to honor the high senior women of San Francisco's public and parochial high schools and to acquaint them with the college, Miss Rudser stated.

Chairmen of the committees for the fashion show and tea are already appointed by Miss Rudser as follows: Jean White, invitations; Margie Saba, food; Bev Schroth, serving; Marilyn Schoolman, entertainment; Shelly Osborne, publicity; Dorothy Baciocco, programs; Pat Jones and Eugenia Lary, decorations; Ruby Broadway, hospitality; Fran Edmonston, models; and Janc Goldsberry, clothes coordinator.

DEBBIE RUDSER, president of the AWS.

Women students interested in helping the different committees for the fashion show and tea may sign up in Dean Mary Golding's office, Miss Rudser added. Special invitations for the affair will be sent to all AWS members, Miss Rudser further added.

What makes a woman charming will be the theme for the third program on the AWS Personality Plus series to be held at college hour this Friday in S-315, according to Miss Rudser.

Mildred Barnard, a member of the counseling department, will be guest speaker at this meeting. To obtain background material for her lecture, Mrs. Barnard will interview some of the men and women on the campus to get their ideas on the subject.

The last meeting of the series will be held on Friday, April 26, at college hour, featuring Margaret Steffan, instructor in human relations here. Mrs. Steffan will deal with the topic, Legal Points for Women, Miss Rudser added.

Nine Coeds Sign For Miss SF Contest

Nine women students have signed up for the annual Miss San Francisco Pageant, according to Mary Golding, dean of women here.

They are Audrey Boeck, Eleanor Benton, Sara Burgess, Jo Cataffo, Barbara Crane, Bonnie De Caneda, Naoma Parker, Marilyn Russell and Louise von Emster.

Women interested in applying before the April 27 deadline must be between 18 and 28 years of age, a resident or student of San Francisco for at least six months, single, with no previous marriage status, and able to put on a three-minute routine displaying talent.

Tau Chi Sigma To Present House Of Blue Lights Dance

Tau Chi Sigma fraternity presents its annual House of Blue Lights dance this Friday night, April 5, from 9 p.m. until 12 midnight in Smith Hall, according to Bill Kaleikau, Tau Chi Sigma dance chairman.

Music is provided by the Charles Price Quintet, featuring Ron Stefani and Bev Moore. Alpha Phi Omega and the Hotel and Restaurant department will serve pizza and other refreshments in the fountain area.

"Plans are being made to have dancing and refreshments in the patio area," Kaleikau stated.

During the evening nine coeds, who will represent the college in the Miss San Francisco contest, will be introduced.

Admission cost is 75 cents a person, and dress for the dance is suits or sports clothes.

"It will be a stag or drag affair; and should provide a wonderful evening for everyone," Kaleikau commented.

Debate Members In Mid-East Talk

Members of the college's delegation to a mock Middle East conference will participate this Friday, April 5, in a round table discussion at San Francisco State College concerning the role of the Middle East in the world today, according to Bill Whitney, chairman of the group.

In the mock Mid-East Conference the college will be representing the country of Iran. Its discussions will be centered around the four main topics, Suez Canal, the Eisenhower Doctrine, irrigation, and the action in Israel.

This meeting is the second in a group of three. The first was held at Stockton and was merely a planning session. The meeting at State this Friday will be actual committee discussions, and its results will be presented at the third meeting to be held at San Jose, May 10.

Those who will attend the conference are Paul Arshad, an Iranian student at the college, Joan Cecchini, Joel Gallin, Wallace Hardie, Carol Imbornone, John Pruyn and Whitney.

Club Activities Board Prepares To Act Against Non-Represented Clubs

Club Activities Board is preparing to take action against the Horticulture Society, Drama Club, and Collegiate Christian Fellowship for failure to send representatives to the CAB meetings this semester, Bob Wendt, CAB president, announced this week.

According to the CAB constitution, any organization which has not turned in its petition for membership to the CAB committee will be officially declared off-campus. Deadline for filing petitions for membership was March 14, but if declared off-campus, the organizations have the right of appeal to the Student Council for the right to become a part of the CAB.

Clubs which have fulfilled the requirements for on campus status are as follows: Forum, Alpha Eta Tau, Recreation Association, Block SF Society, Lutheran Discussion Club, Chinese Students Club, Hawaiian Club, Junior Club, Canterbury Club, International Relations Club, Alpha Gamma Sigma, Hillel Foundation, Christian Science Organization, Ram Cam, Engineering Society, Hotel and Restaurant Society, Men's Glee Club, Treble Clef, and A Cappella Choir.

In each CAB organization, 51 per cent of the members must be Associated Student card holders. Any organization not complying with this regulation will be ruled off-campus, in accordance with the AS constitution.

Those clubs which are not a part of the CAB are the following: Alpha Phi Omega, Pick and Hammer Society, and the Band, Wendt stated.

Students interested in joining any of the previously mentioned clubs may do so by consulting Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities.

HERE ARE TWO MIXED-UP INSTRUCTORS! Mixed up, that is, in a story which was on page two of last week's Guardsman. A reporter writing a feature story about Roy Early (left), an award-winning novelist who is presently an instructor in the English department here, made a novel error—or should we say novelist error? At any rate, J. Sherman Elworthy (right), also an English instructor here, was the name used in the story. With the help of Joe Saporito, staff photographer, and a Polaroid camera, we are attempting to straighten the matter out herewith.

Guardsman Goofs Names; Elworthy Gets Early Fame

Two distinguished gentlemen grace an equally distinguished English department at this college.

Each has a wife, each has two children, and both share the same office in Cloud Hall. More than that, their names each begin with the same letter—which could be where the big mixup started when a Guardsman reporter was given the assignment to "get a story on Mr. Elworthy."

When the story came in, The Guardsman staff thought it had a real scoop in discovering that the college included a prize-winning novelist among its faculty.

So the story was published last Wednesday—only the facts applied not to J. Sherman Elworthy, ex-professional golfer who has performed creditably in the National Open, but to Raymond R. Early, actually the prize-winning novelist.

(The reporter, last seen heading for the hills, interviewed Early when he thought he was interviewing Elworthy.)

So, to set the record straight, here are the facts—triple-checked:

Early, who gained his AB degree at Western Michigan College in 1939, and his AM at the University of Idaho in 1940, received the Avery Hopwood award in 1942 for his powerful novel, Mightier Than The Sword.

He has also written many short stories, worked regularly on radio scripts, and in his spare time, as a younger man, performed on the professional stage.

His academic career has been wrapped up in three years of instructing at Michigan State University; then on a trip to this city, he worked as visiting professor at the University of San Francisco, later as a professor.

In September of last year, Early joined the college faculty, and following his golden rule that "time is never wasted when spent writing," he has recently turned out three more books, Columbia, The Gem Of The Southern Mines, and two educational manuscripts, Short Cuts To Better Spelling, and A College Student's Reading List.

Elworthy, not in the least upset at being confused with his associate, now confines his golfing activities to friendly rounds with members of the faculty and other friends, spending much of his time here working with the Club Activities Board and the Rally Committee, which organizations he sponsors.

Despite the mix-up, and the continuous wisecracks aimed at them by faculty members, there is one point on which Early . . . or Elworthy . . . or, that it . . . well, there is one point on which they both agree. "Writing is learned best by writing."

AS Office Candidates To Meet On April 17

Election Commissioner Hugh Aanonsen has called an early meeting of all prospective candidates for next semester's Associated Student offices on Wednesday, April 17, at 7:30 p.m. in S-140.

Campaign restrictions for the May election will be eased, according to Aanonsen. The meeting is designed to acquaint the potential office-seekers with the new regulations.

Petitions for office will also be handed out at the meeting.

New Committee Formed For Show Case Reservations

A new committee, designed to take bookings for the posting of displays in the various show cases of the college, was formed at a recent meeting of the Publicity Committee with Thomas R. Tatera, journalism major here, delegated to take charge of the reservations.

Any organization of the college wishing to schedule a display for these showcases, which are located near the Science Building's main entrance and north end of the first floor, are expected to consult Tatera through The Guardsman office, S-304, to make their reservations.

All reservations must be approved by William J. Eckert, Advertising Art instructor, through Tatera.

Last semester bookings for the showcases were handled by Janet Mowll, a member of the Publications Board and Eckert's art class. Succeeding her in this job was Pauline Rodriquez, a member of the same art class.

A horticulture display is now being exhibited in the showcase located across from the main entrance and will remain there until Monday, April 15. A Latin American exhibition will follow from April 25 to May 10.

In the north end showcase is an Associated Women Student fashion show and tea advertisement, which is due to run until April 15, according to Miss Rodriquez.

All organizations intending to reserve a showcase for their use were urged by Eckert to use as much of their own material as possible in preparation of the intended display.

Lecture, Film Presented Friday

Two items headline the program for this Friday's college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m., according to the official college hour schedule.

Production 5118, a film drama on the basic problems of communication, will be shown in S-136, while an International Relations Club sponsored guest speaker will address an open hearing on the Baghdad Pact in S-100.

Dealing with human understanding, this Friday's film dramatizes how easily the meaning of a person's statement can be misunderstood.

Ahmad Eghbal, Consulate General of Iran, has been invited by the IRC to discuss the Baghdad Pact and the Middle East conflict.

Campus Blood Fund Receives 145 Donations

By Jacquie Waite

Last week's blood drive netted the college fund 140 actual donations and five units transferred from the faculty fund, according to Phil Malnick, chairman of the drive.

The final count may run higher, as it is hoped and expected that many persons will go directly to the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank at 270 Masonic Avenue and donate there in the college's name.

Malnick stressed the importance of anyone donating blood to inform the blood bank that their blood is to go in the special fund, so that City College may be credited with it.

He added that anyone going to the blood bank and donating blood will insure his family for any blood it may need in the next year.

Because of the college's participation, all faculty members, employees of the college, and students, including those graduating, are insured for any blood they may need in the next year, but only those who donated or who had a member of their family donate will have their whole family insured.

The present alumni will not benefit from this insurance unless they have donated.

This insurance will last until one year from now. If anyone needs blood, he should inform either Dean Mary Golding's or Dean Ralph Hillsman's office. If a student graduates, all he need do is write a letter to one of the deans explaining the need, whether it be for himself or a member of his family.

The dean will then give the name of the person in need to Malnick who will verify the case with Irwin Memorial, and the blood will then be released. Malnick added that he is the only one authorized to release the blood.

Irwin Memorial is affiliated with a national organization, so no matter where in the United States a donor is, if he writes a letter to one of the deans telling where he is, why he needs it, and other such particulars, Irwin will send the blood to cover the supply used by that person.

Trophies for the sorority, fraternity, and club having the highest percentage of member donations will be given after a final tally is made. "Anyone wanting to help his particular organization should go to Irwin right away, as the tally for the trophies won't be made until the end of this week," Malnick said.

Malnick added that if any blood is left in the account at the end of a year, it will be transferred to a needy organization such as the leukemia ward of the city hospital, or the City of Hope Hospital in Los Angeles.

Little Theater Play Rescheduled

A special extension of the college's current little theater production, Madwoman of Chaillot, will be shown Friday and Saturday, "to compensate for the earthquake week-end cancellations," according to Michael Griffin, drama instructor here.

Readings for the next production, tentatively scheduled to be J. M. Barrie's English play, Admirable Crichton, are beginning today in the little theater, starting at 2 p.m. sharp, and will run through Friday. "Would-be actors, with or without experience, are welcome to try out at these sessions," Griffin stated.

"Newspapers, disc jockeys, and television announcers cooperated generously in making the public aware of the earthquake cancellations," Griffin said, "but ardent enthusiasts still braved the elements and turned up." Admission prices are as always $1, or one presentation of an AS card.

Wakefield, Berrick Cutest Couple Winners

Sharon Wakefield and Ray Berrick were the two recipients of the Cutest Couple trophies at the freshman ball, which was held March 23 in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel.

Beta Phi Beta donated the trophies for the contest, and Phi Beta Rho, together with Alpha Phi Epsilon, were responsible for the abundant supply of flowers which decorated the Mural Room for the dance. It is estimated that approximately 950 persons attended the dance.

College Stands Firm Through Quakes; Student Calm Praised

BY NOW, it is thoroughly evident that buildings on this campus were really built to last.

Recent quakes caused only the slightest damage because these buildings were constructed with situations of this kind in mind.

Constructed of reinforced concrete, they were designed to be earthquake-proof in accordance with the Field Act which was passed in 1936.

Outside of a few dislodged tile blocks, and plaster cracks in some of the rooms, no other building damage was reported.

One good example of engineering foresight shows up in the type of windows which were installed here. The frames are purposely not too rigid, thus allowing for a certain amount of motion without glass breakage.

During the quake, one college in this city suffered quite extensive glass breakage because of rather rigid frame mountings.

Relative calmness was displayed by students and faculty alike throughout the quake despite the fact that, for the majority, it was their first.

For this, they deserve the highest praise; evacuation of the buildings was carried out in an orderly, efficient manner.

Blood Donations Can Still Be Made To College Fund At Irwin Memorial

IT'S A SHAME that last week's blood drive didn't turn out as well as it was hoped it might.

Regardless of the result, the persons who arranged the drive and those who did donate blood deserve commendation for their enthusiastic and very worthwhile efforts.

Now that midterms are over, persons who were conserving all their physical resources for that occasion still have an opportunity to take part in the blood drive.

These persons, and any others who wanted to make a donation last week, but were unable for one reason or another, can still do so.

They can go to Irwin Memorial Blood Bank within the near future and donate, requesting that it be placed in the college fund.

Ancient Chinese Junk Sails From Formosa To San Francisco; Voyage Highlights TV Adventure Program

By Ray Davis

In the early summer of 1955, an ancient Chinese junk carrying a ragged crew of five Chinese and one American, surrounded by a belching chorus of friendly fishing boats, and a shrieking, wheeling mass of representative sea-gulls, came pottering independently under the Golden Gate Bridge of San Francisco.

From Treasure Island, a Coast Guard cutter curved magnificently out into the lazy waters of the bay. Its aim, to escort a small boat with a big heart into a position of honor within sight of San Francisco's waterfront.

Crewmen Paul Chow and Reno Chen silently shook hands across the battered tiller. As organizers of the voyage they had borne a heavy weight of responsibility on their sturdy shoulders, but only their bold dark eyes expressed the exultation they must have felt in their hearts, for the Chinese are traditionally men of action and few words.

After long months of perilous sailing through tumultuous typhoons, sail-splitting storms, and agonizing lulls which failed to produce even a whiff of wind, their revised aim had been achieved.

On April 14, 1955, with the help of American vice-consul to Formosa, Calvin Mehlert, and three similarly adventurous Chinese, they had set out from the port of Keelung in Formosa, intending to sail their junk clear across the wide Pacific and enter it in a trans-Atlantic yacht race due to begin in New York harbor the following June.

Well, the typhoons, storms and peaceful patches had put an end to their racing hopes, but it had been fun (the Chinese kind), life was still worth living, and San Francisco wasn't the worst city in the world. .

Happily for Chow and Chen, it turned out to be perhaps the best. After being wined, dined, popularized and praised, the young individualists went their separate ways.

Mehlert went to relatives in Berkeley to take a well earned rest from ambassadorial duties, three of the Chinese took a stately liner back to family and friends in Formosa, and Chow and Chen to the friendly academic waters of this college, where they hope to steer their way through the tranquil seas at "A" and "B" to port past the choppy channel of "C's", and sail clear of the rocky reefs of "D's" and "F's", to the safe anchorage of an engineering degree.

Final acknowledgment of their epic voyage came last week when Chow left for Hollywood at the invitation of the producers of KGO-Television's I Search For Adventure. Together with the 2,000 feet of technicolor film which was shot during the trip, Chow will be given the full Hollywood treatment, and the net result will be shown on the above program with a coast to coast hookup on Tuesday, June 18.

New Educational TV Series Produced By NBC; Bellamy And Phillips Score Despite Plot

By Carol Harris

A NEW EXPERIMENT in educational television is being conducted nationally by NBC.

The network is producing and supplying a series of educational programs to the nation's educational stations. The stations are presenting this series five nights a week, with each night devoted to a different subject.

KQED is showing this series every week night at 9:30 p.m., except on Friday nights when the time is 9 p.m. The schedule for the series is as follows: Monday, Mathematics; Tuesday, World Geography; Wednesday, American Literature; Thursday, Government; Friday, Opera.

A study into the psychological make-up of an academy award winning producer and his associates was recently attempted on the Kaiser Aluminum Hour.

The Academy Award Winner was a production which never quite got into focus and was burdened with a time-worn plot.

The plot dealt with the attempt of a successful, hard-boiled and ruthless producer to keep all those around him in bondage, including a struggling and unknown young writer. This same basic plot has been seen many times by television and movie viewers, with a few variations. It concluded, as it was obvious from the beginning it would, with the young writer delivering his fiery independence speech.

In spite of this dated plot, the production was well-worth watching because of the acting talents of Ralph Bellamy and Lee Phillips. Both were brilliant in their portrayals, Bellamy in the role of the producer and Phillips as the writer.

A veteran of many years in the acting profession, Bellamy's performances on the television medium seem to be outstanding, no matter what material he must work with. In his interpretation of the producer, he kept the viewer's emotions torn between feeling sorry for this man and hating him. It takes good acting to arouse that type of emotion.

Although the whole production fell short of being outstanding, it was an interesting glimpse into the inner-workings of the movie capital. No attempt was made to white-wash the industry or any of the people in it.

Too Old To Work, He Joins AS

Lunch Wagon Operator Celebrates Tenth Year As College Snack Seller

Ten years is a long stay at one college, no matter what way you look at it, but every semester since 1947, 74-year-old Khan Mihan has been a member of the Associated Students of the college.

Mihan is not enrolled in any classes at the college, nor can he be called a student, but his face is one of the most familiar and well liked faces on campus. He is the owner and operator of the small maroon and white lunch wagon that is parked daily at the entrance to the student parking area on Phelan Avenue.

Mihan's stay here started 10 years ago after he was fired from his job because he was "too old" to work. He felt too young to be retired and soon he found himself in business as operator of the lunch wagon.

The wagon, (it has no name), rundown when he bought it, now shows an investment of $600 in fixtures and repairs. It is not only spotiessly clean, but compact and very serviceable. Ice cream, candy, sandwiches, milk, cold drinks, and potato chips are purchased daily by campus students.

Being at the college seems to be sort of a privilege to Mihan. "This is my home," he said. "I can't express the way I feel in my own heart for the way that I've been treated—teachers and students, both so very nice to me."

Pakistanian born in 1883, he came to the United States during the year of the earthquake and fire, 1906. His life here has made him a jack-of-all-trades. He has worked as a mechanic, in a steel mill, on the railroad, and as a janitor.

The timeliness of this story is more than meets the eye, for it was not only ten years ago that he came to the college, but ten years ago this month.

Brynner Happy But Barber Not

Mr. Yul Brynner [illegible] was made the most unregretful mistake of his career when he reportedly asked his barber to "cut until I tell you to stop," and then fell asleep in the chair.

Brynner's studio...found the actor had exceptional appeal with a bald pate, but the artist who sent Yul and his new hair-style to fame didn't quite agree. Yul's haircut meant the barber's income-cut.

"No hair, no customer, no dough," philosophized the saddened barber. "I only hope the fashion doesn't spread."

Rumors on campus here are spreading the news that the little theater's next production will be The King And I. Anyone for the lead role?

Shots At Ramdom

By Bob Sims

OUR TOWN, after rockin' and rollin' to the tune of some 300 major, minor, and medium quakes, has just about returned to normal. Happy we are to return to jazz and classical forms of entertainment, for, though rock and roll seems to merely jangle nerves elsewhere, our San Francisco brand was nearly disastrous.

ONE photography major here really capitalized on the shocking events which occurred here last week. George Costello was lounging in the cafeteria, sipping a cup of coffee when the big quake hit. He jumped up, grabbed his camera, and hurried down Ocean Avenue, snapping all the while.

Next he hurried his photos down to the Call-Bulletin and the result was a front page picture of the destruction rendered to a large super market at 1630 Ocean Avenue. Congratulations, George!

JOYCE WEAVER, former Associated Student vice-president here, and now attending Humboldt State College, has just been admitted to the National Honorary Co-Educational Journalistic Society. She also writes a campus column for the Eureka newspaper, [illegible] which—by the [illegible] Long-timers here might also remember that Miss Weaver authored the Club Cavalcade column in The Guardsman a few semesters ago.

Which brings to mind the fact that the current Club Cavalcade columnist, Marilyn Gregory, is changing her name, retiring from The Guardsman staff, and will devote future time to a former student here, one Al Perini. Nuptials will be held on Sunday, April 28, at the Norwegian Lutheran Church.

Dancer's Paradise?

...Or There Will Now Be A Short Intermission

By Louis Geisler

At least one couple who attended the freshman ball at the St. Francis Hotel last week believes that dancing is good exercise.

Arriving at the hotel about 9:30 p.m., the couple proceeded to the ballroom where their wraps were checked and their Associated Student cards punched.

They hastened merrily to the dance floor. The music stopped, the instruments dropped, and a microphone voice announced, "There will now be a short intermission."

Two thousand kicking, shuffling feet scrambled toward the tables. When the dust had cleared away and all the empty chairs had been taken, two battered pairs of shoes stood alone upon the dance floor, their owners looking frantically for a place to sit down.

The man shouted to his partner, "I know of a swell place that is less crowded."

The wraps were checked out, and the two strode briskly to the street. Then they walked around the corner and crossed the street. The man looked one way and then another.

"There it is," he exclaimed, nodding to a large sign, "It's the Sir Francis Drake. Come on."

Down on the main floor the couple decided to try the Starlight Room, but when the elevator operator let them off on the 26th floor, a doorman pounced on them asking, "Are you both over 21?" As the coed shook her head, the doorman pressed the "down" button.

Sadly, the couple trudged back to the St. Francis. Their sorrow turned to joy, however, when they heard the lively sounds of the band.

After their wraps were checked again, they ran unhesitatingly to the dance floor. The band was going wild, and the crowded room shook with joyous excitement. Then, as the tune ended, a familiar microphone voice announced, "There will now be a short intermission."

Deciding to slip out for something to eat, the couple headed for the exit again, not pausing at the cloak room. When they found a cozy restaurant a few blocks away, they entered and ordered two turkey sandwiches.

[illegible] later, [illegible] wheeled a lavish cart alongside the table and very ceremoniously set two large plates in front of the hungry pair. From under a covered dish emerged two dainty sandwiches which were delicately lowered into place.

Prying under the top slices of bread, the two found microscopic shavings of thisee, evidently taken from the breast of a Meleagris gallopavo (turkey). Upon receiving the bill, the man found that all of this came to only $3.35.

It was midnight and the ball was over when the couple returned to retrieve their wraps. The crowd emerged, swallowing up the two. After a 20-minute wait, the man finally recovered the coats, and the pair squeezed breathlessly through the door out into the fresh, cold air.

Former Galileo Mound Star Bill Flanagan Finds College Batters Harder To Put Out

By Nick Peters

Bill Flanagan, promising freshman pitcher, played an instrumental role in leading his Galileo Lion teammates to the Academic Athletic Association Championship in 1956, and Ram Coach Bill Fischer hopes Flanagan is as effective against Big Eight foes.

Galileo, enjoying its best season, compiled a record of 24 wins (including 17 straight) and 5 losses for a remarkable .828 percentage.

Flanagan personally accounted for 13 of the victories while losing only two games for a personal .867 percentage.

Flanagan's best AAA pitching performance was turned in against the fifth place Lincoln Mustangs. The Galileo ace, displaying a sharp-breaking curve, shut out the Mustangs, 10-0, with an impressive one-hitter. He finished the season in top form, defeating the St. Ignatius Wildcats, 7-4, in the rubber game of the AAA championships at Funston Playground, to sew up the title.

When not on the mound, six-foot Flanagan played first base. The old and often used adage that pitchers can't hit certainly doesn't apply to this pitcher. During the 1956 AAA season he compiled a potent .345 batting average in league play. As a reward for his sparkling play, Flanagan was unanimously voted to all the city's prep All-City diamond nines.

His three-year league record was an 8-4 mark with an excellent earned run average of 1.25 runs per game.

At Galileo Flanagan also played basketball. In 1954-55 as a 130 exponent star he was elected to the second team All-City squad. The following year he moved up to the varsity where he was first string forward.

This season for the college he has compiled a 1-0 won-lost record, defeating the Santa Clara Frosh, 11-4, in a practice game. In his initial league appearance on March 23 against Santa Rosa, Flanagan was a bit shaky, allowing eight runs in a little over eight innings on the mound.

In three practice games, however, he allowed but four runs in 12 innings for a respectable 3.00 ERA despite being hampered by a sore arm in the early stages of the practice season.

Flanagan, a physical education major at the college, hopes to continue his studies at the University of California. After his graduation from UC he hopes to enter professional baseball and later become a physical education instructor.

Differentiating between the brand of ball played in the AAA and the Big Eight Conference, Flanagan said, "In college ball the entire opposing lineup can murder you at the plate, whereas in high school ball there are only a few outstanding players on each team to bother the pitcher."

BILL FLANAGAN, one of the Rams' starting pitchers, is being counted on by Coach Bill Fischer to aid the team as an outfielder when he's not on the mound.

Ramblings

By Lou Lucia

SOME skeptics at the college who are seeking "the truth which will make them free" insist that boxing is not a part of the current heritage of the modern civilized world. They state that "the manly art of self-defense" degrades the human race of our civilization.

A few facts on the subject may help to clarify the subject. Boxing was started in Greece during the Olympic Games of 688 B.C. At first the Greeks wore straps of soft leather around their hands, and then later changed to hardened leather. About 400 B.C. the Greeks used "Caestus" hand coverings which were made almost entirely of metal. Needless to say, the ring ratings were very erratic because of the death of some of the best pugilists.

However, form and grace were the determining factors in a winning decision if both participants were still alive at the finish. The Marquis of Queensberry is generally considered as the father of modern boxing as he brought in padded gloves, specifications for a ring, and rules for the sport.

Today, three-minute rounds, usually 10 rounds in a bout (15 in championship fights) are prevalent. Only two knock-downs are allowed in one round of a fight in the state of New York (unless of championship nature where the rule is waived), and at the third knock-down the fallen man is declared the loser.

This is a far cry from the ancient Grecian days when death was the penalty for losing. Perhaps if physicians didn't examine performers before a bout (and during the bout to see if they are injured too badly to continue) there would be justification for skepticism of the physical aspect.

On the moral side of matters is the fact that two champions in particular are seemingly religious men. Gene Fullmer, current middleweight champion; is an Elder in the Mormon church. After his last successful defense of the lightweight title, Carmen Basilio dropped to his knees and thanked God for his victory. The integrity of these men is not questioned just because they are boxers.

Both boxers and football players have the same idea in mind, knock down the opponent. The boxer uses his fists which are padded, while the gridiron star uses his body, which is also padded. Deaths rarely occur in either sport and rules are constantly changed to avert hazards.

A soldier must kill to stay alive; a boxer has to out-fight his opponent, and it is not mandatory that he slay the foe. Though boxing may not be the best way in the world to earn a living, those who enter the profession have one of two principles: Either to be the best in the world at the sport, or money. Some divorcees receive large amounts of money for alimony. Are their ethics in this "civilization" better than the boxers?

First college football nickname was "Tiger," adopted by Princeton in 1887.

Ram Golf Team Downs West Contra Costa, 10-5

City College's golf team has taken over first place position with a 2-0 record, following its win over West Contra Costa at Harding Golf Course March 22.

Low man for the match was Don McDowell, turning in a one over par 73 on the Harding green.

Holding down key positions on the team are Rich Rose, the Rams' number one man, closely followed by Frank Hubert, Larry Barr, Mike Evans and John White.

This Friday the golf team travels to Santa Rosa, where they will defend their first place berth against the Bearcubs.

Tennis Team Sweeps Match With Comets

In their second Big Eight meet of the season last Friday, the tennis team left the Golden Gate Park courts believing that they had beaten the West Contra Costa netters by the score of 6-1, but because of a default in one match, the score was upped to 7-0 in favor of the Rams.

This Friday the tennis team will play host to the Stockton netters on the Golden Gate Park courts.

"The first doubles team, composed of Nick Schaaf and Vic Saschin, should be able to qualify in the state championships if they continue to improve," Coach Roy Diederichsen said.

Ball Fans Rabid 'South Of Border'

By Pastor Valle-Garay

Baseball, America's great national past-time, whether professional or amateur, has been watched and played with the same enthusiasm in the Caribbean area for more than a quarter of a century, ever since it was introduced to Latin America.

These countries contributed to the [illegible] such players as Sandy Amoros, Luis Aparicio, Chico Carrasquel, and many others now playing in the major leagues.

Cuba, Colombia, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Puerto Rico and Venezuela's organized ball is rated almost equally with the American's Triple-A professional standards. Fanaticism for and knowledge of baseball in Latin America is as great as that of the American public, and stadiums and ball parks compete in beauty, size and capacity with those in this country.

Nicaragua's National Stadium seats 85,000 persons. Built for the celebration of the tenth and eleventh World Series of amateur baseball, held in 1949 and 1950, about 20 nations participated, and a crowd of nearly 95,000 fans entered the stadium with 10,000 of them on the stadium's playing field.

Mexico, proud of its beautiful Olympic City of Sports, is in constant rivalry with Spain in the bullfighting department. Mexico's two principal rings, Plaza Mexico and El Toreo, located in Mexico City, hold a total of 50,000 "toros" fans.

It is said that the salary of the toreros (bullfighters) goes as high as $100,000 per season on a level with the highest paid baseball stars here.

In South American countries, like Guatemala, Brazil, Costa Rica, the Argentine, Chile, Peru, Uruguay and others, soccer, the world's most popular sport, and basketball dominate the professional field of national sports entertainment. European soccer teams, as the Hungarian Olympic stars recently did, often travel to these places, and thousands of fans pay good money in order to watch them. Players supposedly make more money than American baseball stars.

The comment has been made that America's south-of-the-border friends have two passions converted into national past-times. One is sports, any sport, and the other, revolutions. In fact fanaticism reached such a maximum about a year ago in one of these countries that a baseball game "struck out" a whole political convention.

That country's president, running for re-election, was to be present at a convention in the second largest city of the republic. He arrived, but the meeting ended in a fiasco, for the city's baseball team at that time was leading the professional league.

This club was playing in the country's capital, which the pr... just left to go to a convention, while fans had gone by the thousands to the capital to cheer for their team's victory, against the capital's team, which happened to be partially owned by the president himself.

Some like the man; others feared his power and domination but on that occasion, as a fan puts it, "All that mattered was how the local teams would fare, for politics and elections were too far ahead, and furthermore, highly unpredictable."

Before election time, the man, Nicaragua's late President General Anastacio Somoza, had been shot to death by an assassin's bullets, while attending another convention . . . when no ball games were scheduled.

Double Loss To Modesto Team Leaves Rams With One Win, Three Loss Conference Record

By Roy Kirk

Modesto's Pirates defeated the Ram baseballers 12-8 and 4-2 last Saturday, in a double-header at Balboa Field, to move out as definite contenders and leave the Rams with a one win, three loss record.

Games this week will pit the Rams against West Contra Costa at the latter's home field this Saturday with starting time set at 3 p.m., and on Tuesday, April 9, the Rams will again cross the bay to meet the Oakland nine with starting time at 3 p.m.

Modesto wasted little time getting to the Rams' starter, left-hander Bill Flanagan, tagging him for five runs off of five hits in the first inning, climaxed by Bill Heath's grand slam homer over center fielder Bob Bandettini's head. The Rams got one back in their half of the first as Ron De Giorino got life on an error, advanced to second on a fielder's choice, and was doubled home by Blair LeMire.

In the top half of the third, Heath, Modesto's slugging catcher, blasted his second homer with the bases empty. Fielding errors on the part of the Rams gave the Pirates three more runs in that inning. The Rams picked up three runs in their half of the third on hits by Bandettini, Tom Roper, De Giorino, and walks to Ray Bower, LeMire and Roger Ferrari.

In the fifth, the Pirates added three more on hits by Em Lee, Ed Ivy and a pair of errors by the Rams. Bandettini was on the mound at this time, having relieved Flanagan, and held the power-laden Pirates in check for the remainder of the game. Ed Vegely, Modesto's starting hurler, left the game in the third and was relieved by Ron Jourdenais. They were tagged for four runs in the Rams' third inning.

In the sixth, Ferrari got life on an error, Bandettini walked, Gene Craft was hit by the pitcher, Flanagan walked, forcing in Ferrari. The rally was halted with three left on bases. Picking up three more runs in the seventh on a walk to Al Alioto and three successive hits by Medaglia, LeMire and Roper, the Rams were held scoreless the rest of the route.

In the second game, Jim Datzman started on the mound for the Rams and ran into trouble in the second inning when the Pirates scored three runs on four hits and three walks. Datzman was relieved by Bandettini, who put out the fire.

John Holmquist, the Pirates' chucker, pitched a masterful four-hitter, allowing only two runs in the nightcap, one in the fifth on a double by Roper and a single by Craft, and another run in the seventh when Bower and Craft walked and Flanagan singled sharply to left field. Holmquist struck out the last batter to end the game, leaving the two tying runs on base.

Track Team Vies With Panthers, Indians Saturday

With four straight victories to their credit, and a meet with the Stanford Frosh and West Contra Costa slated for this Saturday at Stanford, the City College track team looks forward to Sacramento and Modesto as the teams to beat for the Big Eight Championship.

Victories and scores over Big Eight opponents of the Rams are as follows: City College 79, Oakland 34; City College 91, San Mateo 31; and City College 90½, Santa Rosa 31½. A non-league meet with the Cal Frosh ended in a Ram win by a 67⅝ to 64⅜ tally.

Modesto, as usual, is strong. It is a college interested in track, and therefore receives much imported talent. Modesto is particularly sharp in the flat races such as the mile, the 880, and the quarter mile. Coach Lou Vasquez hopes his ace field men can offset the rushes of the Modesto runners. Sacramento's ability should be determined before the Rams meet them on Friday, April 12.

The track team has been developing fast with Wilfred Gasper, Eddie Chavez and Bob Hammond all coming through with important victories. The broad jumpers, Rich Atkins and Bob Guddee, have hogged first and second place away from the first four colleges they met. The high jumpers and pole vaulters continue to bring home the points.

Coach Vasquez is particularly satisfied with James Thomas. Thomas, a jack-of-all-trades at a track meet, moves from event to event and usually manages to place in all of them. Proficient in four events, he is capable of scoring in all of them in a single meet.

At Santa Rosa, the mile relay team ran the fastest time in Northern California for this year. Vasquez remarked that the time was slow for his men, and believes the relay team will make even better time in the future.

LeMire, Minney Impressive In 3 Practice Games

Victories over the Alameda Naval Training Center, 5-4, the Santa Clara Frosh, 11-4, and the Hamilton Air Force Base, 20-19, indicate that the college baseball squad may be a power-laden aggregation.

Rich Medaglia's eighth-inning double paved the way for a come-from-behind victory over the Alameda nine. Jim Datzman, the winning pitcher, was ably supported by the two hits out of three at bat performances of Gene Russo and Roger Ferrari.

Following that victory the Ram nine whipped the Santa Clara yearlings, 11-4. Blair LeMire, All-Big Eight Conference star, led the assault with two hits including a prodigious four-bagger, Gene Craft, Roy Bower, and Medaglia also chipped in with two hits apiece. Winning pitcher Bill Flanagan hurled six innings, giving up only two runs.

Pitcher Bob Minney, ex-Lowell High ace, lost a close one to East Contra Costa, 8-2, LeMire, shifted to left field to give the Rams more hitting power, again led the college attack with three hits, including a double.

On March 20 the Rams participated in the season's most spectacular slugfest. Relief pitcher Ferrari, on the mound in the 12th inning, was credited with the victory. The grid-like score of 20 to 19 was a result of sloppy fielding as well as potent hitting. Ferrari collected three hits along with Bob Bandettini, who also hit a homer. LeMire, Craft, and Bower hit twice each. Coach Bill Fischer was rather skeptical of the worth of his mound corps after this contest.

6 Cagers Name Future Bay Area College Choices

Seven members of this year's City College championship basketball squad will complete their work here and enroll at four-year colleges next semester.

All but one eager will stay close to home and attend schools in the Bay Area. The straying lamb will be guard Al Mock, who is interested in heading north to either Oregon or Oregon State.

Mock is also considering the University of Utah. If Mock decides on Utah, he will be following in the footsteps of another former Big Eight star, this being [illegible] Mock... [illegible] was Modesto's big gun last year and broke into Utah's starting lineup this season and led the team in scoring.

Mock's running mate at guard, Rich Russell, is uncertain as to what college he will attend, but is looking in the direction of San Jose State. Coach Walt McPherson of the Spartans will be rebuilding for next season, and possibly Russell may fit into his plans.

Bob Tealer, high scoring Ram forward, will return to the University of California in the Fall. Tealer was at Cal in 1955 and is anxious to get back to the Bears' court in Berkeley.

Four Rams, Rich DeConti, Jim O'Conner, Bill Wooten, and Al Vidal, will enroll at San Francisco State.

Council Reverses Official Stand On Honor Society Fund Request; Other Budgets OK'd

By Dick Moore

Rescinding their official stand taken two weeks ago on the hotly disputed Alpha Gamma Sigma budget allocation, the Student Council last Thursday did a turn-about by voting to down the AGS request for Associated Student funds.

The decision was made after AS President Bob Varni asked that the meeting move right into old business.

After the question of nullifying their previous decision to grant the fund was brought up, council was asked by Sophomore Class President Gordon Beal why members of the council thought it was necessary to reconsider their action when they had passed the request a week before.

Discussion on this point indicated that council members had based previous opinions on the good intentions and integrity of the honor society rather than on the question of the strict legal advisability of allowing the AGS their request.

When Varni asked Club Activities Board Chairman Bob Wendt if the group had fulfilled CAB responsibilities, Wendt said that AGS had had a representative at CAB meetings, but that if the group was not 51 per cent in AS card membership they would have to be considered not on-campus.

The motion to rescind the affirmative action on the budget was voted on and passed, thus leaving the honor society without its funds.

At this time the meeting went into a discussion of new business with Beal presenting a resolution to the council which provided that a letter be sent to the Editor of The Guardsman for the purpose of giving in published form "an informative accounting and evaluation of the council's accomplishments and proceedings."

Stating that an editorial in the March 27 issue of The Guardsman had presented an "incomplete and inaccurate estimate" of the council's efficiency, the resolution was passed by council members and a committee headed by Beal was formed to draw up the letter.

Stressing the idea that in no way would they desire to hinder The Guardsman's freedom to comment on council activities, the council felt that the paper's coverage of council proceedings was carelessly executed.

Finance Chairman Brower Dimond then asked Varni if the honor society budget would come up again for consideration by council. Then another motion to allocate funds to the AGS was made and seconded. The motion was voted on and defeated with a negative vote being cast by the council member who had just moved to allocate the funds. The budget follows:

Ten Enrolled In Modeling Class

Photography students are using ten women students, enrolled in the photographic modeling class, for models this semester, according to Charles Lamp, photography instructor here.

Enrolled are Margie Bell, Kay Burke, Judy Crowder, Fran Edmonston, Marilyn Euler, Shirley Greenberg, Vickie Holub, Shirley Payton, Carolyn Postel, and Annie Snoddy.

Purposes of the students working together is for the model to learn basic principles of individual use of all components of the body, and for the photographers to develop confidence in the physical and emotional direction of the model. An individual repertoire of poses is developed that is useful to both the model and the photographer in working to a layout.

Prospective models aim to develop poses and expressions that are effective and natural and that she individually can best portray.

Delegation Prepares For Model UN

College To Defend Netherlands View

Delegates from the college will be among 600 other college students registering for the seventh session of the Model United Nations at Stanford University Wednesday, April 10, according to Bill Whitney, chairman of the group.

Representing the Kingdom of The Netherlands, the college's delegation is prepared to discuss and argue the points of view of The Netherlands, and also to defend its position in regard to the West New Guinea problem, Whitney added.

Council and committee assignments to members of the college delegation are Nancy Ruzich and Carol Imbornone, economic and social council; Joel Gallin, trusteeship council; Harold Bence, political and security committee; John Pruyn, economic and finance committee; Arlene Libherz and Pat Metsack, social, cultural and humanitarian committee; and Wallace Hardie, ad hoc political committee.

"We are trying to work with the colleges that will be representing Luxembourg and Belgium, because they, along with The Netherlands, form an economic alliance known as the Benelux Countries," Whitney said. He added that colleges from Washington, Oregon, Utah, Alaska, Arizona, and all over California will be represented.

BILL WHITNEY, college chairman for the Model United Nations.

With 80 per cent of the college asking for the assignment of Egypt, Stanford was left to the task of arbitrarily assigning member colleges to represent various countries.

The Egyptian assignment went to the University of Washington. Other important college assignments were the University of California, U.S.S.R.; Central Washington College, Hungary; Oregon State, the United States; San Francisco State, Indonesia; Lone Mountain, Luxembourg, and the University of Southern California, Israel.

The Model UN is patterned after the original United Nations, and although it has fewer councils and committees, the basic structure and workings of it are the same. The purposes of the Model UN, as stated in its charter, are to develop a greater understanding of nations in order to promote friendly relations and universal peace.

Five Hundred Applicants File For Summer Employment; College Majors Needed On Technical Jobs

A total of 500 students have filed their summer job applications for a wide variety of employment opportunities in California, Oregon, Washington, and Idaho, Joseph Amori, placement director, announced last week.

More than 100 different job openings were listed by Amori, ranging from cooks and waiters to engineering aides. Jobs as bus boys, truck and bus drivers, waitresses, saleswomen, cashiers, office workers, desk clerks, tour escorts, baggage boys and stock boys dominate the opportunities offered by employers.

Pay scales vary according to job requirements, from $350 per month with room and board for cooks and tour escorts to $1 per hour plus tips and board and lodging for waiters and waitresses.

Sixteen outstanding young men, 21 through 35 years of age, capable of passing a battery of tests, including aptitude and sales tests, Amori declared, are in demand by one of the largest transportation firms in the nation.

Sales and public relations experience is preferred as qualification for these jobs, which require travel and pay $350 per month with allowance while on the road.

A wide variety of counseling job opportunities is available to students majoring in community leadership, recreation, physical education and athletics, teaching and social welfare.

Applicants with experience in scouting, campfire girl activities, church groups, boys' and girls' club work, and first aid are preferred for outdoor jobs. Students with musical, dramatic, photographic, and aquatic background are highly desirable.

Aquatic leaders must be at least 21 years of age to assume full charge, but those under 21 with a Senior Life Saving Credential can serve as assistants. The jobs are in both public and private camps, Amori stated.

Engineering majors in their last semester of training here have the opportunity to work with one of the private construction and utility companies or with one of the state and federal agencies as engineering aides.

Some of the openings are with the U. S. Forestry Service in one of the national forests, Amori said.

There will be a few jobs within the local limits of the city and county of San Francisco, Amori added, and students with special skills in typing, shorthand, accounting, IBM, and other types of office machines will be given preference.

Three personal rating sheets are to be filed with applications in the placement office, S-187.

CAB Accepts Home Economics Club As New Member

Alpha Eta Tau, the home economics club, is the newest member of the Club Activities Board, Denese Durkin, Alpha Eta Tau publicity chairman, announced last week.

The aim of the club is to acquaint home economics majors with the different fields and opportunities in the career of home economics and to help make students better homemakers of tomorrow.

In the near future, the club expects to become affiliated with the local, state, and national American Home Economics Association. This is necessary before the club can be recognized as a college home economics club, Miss Durkin said.

Dues, she said, are $1 per semester, plus a 50-cent initiation fee for new members. Any student interested in the club will be welcomed at meetings.

Blink In Class Loses 700 Years

The only course in this college where blinking or sneezing can result in a student missing 700 years of history is Speech G4, an introduction to the theater, according to Henry Leff, radio and television instructor here.

"Blinking, you will most likely miss 700 years of theater history," says Jeff. Because the course meets only twice weekly, a great deal of material is discussed at each session.

Offered for the first time last semester, this course, which explains stage history and development, is parallel to the one taught at San Jose State College.

The living stage is the "text" used in Speech G4. It familiarizes students with the background of the theater from primitive times to the latest plays viewed at the Curran, Geary and Alcazar theaters in San Francisco.

Leff recommends that all students interested in the theater, broadcasting, and literature, enroll in this two-unit course.

A dry hole is not dry; it is an oil driller's term for a "well filled with water."

College Air Raid, Fire Rules Posted In All Classrooms

Regulations concerning a fire or an air raid on the campus should be known by all students at the college, Oscar Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management, announced last week.

Air raid and fire instructions are posted in every classroom. In case of an air raid shelter alert, all students will be evacuated to the corridors of Cloud Hall or to the basement of the Science Building.

If the college receives notice from the defense authorities for an evacuation air raid, then all cars on campus will be loaded to their capacity with students not owning cars.

All cars are directed to go to the Herbert Hoover Junior High School, Park and Nagler Streets, in San Jose. The drivers will proceed to Ocean Avenue, turn right on Ocean to Plymouth Avenue, turn left on Plymouth and travel south on San Jose Avenue until reaching El Camino Real, and then continue south to San Jose.

No one will be allowed to travel to the center of San Francisco, and all streets will be one way traveling either south or west.

In case of a fire, a gong will be heard throughout the buildings, and students will follow the directions of their instructor.

Graduates Win Art Scholarships

Annette Legras and Joseph Jacquemet, two January graduates from the college's advertising art department, recently were recipients of the tuition scholarships which the San Francisco Academy of Advertising and Commercial Art offers to graduating art students each semester.

William Eckert, advertising art instructor at the college since 1940, has not only managed to secure these scholarships for worthy students each semester, but also succeeds regularly in placing other capable men and women in remunerative post-graduate positions through his many contacts in the Society of Artists and Art Directors of which he is a member.

One indication of his ability to fit a good man into a job can best be illustrated by the achievements of two latter-day students. One has a position with Warner Brothers, the movie magnates, and the other has just done a full page advertisement for Life magazine.

AGS Members Form Educational Service

Alpha Gamma Sigma, the college's honor society, is attempting to set up a coaching service for those students falling below average in some of their subjects, according to William Richardson, faculty sponsor of the group.

Subjects for which coaching may be available are mathematics, history, chemistry, physics, psychology, communications and German, Richardson added.

Eight Apply For AS Scholarship Award

Eight applications for Associated Student scholarships have been received in the offices of the Dean of Women and the Dean of Men, according to Mary Golding, dean of women here.

The scholarships include two awards amounting to $125 each, which will be presented for the first time this semester to a man and woman student who have been currently enrolled for one semester, are carrying a minimum of 12½ units, and are AS members.

Parisienne Promenade Motif For AWS Show Tomorrow

By Esmereida Aguilar

With Parisienne Promenade as a theme, plans are now being completed for the semi-annual fashion show and tea presented by the Associated Women Students, which will be held tomorrow from 2:50 to 5 p.m. in the library of Cloud Hall, according to Debbie Rudser, AWS president.

Honor guests at the affair will be the high senior women of San Francisco's public and parochial high schools, Miss Rudser said.

High school seniors scheduled to attend are from Balboa, Galileo, Lincoln, Lowell, Mission, Polytechnic and Washington.

Purpose of the fashion show and tea is to enable the high school graduating women to become acquainted with the college, women members of its faculty, and with the women students, Miss Rudser added.

All women students attending the college are invited to attend, Miss Rudser stated. Special invitations have been sent to all women students who are members of the Associated Students.

Joseph Magnin will provide the clothes for the fashion show. Commentator for the event will be Muriel Sinclair, fashion coordinator from Joseph Magnin.

The fashion parade will be of college "haute couture" attire and will include clothing from sportswear to evening dress.

Parisienne atmosphere will be provided by a French environment with French poodles and hat boxes as part of the decorations.

Models for the fashion show include Diane Brookes, Audrey Bell, Louise von Emster, Beverly Garnero, Christine Ioannou, Barbara Hatter, Jean Whitney, Eunice Kelly, Alison Cohn, Patsy Tokarski, Fran Edmonston, and Joyce Preston.

Chairmen of the committee for the fashion show and tea include Joan White, invitations; Margie Saba, food; Bev Schroth, serving; Marilyn Milonesio, set up; Marilyn Schoolman, entertainment; Shelly Osborne, publicity; Dorothy Baciocco, programs; Pat Jones and Eugenia Lary, decorations; Ruby Broadway, hospitality; Miss Edmonston, models; and Jane Goldsberry, clothes coordination.

Proper dress for the occasion will be cottons and high heels, Miss Rudser further added.

Tuesday Last Day To File Petitions For Scholarships

Last day to file petitions for scholarships amounting to $825 is Tuesday, April 16, according to Mary Golding, dean of women here.

At a recent meeting of the National Deans of Women, in a special session for two-year colleges, it was suggested that students from these colleges be given special consideration by philanthropic and state and federal groups that donate money for scholarships, Dean Golding said.

One of the scholarships being offered at the present time is the Denman scholarship. This scholarship, in the amount of $125, was established by Judge William Denman and his sister, Mrs. Mary Cheatham, in memory of James Denman, who at one time was Superintendent of San Francisco Public Schools.

Two scholarships, offered by the Square and Circle, a Chinese women's business organization, are available to two Chinese women students here.

The Dr. A. J. Cloud Scholarships of $50 each are offered annually to one man and one woman. This scholarship was established by the faculty in tribute to the founder and President Emeritus of the college.

Two hundred dollars in the form of four $50 scholarships will be awarded to two men and two women. These traditional scholarships are provided by the members of the previous graduating class.

Applications for all scholarships should be addressed to the Dean of Women in S-148, or to the Dean of Men in S-150.

Delegates Leave Today To Register For Model UN Meet At Stanford

Delegates from the college will leave today for Stanford University to register for the seventh session of the Model United Nations, according to Thomas Dutcher, debate coach.

As one of the 81 nations present at the Model UN, the Kingdom of The Netherlands will be represented by this college. Delegates will try to put themselves in the position of the Dutch people, and try to look at world problems through the eyes of these people.

The Model UN began at Stanford University in 1950 when only a few colleges attended. The main idea and purpose of the meeting is to increase student and public interest in the workings and importance of the United Nations, and also to develop a greater understanding of nations.

Previous host colleges have been the University of Southern California, University of California, University of California at Los Angeles, and San Francisco State College.

In preparation for the sessions, members of the college delegation have been preparing and collecting ideas in connection with The Netherlands. The group has been holding joint sessions with representatives of Luxembourg, and last week attended a briefing by Julie Goss Lynch, director of the Kingdom of The Netherlands Information Service.

Events scheduled for the three days include committee meetings, three plenary sessions of the general assembly, and caucus meetings to be held at the delegates' discretion.

The Model UN will not be all work, however. Social events will start today with a reception for all of the 600 delegates. Tomorrow from 8 to 11 p.m., there will be a Stanford sponsored welcome dance. Friday, the Stanford Men's Glee Club will present a concert. Closing the three-day event will be a banquet, which will be held at the Hawaiian Gardens in San Jose.

Gamma Phi's Host At Spring Fever Dance This Friday

Spring Fever, a dance scheduled to be held this Friday night at the San Francisco Rowing Club on 524 Jefferson Street, will be the Gamma Phi Ypsilon fraternity's salute to the closing of Pledge Week, Bob Rodriguez, fraternity president, stated last week.

Admission to this affair will be by tickets only, at a cost of $2.00 per couple. Purchase of these tickets can be made at the student bank in Smith Hall, from members and pledges of Gamma Phi Ypsilon or at the door of the dance. Abe Battat, who has appeared on television and various night clubs throughout the Bay Area, will supply dance music from 9 p.m. to midnight, Rodriguez added.

Dress for the dance will be light, gay and semi-formal, in keeping with the spring season. A plentiful amount of greenery and other special effects will be used to decorate the Rowing Club in keeping with this theme, according to Rodriguez.

A unique attraction of the dance will be a ready-made fountain of youth, prepared by the Gamma Phi Ypsilon members. It is said that all who drop coins in this fountain and make a wish will be granted eternal youth. Rodriguez cannot promise the eternal youth, but he does guarantee that all proceeds will go to the Easter Seal Fund for Crippled Children.

"Featured at this dance will be special entertainment, free food, free liquid refreshment and, we hope, a large new moon—also free," Rodriguez said.

Club Meetings, Film On Friday

Club meetings and a film on uranium and the story behind it, entitled The Petrified River, will be featured this Friday during college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m., according to the college hour program schedule.

Co-produced by Union Carbide and Carbon Corporation, and the United States Department of Interior, Bureau of Mines, the film deals with the mining of the precious ore.

Centering mainly in the Rocky Mountains and the Colorado Plateau, the step by step operation of locating and unearthing the metal, using the latest and most scientific engineering devices, is reviewed.

Going beyond the actual mining operation, the film shows the refinement processes used in separating the uranium from the rock.

Finally, the film moves into the area of harnessing the atom and the peaceful uses radioactive material envelops.

Prospective Candidates For AS Offices To Meet Next Week For Election Briefing

A meeting for campaign briefing of prospective candidates for next semester's Associated Student offices has been set for Wednesday, April 17, at 7:30 p.m. in S-140. Election petitions will be given out at this time, Hugh Aanonsen, election commissioner, announced.

Three weeks from this meeting, May 8, is the date set for filing petitions of candidacy. At that time, "all petitions must be in the hands of the Election Commissioner," Aanonsen declared.

Tentative dates for the election have been set for Friday, Monday and Tuesday, May 24, 27, and 28. Any amendments held over from the postponed amendment election on March 3 will also be on the ballot if approved by Student Council or petitioned by 10 per cent of the AS.

Qualifications for students wishing to try for office for next semester are as follows:

All persons filing for candidacy must have maintained a grade point average of 2.0 and be carrying a minimum of 12 units by the second midterm.

Candidates for the office of President of the Associated Students must have at least 45 units and not more than 60 units prior to term of office.

Candidates for President of the AWS, AMS, or Sophomore Class must have completed at least 30 and not more than 60 units prior to term of office.

Candidates for President of the Freshman Class need at least 15 units and not more than 30 units to be eligible for office.

Candidates for freshman membership in Student Council must have completed at least 12 units and not more than 30 units of work at the time of holding office.

Candidates for sophomore membership in Student Council must have

Festival Contest Ends Here Next Wednesday

Final entry date for the May Festival Poster Contest is next Wednesday, April 17, Mike Monteith, Associated Men Student president here, announced last week.

Posters submitted are expected to include information about the theme, Cartoon Cavalcade, and place and time the festival is to be held, which are the Cow Palace, on Friday, May 17, from 8 p.m. to 12 midnight.

Trophies will be awarded at the May Festival to the poster contest winners and Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity, winners of the Name-The-Theme Contest.

Next Guardsman Issue To Come Out May 1

Because the publication schedule of The Guardsman calls for no issue next Wednesday, April 17, preceding Easter vacation, this will be the last paper until May 1.

Students and faculty will be allowed two days this year, April 18 and April 19, for Easter vacation. All counseling offices, library, and faculty offices will be closed unless an instructor desires otherwise, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar here, said.

The registrar's office and other administrative offices will be open.

April 22 Deadline For Submitting Forum Material

Six college days remain to submit material for publication in Forum, the college's annual literary magazine.

Because Easter vacation begins on Thursday, April 18, the deadline for submission of Forum material has been extended to Monday, April 22, Catherine Connolly, Forum faculty adviser, announced.

Short stories, poems, plays, satire, and essays are being accepted in Miss Connolly's office, C-331A. "Manuscripts must be typed double spaced on 8½ by 11 paper," Miss Connolly added.

James Stettler, art editor of Forum, has designed a new cover, consisting of a light blue field broken by black intersecting lines, which will replace the Ram figure of previous years.

Last semester a poem which appeared in the 1956 issue of the Forum was selected by Merle Weidman, of the architectural department here, as a project for his students.

This Is The Building by Edward McPherson was portrayed in a variety of ways, as old dilapidated buildings with falling plaster and winding stairways, and as empty, murky rooms with torn wallpaper and grease-packed windows. "It was an added compliment to have had a poem from Forum selected by Mr. Weidman," Miss Connolly said.

Eight Do It Yourself Hints, Or—Get That Ungrateful Editor

THE student governing body of a college rightly deserves the confidence and respect of the students whom it serves.

A great force in maintaining favorable student opinion for a student government is exerted by the newspaper of a college. Therefore, it is apparent that a student government should carefully observe the activities of its student newspaper.

When that newspaper prints favorable material, it should be commended and respected for its insight and truthfulness. However, if the newspaper should have the audacity to inject any constructive criticism concerning the student government, say, in the form of an editorial, several immediate steps should be taken by this governing body to recover any possible prestige loss.

The first step would be to notify the editor who had written the editorial by letter—not in person—of the gross injustice that had been perpetrated.

Next, everything that had been accomplished in the past by the newspaper to aid the student government should be completely forgotten by this group.

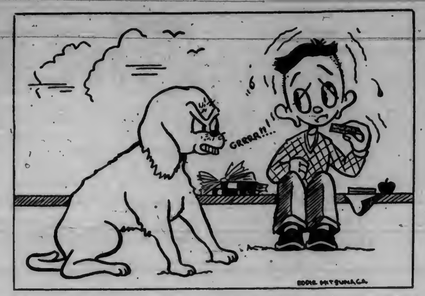
Although the constructive criticism had been intended for only a small group, it should be construed to include anyone who has even a remote connection with this group. The reason for this is that the more persons the group has on its side, the better.

A personal grudge should be carried by the governing body against any, and all, members of the newspaper staff, for surely the newspaper must have had a personal revenge motive. It is an obvious deduction that the motive could not possibly have been merely to stimulate improvement.

Now, we come to the ungrateful editor who had written an editorial of this type. He should—along with the rest of his staff—be ostracized and treated with contempt by the members of the student government. Any other appropriate methods of revenge which come to mind could also be used.

Then, the next step would be to threaten him—in a careful way, of course—with the loss of something if he continued to criticize. If, for instance, the editor, by virtue of his status, held a cabinet position, it could be implied that he might be replaced if he pursued his present course of action, even if this replacement should happen not to be possible under the constitution.

At no time should the editor be consulted by any member of the student governing body concerning their grievances, because he would undoubtedly have proof to substantiate the facts and opinions that were in his editorial.



It would then be advisable for various members of the student government to visit the student newspaper office during the editor's absence and harangue anyone in sight—preferably someone of small physical stature who knew little about the issues involved.

The purpose of this action would be to cause a general state of confusion, hence logical and pertinent facts would not need to be stated.

As the coup de grace, a formal letter of complaint should be composed and sent to the editor for publication in the newspaper. This letter should be carefully—ever so carefully—worded so as to sidestep and avoid the issues brought up in the offending editorial.

This is an important factor, for if the original issues were answered in a straightforward manner by the governing body, the editor might be able to repudiate the answers with proof.

If all of the above methods were followed by a governing body which had been confronted by constructive criticism, its newspaper would be warned against any further such critical altercations.

To split or not to split; that is the question being pondered by many of television's outstanding comedy teams.

Some of them have decided to go it alone. Unfortunately, the results of team splitting sometimes are far from satisfactory. One member of the team usually proves incapable of surviving when he pursues his solo career. The reason is lack of basic talent; most of the robust, slapstick comedians must have a straight man to lean on.

A typical example is the recent splitation of Abbott and Costello. Although they still appear together occasionally, Costello recently went out on his own. He proved only that without Abbott he is nothing more than a loud - mouthed, boisterous, would - be comedian.

Imogene Coca didn't fare much better after her split with Sid Caesar a few years ago. With Caesar, she was one of the nation's outstanding comediennes. Alone, she is not capable of sustaining a comedy series. After attempting her own show, which fell flat, Miss Coca has confined her activities to a few TV appearances during the season. Caesar's versatility has kept him in high favor with the public.

Martin and Lewis appear to be the exception. Both are doing well on their own, but whether they will retain the popularity they achieved as a team is a question still to be answered.

Currently, Art Carney is contemplating leaving Jackie Gleason to team with Nanette Fabray who recently "divorced" Caesar after taking over the role of his wife when Miss Coca left. Whether this merry - go - round mass movement will be in the best interests of the principals involved and the television viewers, only time will tell.

• Council Self-Examination

Editor, The Guardsman

The Student Council herein answers the charges made in The Guardsman editorial of March 27th, entitled, "Student Government Efficiency Goes Beyond Council Attendance."

1. We have obeyed and executed the Constitution and all of its amendments.

2. The Finance Committee has functioned with full cooperation from all of its members.

3. We don't intend to be a "rubber-stamp" Council and another all debate.

4. Contrary to appearances, Council members have spent many hours outside of the meetings in carrying out their duties.

Student government is recognized as a learning process. We do not claim to be expert already. Sufficient proficiency has been demonstrated, however, to process over $25,000.00 in budget requests. The Finance Chairman, Brower Dimond, says, "I have received full cooperation from Council members. With their help I have been able to balance the budget in record time."

The minutes of the Student Council as posted in prominent places in Science Building will bear this out. Thirty-three student and representative groups have been allocated well over $22,000.00 with a minimum of delays. A few budget requests arising serious controversy have been tabled in favor of more pressing business. Thus, the latest sessions of Student Council have been devoted to them.

This brings us to the charge of "wrangling." In the office of The Guardsman we find this quotation: "Where there are two people in the same room that always agree, one of them is unnecessary." We, too, feel that it is necessary to express our differences of opinion because we are representing nearly 2,000 Associated Students and the best interests of the school. We attempt to contain unnecessary debate while allowing full expression of all members.

We will continue to serve and represent the Associated Students. We welcome visitors at all meetings of the Council, held in room B-2 at noon on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

The above letter has been approved by the Associated Students' Student Council and is hereby submitted to the Editor of The Guardsman with our request for publication of this letter en toto.

Bob Varni, AS President
Eugenia Lary, AS Sec'ty.

(The amendment, added to Article 4, Section 1, provides that Student Council members automatically become members of the Finance Committee and will be required to investigate and make recommendations on original budget requests from some 36 campus organizations.

(Purpose of the amendment as stated before the voting was to "lighten the present overburdening task of the Finance Chairman," and to save "valuable Student Council time devoted to unenlightening debates between organization representatives and council members concerning additional budget cuts."

(If this process was followed, and if council members were then thoroughly familiar with the budgets, why were reconsiderations of budgets necessary?)

City Of Surprises Has Faults, Introduces Them At Intervals

By Kaj Kristoffersen

Of cities and geographical localities that enjoy world renown, each has its own peculiar assets and faults. San Francisco, city of surprises, has two faults—the San Andreas and the Hayward which, on March 22, introduced themselves after some 50 years of peaceful co-existence.

Residents and students of San Francisco shuddered and shook as their fair city was rocked and rolled by the first major earthquake since April 18, 1906. Coincidentally, that morning, 51 years ago this month, was also sunshiny, cool, and crisp, until earthquake and fire changed the city into a raging inferno.

To flee from danger is a natural tendency in a time of emergency. The prospect of being confined in a pitching, swaying building is to most people a horrifying thought. Yet in dealing with an earthquake, one must behave contrary to human nature in order to survive.

"Students must remain in their respective classrooms until otherwise notified," Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management, recently stated. They should seek the protection of an overhanging beam or desk, move away from cabinets and windows, and in the event of a severe shock, lie down to avoid being knocked down, he further stressed.

Specially constructed in accordance with the Field Act of 1936, classrooms are safest because a side thrust won't pull the floors away from the walls.

Stairwells are danger points because of shattering glass. Outside the building is most perilous because of loose tile and other falling objects.

Minor damage here from the quake is currently being investigated. Tile is being replaced and all tile will be tested with a rubber hammer to insure maximum safety.

To prepare for future "faulty" surprises, a special college hour is being set aside to clarify and inform students of the various warning signals. These signals and outlined procedures concerning them will apply to fire, air raid and earthquake emergencies.

The tragedy of the flea is that he knows for a certainty that all of his children will go to the dogs.

Freedom Fancied As Spring Sprang

Every year about this time some poor joker of a reporter pulls the old "Spring Time" assignment and is ordered to write about what a young man's fancy is turning toward.

Just because the sun crosses the vernal equinox, thousands of gallons of ink are poured out all across the country to commemorate it.

Well, shocking as it may seem, a young man's fancy is not turning toward America's favorite pastime, because his fancy is always turned toward that.

And it's not turned toward baseball.

This Spring, a young man's faney is turned toward a fellow named Nasser, who owns a ditch. He's wondering, maybe, if he's going to finish up his studies at old Cairo U. He's wondering about Richter magnitudes of 7 and 8. He's wondering why all his instructors are personally trying to flunk him out of this college. He's wondering if he should change his major and get out of the buggy whip industry before it's too late.

Of course life always has these little problems, and Spring is a wonderful time of the year.

To the zoologist, it means the butterfly is ready to come out of his cocoon. And to the farmer, it means the 17-year locusts are going to come out of his south pasture.

To the student it means the final stretch before summer vacation. And working like a dog all summer to support himself for next fall.

At the risk of sounding ungrammatical—Spring has sprung.

Shots At Random

By Bob Sims

EARLY in the current semester Eric Moeller, German instructor here, warned his prospective linguists that probably half of those in attendance would drop out of the course, German I, before the final grading period.

Faces of the students mirrored disbelief as they turned to focus upon one another until Moeller started quoting statistics from previous classes in this department.

Then, as the unalterable facts began to dawn, each student strained to pick out the faces of those he thought would be among the departing, all the while assuring himself that come hell or earthquakes he would remain to the end.

Last week, to our dismay, we joined the ranks of the departed. We only wonder who the blackguard was that picked out our face during that initial orientation. At any rate, Herr Moeller's statistics seem to have held true.

Rams Beat Comets Twice

Late Inning Rallies In First Tilt Overcome Five Run Lead For Win

By Nick Peters

Longest and most loosely played baseball game of the Big Eight Conference thus far, resulted in a come-from-behind 13 to 11 victory for the college over West Contra Costa at Balboa Field on April 2.

Bryan Lyttle's grand slam homer highlighted a five-run, sixth-inning rally, which brought the Rams to a tie with the East Bay team, 11-11. Then in the eighth, with the bases loaded and one out, West Contra Costa pitcher Babe Ruth Williams hit Ram second baseman Rich Medaglia on the wrist with a pitched ball to score utility outfielder Joe Herbert with the tie-breaking and eventual winning tally.

Contra Costa started the scoring in the initial frame, jumping on starter Jim Datzman for two runs, sparked by catcher Jim McKenney's triple. The Rams returned with three runs on four singles in their half of the inning only to have the visitors deadlock the contest at 3-3 with a one-run second inning. Third baseman Tom Roper's two-run homer vaulted the college to a temporary 5-3 third inning lead and then the roof fell in.

Datzman was shelled from the mound in the disastrous fourth. He was tagged for five runs on two prodigious extra base belts: four-baggers off the bats of fielder Carroll Lee and pitcher Lefty Peeler, the former a three-run blast and the latter a 350-foot swat with one on. Ram first-sacker Roger Ferrari took the mound after the barrage and managed to retire the side without further damage.

Coach Bill Fischer's nine added a marker in the fifth; but the Comets came through with a trio of runs off Ferrari in the sixth, apparently putting the visitors out of reach, 11-6.

In their half of the sixth, however, the Rams battled back with a clutch five-run rally to tie the contest, 11-11. Outfielder Blair LeMire led off with a single, Bob Bandettini was hit by a pitched ball and pinch-hitter Frank Brinkley walked to load the bases, setting the stage for Lyttle's line-drive blast over rightfielder Lisa Dixon's head. Shortstop Ray Bower then belted a single, moved to third on two stolen bases, and scored on Ferrari's one-bagger to tie the game.

Bandettini took the mound for the college in the seventh, hurling three scoreless innings to gain the victory.

BLAIR LEMIRE, lost year's shortstop on the championship nine, has been moved to the outfield by Coach Bill Fischer in order to get more batting attack in the line-up. LeMire, a second team all-league choice, has been replaced at the shortstop post by Rich Medaglio.

his second in the still young league season.

Bandettini Touched For Only Three Hits While Making Starter Debut

By Lou Lucia

Bob Bandettini set down West Contra Costa with three hits while pitching the Rams to a 9-1 victory over the Comets at Seawright Field in Richmond last Saturday, and evening the college win-loss column at three apiece. Over a two-year period Bandettini has won six games in relief while never being defeated in league play, and this marked his first and successful attempt as a starter.

Games for the rest of the month include a home engagement against Oakland this Friday at 3 p.m., and a double-header at Stockton on Saturday, April 27.

A twin bill is scheduled against Sacramento at Balboa Field with starting time at 12:30 p.m., Saturday, May 4.

Scoring eight runs in the first three innings the college nine coasted the remainder of the game while Bandettini struck out nine and allowed his opponents no earned runs. Bandettini was touched for the only West Contra Costa run in the eighth as Lefty Peeler doubled off the right field wall to score Carroll Lee who had got on base after an error. Peeler's blow not only ruined the Ram pitcher's shut-out but was the only extra base hit of the game.

The Rams combed starter Babe Ruth Williams and reliefer Ed Creer for 15 singles. They started in the opening inning as Ray Bower walked and stole second base. Roger Ferrari's ground ball was partially blocked by second baseman Carl Taliaferro but rolled to right field as the fleet-footed Bower scored.

Rich Medaglia's line drive single to right moved Ferrari to third from where he scored on a sacrifice fly by Blair LeMire.

In the second inning, catcher Jim McKinney threw wide of first base after picking up Bill Flanagan's topped ball. Bryan Lyttle clothes-lined a single to center, and Bandettini aided his own cause by singling between third and short, knocking in Flanagan.

Measuring off Williams', best pitches in the third canto, the Rams collected seven hits as ten batters stepped to the plate and all hit safely once during the rally, except Bandettini, who grounded out, and Craft, who was hit by a pitched ball.

Creer relieved Williams and finally got Medaglia to roll out to end the inning. Both teams scored unearned runs in the eighth. Centerfielder Flanagan was the leading hitter, getting three hits in five at bats.

Of the Ram batting rampage, umpire Claude Hurtamer remarked that "this is the best hitting team I've seen in the league. With adequate pitching they should be able to take the Big Eight league." (The only team Hurtamer has not seen is the Stockton Mustangs.)

Pearsons Becoming Tiny Shrinking Men

By Lou Lucia

ONE FAN sitting in back of us at the Boston Red Sox-San Francisco Seals series said that "Albie Pearson is too small to be a good ballplayer." Not that he couldn't hit, field, run or throw, but that he's too small.

For Pearson's sake let it be known that he spanked .300 or over in every league that he's played in, is probably the fastest Seal runner, and could amount to the best lead-off man in the league if played everyday.

His chief detriment may be his fielding, but the anxious youngster, who was heartbroken when the Seals sent him to a lower classification league last year, could surely improve in this department.

Unfortunately, major league scouts often feel the same toward diminutive men. If a player is not at least six feet and 200 pounds in weight, he is automatically scratched from the race for a major league entry. Three examples of small men making good in their respective sports are Phil Rizzuto, baseball; Eddie LeBaron, football, and Slater Martin, basketball. There are a few more "dwarfs" in major sports who could be named.

The American male in professional sports who is under 5'10" is becoming extinct. Basketball enthusiasts must watch six-footers and over . . . if the earth men ever reach the moon, scientists say that gravity would help a person to jump 20 times his height, a possible aid to the small man—if he wants to go to the moon to play basketball.

In football the performer must be a hulking giant, ready to tear telephone books with his fingernails (discounting hangnails) and eat raw steak (sans catsup). Baseball is quickly following this trend with "big overpowering batters and pitchers." The bat and ball must look like a toothpick and olive in their hands.

Only sport not to show any size discrimination is boxing, where each class is judged by weight, and not resemblances to Goliath and the Giant David and Jack (beanstalk variety) proved their worth despite being outsized. Today, David wouldn't be allowed on the same playing field as Goliath, after all "he's too small to win."

As the Arabs used to say, "May the manager praise you, and may all your legs be long ones." Confusion added these popular words, "Little baseballer in big leagues quickly becoming shrinking man."

Pacific Coast League baseball gets under way tomorrow, and the race for the pennant has been cut down to the eight teams in the league. The Seals must be rated highly because of their outstanding spring record. Right now we'd rate them as the first place team, barring help to the other clubs from major league teams. The Los Angeles Angels may get so much help from the parent Brooklyn Dodger club that they'd have to "throw games" in order to lose the pennant.

The situation is similar throughout the league. With major league teams supplying the ballplayers, anything could happen. There are eight teams, and we sincerely believe that one of them will win the pennant. (Einstein's theories couldn't be more objective.)

RA Makes Plans For Sport Night; Basketball Five-Way Meet April 27

Recreation Association members participated with other Bay Area colleges in a co-ed sports day which was held at College of Marin on April 6. Tennis, badminton, archery, volleyball and bowling were played.

At the present time plans are being made for a sports night for RA members and their guests. A fencing match with San Francisco State is also being planned.

Another upcoming event for this semester is a basketball meet on April 27, with San Jose, Santa Rosa, San Mateo and Napa Colleges.

The RA managers are Carol Simpson, volleyball; Julie Russell, basketball; Arlen Riggs, archery; and Joe Henderson, fencing.

Chavez, Gasper Set New Team Records As Tracksters Lose To Stanford Frosh, Beat Comets

By George Grasso

Eddie Chavez with a mark of 9:45.1 in the two-mile, and Wilfred Gasper's high jump of 6'5½" set new City College records while the track team lost to the Stanford Frosh, 95-56, and crushed their Big Eight opponent, West Contra Costa, who managed only 4 points in last Saturday's triangular meet at Stanford.

Eddie Chavez threw a mild shock into the Stanford team by beating their star two-miler, and shattering this college's record in the two-mile run. Chavez stated "he was just racing to win" as he finished one step ahead of Stanford's Monzingo, with a brilliant new record time of 9:45.1.

Wilfred Gasper, whose Polytechnic High School jump record of 6'4¼" was recently broken, used the Stanford meet to gain a new one. Gasper bounced over the bar at 6'5½" to break LeRoy Thomas' 1956 college mark of 6'5". His team-mate, Marian Page, took second with a jump of 6 ft.

Reliable James Thomas came through with a double win in the hurdles. Thomas took first in the 120 yd. high hurdles in 16.1, with Bob Guddee coming up to take third. He then won the 220 low hurdles in 24.9, with Blake Westman and Guddee taking third and fourth.

Stanford dominated the shot put, while the college team took three out of four places in the discus event. Mike Reid grabbed first with a throw of 141'5". Doug Neathery and Rich Ristow took third and fourth.

Despite the outstanding efforts of Gasper and Chavez, the most singularly outstanding performance of the day was turned in by Stanford pole vaulter John Stahler. Stahler smashed Bob Mathias' 1950 record of 13-¾", with a jump of 13-8, which was more than a foot higher than his nearest colleague.

Chavez Betters Opponents' Best, Eyes Track Mark

In describing a track man like Eddie Chavez it won't do to say he always runs his best; it would be more accurate to say he always runs better than his opponents' best.

Chavez, the college's top distance runner, and a 5'7", 135-lb. freshman, was born in Guatemala 18 years ago.

Shortly after arriving in America, he entered Lowell High School, where he distinguished himself as a runner by winning the cross-country championship, and setting his school's record for the mile with a time of 4:34.

He is taking courses here which will allow him to enter Davis College, where he plans to major in agriculture. Eventually he plans to return to Guatemala and apply all the information he has learned here.

Chavez has been undefeated while running in the two-mile race this year, winning against four other colleges. The two-mile is eight laps around a college track, and is the longest event in an ordinary meet.

If Chavez continues to run the two-mile this year, he'll be a good bet to break the league record.

Netmen Beat Stockton, Tie For Second Place

City College's tennis team downed Stockton 6-0 at Golden Gate Park last week to move into a three-way tie for second place.

Because of rain, the final doubles match was cancelled, with the Rams ahead, already having won the first set. This Friday the netmen meet Oakland.

Currently tied with San Mateo, who gave the Ram squad its only defeat, and Santa Rosa, the tennis team needs a victory over the league-leading Modesto team to stay in contention for the Big Eight crown.

Ram Golf Team Ties Santa Rosa

Tying Santa Rosa in a rematch last week, after rain postponed the regularly scheduled contest, the Ram golfers moved into second place behind San Mateo and Sacramento, who are sharing the top spot.

This Friday the golf team meets Sacramento in a crucial meet at Harding Golf Course.

Able to shoot only in the high 80's, the golf team could not capture enough points to win the match and had to be content with a 7½ to 7½ tie with the Bearcubs.

Leading the Rams, Don McDowell carded a well-over-par 86, breaking even with his opponent. An 87 by Marty Kilgareth and an 88 by Larry Barr were enough to win their respective matches.

Santa Rosa golfers equalized these victories by defeating Mike Evans and Frank Hubert.

Individual honors were divided between two Santa Rosa players, each of whom shot 83, while their three teammates were shooting in the 90's.

Club Activities Board Declares Horticulture, Fellowship And Drama Societies Off Campus

Horticulture Society, Drama Club, and Collegiate Christian Fellowship were declared off campus last week by the Club Activities Board, according to Bob Wendt, CAB president.

If any of these clubs wishes to be recognized as on-campus organizations by the CAB, it must appeal to the Student Council, which renders a final decision. In appealing its case, Wendt said, the organization must send a representative to the council with a valid excuse accounting for its non-fulfillment of CAB requirements.

Should the council over-rule the CAB because of extenuating circumstances presented by an organization ruled off-campus, the society is obliged to file a petition with the CAB and attend its meetings in person or by proxy, Wendt added.

Organizations specifically set up by the Associated Student Constitution and accountable to the council through a cabinet member, do not have to participate in CAB.

Similarly, individual fraternities and sororities chartered by the Inter-Fraternity Council and Inter-Sorority Council are not required to attend CAB, but they must meet the obligations of an on-campus organization and, as stated in the AS constitution, must be represented at CAB. All other clubs desiring on-campus status, Wendt stated, must acquire it through the CAB.

CAB acts as a central unit coordinating activities of on-campus organizations. This has particular application to functions in which a large number of organizations participate, including CAB day and the Associated Men Student sponsored May Festival. It also charters those organizations not within the IFC and ISC.

All cabinet and AS officers and students are invited to attend CAB meetings, which are held every Tuesday and Thursday afternoon from 1 to 2 p.m. in B-2, Wendt said, adding that several organizations represented on the cabinet have found it advantageous to participate in CAB.

Eight Members Of H&R Society Chosen For Tour

Eight members, selected by vote of the Hotel and Restaurant Department's students and faculty, have been chosen to attend the annual tour of California hotels starting Tuesday, April 23, according to Lawrence Wong, H&R instructor here.

Chosen on the basis of scholarship, leadership and the ability to represent the college, the eight students are Bob Barry, Allen Brame, Frank Cuff, Don Clark, Richard Franklin, Richard Griffin, Jose Gomez and Robert Neil.

An important part of the department's activity program, the annual trip is sponsored by the California Northern Hotel Association. Harry Troupe, executive secretary of the association, together with Dean Louis Batmale and Wong, worked out the details of the trip.

Acting as a reward for the students, the week-long trip will include visits to Carmel, Santa Barbara, Bakersfield, Fresno and Los Angeles. All expenses are paid by the association.

Another award will be presented by the management of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel in the near future.

This award, consisting of individual plaques for the winners and one permanent plaque for the department, was won by Allen Brame, Richard Franklin, and Richard Griffin.

Organizations Here To Be Given Steak Dinner

Fifty steak dinners will be awarded to organizations participating in the Hotel and Restaurant Department contest to keep the cafeteria clean, according to John Dunn, H&R instructor in charge of the cafeteria and fountain.

Entries closed Monday for organizations wishing to join this contest, which runs until June 14.

A point system is employed and will be totaled each day as a result of three inspections occurring at specified intervals throughout the day. Points will be taken off for paper, cigarette butts, and split coffee left on table areas. Inspection sheets will be kept in the restaurant operation office. Results of the inspections will be available to any organization upon request.

Cake Decorations Win Awards For Twelve Students

Twelve awards for cake decorating were won by culinary art students of the Hotel and Restaurant Department on March 18 as a result of the Culinary Art Exhibit held recently at the Civic Auditorium, according to Edward Nylund, pastry chef instructor.

Nylund won first prize for his reproduction of an [illegible] made entirely out of gum-paste, sugar, egg whites, cream of tartar and food coloring.

Five students won second prizes in the exhibit with the following entries: a speed boat by Ben Schrempp, an Easter hat and stand by Gerald Engelhaupt, a wedding cake centerpiece by Norman Kope, a lighthouse by Al Brame, and a vase by Bob Barry.

Third prizes were awarded to the remaining seven. Their exhibits included replicas of a fireplace by Clinton Johnson and George Mares, an elaborate namepiate by Henry Meyer, a football helmet by Harry Payne, a bust of a chef made from sugar by Mac Kessey, a flower vase beside a book of poems by Robert Niel, and an Hawaiian setting complete with palm trees by John Watts.

Bank Of America Offers Two New '57 Scholarships

Two banking or business majors at the college will be recipients of Bank of America scholarships this June, according to Louis Batmale, dean of semiprofessional courses.

These scholarships mark the inauguration by the Bank of America of an annual statewide program to encourage students majoring in business in two-year colleges to plan for business careers and complete their two-year college program.

Winners of the cash awards will be selected by a faculty committee composed of Glenn Mercer, chairman of business administration, and Margaret Flourney, Anka Perisich, and Edward W. Larson, business instructors here.

Mary Golding, dean of women, is the chairman of the college award committee, and Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, will assist in the final decision.

Selections are based on grade point averages of students within their respective occupational area, and they are expected to maintain at least an average of 2.0 on a 3.0 point scale, or 3.0 on a 4.0 point grading system.

A minimum of 24 units must have been accumulated. Personality, ability to get along with others, and successful participation and effective leadership in campus activities will be considered, Batmale said.

Winners of the awards and representatives of the college will be the guests at the Bank of America business award dinner to be held in June, at which time winners will receive a framed certificate of recognition.

Choral Groups To Sing At Festival

Two duets, one quartet, selections by the Treble Clef and Men's Glee will feature this college's participation in the Northern California Junior College music festival at Hartnell College in Salinas on Friday, April 26, Flossita Badger, vocal instructor here, recently announced.

This festival for small choral and ensemble groups, is open to all two-year colleges as far north as Auburn and Shasta and to the south as far as Salinas. The vocal groups will arrive in Salinas in the afternoon and tour Hartnell's campus. That evening, they will attend a dinner, and following the dinner the festival will start.

The college's quartet will sing a number from the opera Martha, by von Flotow, and the members of the quartet will be chosen from among Emily Van Cleve, Joyce Preston, Barbara Greenup, Howard Clarke, Bob Swenson and James Hoolan.

One of the duets will be La ci darem la Mano from Don Giovanni by Mozart, and this will be performed by Mrs. Van Cleve, soprano, and Leland Maekey, baritone. Bess, You Is My Woman Now, from Porgy and Bess by Gershwin, will be sung by Deanna Williams, soprano, and R. H. Hillis, baritone. The accompanist for all numbers is Lloyd Carroll, Miss Badger said.

Students Sworn In As Campus Police

Sworn in as members of the San Francisco Police Department by Acting Chief of Police Thomas Cahill at Hall of Justice ceremonies recently were 12 members of the college's Campus Police force.

Designated as Special Police detailed to the college, the new men are John C. Cottle, Robert J. Hankins, Donald G. Laufer, Serge L. Leonhardt, Walter J. Mitchell, Louis Paglierani, Phillip C. Payton, Larry B. Plott, Lowell T. Severson, Alan F. Sperne, Row W. West and Richard A. Willis.

As members of the San Francisco force, all Campus Police can be dismissed or disciplined by the Chief of Police, and they are held responsible for the observance of all rules and regulations that apply to regular, salaried police officers, according to Fred Fitzgerald, Campus Police adviser.

"The campus policeman is bound to execute his authority with courtesy and sound judgment," he added.

In regard to parking and traffic citations, Fitzgerald stressed that these are processed by the Campus Police just as any other citation given by an officer of the San Francisco force.

completed at least 30 and not more than 60 units of work at the time of holding office.

"The success of this coming election," Aanonsen stressed, "depends upon the number of candidates competing for office, but more important, upon the full participation of all students at the polls."

Contrary to popular belief, men are not good or bad, but they are good and bad.

IFC Plans Variety Of Activities To End Pledge Week

Pledge Week, the hazing of pledges to fraternity organizations under the guidance of the Inter-Fraternity Council, ends this Friday.

The name Pledge Week is new, and replaces the older, more harsh sounding Hell Week, IFC President Bill Driscoll said recently.

Howie Kline and Milt Anderson are acting as co-chairmen in charge of activities during the week. Climax of the activities will occur Friday during college hour, when a pie-eating contest, a balloon-blowing contest, and a foot race with a member from each fraternity racing around a given track wearing tennis shoes and the proper attire, are scheduled.

Driscoll said that the IFC will make sure the hazing does not get out of hand.

Bell Warnings To Be Demonstrated Soon

A college hour in the near future will be devoted to teach students here the various types of bell systems, Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management, announced last week.

All students will be required to be in one of the buildings while the public address system will be used to demonstrate the various types of bells and the meaning and importance of each.

Six Represent AS At State Meet

Six students will represent the college at the California Junior College Student Government Association's semi-annual convention, May 2, 3, and 4 in Los Angeles.

The convention divides into sections or workshops. In these various workshops, the college will be represented by Metta Weddleton in student government, Brower Dimond in the finance workshop, Debbie Rudser in activities workshop, and Mike Monteith participating in the athletics workshop.

Bob Varni will be the state finance chairman. Louise von Emster, acting state information chairman, will also represent the college in the public relations workshop. Ralph O. Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, will advise the group.

Pledging Antics Reign As Final Activities Begin

By Barbara Marshall

PLEDGE Week activities commenced Monday, and the memories of pledges cutting capers on the campus, donned in multi-colored garments, referring to themselves as "it," proposing marriage, singing, dancing, cleaning tables in the cafeteria, and performing numerous duties at the request of fraternity and sorority members, will not soon be forgotten.

Alpha Lambda Chi held its second affair on March 31. Entertainment included Calypso by the Five Mademoiselles, and the Can-Can by the sorority sisters. Pledge instruction was held last Sunday at the home of Joetta Colwell. A joint will be held tonight with Alpha Sigma Delta.

California State Teachers' Association will present a movie, Skippy And The 3R's, during its college hour meeting on Friday. All prospective teachers and interested students are invited to attend the meeting in C-245.

Two of Alpha Gamma Sigma's members, Elaine Mayers and Rose Marie Sicoli, are writing letters of application for scholarships offered here. The former is applying for the Cloud scholarship, while the latter is applying for the Graduating Class of 1956 scholarship.

Phi Beta Rho had its second affair last Tuesday night at Forest Hill Club House. Entertainment was supplied by sorority sisters.

Le Cercle de Francais recently took up a collection for a wedding present, a set of glasses, for one of its former members, Patricia MacGinnis, who exchanged vows with Allan Jones, an engineering major here, on March 3.

Theta Tau held pledge instruction last Sunday night at the home of Kathy Citron.

Veterans' Association recently held a meeting and elected Albert Peterson, chemistry instructor here, as the sponsor of the organization. During the recent blood drive, 26 of its members donated their blood. A few more members are needed in this club, in order that it may gain on-campus status, so all veterans interested in this organization are invited to attend the meetings held in C-268, every Friday during college hour.

Deadline for club news is Wednesday at 12 o'clock in The Guardsman office, S-304.

Council Approves Letter-To-Editor

Approval was given by Student Council last Tuesday of a letter to the Editor of The Guardsman which expressed the council's answer to criticisms of the group made in a recent Guardsman editorial. (See Ram's Horn, page 2.)

Club Activities Board Chairman Bob Wendt read the letter to the meeting and after it was approved, Wendt submitted the communication to Elmer Gentry, Guardsman editor.

In discussing the matter, council members and cabinet officials agreed on the advisability of presenting members-at-large of the Associated Students with both sides of the question concerned.

Reporting on the Finance Committee, chairman Brower Dimond informed the council that some individuals in AS organizations had submitted falsified information concerning their Associated Student card serial numbers. He urged all groups on the campus to put a check on this procedure.

Home Econ Club Here To Attend Convention

Alpha Eta Tau, home economics club here, will attend the Home Economists National Convention at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel this Saturday, April 13, and next Monday, April 15, according to Denise Durkin, publicity chairman of the group.

Saturday, April 13, members will register from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Sheraton-Palace. From 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. there will be a general session with a talk, Home Economics Bridge To a Fuller Life, to be given by an assistant education director of Air Worlds Education at TWA.

Delegates will have their choice of two separate luncheons to attend between 12:30 and 2:30 p.m.

Dance Opens Ugly Man Contest On April 26

Kicking off the Ugly Man contest this year will be the Ugly Man dance, Friday, April 26, in Smith Hall from 9 p.m. until 12 midnight, John Dudley, president of the Iota Pi Chapter of the Alpha Phi Omega National Fraternity, announced last week.

The contest is Monday, April 29, until May 15, Dudley said, with the winner to be named at the May Festival on May 17. Site of the Festival will be the Cow Palace.

Music for the dance has not been decided upon yet, Dudley announced last week, but he hopes to have made the arrangements by this week end. Costumes for the dance will be "anything," he added, "just as long as you come as ugly as you are."

For decorations, Dudley said, there will be scenes depicting the cave man era of history. Admission to the dance will be $1 per couple or 75 cents stag. For publicity, Dudley plans to have several of the Alpha Phi Omega brothers walking around campus in Ugly Man costumes the Friday before the dance.

Last year, when the Ugly Man contest originated at this college, a total of $175 was collected and given to the City of Hope, he said. This year, instead of only 10 candidates, Dudley said, "I want every organization on campus to enter a candidate, including the sororities, who may sponsor a male student in the contest." Goal for the contest will be $700, Dudley stated, with the money collected again going to the City of Hope charity.

Each organization that sponsors a contestant, Dudley said, is expected to have a poster for the contestant to be ready by the night of the dance where they will be introduced together with the candidates. Any man student of the college is eligible to be sponsored for the Ugly Man, he said, except members, pledges, or persons connected with Alpha Phi Omega.

Voting will be in Smith Hall by pennies, Dudley said, with each penny equal to one vote. Either nail kegs or beer barrels will be used as ballot boxes, he added, with the name and sponsoring organization of the candidate appearing on each one. Votes will be tallied by the bank periodically, he further added, and then posted.

Prizes include an Ugly Man trophy, Ugly Man beer mug, which holds more than a quart, and a silver Ugly Man key for the winner, and a trophy for the sponsoring organization. Prizes will be displayed in the near future, Dudley said, if he is able to use one of the display cases in the Science Building.

Six AS Leaders To Attend College Student Government Conference In Los Angeles

Six student leaders of the college, headed by Associated Student President Bob Varni, will attended the state conference of the California Junior College Student Government Association in Los Angeles beginning tomorrow and closing Saturday, May 6, according to Varni.

The conference will be attended by student government leaders from all two-year colleges. Also attending from the college are Debbie Rudser, Mike Monteith, Brower Dimond, Metta Weddleton and Louise von Emster.

BOB VARNI, president of the AS.

One of the major actions of the conference will be the installation of Varni as President of the conference which will be held here in the fall semester.

Miss Rudser will participate in the activities workshop, Miss Weddleton in the public relations workshop, Monteith in the athletics workshop, Dimond in the finance workshop, Varni in the student government workshop, and Miss von Emster will be a delegate-at-large.

The purpose of the convention is best stated in the preamble to the constitution of the CJCSGA, Varni stated.

It reads, "The student government bodies of two-year lower division collegiate institutions, recognizing that student government offers the direct approach toward the goal of good citizenship, since it is the laboratory for the democratic form of government in action, offers the benefits and privileges of leadership training, education in the mechanics and functions of government and experiences gained in administration, and with the ultimate goal of promoting good citizenship, do promulgate this constitution to establish a state wide two-year college student government association."

In the workshops, students will discuss the plans and problems their respective colleges have encountered. They will see how other two-year colleges operate and exchange ideas, Varni stated.

In the general assembly, any legislation now pending in Sacramento in regard to two-year colleges will be discussed. The assembly will also take stands on issues and send recommendations to the state legislature.

One of its actions last year was to go on record as approving the action of the Hungarian students after the revolt in Hungary, Varni commented.

Next semester's conference will be held in San Francisco with headquarters at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel. This will be the third time the college has been convention host.

Alpha Phi Omega Dance Initiates Ugly Man Voting

The Ugly Man dance, held last Friday night in Smith Hall, kicked off the annual Ugly Man contest here, which will run until Wednesday, May 15, John Dudley, president of the Iota Pi chapter of the Alpha Phi Omega, announced.

Dudley is in hopes that there will be candidates entered from every organization on campus. All profits will go to the City of Hope charity. Applications will be accepted by any of the A Phi O brothers, and must be accompanied with a 5 by 7 inch photograph.

Applications will be accepted any time during the contest, he said, adding that he preferred to have the names of the contestants by dance time. Sororities are also eligible to sponsor any male student for the contest, he added.

Voting will be in Smith Hall with pennies, Dudley said, with each penny equal to one vote. Either nail kegs or beer barrels will be used as ballot boxes, he added, with the name and sponsoring organization of the candidate appearing on each one. Totals will be tallied by the student bank periodically.

Prizes include an Ugly Man trophy, Ugly Man beer mug, and a silver Ugly Man key for the winner, and a trophy for the organization sponsoring the winner. Trophies were on display last week in the Science Building's show case near the Silver Pole, and will be shown again there before the contest ends, Dudley said.

2 Films Featured For Friday's College Hour

Two movies will be featured this Friday during college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m., according to Madison Devlin, audio visual instructor here.

First on the list is RCA Victor's Sound and Story showing how a record is made, from the taping to the distribution of the discs.

How To Make A Television Film Commercial will follow the RCA film. The movie deals with the technical work involved in making the commercial. Jonathan Winters, student of the Public Schools Week Open House To Display College Facilities Tonight

Bus-Ed Day Will Foster Relations Between Groups

By Tom Tatera

College observance of Public Schools Week, April 29 to May 4, and Business-Education Day, two major events which are observed annually throughout San Francisco, is scheduled here today, according to Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of Education Management.

In keeping with the main objective of Business-Education Day, which is to give business men of the city a close range view of college life in their area, a group of industrial representatives, along with Superintendent of Schools Harold Spears, arrive at the college at 9 a.m. to be given a guided tour of the premises, Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, announced.

Delegated students will meet these men as they arrive and introduce them to college officials.

After a brief coffee period, at which time an outline of the facilities and projects of the college will be discussed, the representatives will be divided into groups and escorted on a tour of the college by appointed student guides, chosen for their ability to answer all questions.

Display posters, prepared for the Open House celebration of Public Schools Week which will take place at 7 to 10 p.m. tonight, will be set up to greet the guests during their tours. These posters will portray the technical types of programs which can be found at the college.

Following this tour, student officers will be given a chance to talk to the men and describe to them the many responsibilities which are entailed in their elective positions.

To complete the program, lunch will be served in the faculty dining room, and will include entertainment furnished by members of the student body.

At this time, student officers Linda McArdle and Brower Dimond will deliver prepared speeches to the industrial representatives.

A special committee, headed by John Kelly and supported by Carol Olson Jack Patterson and Marlene Hannon, was in charge of arranging the program of events for Business-Education Day.

"The purpose of Business-Education Day is to build up better relations between education and industry to enable us to work together for our mutual benefit," Dr. Conlan said, stressing the importance of this event.

Application Forms Sent To 1400 Veterans Here

Membership forms are being distributed to the 1,400 veterans enrolled here inviting them to join the new eampus Veterans Club, Bob Ohlson, president of the club, announced yesterday.

Necessary information pertaining to membership regulations will be included on the forms, Ohlson said. "If enough veterans send in their forms together with their membership fees," he commented, "the club will be able to finish its plans for a dance to be held before the end of the semester."

International Relations Group To Present Spanish Fiesta May 10

Fiesta Latino Americana, an International Relations Club sponsored show and dance event, presented by the college's Spanish students, will take place Friday, May 10, in Smith Hall from 8 p.m. to midnight, Esmeralda Aguilar, student in charge of casting the affair, announced here last week.

Latin America, its people, music and songs, its folk dances and modern rhythms as well as a display of costumes, foods and ornaments from south-of-the-border shown to the audience seated around tables in cabaret style, will be the night's highlights.

An Afro-Cuban combo will interpret drum and bongo beats by a small "United Nations" group. They are Miguelito Clarque, Mauritanian-born Afro-Cuban dancer reared in the Antilles, American Rod Levin, and Ruddy Bunge and Pastor Valle-Garay from Nicaragua.

Among other numbers the college's show features folk dances and songs from Guatemala, Nicaragua and Peru; Mexico's hat dance, Cuban Cha-Cha-Cha's, Calypso tunes from Jamaica, the Merengue from the Dominican Republic, the Argentine's tango, and Spain's flamenco dance.

Included in the cast by special invitation, Miss Aguilar said, are two students from Italy. One will sing a sequence from Madame Butterfly and the other will play an accordion number.

Admission to the event is 75 cents with an AS card or a membership card from any club on campus, and $1 without. Attire for the occasion will be informal.

Tickets may be obtained from Joseph Jacobsen, foreign student adviser here, in Room S-155, from members of the International Relations Club, or at the door, Miss Aguilar stated.

After-the-show entertainment will be provided for daneing by Maurice Wollohan and his five-piece band and by a Latin combo.

Thus far, two performances, one at the Cow Palace on April 15, and the other at the University of California in Berkeley last Saturday, have been successfully completed by the college's Latin American group of performers.

Student Makes Courageous Comeback

Faith Bunting Planned, Directed Artistic Work For Schools Week

By Ray Davis

A major step in her goal of art directorship with an advertising concern was taken in the last few weeks when Faith Bunting, advertising art major here, worked with a citizen's committee planning and directing its art work for Public Schools Week.

For a young person still in college to be entrusted with this position in which talent, industry, and overall ability are indispensable prerequisites, is a situation which drew praise and recognition from all those connected with the drive.

In Miss Bunting's case the plaudits will sound a little louder, and the praise will last a little longer than they would in the normal run of affairs, for Miss Bunting is no ordinary person. On the contrary, her equal in courage, perseverance, and All-American grit, would be tremendously difficult to find.

A few short years ago, this gallant young lady was "looking at the world like a transfixed turtle," from within the cylindrical confines of an iron lung as she persistently shrugged off death's pernicious shadow dressed in the garb of bulbar (spinal) polio.

FAITH BUNTING, commercial art student here, planned and directed the art work for this year's Public Schools Week.

When she was stricken by the disease in 1948, Miss Bunting had already lifted the lid of life's box of success and secured for herself a sparkling necklace of achievement, which included in its strand, the number one berth in beauty queen contests, a long term contract offer from Paramount Pictures, and an expanding career as a fashion and photographer's model.

These signal successes, welded together with her happy married life, would have painted a pretty picture in Miss Bunting's kaleidoscope for the future had not a four-year struggle with this crippling disease wrested all but lasting faith and insuperable courage from within her grasp.

Husband, happiness, fame and future, all trickled remorselessly away into a period of paralysis and seemingly interminable years of rehabilitation.

It is impossible to nail an individual with the tenacity and ambition of Miss Bunting to misfortune's floor for long, and now she is leaving that phase with the speed of a rocket, aiming for a distant star in the artistic universe. This glitters in the shape of an art directorship with a major advertising concern.

Although she will be confined to a wheelchair for the rest of her life, according to her attending physicians, Miss Bunting's delicate hands and creative brain are unimpaired. So now, as in the case of many handicapped persons, all the energy, ability, and tremendous resources, which previously were diffused in many directions, are being concentrated on success in this one, powerful medium.

The betting is strong and heavy among her associates that the attributes which have accompanied her so far along a rough road will carry her through to this final accomplishment.

IFC-ISC Call Joint Meeting Friday To Prepare For Political Convention

Plans for the first Inter-Fraternity and Inter-Sorority Council convention in recent semesters will be made Friday when the two groups come together in a joint meeting in B-2 during college hour, Bill Driscoll, IFC president, stated last week.

Proposed date for the convention is Tuesday, May 7, in Smith Hall starting at 3 p.m., and lasting until its climax later that day, Driscoll said.

Purpose of Friday's meeting is to formulate the ground rules on which the convention will be run; and to decide upon certain policies that will be taken, he said. One member from each fraternity and sorority has been asked to attend this meeting, he added.

The main problem that must be worked out by the committee is how to stand toward fraternity or sorority members who are intending to run against the IFC-ISC ticket.

The first order of business for the convention will be the [illegible] as permanent chairman, co-chairman, and secretary. A standing rules committee will also be elected for the proceedings.

The delegates will be selected by the individual fraternities and sororities, and will include no more than three voting members. Only members of the college's ten fraternities, and six sororities will be permitted at the convention, Driscoll said.

During last week's IFC meeting, a motion was passed that all fraternities must have three delegates present. Debate has been limited to ten minutes for the convention, and caucuses will be allowed for only five minutes, he said. If need be, Driscoll added, there will be a recess called.

Election Petitions Due May 8 For Grade Check By Registrar

Candidate petitions are now available in the offices of Dean Ralph Hillsman, Dean Mary Golding and the Associated Student office, B-2, for the Associated Student elections of May 24, 27 a.m. [illegible] Aanonsen, [illegible] tion Commissioner, declared yesterday.

These petitions must be handed in to the registrar's office for a grade check by 2 p.m. next Wednesday, Aanonsen stressed.

Displays to be used in the campaigns for the elections will consist of five posters for each candidate, not to exceed 14 inches by 22 inches; handbills, which must be passed out by hand; and signs, which may be placed on the stairways as well as the walls.

No changes in campaigning regulations have been passed since the Election Committee meeting of April 17, and the tentative dates set for the main elections still stand at May 24, 27 and 28, Aanonsen added.

Student Solution A Must To Prevent Coming Drastic Action

TWO YEARS AGO, a modern new cafeteria was erected on this campus to benefit students and faculty.

Soon after this structure was opened, a problem began to present itself. It became apparent that students were misusing and mistreating the new facilities.

With the passage of time, this problem has become intensified to a point where cafeteria and administration officials are now considering drastic action unless a reasonable solution can be reached.

The cafeteria may, in fact, be closed for a week or so in order to impress students with the seriousness of the situation.

Students apparently have no interest or pride whatever in maintaining their cafeteria; at least by their actions they indicate an apathetic lack of interest.

The aim of the Hotel and Restaurant Department is to provide wholesome, appetizing meals at the lowest possible prices. It is not the intent or purpose of this department to make a profit.

Students should realize that these prices are dependent, for the most part, upon the amount of civil service help that must be hired to clean up after them.

Carelessness, messiness, disorderliness—the more of this treatment accorded the cafeteria, the more civil service employees must be added, thus raising prices.

Students have been asked repeatedly to bus their own dishes. This is a small request, but the majority of the students obstinately refuse to cooperate. Papers, magazines, and other materials are brought in and left on floors and tables.

These messy practices are not only an added expense to the operation, but give a definitely unsightly appearance to the onlooker.

Chairs are moved from place to place by students, causing not only extra work, but a blocking of the aisles which could be extremely dangerous in case a fire or a bad earthquake occurred.

Young men and women should be comparatively mature by the time they reach college, but many here have proven otherwise by their actions. Every day, pictures are drawn on the cafeteria tables; every day pepper and salt have to be thrown away—"humorous juveniles" have mixed them.

Other juvenile jokers bend silverware and walk out with ash trays, a considerable number of which have to be replaced each month. Are these actions those of mature young men and women?

When some students get together in the cafeteria in a group, they seem to take great pleasure in flaunting their disregard for basic rules of good conduct.

As we've stated before, a solution has to be found to alleviate the many problems that face the cafeteria management.

Drastic action such as the temporary closure would probably prove effective; however, we hope optimistically that some other solution will be brought forth by the students themselves before this action becomes necessary.

California Car Coats Moving East

College Fashion Craze Plagues Local Stores

By Jacquie Waite

A favorite pastime of many impartial observers is to try to figure out what the next fashion craze will be among the current crop of college students.

Many of the fashion experts and buyers in local department stores have quite a problem trying to decide exactly what stock to put in their stores. What is popular one week may not sell at all the next week, and their job is certainly not an easy one what with the way college students change their minds these days.

In past decades there have been many trends sweeping the college campuses; the most recent is the current Ivy League fashion. Belts have been placed everywhere from hats to shoes, and just last week a downtown store announced a sale of Ivy League socks!

Every few years a new teenage idol appears, and immediately clothes manufacturers go hog wild trying to link his picture or name to every item of wearing apparel they manufacture.

Many fashions and fads which San Francisco students think originated here actually started back East or in other parts of the nation a year or two ago. The Ivy League fashion is an example of this.

Car coats are one fad for which Californians can take credit. This fad, actually more popular among the high school set than among the college set, started here and is just beginning to spread toward the Eastern coast.

Whereas a car coat worn with Bermuda shorts and long socks is a common sight in residential San Francisco on a warm day, it was a very rare sight in neighboring Nevada until just a few weeks ago when the craze began to hit over there.

University of California students are currently copying an Eastern fad by wearing blue tennis shoes to classes and to many social functions. Will this fad arrive here next? Time will tell!

Delta Psi's Aid Library Service

Delta Psi sorority pledges have each been donating 18 hours of service a semester to the college library since 1950, according to Catherine Pedley, catalogue librarian.

It all started several years ago when the president of Delta Psi sprained her ankle and had to work in the library in order to compensate for physical education. After a while she found that she enjoyed working there and was impressed by the library's need for student help.

After discussing it with her sorority sisters, they decided that it would be a worthy service if they donated some of their time to working in the library.

Since then it has been the policy of Delta Psi to have each of its pledges work an hour a week in the library for a semester. These pledges do such worthwhile jobs as straightening magazines, putting books away on the shelves, typing and numerous other jobs.

One of the pledges recently agreed with Mrs. Pedley that they are not only helping the library but are also gaining valuable information themselves as to where to find material needed for their classes.

There Will Always Be A Smith

Instructor Here Changes From Frustrated Artist To Become Top Level Model Photographer

By Pat Metsack

There were, there are, and there always will be SMITHS, and the college has its share of them. But there is one in particular of whom an interesting study can be made.

Not a study like the student makes of a book, but the study of a jovial attitude, a friendly manner, and the way a mustache crinkles when the wearer laughs. The photograph at the left reveals the "true Emmett Smith."

A COUPLE OF YEARS AGO when he was working on one of the college's TV shows, this gag photo of Emmett Smith, the "overworked frustrated artist," was taken by some of his sympathetic students.

At the time this photograph was taken Smith was, as he describes himself, "an over-worked frustrated artist." He was art director of one of the college's TV shows; he was a part-time instructor at the college; and he ran his own art and photography studio in downtown San Francisco.

Smith now devotes most of his time to instructing college students. In his spare time (what little he has of it), he teaches two night photography classes, and does art and photo work in his combination studio-home in Mill Valley.

A very modest man, he has what he calls "the world's greatest self-portrait," and would have preferred it to the picture printed, but it was unavailable at press time. (So he tells us.) He puts the portrait to use every semester by showing it to his students to show them that he's not a "stuffed shirt."

He is enthusiastic about his work at the college. "I like teaching this age level because former children begin to become people, and the girls are at their budding best," he said with a smile. "It also gives me a legitimate excuse to look the models over, STRICTLY to see how well they will photograph."

Having been at the college since 1947, but only on a full time basis since last year, Smith came directly here from his job in the commercial arts field. He was brought to the college because of his knowledge of both art and photography.

Smith wound up his interview with the statement, "I never take myself too seriously."

Miss Meriwether will demonstrate her acting talents on the KPIX production scheduled for 9:30 p.m.

For the past few months, Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis have been giving the most "notable" performances of their careers.

Since their famed break-up as a team in 1955, Martin and Lewis have been competing with each other to see who can act more childish. Both have succeeded. Their attitude seems to be, "If you pull my hair I'm going to pull yours just a little bit harder."

One factor in the dissolution of the partnership is that Lewis thinks nothing of working 18 hours a day. Concerning Martin, he stated, "Dean only likes to work for a few weeks a year and play golf the rest of the time."

Martin countered with, "I'll be 40 in June. How much money can you make?"

Each is accusing the other of being the instigator of the conflict.

"You know," Martin commented, "I'm getting a little tired of being the heavy in this thing. Every time Jerry opens his mouth, it comes out that Martin is lazy or something and doesn't like to work. People have been hearing that for a long time now and they believe it. Now if I tell somebody it's just the other way around, who's going to believe me?"

Lewis complained, "I'm fed up with partner's sensitivity. Everything I do is wrong. Anything happens he don't like, he blames it on me. He hates me."

Apparently the conflicts which led to the final break had been brewing for some time. Perhaps the bitterness of the situation can best be demonstrated in one of Martin's remarks.

"There were times when I hated Jerry. I know there were times when he hated me. I got to the point where I just couldn't stand horseplay any more when we were supposed to be working. He's always gotta be mugging, doing something to attract attention. And another thing, I hate yes-

Artificial lamps, for example, specially arranged at the college's conservatory grant the plants three extra hours of "daylight," providing them with longer time to grow.

Grad Job Chance In Industry Set At 101 Per Cent

By Pastor Valle-Garay

A wide variety of fascinating courses for persons interested in and attracted to flowers, plants and their maintenance as a life-time work, is currently offered by the college's floriculture department to an ever-increasing number of students here.

Enthusiastically backed by the State of California Department of Agriculture and San Francisco's Board of Education, and operated on the basis of a two-year terminal course, successful completion of the floriculture major, according to records, gives students a 101 per cent chance of obtaining top positions in the industry.

"We usually have students placed by the time they graduate," Harry Nelson, head of the floricultural division here, commented, adding that the majority of them go right to work as soon as they finish their program, while the rest transfer to other institutions for further specialization.

Greenhouse work, nursery work, gardening, even state highway planning as well as park maintenance, are among the jobs available for graduates.

Divided into three sections, the college's own greenhouse works for the double purpose of a plant and flower laboratory-conservatory combination, fully managed by students under Nelson's supervision.

Many fashions and fads which San Francisco students think originated here actually started back East or in other parts of the nation a year or two ago. The Ivy League fashion is an example of this.

Shots At Ramdom

By Dick Moore

ASPIRING young thespians enrolled in Michael Griffin's course for beginning drama students were treated to a rare display of professional-type "stage-presence" and theatrical know-how by one of their fellow tyros the other day.

Griffin called on students Sally Wills and Chuck Headley to run through an original and extemporaneously created dialogue routine of their own choosing.

Actress Wills, hotter than Wyatt Earp's pistol and acting up a storm, lunged into her task slinging ad-libs all over the place. Five minutes, or what doubtless seemed like hours to Miss Wills, passed without one word from actor Headley. Undisquieted and continuing to jaw it up, our heroine yakked on for the next ten minutes while Mr. Headley looked on in muzzle-mouthed amazement.

Finally running short of material, or perhaps patience, the articulate Miss Wills strode over toward Headley and advised in a well-modulated screech, "For Pete's sake, SAY something!"

Beta Tau, Chinese Club Lead In AMS Basketball Play

With just three weeks of play left in both the Inter-Fraternity Council and Independent basketball leagues, both loops are still running very close, and there is no sign of a runaway victory except for Beta Tau, who is undefeated in the fraternity league.

The Chinese Club is currently on top in the Independent league with a three win, one loss record. In games played the past two weeks the Chinese Club edged a tough Filipino Club by the score of 26 to 25, D. Lee paced the winners with seven points, while the Filipino Club's Moreno was the game's high scorer with eight digits.

The Chinese Club copped its second straight victory by defeating the International Relations Club. J. Chan was high point man for the Chinese as he hit 17 points. Phil Malnick led the losers with 13 markers. Another close game found the Hotel and Restaurant Society knocking off the Hawaiian Club, 26 to 22. Vladimir Chuhlantseff was the big gun for the Hotel five as he hit 14 points to grab scoring honors.

Beta Tau is leading the IFC league with five wins and no defeats. Because of a number of defaults in the IFC race, complete standings of the clubs are not available at this time.

Block SF To Hold Banquet In June

Currently being planned by the Block SF Society is their annual banquet, to be held Monday, June 3, Bill Fischer, sponsor of the athletic organization, announced last week.

The dinner is a semi-annual event that marks the end of the athletic season and the awarding of blocks. At that time members of the college's teams gather along with their coaches for the banquet and the awards presentations. A guest speaker from the sporting world is invited to give an address. The speaker for this semester's dinner has not been decided upon yet, Fischer said.

The awarding of jackets to members of the Block SF is also being discussed at their meetings, with a formal amendment slated to be presented to the Student Council in the near future. Lon Earnshaw is presently working on the wording of the document, which, if passed by counell, will be voted upon by the Associated Students in the elections to be held May 24, 27, and 28.

Rams Split Oakland Series Off Roper's Grand-Slammer

Oakland's Thunderbirds and the City College Rams split a two-game baseball series, Oakland winning 6 to 5 on April 9 at Bushrod Park, and the college returning with a crushing 17 to 10 victory at Balboa Park on April 12.

By dividing the duo the Rams were in a six-way tie for second place in the Big Eight Conference as of April 23.

The April 12 affair was won by the home team Rams in a game called at the end of Oakland's eighth inning because of darkness. Despite the 17 runs, including an eight-run sixth inning, the college's fielding and pitching was poor, disappointing the quite concerned coach, Bill Fischer.

Oakland's Percy Harris tallied the first run on an error by shortstop Ray Bower, but the Rams came back with five runs of their own in the last half of the frame. Bower drew a walk, stole second, scored on Ron Cratt's single, and then Bower drew a walk, stole second, scored on Ron Cratt's single, and then Bower drew a walk, stole second, scored on Ron Cratt's single, and then

Student Council Delves Into New Problems In Cafeteria; Measure Adopted For Disciplinary Action

By Dick Moore

Problems facing student users of the cafeteria, if the cafeteria's present "serious" situation regarding the bussing of dirty dishes and overall orderliness is not rectified by students in the immediate future, was the main issue of business in Student Council meetings last week.

The clean-up problem was brought before council for the first time in the Tuesday meeting when Associated Student President Bob Varni informed the group, "If we (the students) do not take action on the matter at once and change the cafeteria situation, then I can assure you that the administration will do so most effectively."

Administration officials expressed great concern over the circumstances and felt that in a case such as this they might consider closing down the cafeteria and soda fountain for a week or two if the situation shows no immediate improvement.

Thursday's meeting of the council discussed the subject further and favored some action to handle the emergency. Plans were formulated to enable the council to keep closer watch on the problem and to help provide a solution.

In addition to this, the council approved a recommendation that all chairs in both the cafeteria and soda fountain be removed as soon as possible for a period of two days.

The action was taken by council in the hope that students using the eating facilities would become aware of the situation and take steps to correct it.

A resolution of the matter expressed the council's belief that the present condition of the cafeteria does not become a college of the caliber of this one, and it is the council's duty to recommend definite action to alleviate this situation which has gone unchecked by previous efforts to improve the serious circumstances.

The council then recommended that "all chairs be removed from the cafeteria and fountain on a Thursday and Friday at the earliest possible time."

In other council business, Brower Dimond, finance chairman, reported on the problem of cleaning up areas in which the AS-owned vending machines were installed.

Planning For May Festival Reigns High At Meetings

By Jerry Redford

ACTIVITIES of the campus clubs, fraternities and sororities are presently centered about the coming May Festival and the part these organizations will take in the festival.

Alpha Kappa Rho held its first business meeting for new pledges last week at the home of Rudy Benton. Plans for a float and booth for the May Festival were discussed. The eight pledges are Ron Vierra, Dick Pfuhl, Nick Rommel, Dave Vargo, John Anzalone, Al Morales, John Rosso and Marc Feibusch.

Zeta Chi accepted three pledges this semester, Gwen Smith, Jean Krieg and Diane Donahue. A recent joint was held with Tau Chi Sigma at the home of Bob Varni. Plans are now being made for the sorority's part in the May Festival.

Art Club, the newest organization at the college, is having its first annual art fair tomorrow and Friday at San Francisco State College, 1600 Holloway. Objects from all art media will be displayed and priced for sale. Officers of the club are Bernie Segal, president, and Gus Guichard, vice-president.

Delta Sigma Tau concluded pledge week with a party with Alpha Phi Epsilon. Pledges to the sorority are Vera Morris, Minnie Porter, Magre Campbell, Ana West, Rose Starrow and Imogene Butler.

The Christian Science Organization will hold its next dinner Thursday, May 2, from 7:30 p.m. until 10 p.m. at 124 Eastwood Drive. All interested faculty members and students are invited to attend. Regular testimonial meetings are held on Thursdays at 3:15 p.m., at 124 Eastwood Drive.

Phi Beta Rho held a business meeting last Tuesday at the home of Carol Taylor. Plans for its May Festival float and booth were discussed, along with plans for its annual coffee social for parents. Pledges are Brenda Breuer, Ellie Benton, Renada Marston, Maurene O'Neill, Diane Munoz and Marge Kendall.

The Inter-Fraternity Council announced that pledge week was carried on very successfully. Winners of the contests held during college hour were Pat O'Connor, Alpha Sigma Delta; and Tony Jones, Alpha Phi Epsilon, who tied in the pie eating contest. Ed Rey, Beta Tau, was first; Harry McMenamin, Lambda Phi, was second, and Pat O'Connor, Alpha Sigma Delta, was third in the balloon blowing contest. In the foot race, Gus Davis, Alpha Phi Epsilon, was first; Larry Butts, Beta Phi Beta, second; and Hai Abdul, Alpha Sigma Delta, third.

Davis was presented a perpetual trophy at the end of the race. In the final contest, Dave Vargo of Alpha Kappa Rho defeated Steve Wahl of Beta Phi Beta in the annual fraternity water fight.

Four Organizations Declared Off-Campus

Off-campus rulings have been handed down to The Christian Fellowship Organization, Horticulture Club, Band Association and Drama Organization, Bob Wendt, president of the Club Activities Board, announced during the last meeting of the CAB.

Following the announcement of the off-campus rulings, Wendt named the newest on-campus clubs, Merchandising, Home Economics and Ram Cam.

Pi Rho Pi, the recent center of a long debate in Student Counell, was also chartered by CAB last week, Wendt announced. Le Cercle de Francais has also been chartered, he said, as they have a sufficient number of Associated Student members now.

Spring Cotillion To Be Theme Of St. Francis Event

By Esmeralda Aguilar

Spring Cotillion will be the theme for the annual Inter-Sorority Council ball to be held in the Colonial Room of the St. Francis Hotel this Saturday from 9:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m., according to Bev Seroth, ISC president.

Music will be provided by Doug McEachern and his nine-piece band, and during the course of the evening the new sorority pledges will be formally presented, Miss Sehroth said.

Women will be hostesses at the event and will invite their dates as guests, Miss Schroth added. Tickets are available at the student bank at $2.50 per couple.

The ISC voted Spring Cotillion as the permanent theme for the ISC ball, Miss Schroth further added.

Sponsors for the event include Mary Golding, ISC sponsor; Ruth Inskipp, Gertrude Norgard, Evelyn Kerkhof, Roberta Madden, Olga Perkins, Martha Scott, Marcelline McDermott and Katherine Honditus, sorority sponsors.

Patrons and patronesses for the ball include Charles Ohman, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Grodsky, Mr. and Mrs. James McConnell, and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Burkhead.

Committee for the affair include, Delta Psi, Shirley Payton, entertainment; Zeta Chi, Debbie Rudser, flowers; Theta Tau, Jackie Toepfer, tickets and tallies; Gamma Sigma Sigma, Joan Finneran, publicity; Kappa Phi, Miss Schroth, coordination; Delta Sigma Tau, Jurline Wilson; Alpha Lambda Chi, Joetta Colwell; and Phi Beta Rho, Elvera Steiner, pledge coordinators.

30 Firms To Participate In Annual Business Day May 15

Thirty leading business, industrial and government recruitment and procurement teams, representing a wide range of firms from the Bay Area, will participate in the second annual business graduate recruitment day on Wednesday, May 15, Joseph Amori, placement director here, announced last week.

Judged highly successful by employers, graduates, and instructors last year, business recruitment day will bring to the campus outstanding business and government leaders to interview graduates in 20 training programs, ranging from business to graphic arts. The program is co-sponsored by the placement office and the business department here.

Business recruitment day will serve as a medium whereby prospective graduates meet with employers of their choice, Amori said.

All graduates from the June and February classes will be eligible for the job competition, he added, with each graduate entitled to select five employers with whom personal interviews will be scheduled. Twenty minutes have been alloted for each interview.

Students who are eligible are required to submit a personal data sheet, three personal rating sheets and approval of their major field adviser. Personal data sheets and rating sheets may be obtained from the major field adviser or placement office, S-188, Amori stated.

Students outside the business department who are graduating and are qualified will be given an opportunity to be interviewed. These students should also file personal data and rating sheets.

Louis Batmale, dean of Semi-professional Courses, will represent the college administration; Glenn Mercer, head of the business department, represents the business division, and Amori, will serve as the general program coordinator for the day's activities.

Simplon, a road over the Alps, took 35,000 men to construct, and was six years in construction. It was built by Napoleon in 1801-1807.

Opening Tonight In Little Theater

Death Takes A Holiday, a comedy by Alberto Casella, revealing a novel and optimistic philosophy on the problems of love and death, will be presented tonight at 8 o'clock in the little theater, according to Michael Griffin, drama instructor here.

The play is based on the poetic concept of the personsification of Death suspending all activities for three days, during which time he falls in love with a beautiful girl and through her comes to realize why mortals fear him.

Tickets for the performance may be obtained without charge upon presentation of an Associated Student card. Non-card holders and guests will be charged an admission price of $1, Griffin added.

Personifying the part of His Serene Highness Prince Sirkl of Vitalba Alexandri, will be Stan Weston. Others included in the cast are Helen Blumberg as Cora, George Cooney as Fedele, Carl Mayo as Duke Lambert, Stephanie Koppe as Alda, Helen Maskarich as Duchess Stephanie, Roxana Kiwa as Princess of San Luca, Nicholas Rommel as Baron Cesaren, Jo Anne Jakievick as Rhoda Fenton, William Raymond as Eric Fenton, Leigh Guerra as Corrado, Patricia Dulcich as Grazia, Lawrence Bryggman as Major Whitread, and understudy Mack Porterfield.

Other performances of Death Takes A Holiday are scheduled for May 3, 4, 10, 11 and 18.

Service Deferment Petitions Due Monday

Another selective service college qualification test will be available at the college this May, similar to the examinations which took place in November, 1956, and April, 1957, according to John J. Brady, coordinator of Student Welfare.

Applications for these tests, which are available at local draft boards in the city, must be filled out and filed in Room 130 by next Monday at the latest, Brady emphasized.

Normally, a student's deferment status with the Armed Forces is based on two things: the above mentioned test, and/or the student's grade average for his last academic year. Failure upon the student's part to satisfy his draft board on one or both of these counts may be injurious to his deferment status, Brady warned.

The first elective system of study in a college was introduced by William and Mary College. In 1779, students were permitted to choose the subjects which they cared to pursue.

Wesco Flexible Lamps Selling At Ramporium

Wesco Lamps, a masterpiece in flexibility, are now on sale in the Ramporium, according to Richard Main, manager of the Associated Student book store.

"Available in four different colors, these functional lamps are equipped with four adjustments which can be obtained in an instant," Main stated.

The college's physics department has used Wesco Lamps for the past two years.

On sale at the Ramporium for $15, a base for the lamp may be acquired for an additional $5.

"We are selling the lamp at such a reasonable price as a service to the students, and will make only a slight profit for it," Main said.

More About College Observance Of Schools Week, Business-Education Day

Week event consist of an open house program, designed to display to an interested public the facilities which are being used to further educational development at the college, Anderson stated.

During this open house period, visitors will be invited to view all areas of the college, including evening classes and laboratories located in Smith Hall, Cloud Hall and the Science Building.

Besides being open for exhibition, the science and engineering laboratories may be manned by students at work to give the guests a clearer picture of what is being done in the way of technical training, Anderson added.

Instructors will be on hand to give visitors access to any closed rooms which they might want to view, thereby lending a literal meaning to the term "open house."

Engineering courses, including electronics, refrigeration, surveying, air-conditioning and architecture, will be shown to the public, as well as new ideas in the field of business, including punch card accounting, business machines and retail management courses.

Departments of floriculture, dental assisting, graphic arts, advertising, commercial art, criminology and photography will also be open as a part of the program.

No extracurricular entertainment will be furnished for this event, because, Anderson feels, this year's Public Schools Week program should not include any extraordinary demonstrations which might mislead or turn attention away from the normal curriculum which is carried on at the college.

William H. Osborne, chairman of this year's Public Schools Week program for the city, in a proclamation issued to the executive and administrative staffs of San Francisco's schools; stressed, "We will develop knowledge of our public schools so that we may work and serve them more efficiently."

AMS Planning For Two May Events

Two social affairs headline the calendar for the Associated Men Students during May, according to Mike Monteith, AMS president.

Leading off the month is Dad's Night next Wednesday, May 8, at 7:30 p.m., in the men's gymnasium. Monteith outlined a program for the evening including boxing matches and musical entertainment.

A five-piece combo is scheduled to get the affair underway, followed by the Inter-Fraternity Council's blind man's boxing. Here a representative from each fraternity will enter a ten-man blindfolded slugging match, Monteith said.

Following the IFC slugfest will be ten intramural championship boxing exhibitions. Rounding out the entertainment portion of the program is a trampoline act.

Refreshments served by Alpha Phi Omega fraternity will conclude the program. Admission to the affair will be by invitation for the fathers, and Associated Students, and 50 cents for non-AS members.

Also on the May calendar is the annual May Festival at the Cow Palace Friday, May 17. The theme this year will be cartoon cavalcade, featuring comic strip characters.

Intramural Boxing Highlights AMS Dads' Night Show

An Associated Men Student sponsored Dads' Night makes its second appearance in two years tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the men's gymnasium, according to Mike Monteith, AMS president.

Highlighting the evening will be the intramural boxing championships with ten bouts scheduled. After the program, refreshments will be served by Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity.

Admission for fathers will be free with invitation, and Monteith stated that invitations were sent out to all fathers. Students will be admitted free with an Associated Student card or 50 cents for non-AS members.

Next week, the AMS presents the annual May Festival, this time based on the theme of Cartoon Cavalcade. Opening the festivities will be a parade from the college to the Cow Palace.

Activities will start at 7:30 p.m. at the Cow Palace following the parade, which begins at 6:30 p.m.

Costumes for the affair are to be based on comic strip characters. Monteith emphasized that costumes depicting persons like Al Capp's Daisy Mae will not be acceptable.

Admission will be free with an AS card, 25 cents with registration card, 50 cents for other students and 75 cents for adults.

An abundance of prizes is slated to be given during the course of the evening. Trophies for the best floats and booths, as well as a door prize, will be awarded. Also featured that evening will be the presentation of the winner of the current Ugly Man contest.

Our Mr. Sun To Be Friday Film

Our Mr. Sun, a film produced by the American Telephone and Telegraph Corporation, will be presented during college hour this Friday in room S-136, according to Madison Devlin, audio visual aids instructor here.

The film, directed by Frank Capra, explains the ABC's of the sun and its place in life.

Animated and in color, the picture is narrated by Eddie Albert and Dr. Frank Baxter, noted Shakespearean expert from the University of Southern California.

"This film is the best that will be presented to the students this year," Devlin said, adding, "I think everyone will enjoy it." Since it is in great demand following its presentation on television a year ago, this will probably be the only chance to see this picture here, Devlin added.

Starting at the beginning of college hour, it will continue through part of the 11 oclock class.

Clubs will meet in their assigned rooms as scheduled, according to the official college hour schedule.

Hemo The Magnificent, the second in this scientific series produced in color by Frank Capra, will be shown during college hour Friday, May 24.

The production tells the story of blood, circulation, and how the heart moves it through the body. The functions and courses the blood takes will also be dramatized.

AS Hosts School Leaders On May 23 Prep Day

Student officers of the seven San Francisco public high schools will be hosted by the college's Associated Student officers at the annual Prep Day to be held Thursday, May 23, according to Metta Weddleton, vice-president of the AS.

After a coffee hour in the faculty dining room, the guest students will be taken on a tour of the campus and attend classes of their choice. A luncheon attended by the principals of the public high schools and by Archibald J. Cloud, president emeritus of the college, will conclude the day's activities.

IRC Stages 90-Minute Fiesta Review, Dance Friday Night

To be presented this Friday night for the first time on campus, the 90-minute review, Fiesta Latino Americana, will include a cast of more than 50 students from 12 different parts of the Hemisphere, Joseph H. Jacobsen, sponsor of the show and the International Relations Club, announced early this week.

Dances, music and songs, south-of-the-border folklore, display of typical costumes, foods and ornaments, arranged at Smith Hall in cabaret style, will be the show's highlights this Friday, from 8 p.m. to 12 midnight.

Jacobsen, who is also the Foreign Students Adviser at the college, in explaining the reason for what he calls "one of the best pageants ever to be assembled by a particular foreign group here," said the idea for the show was conceived from last year's International Fair.

"There was such a demand for Latin American numbers then, we felt almost forced to stage this spring's presentation," he stated.

The latest modern dances from the Caribbean, such as the Calypso from Jamaica, Cuba Cha-Cha-Cha, the Merengue from the Dominican Republic, as well as the Argentine's tango, Mexico's hat dance, folk dances and songs from Guatemala, El Salvador, Peru and Nicaragua with special Flamenco dances of Spain will be interpreted by the students on Friday.

Tickets, sold at the door, at Jacobsen's office, in room S-115, and by members of the IRC in campus, are priced at 75 cents with an AS card or membership card from any of the college's organizations, and $1 without. Proceeds from the affair will go to the IRC's fund for foreign students' scholarships, Jacobsen announced.

Maurice Wollohan and his five-piece band will play, starting at 9:30 p.m., for after-the-show daneing, while a Latin American trio led by guitar-player and singer Gustavo Bravo, one of the college's students from Mexico, will entertain during intermissions.

Committee heads for those countries represented are Hilda de Leon, Guatemala; Hilda Losada, Argentina; Manuel Anez, Bolivia; Miguelito Clarque, Cuba; Julio Menjivar, El Salvador; Sabhel Portilio, Mexico; Pastor Valle, Nicaragua; Luis Origgi, Peru, and Catalina Ramos from Venezuela. Also, there will be attendance and participation by representatives of the nations of the Dominican Republic, Jamaica, Spain and, by special invitation, Italy.

Esmeralda Aguilar, student casting the show here, also heads the other committees, which include Brower Dimond, ticket sales; Tancho Diaz, refreshments; Rene Motte, publicity; Henry Athanasiou, lighting; Lee Botto, staging, and Walter Peters, decorations.

Guardsman Rates All-American For 26th Semester

The Guardsman last week received its seventh consecutive All-American rating from the Associated Collegiate Press for the Fall, 1956, Volume.

This is The Guardsman's 26th All-American award in 31 semesters of membership in the ACP. The other five semesters it was rated First Class. Receiving a total of 1,685 points, the paper was one of eight two-year colleges throughout the nation to receive the award.

Comments on the paper by the judges included praise for the maturity of the editorials written by last semester's editor, Bob Kauth. Also judged and commented upon were the individual pages, all of which received top scores.

All college newspapers taking advantage of the rating are judged on the coverage given to college news, content of stories, physical attributes such as page make-up, and headlines.

Judging is done by professional newspaper men and women and takes place at the ACP headquarters at the University of Minnesota.

Totalling the scores for each phase of newspaper production, the judges place the college newspapers into four different classes. All-American, First Class, Second Class, etc.

All-American rating indicates distinctly superior achievement. First Class is comparable to excellent, Second Class, very good; Third Class, from fair to good. Papers in each group are compared with each other with the standards set by the papers themselves.

Editorial assistants were Denny Delman, Mario Cassulo, Kenneth Joos, Carol Harris and Kaj Kristoffersen.

Reporters were Marilyn Gregory,

Deadline At 2 Today For Fall Semester AS Office Petitions; Elections To Start On May 24

Any student wishing to run for an Associated Student office for next semester who has not already taken out a petition must obtain one, get the required number of signatures and have it turned in to the registrars office by 2 p.m. today, according to Hugh Aanonsen, election commissioner here.

Petitions may be obtained from either Dean Ralph Hillsman, Dean Mary Golding or B-2 until 1 p.m. today, Aanonsen declared. They must be turned in to the registrar by 2 p.m.

After a grade check by the registrar, she will sign the eligible petitions which will then be collected by Aanonsen, who will take them to the deans' offices for their approval.

Associated Student elections will be held on May 24, 27 and 28, according to Aanonsen.

Offices that will be open for election for the fall semester are those of Associated Student President and Vice-President, Associated Men Student President, Associated Women Student President, Freshman and Sophomore Class Presidents, and 14 Council seats. The Student Council consists of seven members each from the freshman and sophomore classes.

Amendments to the constitution which will be on the ballot will be brought to the Student Council for approval before they will be released to voters, with the exception of amendments that reach the ballot by petition signed by 10 per cent of the AS members.

Candidates may have up to five posters, not exceeding 14 by 22 inches, which will be placed around the campus. Handbills may be printed, but they must be distributed by hand, Aanonsen declared.

Aanonsen stressed that "the success of the election depends mainly on the number of Associated Students who vote at the polls."

An Inter-Fraternity, Inter-Sorority Council political convention was held yesterday in order to nominate candidates for the coming elections. Results of the convention were not available at press time.

4 Coeds Here Compete For '57 Miss SF Crown

Four students here will compete in the semi-finals for the Miss San Francisco title to be held this Friday at the Scottish Rite Auditorium, Hiram Kaukua, Junior Chamber of Commerce liaison officer, announced yesterday.

The college's semi-finalists ineiude Jo Cataffo, Audrey Bocek, Shirley Payton and Louise von Emster.

SF Health Center Sites Listed For Free Polio Shots

Importance of college age students being given polio shots was stressed in a letter from the City Health Department to President Louis G. Conlan last week, listing the Health Centers where two shots may be obtained free of charge.

Shots will be available for all residents of San Francisco, from six months to 40 years of age at the Central Office, 101 Grove Street, Thursdays, 12 noon to 4:30 p.m.; Fridays, 8 a.m. to 1 p.m.; Mondays, 4 to 8 p.m., adults only.

Centers open Tuesdays from 4 to 8 p.m. are Hunters Point Health Center, 190 Hilltop Road, and Sunset Health Center, 41st Avenue and Pacheco Street. Those open Wednesdays from 4 to 8 p.m. are North East Health Center, 799 Pacific Avenue, and Alemany Health Center, Alemany and Onondaga.

Mission Health Center, 23rd Street and San Bruno Avenue, will be open from 4 to 8 p.m. Thursdays, and Westside Health Center, 2201 Sutter Street, will be open Fridays from 4 to 8 p.m.

The college represents an age group which is not as a group taking full advantage of this opportunity to protect themselves against polio, Health Department officials said. In California, one-third of all polio occurs and is most severe in its effects among the young adult group, age 20 and over, most of it in those under 30.

According to the Health Department, priority goes to those under 25 years of age, parents under 40 whose children have been vaccinated, and those who will be traveling in areas this summer where polio is more prevalent than it is in San Francisco.

Officials urged students here to arrange to get their shots now, especially with the summer vacation coming soon.

Stan Weston, Pat Dulcich Star In Casella's Death Takes A Holiday

Performances of the little theater production of Death Takes A Holiday, an Alberta Casella original, will be staged again this Friday and Saturday, May 10 and 11, with a final performance scheduled Friday, May 18, at 8 p.m., according to Michael Griffin, drama instruetor here and director of the play.

The leading roles of His Serene Highness Prince Sirkl of Vitalba Alexandri, and Grazia are played by Stan Weston and Patricia Dulcich respectively. Miss Dulcich was recently the local Cinderella Girl for Television Station KPIX.

Backing up the lead roles are Helen Blumberg as Cora, George Cooney as Fedele, Carl Mayo as Duke Lambert, Stephanie Koppe at Alda, Helen Maskarich as Duchess Stephanie, Roxana Kiwa as Princess of San Luca, Nicholas Rommel as Baron Cesarea, Jo Anne Jakleviek as Rhoda Fenton, William Raymond as Eric Fenton, Leigh Guerra as Corrado, Lawrence Bryggman as Major Whitread, and understudy Mack Porterfield.

A preview performance, presented May 1 in tribute to the Public Schools Week Open House observed here, ran very smoothly, and audience reaction from an overall viewing group of some 200 persons was favorable.

According to Griffin, this is the first time Death Takes A Holiday has been presented in this area since the motion picture version was made some years ago.

The play reaches into the elements of the unknown in revealing a novel and optimistic philosophy of the problems of love and death. It is based on the poetic conception of Death suspending all activities for three days, during which time he falls in love with a beautiful girl and through her comes to realize why mortals fear him.

Particular commendation goes to the cast for the workmanship they exhibited in having the play ready for production after an especially short period of 11 rehearsals, which ran less than three weeks.

The technical staff for the production includes technical director, Ken Cohen; light design, Chuck Huntly; stage manager, Andy Bounsante, wardrobe mistress, Stephanie Koppe; properties manager, Dawn Roberts; art directors, Pat Dulcich and Bob Doyle; publicity managers, Bob Lasley and Louis Mayo, and house manager, Lin Cripps.

Tickets for the performance may be obtained without charge upon presentation of an Associated Student card. Non-card holders and guests will be charged an admission price of $1, Griffin added.

Summer And Polio—Enjoy One And Protect Against The Other

SUMMER will soon be here once again, bringing us warm weather and a chance to get outdoors and enjoy nature in all its wonder.

This season, however, it also a time when certain types of disease flourish—especially that dread crippler and killer, polio.

Yes, for some, those who are unlucky enough to contract polio this year, and who live through the ordeal, there will be little or no enjoyment this summer, and for many more summers to come.

Years ago, there was nothing to prevent this disease from taking its grim toll, and little could be done for a person once he had contracted it.

Today, through the tremendous advances of medical science, there is a vaccine that will protect Man from the ravages of polio.

Local health authorities are urging persons under the age of 40 to have at least two innoculations of Salk vaccine now before summer arrives.

Information compiled thus far shows that the crippling effects of polio have been reduced at least 85 per cent among those who have had two or more injections.

For those who cannot make use of the services of a private physician, the Health Department of this city is providing vaccinations.

It is extremely important that students here realize that, in California, one-third of all polio occurs, and is most severe in its effects, among young adults aged 20 to 30.

Unfortunately, the men and women of this college represent an age group which is not taking full advantage of the vaccine protection.

For the edification of those persons who might have doubt in their minds, the most eminent public health authorities of the nation consider Salk vaccine to be completely safe and highly effective.

We, who are now preparing ourselves academically for the future, should not, and must not, neglect to provide for the protection of our health.

Council Meetings Open To Students

INTERESTED students here are invited to attend Student Council meetings each Tuesday and Thursday at 12 noon in Bungalow 2. Questions are taken up which are of considerable interest, covering all phases of student affairs.

A large poster is being set up now outside the council room before and during each meeting with information about subjects to come up for debate and/or consideration. A copy of the minutes of the previous meeting will also be attached to this poster, along with any miscellaneous announcements.

In the past, student interest in council proceedings has been low. It is hoped by all those concerned that this attitude will change, and that a number of students will sit in on each meeting and exhibit an active interest in the activities of their student government.

Ah! College Days

Between Class Musings Under A Sunswept Sky

Lying on the grass-covered slope which leans away from the college and runs in a gentle gradation toward the cafeteria, realizing that the place to be is in the library studying, but rationalizing that the promising young rays of a precocious summer sun will soon be erased by the slow marching cloud formations as they steal across a ceiling of blue, one has time to meander mentally in incoherent fashion through the fields of delightful trivia, which taken together, serve to single out for this college a special corner in a nostalgic heart.

There's that wonderful anecdote which continues to come as regularly as roll call, still wringing a hearty cackle out of the "A" students and a weak groan from the low "C's". . . .

The temperamental coke machine in the basement of the Science Building which at times will give you in return for your dime, a slow grunt, a long choke, and no coke. . . .

That periodic soaking which one gets from the surreptitiously creeping water jet as it slowly winds its way over the grass, drenching lawn and student alike with nonchalant indifference. . . . The long after-class discussions with an erudite instructor which will stimulate both interest and imagination, and clarify in simple seconds a problem which has needled one for endless hours. . . .

The stiff majesty of the stars and stripes as they stretch from the flag pole in a strong wind inspiring thoughts of far-flung battle lines, military tattoos, and the prospect of induction. . . . That aura of superciliious disdain which surrounds the Ram as he sits there silently drinking in the snatches of passing conversation, politely ignoring the presumptuous pledge, and chuckling quietly within himself as he thinks of . . . Ah! But that's another time, another story. . . .

That air of young vitality which permeates the atmosphere in the below-decks region of the little theater. . . . The hesitant reluctance of an obviously low "D" as he lingers apprehensively outside the door of John J. Brady's office vowing that if he leaves the room with a new lease on college life he'll stay in and study hard for those last few finals. . . .

All these little reflections which percolate the pattern of college existence, blend beautifuily with the gutural intensity of the snatches of German which the soft breeze brings to the drowsy ear, along with the lilting bitter-sweet tones of a recorded Shakespearean sonnet. . . .

But those gallant soldiers of the sun have been trampled underfoot by the remorselessly advancing battalions of cumulus-stratus. A stiff breeze is curling over the corrugated simplicity of the surrounding hills.

The ten minute bell is about to ring; and there's a class to make which can't be cut again.

So reality has reared its head once more. But not so high that it can completely erase the pleasant taste of these lazy reflections which, taken together, will cause the college to live in the mind, respectably retired in a corner of the individual's locker of life, to be drummed out on suitable occasions in the faraway future, to amuse and instruct others, or just to be sentimentally reflected upon.

There is no acid in carbolic acid. Chemically, it is a base, and acts like lye.

Engineering Society Active

Frequent Business, Social Visits Increase Knowledge

Living it up in great good style on the campus these days and enjoying some of life's finer offerings are members of the college's Engineering Society.

Now, at this point, you might very well ask—How does an engineering society like to live it up? Which of, and what kind of life's goodies do they treasure the most?

Being notoriously practical, down-to-earth and mathematicaily minded people, it might be wondered if this species really gets its kicks at all, and if so how.

Simpie questions. They are able to achieve these things in much the same way anyone else would.

What do they have to be happy about? Everything. What'll you have? . . . Electrons? They got millllions of 'em. Vacillators? More than enough to go around. Slide-rules? It is not at all uncommon to see a middle class member of the Engineering Society with his very own slide-rule. Paid for. Magnetos? They're lousy with them.

Women? Yes, women (or at least one), Ildiko Vegvory, who is now knocking her way through the engineering curriculum.

In addition to these material possessions the society whiles away Friday evenings by making tours of factories, shipyards, power plants and other engineering tourist traps from Richmond to San Mateo.

But lest the impression be given that all these people do is pussy-foot around the bay sticking their collective noses into other people's vacuum tubes, one last note of explanation on their activities is in order.

According to members, the group sponsors social and professional activities which are designed to increase the members' knowledge, interest and cultural background in their field.

The group tries to visit installations representative of all the main branches of engineering. These include electronics, mechanics and structural or civil engineering.

Individuals going on the tours pay their own way and may take along guests. The society feels that by living things up in this impeccably proper manner their visits can bring out good feeling toward the college and further the reputation of the college as a part of the community.

Shots At Ramdom

THIS WEEK'S bargain down at the lost and found dept. is/are two and three-quarters gallstones. Doubtlessly misplaced by some squeamish biology student. On purpose? Anyhow, Muriel Furlong requests the student to shag on down to the Dean of Men's office right away and pick them up. They are beginning to crumble.

Pedestrians Becoming A Vanishing Race Thanks To Speeding Drivers

Five of every ten American adults are licensed to operate motor vehicles, according to records of the bureau of statistics, and many of the five-in-ten who share this privilege are college students.

This license gives the bearer the privilege to operate his vehicle as a means of transportation, not as the deadly weapon it sometimes becomes.

Yes! The automobile is, indeed, a deadly weapon. Relatively speaking, the automobile is to one-man walking, as deadly as a fission bomb to thousands.

Licenses to hunt and kill wild game are required to insure the state of many things. One insurance, much like that which meets the automobile license requirement, is the conservation of game. In the case of the automobile the pedestrian becomes game; but unlike wild life, it is open season on him all year round.

Fast becoming a vanishing people, the pedestrian has little or no chance against the fast acceleration of automobiles and the slow reflexes behind the wheels of these not so intelligently operated weapons.

What is being done to combat these prospective killers driving on highways, streets and sometimes sidewalks? Surely the elevated freeways and pedestrian underpasses can save only a few.

Safety programs only seem to whet the desires of our present not too careful drivers to break more regulations set by author[illegible]. Regulations tend to stir resentment toward authority, and in turn, more rules are broken. Driver education school, the next step to license revokement, has proved to be one of the best means of preserving pedestrians. But even driver school is not enough. Some negligent drivers leave school resolving only never to be caught again.

When a driver slows down and thinks of the lives endangered, including his own, when he breaks traffic regulations, pedestrians may, as in times before the horseless carriage, again walk in safety.

Who knows, but when the present generation is old and hobbling on crutches, pedestrians might be able to cross a one-way street without looking both ways.

Rams Rebound For Second Tilt Win After Being Humiliated By Panthers In First Contest

By Lou Lucia

After being humiliated with the worst trouncing ever given to a City College baseball team, 24-4, the Rams came back to defeat the Sacramento Panthers, 4-3, in two extra innings at Balboa Field last Saturday.

In the last half of the ninth of the scheduled seven-inning game Brian Lyttle's long drive to right field scored Ray Bower with the winning run. Lyttle was credited with only a single but may have made a home run or triple if the tie breaker hadn't already scored.

Lyttle's blast marked the climax of a long up-hill battle in which the Rams were three runs arrear up to the fourth inning. Bill Flanagan scored the initial run in the fourth when he tagged up on Tom Roper's fly to right-fielder Vince Capello and slid into third base as the ball rolled to the players' bench. In compliance with the ground rules Flanagan was permitted to score.

Dick DeMarco singled in the fifth frame, went to second on a wild pitch by Jim Glanulias, and scored on Frank Brinkley's solid smash to centerfield.

Winning pitcher Flanagan tossed a creditable six-hitter and knocked in the tying run in the last of the seventh by doubling to deep left. Bower doubled in the ninth, and Lyttle then collected his third hit in four tries to win the game.

Ram pitchers Bob Bandettini (the loser), Jim Datzman, and Lee Brown were bombarded by a 24 run, 28 hit attack in the opener. Sacramento shortstop George Pickett singled twice and homered twice in eight trips to the spike indented plate.

Two run homers by Pickett and erstwhile basketballer Terry Bennett were instrumental in a seven-run fifth inning rally. Up to that time the Rams had led by a believable 3-2 margin off of sacrifice flies by Gene Craft and Roger Peterson and a double by the latter performer.

Bower singled Craft home in the last of the seventh to pull the Rams within five runs of the Sacramento nine at 9-4. The next inning the roof, sky, and ceiling all caved in as the Panthers scored 13 runs off 12 hits and the batting order went around 2½ times.

Pickett smashed his second homer with a mate aboard and Bennett made the only reversal in the merry-go-round by failing to touch first base and coming all the way back to reach that base after a 390-foot blow. He had almost reached third when he decided to return and still beat the relay in with time to spare.

He made the compelte cycle as Jimmy Long, Dick Nannini, and winning pitcher Willard Kinney hit three successive triples.

Golf Squad Beats Stockton, Enters Conference Meet

Staying within a half game of the league-leading San Mateo club, the Ram golf team blanked a hapless Stockton squad, 15-0, last week. Results of yesterdays championship match between the Rams and San Mateo were not available at press time. This Friday and Saturday the golf team travels to Stockton for the Big Eight Conference Meet.

Don McDowell walked off with medalist honors at Stockton last week, carding a par 72 in the Rams' lopsided victory over the Mustangs. Continuing to shoot consistently in the mid-seventies, Larry Barr and teammate Mike Evans both garnered a respectable 77.

One stroke away from Barr and Evans was Bob Chaistrom with a 78. Bringing up the tail end of the Ram sweep was John White, who carded an 83.

White, in a practice match at Harding golf course last week, shot what every golfer dreams of, a hole in one. The phenomenon occurred on the 17th hole, with White using a four iron for the 150-yard tally.

Concentrating now on the upcoming Big Eight meet this weekend, Coach Grover Klemmer stated that McDowell and Hubert will probably be the number one and two men. A special inter-squad playoff among the six remaining players will determine who fills the other three berths.

Following the Big Eight meet the top three teams in the conference will match themselves against the best in the state at the California State Tournament in San Diego later this month.

Having cinched second place in the league, the Ram golf team is eligible for the southern contest.

First radio broadcast of a World Series took place in the 1921 series between the Giants and the Yankees and the first telecast of a major league ball game was in Brooklyn, in 1939.

Annual Soph-Prof Softball Game Set For May 31.

By John Henry

An eager and confident Sophomore class softball squad is anxiously awaiting the double college hour on Friday, May 31. That is the day they will clash with their bitter rivals, the faculty, or just plain "profs." The occasion is the annual Soph-Prof softball game to be held this year at the football field just below the student parking lots.

The tough, more experienced faculty team has won the majority of games in the past and does not expect too much trouble from this year's crop of soph softballers. Last year's tussle was postponed because of rain and eventually was rained out. The record books show that the last softball game was played on June 2, 1955, and that the profs were on top of an 8 to 4 score.

Many veterans of past games will be on hand this year to help meet the challenge of the sophs. "Jumping" Jack Gaddy is expected to start at first base. Gaddy has ordered all of his instructors in the men's physical education department to spring training. "Rover" Kiemmer, "Buster" Burkhead, and "Elephant Arm" Sid Phelan are all getting in shape along with "Dizzy" Diederichsen and "Dad" Schwartz. "Robo" Robin Dunn is expected to be in the infield along with "Jumbo" Jack Brady and "Rambling" Ralph Hiilsman.

Another returning vet is "Yogi" Joe Amori, who is a top catcher. A complete list of prof players will be published before game time in order that all interested fans may see their favorite instructor suffer.

This year's soph aggregation is one of the hardest up, that is, hardest hitting team in many seasons. The second year men have only played one practice game at this writing and that was a torrid 13-inning affair with the Camp Fire Girls. The sophs dropped a 1 to 0 decision to the girls when third baseman Bob Tealer let a bunt dribble through his legs to allow the winning run to cross the plate.

"Wild" Bill Ajlen will be the soph's starting pitcher, and "Lightning" Lon Earnshaw will be the receiver. "Muscles" Mike Monteith will probably be at second base while Associated Student President "Bullet" Bob Varni will be in the outfield along with two hefty sluggers, "Hurrying" Hugh Aanonsen and "Killer" Phil Mainiek.

Mainick was the big gun for the sophs in their practice game with the girls. He connected with a mighty 750-foot pop fly which was caught by the girls' catcher after a 2½-minute wait.

"Go Go" Gordy Beal, "Bones" Al Vidal and "Pistol" Pete Pompel are also expected to help the sophs knock off the faculty nine.

All men instructors who wish to show their ability on the diamond, can notify Dean Hiilsman. Any sophomore interested in playing against the faculty may contact either Gordon Beal or Lon Earnshaw.

Bandettini Proves He Lives And Breathes

Ramblings

By Lou Lucia

BOB BANDETTINI has proved his worth to the City College baseball team time and time again these past two seasons. He has an insatiable thirst for the diamond and this in part makes him as outstanding as he has been in the Big Eight Conference.

In centerfield, where he was chosen as the only unanimous all-league choice last year, Bandettini has the knack of leaving with the crack of the bat when chasing a fly ball. An objective analysis would never place Bandettini as one of the league's speediest centerfielders, but his ability to get under the ball is uncanny.

"Handy Bandi" is able to play centerfield, third base, or pitch with adequate results at each position.

His chief asset, however, comes when he dons the toe-plated spike to pitch. As a reliefer or starter, we consider Bandettini to be without parallel in the league. Umpire Claude Hurtamer said, "Bandettini is one of the best pitchers in the Big Eight." The umpire had only seen Bandettini once, after his three-hit shutout over West Contra Costa.

We rank him as "the best" because he is reliable throughout the season and is seldom shelled from the mound. Luck plays a great part in baseball and at times line drives are hit right at infielders for easy outs off him. This has a logical explanation: Bandettini throws a "heavy ball" which makes the batter feel he's hitting a rock instead of a baseball. Therefore, the ball does not fly off the bat like a rocket but hangs in the air (even the line drives).

Another successful formula that can be applied to Bandettini is his "never satisfied attitude." While sitting on the bench after Bendettini collected a single, one of his teammates said, "He'll probably come back groaning that he didn't hit a double."

Add all these points together and one would find that Bandettini is a steady ball player in centerfield, reliable on the mound, and has a great desire for perfection.

He has been driven from the mound only once this year, and upon hearing that we were kind of gind . . . he's human, too.

Besides his ability to rap the ball hard, Brian Lyttle was sent to the plate as a pinch-hitter because his girl friend was sitting in the stands. He was hit by a pitched ball. Was it Mickey and Sylvia who said that "Love is strange."

Vasquez Molds Spike Team Into Contender

Ram Coach Lou Vasquez (pictured above) who led the City College track team to a third place position in the Big Eight standings, has moved into his own as a two-year college coach. In his freshman year Vasquez has molded an inexperienced cinder team into what might prove to be the conference champions next season. Most of the members of this year's club are freshmen.

All-Conference Records Erased As Track Team Finishes Third; Thomas, Gasper Point Getters

By George Grasso

Open season was declared on All-Conference records last Saturday, as top runners of City College and the Big Eight converged on Stockton for their annual All-Conference meet in which the Rams placed third behind Modesto and Sacramento. Final scores were: Modesto 120, Sacramento 93, CCSF 82, West Contra Costa 47, Stockton 38, San Mateo 20, and Oakland 12. It was the last time this season that the Rams performed as a team. During the remainder of the meets starting with the Fresno Relays, which will be held this Saturday, only a limited number of top athletes will represent the college.

EDDIE CHAVEZ, Ram Star Miler

Six All-Conference records fell at the Stockton meet. Brown of Modesto broke the mile record in 4:24.3. Goodman of Sacramento broke the 120 high hurdles mark at 15.3; Mattravers of Modesto broke the two-mile record in 9:44.5; Gasperi of Modesto broke the 880 record in 156.9; and Biffel of Sacramento broke the pole vault record jumping 13-8½.

No City College trackmen took a first place, but most of the team members turned in performances which were far beyond anything they had done before. The Rams racked up 82 points and third place in the Conference by dominating second, third and fourth place in the meet.

Thomas was one of the most outstanding competitors of the meet. The trackster was running all day as he placed third in the low hurdles, a second in the high hurdles, a tie for second in the high jump, and then ran a fabulous 49.6 quarter-mile to spark his relay team to threaten Modesto.

Wilfred Gasper began to find the range in the pole vault event at Stockton. With faultless form, the freshman cleared 13-5½, as compared with his previous best of 13 feet. Shooting for the sky, Gasper then attempted 13-8½. His body completely cleared the bar, but his hand knocked it off on the way down. Gasper wound up with a tie for second.

Bob Hammond ran a hard race to take a third in a record mile run.

Mile: Brown (M), Mattravers (M), Hammond (CCSF), Olson (Sac) 4:24.3—R.
100: Gary (WCC), Neal (WCC), Hall (St), Austin (St); 10.0.

Top Boxers Clash In Men's Gym For AMS Title Fights

The college's best boxers will clash for the Associated Men Student rink championship tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the men's gymnasium.

Faculty sponsor Roy Diederichsen reported last week that a total of 50 men turned out for the preliminaries and as a result the 18 gladiators fighting tonight are of top caliber. The matches will highlight a Fathers' Night planned by the AMS. Bouts will consist of three one-and-a-half minute rounds, with one being staged for each of the nine weight divisions.

The bouts in weight order: 120-lb., Ben Vitalis vs. Carios Origgi; 126-lb., Nick Lahey vs. Yusuf Mirza; 133-lb., Kim Yee vs. Roger Moreno; 139-lb., William Mirabelli vs. Ed Bolman; 146-lb., Vince Filipello vs. Gorwen Fong; 155-lb., Richard Montserrat (opponent unknown); 162-lb., Rurik Bunge vs. Jim Wallace; 170-lb., Vern Peterson vs. Joe Ashley; and heavyweights, Jerry Mulligan vs. Mike Curley.

Diederichsen singled out the 146-lb. preliminary bout between winner Gorwen Fong and Bill Tweedie as one of the best battles he witnessed. He added: "The men have progressed admirably, are in superior condition, and should make a good showing this evening."

Netters Lose Last Big Eight Match

City College's tennis team ended the 1957 season on April 26 with a loss to Santa Rosa, 6 to 1, on the victor's courts.

Lone Ram winner was Nick Scharf, who defeated Bob Namba of Santa Rosa in the feature match, 6-3, 3-6, 8-6. The Rams ended the season in fourth place.

Five City College netters, Scharf, Vie Saschin, Pete Schwarz and Jim Howard among them, competed in the conference championships on May 3 and 4 at Modesto.

Players who reached the quarter-finals or better will travel to Visalia for the north section championships. Players reaching quarter-finals or better at Visalia will play for the State Championship in Golden Gate Park on May 17 and 18.

First baseball team to wear helmets at bat was the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1941.

Block Society Sends Two Amendments To Council For Approval

Ready for presentation to the Student Council in the near future are two amendments for the Associated Student constitution that will further the activities of the Block SF, Lon Earnshaw, awards commissioner, announced last week.

The first of the two amendments, Earnshaw said, calls for the changing of the wording of Article V, Section 1, Part G, Under Championship Awards. Earnshaw calls for the deletion of the words "suitable awards" and the addition of the words "block sweaters."

With these changes the section will read, "Block sweaters will be presented to and worn only by those members of championship teams, fulfilling requirements for block letters herein indicated, except in sports where there are less than four conference games in competition. These awards are to be purchased by the Associated Students.

A distinctive second year award will be made to qualified athletes."

The second amendment, designed to be Article V, Section 1, Part H, will be entirely new, Earnshaw said. It will read, "Whereas a player of major sports has fulfilled the requirements of his respective sport, and is eligible for his Block SF award, he is eligible for a presentation of an award jacket.

"As much as half the cost of the jacket will be derived from AS funds, with the balance of the total cost of the jacket being paid by the receiver of the jacket.

"A player may receive an award jacket only once while he is participating in sports for City College of San Francisco."

Photogs Shoot This Is City College

TYPICAL OF THE PHOTOGRAPHS to be used in the departmental layout, This Is City College, is this engineering student at work.

Accent Focuses On Department, Class Activities

Students of the intermediate photography class are experimenting with a series of photographs of all departmental activities here at the college, Beverly Pasqualetti, photography instructor, announced today.

If the experiment is successful, the photographs will be laid out in a modern design format titled, This Is City College. The pictures are to portray students, the various departments at the college and department equipment. They are being taken as unobtrusively as possible in natural light photography, Pasqualetti said.

Shooting of pictures will stop at the end of this month so students will be able to devote the rest of May to printing the pictures. They will be submitted to Emmett Smith, also of the photography department, who will make a layout and determine which pictures will be used, the size and shape. Then the students will print and mount them.

Displayed here and in San Francisco high schools the format should be of great publicity value for the college, Pasqualetti said. He added that instructors who have not allowed students to take pictures of their classes in action, will not be represented in the layout.

Midterm Blues Cause Campus Activities To Slow Down

By Mary Ann Bogart

THE TEMPO of activities of the campus organizations was slowed down temporarily last week because of midterms, but toward the end of the week, preparations for the Inter-Sorority Council ball and the May Festival were in full swing.

The ball, using the theme of Spring Cotillion, was held last Saturday night in the Colonial Room of the St. Francis Hotel. The sorority pledges were presented during the 11 o'clock intermission by the pledge mistresses of each sorority.

Alpha Phi Epsilon fraternity, which did such a splendid job of performing during pledge week, will march and sing again at the May Festival Rally during college hour, May 17.

Newman Club had a breakfast last Sunday at St. Emydius Hall, immediately following 10 o'clock mass.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity is now in the process of making preparations for its pledge dinner to be held May 25. Proposed site for the dinner is the Fior d'Italia Restaurant. Plans are also being made for a float and booth for the May Festival.

Delta Sigma Tau sorority had its dinner and awarding of pins Thursday evening in the faculty dining room in Smith Hall. A barbecue dinner was served for the occasion. Plans are now underway for the May Festival, which is to be held at the Cow Palace. Pledges who attended the ISC Ball and their escorts are Imogene Butler-Will Moore, Margie Campbell - Bob Stroughter, Vera Morris - Gus Davis, Willia Singleton-Josiah William, Minnie Porter - Calvin Holmann, Ann West -Bob Tealer, Rose Sparrow-Van McCloud.

In the Inter - Fraternity Council meeting held last week, debate was concentrated on the fact that several of the fraternities had not paid for the ten tickets pledged by the groups. Also brought up was the fact that the IFC-ISC convention was to be held May 7 in Smith Hall. Attendance of three delegates was required from each fraternity and sorority.

The next testimonial meeting of the Christian Science Organization will be held Thursday, May 16, 7:30 p.m. at 124 Eastwood Drive. All interested students and faculty members are invited to attend.

Filipino Club held its Fiesta dance last Friday night at the college. Highlighting the [illegible] was a group of dancers.

A Veterans' Club, new for this semester, has been formed at City College to unite and give voice to many of the 1,400 ex-service men who are now attending the college, Gene McIntyre, publicity director of the organization, declared last week.

Veterans who are holding offices in the club are Bob Ohlsen, president; Bob Kaye, vice-president; Charlie Price, recording secretary; Vernon Huth, corresponding secretary.

Since its formation, the organization has been active in student activities, as is shown by their recent winning of a trophy for outstanding efforts in the college-wide blood drive held last month.

Speakers Being Chosen For June Commencement

Student speakers at the 22nd annual commencement exercises, to be conducted at Riordan High School Aduitorium Friday, June 14, will be selected and coached by English instructor William Culver and his speech committee, according to John J. Brady, who is in charge of commencement preparations.

Of the men and women who have applied, 525 have been tentatively approved to receive the Associate in Arts degree, although this figure is subject to considerable fluctuation, Brady said, depending on the variability of midterm grades.

Apart from the graduating students selected to make speeches in front of an anticipated audience of 1,200 to 1,500 parents and friends, Bert Levit, president of the Board of Education; Harold Spears, Superintendent of Schools, and the college's President Emeritus, Archibald J. Cloud, will address the gathering.

Music will be provided by members of the college orchestra and A Cappella Choir.

Cap and gown distribution is under the supervision of Dean Ralph Hillsman this year. These will be distributed to Associated Student card holders free; non-holders of the card will be required to pay a five dollar fee for these essentials.

Five dollars is the cost of an Associated Student card.

Varni Asks For Action On Constitution Changes

Seeking to tighten up and strengthen the Associated Student constitution, AS President Bob Varni last week advised Student Council of numerous corrections, deletions and additions which he felt the council should make in the constitution by amending it.

In other council business regarding the constitution, Hugh Aanonsen asked that a poll be taken by the council to find out how the group felt about considering the possibility of having AS elections opened to all students, regardless of whether or not they were AS card holders.

No action was taken on the request, and Aanonsen will present the question to the council again in future meetings.

Larry Vargo Takes Early Lead In Race For Ugly Man Title; Balloting Ends Next Wednesday

Balloting for the Ugly Man On Campus contest is currently being held at the east entrance of Smith Hall, and will continue until next Wednesday, according to John Dudley, chairman of the contest.

At press time the leaders of the contest were Larry Vargo, with 526 votes; Howard Klien, with 344 votes; and Bob Rodriguez, with 255 votes. The contest will last for only one more week, Dudley said.

Presently there are eight contestants entered in the contest, Dudley said, but he is hopeful that several more will be entered before the contest ends. Every organization is eligible to sponsor a candidate for Ugly Man, and the contestant does not have to be from the organization that is sponsoring him.

Winner of the contest, sponsored by the Iota Pi chapter of the Alpha Phi Omega national fraternity, will be determined by the number of pennies the aspirant has deposited for him by the end of the period. Each penny deposited in one of the milk cans, Dudley said, will count as a vote for the contestant who has his picture on that can. Anyone is eligible to vote, he added.

The money collected from the contest will be donated to the City of Hope charity fund, and it is hoped that the contest will increase student spirit by having friendly competition, Dudley stated.

The contestants and their sponsoring organizations are Vargo, Alpha Kappa Rho; John Kelly, Newman Club; Ray Herric of Beta Tau, sponsored by Theta Tau sorority; Bill Driscoll, of Beta Phi Beta, sponsored by Phi Beta Rho sorority; Klien, Alpha Sigma Delta; Vergo Huth, Veterans' Club; Gordon Beal of Christian Science Club, sponsored by Gamma Sigma Sigma; Ron Daher, Lambda Phi; Harold Diamond, Tau Chi Sigma; Gus Davis, Alpha Phi Epsilon; and Rodriguez of Gamma Phi Ypsilon, sponsored by Delta Psi sorority.

A late entry by Zeta Chi sorority has been John Dugan of the Hotel and Restaurant Department. He said he believes that every one who eats in the cafeteria will agree that he's an ugly man.

Rally Committee Sets Cheer Leader Tryouts

Tryouts for song leaders and cheerleaders for the fall semester will be held at 2 p.m. on Wednesday, May 15, in B-2, according to Rally Commissioner Beverly Bauer.

Six women will be chosen, one of whom will be selected as head song leader. Selection will be based on personality and ability to lead, Miss Bauer said.

A new proposal, which is unanimously endorsed by the Rally Committee and which is to be voted on by the Student Council as a proposed amendment to the Associated Student constitution, will apply to the tryouts if it is passed before May 15. The proposal is that any woman student who wishes to be a song-leader from now on will have to enroll in the Rally Committee course for credit so that she may practice during the Rally Committee hour with other song-leaders and the band.

Sophs To Meet Friday To Discuss Dance, Project

Members of the sophomore class will hold a meeting during college hour this Friday in S-140 to discuss plans for the sophomore ball and a class project, according to Gordon Beal, class president.

"A poll taken last week among the members of the sophomore class indicated the class would support a class project. Anyone with any ideas for a project or for the sophomore ball is urged to come to the meeting Friday," Beale said.

Students planning on entering the traditional King and Queen contest should submit their names and 5 by 7 inch photographs to Dean Ralph Hillsman or Dean Mary Golding. Entries may also be submitted to any of the contest committee members, Soledad Comacho, Marilyn Maloneso, Lucille Elamo or Joyce McLelland.

An entry may be independent or sponsored by an organization. Voting will be by Associated Student card.

Deadline for entries for the Soph King and Queen Contest will be Wednesday, May 15. One week of voting, from Thursday, May 20, to Thursday, May 27, will decide the winner, Beal said.

June Fantasy will be the theme of the ball, to be held Saturday, June 1, in the Colonial Room of the St. Francis Hotel. The band has not yet been selected. The poll taken last week also showed the class preferred the dance to be semi-formal.

"It is hoped that, professional entertainment can be obtained for the intermissions of the dance," Beal declared. Ernestine Hinton is in charge of the committee to obtain entertainment. Also serving on her committee are Sylvia Rodrigues, Beverly Miller and Janette Thornton.

College Granted Reaccreditation

A five-year period of reaccreditation was granted in April to City College by the Executive Committee of the Western College Association, according to Louis G. Conlan, president of the college.

Consisting of two and four-year colleges in California, the Western College Association is a self-governing body similar to the State Bar Association. It establishes certain standards, and those colleges that meet the standards are accredited.

"This means we are a fully recognized college, and it certainly raises our status," President Conlan said.

Accreditation for five years means that the Western College Association did not find any discrepancies in the college's lengthy application which they studied for a long time. "We were greeted with the full five-year accreditation a full complimentary report on our program at City College," Conlan added.

Students Submit 100 Articles To Forum Magazine

One hundred seperate articles, of which 32 will be published, were turned in by deadline time to the Forum, a literary magazine, Catherine Connolly, Forum adviser, announced yesterday.

Among the contributors, the number of men and women were equal. Most of their work was poetry, there were a few short stories and essays.

There is a definite Calypso influence in the stories, Miss Connolly said, for they are written with a short, staccato wording and rhythm.

The staff is composed of 10 students, all from the Forum Club. These 10 have the responsibility for editing the contributions and picking 32 for publication.

"Judging the reader interest of the college is the biggest problem of the staff," Miss Connolly said. "I think they are doing splendid work."

Aside from editing the Forum Club sells advertisements to help finance the magazine, Miss Connolly added.

Editor of Forum is Josephine Hanson, past editor of the Lowell high school yearbook. The editor is chosen by the amount of time put into editing the manuscripts, Miss Connolly said.

When distributed, the Forum will be free to those with Associated Student cards and 50 cents to non-members.

Pops Concert Scheduled Here Friday

Band Program Set For College Hour

Inaugurating a new series of semi-annual indoor band concerts will be a pops concert to be held this Friday, during college hour in the Cloud Hall library, according to Meyer M. Cahn, band instructor.

Leading off with excerpts from Wagners Overture to Die Meistersinger, the concert band will continue with Deep River and Gavotte from the Old English Suite of Bach, A Brahms Intermezzo and Beethoven's Bagatelle, Opus 119, will follow, Cahn announced.

Londonderry Air, Serenata by Leroy Anderson and selections from My Fair Lady will complete the college hour concert.

Emphasizing the versatility of the band, Cahn pointed out that the organization has just completed playing for a series of sports events, and will become a dance band for the May Festival on May 17.

All qualified musicians unable to include band in their schedules are invited to become members of the college hour band, he announced. Friday's concert will be repeated during the pre-registration period.

Choir To Sing At Kiwanis Luncheon

Members of the college A Cappella Choir will be guests at the Kiwanis Club spring ladies' day luncheon meeting to be held at the Fairmont Hotel on Tuesday, May 14, according to Robert Morton, choir director.

Tentatively scheduled choral selections, to be accompanied by Loyd Carroll, pianist, will feature Susanne Bellinger as soprano soloist in Joshua by Moussorgsky, Deanna Williams, soprano, and R. H. Hillis, baritone, will sing Bess You Is My Woman Now, from Gershwin's Porgy And Bess.

Come to the Fair, by Martin, Crucifixus from the Bach D-Minor Mass, the title song from Oklahoma, and You'll Never Walk Alone, will complete the accompanied choral selections, Morton announced.

Alleluia, by the contemporary American composer, Randall Thompson, and In The Beginning, God, by Foltz, are to be sung by A Cappella.

Participating in a choir festival at San Francisco State College on May 6, the group sang Crucifixus from the Bach D-Minor Mass. Miss Bellinger also sang the soprano solo of Joshua at the festival concert.

Little Theater Season Nears End

Curtain Falls On Death Production Saturday Night

Final performances of Death Takes A Holiday, terminating the current series of drama productions presented in the college's little theater, will be at 8 p.m. this Saturday night, according to Michael Griffin, director.

Griffin felt the productions for the year were quite successful and had words of praise for all the students who worked hard to knit themselves together through their talents on stage, behind stage, and in creating the stage.

Death Takes A Holiday hits notes of perfection in the unqualified talent embodied by Stan Weston in the leading role of His Highness, Prince Sirki of Vitalba Alexandri.

The other major role is being played by Patricia Duleich in the role of Grazia, and backing up the lead roles are Helen Blumberg as Cora, George Cooney as Fedele, Carl Mayo as Duke Lambert, Stephanie Koppe as Alda, Helen Maskarich as Duchess Stephanie, Roxana Kiwa as Princess of San Luca, Nicholas Rommel as Baron Cesarea, Joanne Jaklevick as Rhoda Fenton, William Raymond as Eric Fenton, Leigh Guerra as Corrado, Lawrence Bryggman as Major Whitread, and understudy Mack Porterfield.

This play follows a plot of revealing elements of the unknown, through an optimistic philosophy of the problems of love and death. It is based on the poetic conception of Death suspending all activities for three days, during which time he falls in love with a beautiful girl and, through her, comes to realize why mortals fear him.

Technical staff for the production includes technical director, Ken Cohen; light design, Chuck Huntly; stage manager, Andy Bounsante; wardrobe mistress, Miss Koppe; properties manager, Dawn Roberts; art directors, Miss Dulcich and Bob Doyle; publicity managers, Bob Lastley and Louis Mayo, and the House manager, Linda Cripps.

Tickets for the performance may be obtained without charge upon presentation of an Associated Student card. Non-card holders and guests will be charged an admission price of $1, Griffin added.

'Fatha' Hines May Open Festival At College Hour Friday; Car Parade, Floats Highlight Night Activities

Earl "Fatha" Hines is expected to open the May Festival Day activities this Friday in a scheduled appearance during the college hour festival kickoff from 10:40 to 11:20 a.m. in the men's gymnasium, according to Brower Dimond, temporary vice-president of the Associated Men Students.

Based on the Alpha Sigma Delta award-winning theme, Cartoon Cavalcade, the festival will begin with a parade from the college and end at the Cow Palace, where the main celebration will take place.

With the aid of a six-man San Francisco Police Department motorcycle escort, the parade, featuring noted comic strip characters, will begin at 6:30 p.m. from the Ocean Avenue parking area below Smith Hall, down Mission Street to Geneva and end at the Cow Palace grounds.

Some 15 floats and 20 automobiles are expected to enter the parade, according to Dimond. He stated that prizes will be awarded to the best original float, the best decorated one, and the best over-all float. Dimond added that scrolls will be given to the second place winners in the same categories.

Festivities at the Cow Palace will get underway at 7 p.m. immediately following the parade. Dress for the evening, according to Dimond, will be costumes based on comic strip characters.

Dimond emphasized a policy of good taste in selecting a character to imitate. Daisy Mae and Long Sam, both creations of Al Capp, were termed undesirable for costume portrayal.

Featured during the evening will be the awarding of a record number of prizes, including the presentation of the winner of the Ugly Man contest, and a drawing at which time an as yet undetermined door prize will be given away to the person holding the lucky ticket.

Also the winners of the Name the Theme contest and the poster contest will be announced. Judging of booths will also take place, with trophies going to the entries with the most original idea, the best decorated, and, tentatively, the best booth.

Dance music for the evening will be provided by the college dance band, Dimond added.

Herrick, Davis Lead Ugly Man Contest Voting

Present leaders in the Ugly Man Contest are Ray Herrick of Beta Tau, with a total of 1,386 votes, closely followed by Gus Davis of Alpha Phi Epsilon, who has 1,369 votes, according to John Dudley, president of Alpha Phi Omega, sponsors of the contest.

Prizes for the winner of the contest will be awarded Friday at the May Festival to be held at the Cow Palace. They include a large winner's trophy suitably engraved, an Ugly Man Key and an Ugly Man Beer Mug. To the sponsoring organization, Dudley said, there will also go a trophy.

Other candidates and their contest standings are as follows: John Dunn of the Hotel and Restaurant department, 1,191 votes; Howard Klein of Alpha Sigma Delta, 1,058 votes; Larry Vargo of Alpha Kappa Rho, 857 votes; Bob Rodriguez of Gamma Phi Ypsilon, 658 votes; Hal Dimond of Tau Chi Sigma, 479 votes; Bill Driscoll of Beta Phi Beta, 378 votes; Ron Daher of Lambda Phi, 254 votes; and, trailing, are Vern Huth of the Veterans Club, and Gordon Beal of the Christian Science Club, who have 164 and 163.

No Change Reported In Condition Of Cafeteria

There has been no change in the unsatisfactory condition of the cafeteria and fountain, John Dunn, Hotel and Restaurant instructor, said last week.

"Many students are conscious of keeping the cafeteria clean," Dunn said. "However, most students refuse to clean up after themselves. I do not know how to impress them with cleanliness. I would certainly hate to see mandatory regulations set up by the college. Action should come from the students themselves.

"As far as the student proposal to remove the chairs from the cafeteria in order to shock students into cleanliness, I am neither for nor against it. If removing their chairs for a few days will help the situation, then it will be fine.

"Veterans," he continued, "should take the lead in keeping the cafeteria clean. They are older and have had much more experience in this line."

New England Feature Scheduled For Friday

New England Adventure will be the featured film during college hour this Friday, May 17, in S-136, Madison M. Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor, announced this week.

"The film takes viewers on a colorful, historic trip through the New England States in the fall," Devlin said.

Cape Cod, New York City and many places of historic interest, such as Bunker Hill, are shown. Produced in color and sound for United Air Lines, the film presents an over-all view of the film presents an over-all view of this section of the United States.

Bill Driscoll, Mike Monteith Vie For AS Presidency; Forty Candidates Seek Student Posts

Bill Driscoll and Mike Monteith will take the top roles in the campaign this month, each hoping to lead his ticket to victory in Associated Student elections scheduled for Friday, May 24, and Monday and Tuesday, May 27 and 28, according to the petitions filed with Hugh Aanonsen, election commissioner.

Seeking a comeback victory after a year and a half absence from the political scene as a party, the Inter-Fraternity Council has prepared its first political ticket since it collapsed in January, 1955.

Backing up Driscoll on the ticket, which is still seeking clearance from the registrar's office at this writing, is Sal D'Angelo for Associated Student Vice-President.

Looking for victory in the runner-up offices in the student government association are Bob Rodriguez, Associated Men Student presidential candidate, and Shirley Greenberg, Associated Women Student candidate.

Filling in the executive posts, the recent IFC convention chose Jerry Englehaupt for the Sophomore Class presidential candidacy, and Lee Belland for the Freshman Class presidential candidacy.

Rounding out the IFC ticket are the candidates for the Student Council. Winning the fraternity nod for sophomore posts were Calvin Holman, Fanny Huff, Diane O'Neill, Reneda Maston, Bill Robinson, Jim Thomas and Howard Weston.

Candidates for the Freshman seats were Bill Doyle, Charlie Lewis, Kai Peterson, Vern Peterson, Bob Shaw and Bill Thomas.

Opposing the IFC will be the Independents, who have been victorious in the last four years of existence. Bolstering the ticket with Monteith will be Bev Schroth, current Inter-Sorority Council president, seeking the AS Vice-Presidency.

Finance Chairman Brower Dimond and Darlene Enfield will carry the Independents' banner in the races for the AMS and AWS presidential posts.

Carrying the Independent fight into the legislative body, seven hopefuls will take on the fraternity party. Seeking Sophomore council bids are Jerry Hoffman, John Kelly, Marilyn Milanesio, Jack Patterson, Jerry Redford, Marge Saba and Larry Vargo.

Freshman council candidates are Bev Castellucci, Hal Dimond, Chamberlain Ferbe, George Fesunoff, Pat

Today Final Day For Filing King, Queen Petitions

Last day to submit an entry for the sophomore king and queen contest is today, according to Gordon Beal, sophomore class president.

Students who wish to enter must submit a 5 by 7 inch photograph to Dean Ralph Hillsman, Dean Mary Golding, Soledad Comacho, Marilyn Maloneso, Lucille Elamo or Joyce McLelland sometime today, Beal added.

An organization may sponsor the entrant or the entrant may be independent. Voting for the contestants will be by Associated Student card from Thursday, May 20, to Thursday, May 27.

The Colonial Room of the St. Francis Hotel will be the site of the ball, June Fantasy, which will be held on Saturday, June 1. Dancing will be to the music of Maurie Wolohan.

The dance will be open to AS members and $2.50 to non-members.

Forum Magazine Slated For June 3 Publication

A modern design will decorate the cover of Forum, the college's annual literary magazine, which will be published Monday, June 3, Josephine Hanson, Forum editor, announced yesterday.

Instead of the traditional Ram's head on the cover, Forum will have a modern drawing by James Stettler, art major here, Miss Hanson reported. "We want to be up-to-date, not only in the material contained in Forum, but also in the exterior decor," Miss Hanson said.

Of the contributions submitted to the Forum, 32 have been chosen and edited for publication, Miss Hanson added.

Armchair Experts Confused On Aims Of A College Newspaper

ARMCHAIR experts—the world is, and always will be, full of them. A college newspaper, like everything else, has its share of them—persons who haven't the faintest conception of the do's and don'ts of journalism.

"I know how you can liven up your paper," they state smugly. Then they proceed blissfully to outline their juvenile, idiotic "ideas." Patiently they are told that their ideas just aren't journalistically feasible.

Most of these "experts" are confused about the purposes of a college newspaper, wrongly confusing the word "college" with the words "high school."

In some schools, the newspaper's main purpose is to entertain—nothing more, nothing less. This, we now emphatically point out, is not the primary purpose of a college newspaper.

A college, with its thousands of students, can be compared to a small city. The function of its newspaper—much the same as that of a city paper—is to gather and report the news of its "city."

In presenting this news, a good college paper will employ the methods and techniques practiced by city papers. It will not be just merely an advanced high school newspaper, but rather will attempt to be a small-scale version of a city newspaper.

Those persons who find this type of college paper "dull" would do well to indulge in a critical self-examination. They will find themselves in either one of two categories.

Reader maturity—most would find themselves lacking here. The dullness they perceive is only the reflection of their own dullness.

Students will also find their college paper uninteresting if they never bother to keep informed on current college events. As a result of this apathy, they have nothing to follow, or in which to show an interest.

College journalism prepares students for work in the newspaper field. The student must have the correct quality of training and experience necessary to succeed in this highly competitive field.

As a result, a college paper finds itself in the middle of two objectives, trying hard to achieve both. It wants to please its readers as much as possible, but, if in order to accomplish this aim it has to lower its quality, this obviously cannot be done.

Instead, it would be well for students to raise their reading maturity to an adult level, and to show an active interest in student affairs. In this way, they will better prepare themselves to take their place in an adult world.

Relics 'Protect' Hurley Village

World War II Cannons Keep Past Secret; Future Remains Vague

Somewhere in every great city is a stairway connected to a building, and on either side of the stairway is a cannon. These cannons represent a type of tradition and give the building some added importance.

It is not necessary to wander around the city looking at buildings and stairways to view a set of these cannons. All that is necessary is a short trip to Hurley Village where two such relics stand on each side of the entrance as if protecting against some unknown enemy. This is the entrance near the women's gymnasium and seems to be carefully hidden from civilization.

Cannons, as can easily be seen if one ever attempts to get a set, are not easily obtained. The Hurley Village cannons were donated to the college in 1946 by Raymond Milani, a gardener at the college. These two relics were stationed at Watsonville's Camp McQuade during World War II, but this is as far as is known about their history.

The two guardians of liberty might have the inspiration which caused Tennyson to write "Cannon to the left of them," or perhaps they were present when the command, "Don't fire until you see the whites of their eyes," was given. But their past is their secret and remains a mystery.

Some students around campus seemingly have recognized the value of these relics and want to share them with civilization. In their present location they are seen by non-Associated Student members who park their autos off campus, seagulls and lost reporters.

There were plans last semester to move these two monuments to a place of real prominence flanking the redwood Ram statue in front of Smith Hall so that they could be seen and appreciated by all. But for the present, at least, these two behemoths remain "hidden" in Hurley Village.

Charles Radbourn pitched 60 wins against only 12 losses in the 1844 season for Providence of the National League. Needless to say he pitched all of the three World Series games and won them, by scores of 6-0, 3-1, and 12-2. The winner's share was $100.00, while the losers played gratis.

Rocks Are Ancestors?

Truth Search Underground For Geologists

Geology—a field of digging, searching, finding, analyzing, taking apart and putting together—could quite truthfully be called, the search for truth—underground.

Those students of the "pick and shovel society" can be found daily in the basement of the Science Building, seriously examining fragments of rocks. To the layman this might seem quite foolish, but don't laugh—one of those long out-moded forms of life, otherwise known as fossils, might have been one of your ancestors, just emerging from, or still in the sea.

Visiting Room S-45, the geology laboratory, is much like visiting Grauman's Chinese Theater. Here, too, are famous footprints imbedded in rock; and judging from the size, the things that made these impressions must have been important, for nothing could be the size which the footprints indicate and not be important.

Fossils, dinosaur tracks, and other aids enable geology students here to study the evolution of life in history. Don't be misled into thinking that geology is only a study of life which has long ceased to exist; geology is also a study of the structure of the earth's crust and the formation and development of its various layers, which has some interesting aspects.

Chester E. Crowell, geology instructor here, believes that all students should take a course in geology to learn more about this world that we live on. George Baffico is also geology instructor here.

Geology students travel occasionally, to various locations in search of fossils and mineral specimens. Recently they completed trips to Rodeo and Mt. Diablo.

This course has its merits. Just think, after taking geology you can specify just what kind of old fossils your instructors are.

Shots At Ramdom

SPOTTED on the personal notice bulletin boards at the south end of the Science Building was a notice for the sale of a TV set which the seller suggested might be in better condition than most used sets because "The set's last owner was blind and used it very little."

The information comes to us by way of two of the college's maintenance men, who claim to be the foremost living authorities on the subject matter affixed to the boards. (Does anyone need a leather carrying-case for roller skates? It's a steal at $15.)

HIRAM KAAKUA, a student at the college, and some other bright young men over at the local Junior Chamber of Commerce have been putting heads together like crazy lately in order to come up with some rinky-tinky ways to promote their current Miss San Francisco contest.

So far the best thought is a deal whereby a certain nationally-known firm would push the event by getting out an "I Dreamt I Won the Miss SF Contest in my you-know-what" type-ad. Good, good, GOOD. Ineidental to all this is the fact that several of the college's more personable co-eds are expected to be in the finals on May 23.

THE LATEST thing in perpetual trophies will be unveiled by Beta Phi Beta at their Golden Slippers Dance on May 24. It's a sort of replica of a golden slipper set on top of a fancy base, and the boys in the fraternity want to scotch the rumor that the trophy will be given to the girl with the biggest feet. The deal is to present the thing to the girl who belongs to the foot that matches the size of the slipper.

Polly Bergen To Play Helen Morgan On TV

By Carol Harris

A BYGONE ERA will be recreated tomorrow night on KPIX. Playhouse 90 will present The Helen Morgan Story at 9:30 p.m. Miss Morgan reached the apex of popularity during the 1920's as an actress and singer.

Polly Bergen will portray Miss Morgan. This role could send Miss Bergen on her way to stardom.

Miss Bergen has been around for a few years, first in the movies and then on television. Her acting and TV chores have been of comparatively minor status. The role of Miss Morgan will give the public and producers an opportunity to see how capable an actress she is.

At long last, the entertainment field is striking back at the scandal magazines which make a practice of slandering prominent persons' reputations.

SLANDER exposes this gutter-type, vicious magazine racket. The film also depicts the characters of the people who make a living by defaming decent human beings.

Steve Cochran proves himself to be an actor of high esteem in the role of the power-drunk editor. He drives his mother to drink, because she hates him so. In the process of destroying others, he eventually destroys himself.

A clue to Cochran's character is discovered when he says, "Dig deep enough, and you can find something dirty about anybody."

One of the most disgusting aspects of the picture is how the victims are selected. Take a man, any man. Dig until you find something ugly about his past.

It doesn't matter how long ago the incident occurred, or the kind of person he is today. Don't take into account the fact he has a wife and family. Print it. After all, as the editor says, "The truth never hurt anyone."

The most surprising performance is turned in by Van Johnson. Johnson portrays the television puppeteer whose future will be ruined if he does not reveal what he knows about a certain actress. In other words, it's blackmail.

The remainder of the plot concerns Johnson's refusal to divulge any information about the actress. We won't give away the twists in the film, but the article which is published against Johnson for his refusal leads to tragedy for his family.

Ann Blyth could have done more with the role of Johnson's wife than she did. However, her performance was acceptable.

What can be done about these magazines? As is brought out in the film, there is only one way to stop this skulduggery.

It's up to the public. You are the person who lays 25c on the counter for a magazine. You are the person who enables the filth-slinging rackets to continue.

If the public would use the intelligence it was born with and stop buying, the seandal magazines would be forced out of business.

Early Hour Classes Prove Challenging To Profs, Students

For the avid student of human nature, no study proves so fascinating as noting the antics of instructors who hold 8 o'clock classes.

There is always the instructor who believes in old adages, especially, "The early bird always catches the worm." The worm in this case is the late student. He usually stands at the front of the room, roll book in hand, and begins calling out the names even before the bell has stopped ringing. The early bird fairly gloats when the worm tries to wiggle in the door at 8:11.

One always encounters the instructor who makes his arrival conspicuous by raeing madly down the hall with coffee cup in hand and coattails flying. Reaching the door second before the final bell has stopped ringing, he greets each entering student with a devilish chuekle. "Ha! Ha! You're late!" he exclaims gleefully.

The most frustrating, to students, is the instructor who invariably manages to walk in the door at precisely 8:21. Of course, he rounds the corner just as the students have finished signing the attendance list and shoved it under the door. This instruetor is the only one whose hair is combed, whose elothes are on straight, and who doesn't look as though he had just stepped out of a Charles Addams eartoon.

These instruetors have learned that 8 o'clock classes should be treated with the same eare and eaution one would employ in dealing with the bubonic plague.

Transportation

Bicycles Aid Students' Best Friends—Feet

Getting from one place to another is one of a student's most crucial problems. At this college most students make use of their God-given implements, feet.

Up and down over grassy terrain, students trudge their way to classes, parking lots and street cars—feet moving one after the other, directed by impulses from the brain. Feet are a student's best friend, unless he has a car.

General complaints at this college center around the hike from the gymnasiums to Cloud Hall or the Science Building.

This small walk would seem like going from one room to another to Stanford students. The Stanford University campus with its widespread acres, many trees, large buildings, and 8,000 enrollment, is the walking student's nightmare. With some of the residence houses a mile away from classes, transportation is almost necessary.

For someone visiting the Stanford campus a sight strange to city dwellers presents itself. Bicycles . . . they are the chief means of getting from one spot to another. This solution to the problem is a good one. Bieyeles, being so small, cause no parking problem, they need no gas, and are relatively easy to ride.

This by no means eliminates cars. The sports models, model "A's," and 1957 heaps just remain parked at the driver's residence.

While this idea has its merits it does have some downfalls. How is a fellow to take his girl for a ride? What happens if he can't ride a bike?

While this idea is interesting, students at this college will have to continue to use feet. Situated such as it is, a bieyelist would probably find himself in the reservoir or in Balboa Park.

Life Is Numerical

Mass Of Figures Illustrated By Local Examples

Life is so numerical! Numbers dominate every facet, they influence college attendance, prices, ideas and progress. Their prominence may be illustrated by the use of many local examples.

A popular figure at present is '57. It doesn't refer to the many Heinz varieties but to the new automobiles hitting the market. Announcement of these '57 models strikes a smashing blow to the average car owner here. A year of depreciation has set in, a fate only exceeded by rigor mortis.

Most students here can readily identify 8:10 as a wicked numeral, it refers to the most difficult class to attend, the early morning session. Among students here, its popularity rivals that of the late Joseph Stalin with members of the present soviet government.

But, the digit which seems to delight most veterans attending the college is $110.00. Though the amount might at times seem highly insufficient, the check from Unele always appears to be most welcome.

Also prominent is $.08, a necessary number to all early morning cafeteria coffee drinkers. To many, the price of a morning cup of Joe rates over the 8:10 class in importance. This lifegiving hot coffee gives that first instructor an almost even break to get through the cobwebs and accomplish the objective.

These numbers don't strike terror into the hearts of collegiates, but they do have quite a bearing on the outcome of every day. For if it were not for monthly checks expressed by numbers, early morning classes starting at numbered times, new cars, and cups of coffee, life wouldn't be complieated at all.

Rams Must Win Two Against San Mateo In Order To Finish Season With 7-7 Final Mark

By Lou Lucia

Due to inclement weather the final games of the Big Eight season for the Rams and the San Mateo Bulldogs were rescheduled for this week; tomorrow at San Mateo, and one game was to be played here yesterday, which will be covered in the next issue of The Guardsman.

In order to salvage a 7-7 won-loss mark the Rams will have to take both games from their traditional rivals. The baseball team thus far has held its own in a league which has been strengthened over the past year.

Unlike last year's league, which found the Rams and Santa Rosa battling neck and neck for the league title until San Mateo took the measure of Santa Rosa twice in a double-header during the final games, this year's pennant chase has Modesto and West Contra Costa tied for the title, and most of the other clubs packed tightly in the middle of the standings.

During the season, the main weakness of the Ram nine has been the inability of the pitching staff to develop as the season has progressed. The sore left arm of lefty Bill Flanagan did not enhance the chanees of Coach Bill Fischer's crew, nor did the inability of the team to win the close ball games.

Splitting their first double-bill with the Santa Rosa nine, 13-9, 1-2, the Rams showed the ability to come from behind but also displayed an inability to get the few needed runs. The second twin-bill found the Modesto nine putting the skids on the college nine by taking two games, 12-8 and 4-2.

The Rams again came back with two single victories over West Contra Costa by 18-11, 9-1 margins. At this point they had a 3-3 record.

By splitting the Oakland two-game series, 17-10, 5-6, the Rams were in a six-way tie for second place, but in the next double-header were again defeated twice, 2-1 and 11-0. The 2-1 loss was the third one-run defeat for the Rams and these are the games that play an important role in determining the standings.

Stockton then trounced the Rams, 24-4, but Fischer's crew eame back in two extra innings to defeat the Mustangs, 4-3. This is where the Ram squad stands now—with a 5-7 won-loss record.

Excluding San Mateo, top players against the Rams in conference games have been:

First base: Terry Bennett (Sac.)
2nd base: Dolph Camilli, Jr.(SR).
Shortstop: Pete Catlett (Stockton).
Third base: George Pickett (usually a shortstop) (Sacramento):
Left field: Joe Gritts (Stockton).
Center field: Lefty Peeler (WCC).
Right field: Mitsakyo Minagawa (SR).
Catcher: Bill Heath (Mod.)
Pitchers: J. Holmquist (Mod.), C. Perkins (SR), Bill Leach (Sac.).

TOM ROPER, hard hitting third baseman, has been supplying most of the long ball hitting for the Rams. Roper also plays right field and usually bats in the number five position in the batting order.

Block SF Society Plans Changes In Award Methods

Soon to be presented to the members of the Student Council are two amendments for the benefit of the Block SF, according to Lon Earnshaw, who is in charge of drafting the amendments.

Under Article V, Section G, the wording will be changed to read, "Block sweaters" instead of the present "suitable awards." This section has to do with awards that will be given to members of a championship team, and that are purchased by the Associated Students.

The second of the two amendments, Earnshaw said, will be for the awarding of Block SF jackets. The new amendment will be under Article V, Section H, Earnshaw added. This amendment will allow any eligible participant in a sport who is about to receive his block the opportunity of receiving a jacket, paid for in half by the AS. The other half will be paid for by the recipient of the award, Earnshaw said.

The only step before submitting the amendments to council, Earnshaw stated, is to obtain approval of Oscar Anderson, controller. As soon as this detail is taken care of, he said, the amendments will be taken to council. If passed there, they will be placed on the ballot in the AS elections to be held on May 24, 27, and 28.

Other activities of the Block SF presently, he said, are the preparations for their semi-annual dinner to be held later this month.

Scharf, Sashin Reach Tennis Semi-Finals

Two City College tennis players, Nick Scharf and Vic Sashin, reached the semi-finals in the Big Eight tennis championships May 3-4 at Modesto.

Scharf was defeated in the semi-final singles match, 6-4, 6-4, by Ed Guzman of Modesto. "Scharf is one of the best singles players in the conference," Coach Roy Diederiehsen said.

Sophs, Profs Both Confident Of Victory In Annual Contest

With just a little over two weeks to go until the soph-prof softball tilt, both teams are confident of a victory. The sophs think they have the best squad this year and are looking forward to knocking off the profs.

The win-starved sophs played another practice game last week in preparation for the big game. This time the soph varsity knocked off an out of shape but rugged Laguna Honda Home for the Aged team by the score of 2 to 1.

Class President Gordy Beal was the winning pitcher as he held the "oldsters" to just 16 hits. The sophs pushed both of their runs across in the ninth inning when, with two men on, "Killer" Phil Mainieki's hard hit grounder hit the crutch of the old-folks' home shortstop and the ball bounced into centerfield, allowing two men on base to score.

Soph hitting wasn't up to par in this game, which caused Beal to remark, "Their piteher was 87 years old, but he still had a lot on the ball." Some new talent appeared on the soph roster when two sluggers who can really hit the ball showed up for practice: they are Sich, "Able" De Conti and "Jungle" Jim O'Connor.

Meanwhile, over at the profs' training eamp, there was a smell of rubbing oil in the air. A few of the "boys" are complaining of sore backs and sore muscles, but all of the aches and pains should disappear by game time.

The instruetors also played a practice game last week. They met a tough Cub Scout team, but managed to pull through with a close 1-0 decision.

"Elephant Arm" Sid Phelan and "Larrupin" Lou Vasquez were the heroes of the victory. Phelan scored the winning run when he slammed into the Cubs' 6-year-old, 60-lb. catcher, causing him to drop the ball. Vasquez led the profs at the plate with a perfect three for three (walks, that is!).

Ramblings

By Lou Lucia

DEVIATING from the usual scheme of things the Guardsmaniacal sports editor will give due tribute to those railbird fans who follow those four-legged animals with the not so shapely legs. Naturally a form chart is needed, so below is listed the entries for the race.

Horse—	Jockey—	Odds
Tommy's Harem	T. Manville	10-1
Stagnant Man	W. Shoemaker	7-2
Confidential	Z. Gabor	9-2
Dear Abby	V. Buren	12-3
Dolphin	S. Loren	14-5
Red Taint	G. Maienkov	100-1
One Punch	G. Fullmer	75-5
Sideburner	E. Presley	4-1

Before marking X's at the desired horse's name, keep in mind the ability of the jockeys. Welk has promised that Bandleader would come in either a "one, two, or a three." Tommy's Harem has the Rajah's money backing her. Manville quickly states that its "Ali money." Ten to one odds it won't last.

Stagnant Man may lose a hoof. Don't be surprised if she is shy and Shoemaker gets off to fix the hoof in front of the finish line. First time in the sports pages for Gabor, but the jockey has been going strong with Confidential, according to reports.

Dear Abby widden by V. Buren, has the horse racing set gossiping. It seems that the mare had been hoofing with the colt's father, and explanations have indicated that the farm life is not too good. Dear Abby—What will be the result? A long shot that it won't run a neck and neck race. Someone may pad the race to get even money.

Dolphin with S. Loren handling the strap, shows great form and an easy graeeful motion. A foreign import which should do well. No padding here. Red Taint and G. Maienkov have had trouble at all starting gates. Maienkov seems to want to ride in the opposite direction from that of the other horses. A real long shot that will probably ask to be scratched from the meeting.

One Punch along with rider G. Fullmer may have trouble hitting the sugar path to stardom. Made good at the gate the first time out but collected little aeross the board. Second start was good but sagged terribly in the 6th lap. May not even get in the big money again.

Sideburner with E. Presley aboard has been in a number of close shaves. Has earned so much money that a gold Cadillac will transport the driver. Has strong backing from E. Sullivan and Co. Many quiek movements but unsynchronized at times.

As in all horse raees, who can predict the outcome? W. Shake (owner of the horse Speare) said, if you bet, "when sorrows come, they come not single spies, but in battalions!"

Independent Cage League In Action Tonight

Athletie Commissioner Bob Tealer is currently making preparations for a banquet which will be held shortly after the Independent and Inter-Fraternity Counell loops are concluded. All players who competed in the leagues will be honored, and the winning team trophy will be awarded.

Standings as of May 15:

Mile Relay Team Places 2nd To Fullerton At Fresno, Looks Forward To Santa Rosa Meet

By George Grasso

Six members of the City College track team, which included a mile relay squad, a high jumper, and a discus thrower, journeyed to Fresno for the annual West Coast Relays last Saturday. Coach Vasquez said the trip did them a lot of good and the tough competition they met will help them prepare for the Northern California meet at Santa Rosa this Saturday.

The mile relay team, made up of sophomore Les Richter and freshman Steve Pickney, James Thomas, and Don Nasser, ran the four laps in 3:23 to place second to Fullerton, which ran 3:21.3. East Los Angeles took third in 3:29.7. Of the four Ram runners, only Les Richter ran his segment of the race in under 50 seconds.

High jumper - pole vaulter Wilfred Gasper placed in both events at Fresno. Gasper went over the bar at 6-3 to place fourth in the high jump. First place was 6-5, and was split among jumpers from Los Angeles City, East Los Angeles, and Mt. San Antonio Junior Colleges.

In the pole vault Gasper jumped an even 13 feet, which put him in a four-way tie for fifth. The winning jump was 13-4.

Mike Reid, Rams' top discus thrower, had a run of bad luek. His best throw, which would have earned him a second place, was fouled. He couldn't repeat the throw, and wound up settling for sixth place.

Runners who placed in the first four at the Stockton All-Conference meet will compete in the Northern California meet at Santa Rosa for the honor of representing Northern California at the All-State meet in Modesto.

Bob Hammond, who qualified for the mile run, was on a special leave from the Army and will not be able to make the Santa Rosa meet. Those participating will be high jumper Will Gasper, quarter-miler Steve Pickney, Blake Westmen in the two mile, James Thomas in the 120 high hurdles and the 220 lows, Pete Morgan in the shot put, Mike Reid in the discus, and Diek Atkins in the broad jump.

Those runners who qualify here will journey to Modesto to take on the best two-year college traek men of Southern California. Starting time for the Northern California meet will be two o'elock.

The Fresno Relays serve to bring together top trackmen, which range from high school runners to Olympic stars. Famed sprinter Bobby Morrow, double sprint winner at Melbourne, ran a 9.4 century to beat out Leamon King and Mike Agostini. He then anchored the world record tying 440 relay team from Abilene Christian, which ran the quarter mile in 39.9.

The University of California put on display its range distance runner Don Bowden, who ran a 4:01.6 mile. It wasn't good enough, however, to beat Olympic trials winner Jerome Walters.

Ram Golfers Lose, Take Second Place

Dropping their last game of the season to San Mateo, 10 to 5, at the Bulldogs' home grounds, the Ram golfers finished the season in second plaee one and a half games behind the champs.

In close play Don McDowell and San Mateo ace Bill West kept abreast of each other until the final three holes when a few bogies foreed McDowell back with an eight over par 80. West finished strong with a 75.

Following closely behind McDowell, Frank Ilnicki, the Rams' number two man, was edged out by San Mateo's Pat Larkin, 79 to 81. Moving out of his usually consistent middle 70's, Larry Barr edged his opponent by one stroke, 83 to 84, but dropped the match on points, 2 to 1.

Mike Evans, also shooting out of the 70's, earded a weil over par 85, losing his match by two strokes. Marty Kilgareth faired best in the point department, tying his opponent 1½ to 1½. Both men shot an 86.

In the overall picture the champion Bulldogs and the Rams were separated by a scant eight strokes, with San Mateo carding a 407 to the Rams' 415. In league competition the golf team wound up the season with a six win, one loss, and one tie record.

50 Ram Athletes Cited For Hall Of Fame Berths

By Nick Peters

Reports from the men's athletic department here indicate that the proposed plans for a City College athletic Hall of Fame will be started immediately with the names of some 50 athletes being brought before the voting committee for appointment to the coveted organization.

Jaek Gaddy, director of athletics, introduced the proposed rules for the Hall of Fame to his fellow coaches, who looked over the plans and added their own ideas. As a whole they agreed with Guardsman Sports Editor Lou Luela, who drew up the pact, but presented a difference of opinion on some controversial matters.

The original charter stipulated that in order to be eligible one must have attended the college for an entire year. The coaches protested, citing the case of one of the greatest Ram stars, Ollie Matson, who spent but one semester here.

To be eligible for the Hall of Fame as a coach, it was agreed that a candidate must have served five years as a Ram mentor and must now be retired from the coaching ranks.

The voting committee will consist of all the coaches and assistant coaches at the college plus former coaches Lee Eisan, Louis Conian, and Ralph Hillsman. At the first voting session, approximately 20 athletes will be elected to the honored society with five men added annually in May. In order to be elected one must receive at least 75 per cent of the committee's votes.

All the coaches agreed, however, that there should be special selections for each sport instead of having just one main Hall of Fame listing, contrary to the original draft.

A site for the Hall, which will consist of the names of athletes on a plaque and a register where biographical sketches of the men-in will be kept, has not been decided on, but it will probably adorn either the entrance to the Science Building or will be housed in the men's gymnasium.

Baseball mentor Bill Fischer suggested that the newly elected members should be invited to the annual Block SF dinner where they could be introduced and also be awarded their certificates for making the Hall of Fame. The combined efforts of the athletic department, Dean Hillsman, and The Guardsman sports staff, have been working on the project.

The only major league baseball park which is not equipped for night playing is Wrigley Field, home of the Chicago Cubs.

Plans For Final Activities Made By Organizations

By Jerry Redford

PLANS for participation in the May Festival, along with final activities of the semester, are being planned by the clubs, fraternities and sororities.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity is presently making plans for its pledge dinner to be held May 25. Bill Johnson has been trying to make arrangements to have the dinner in the banquet room of Fior d'Italia Restaurant. At a meeting held last week at the home of Bill Pound, plans were made for the May Festival float and booth the fraternity will enter.

The Filipino Club is holding an all-day picnic on Saturday at Fairfax Town and Country Club. Arrangements are being made through the chairman of activity, Napoleon Engalla, who is also president of the Filipino Club, and Esperanza Santos.

Zeta Chi sorority held a surprise shower at the home of Carol Thomas for Paula Villa, who will be married to Dwane Shippey next Thursday afternoon. A meeting was also held last week to complete plans for the May Festival, and for a swim party.

The Christian Science Organization will hold its next testimonial meeting tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. at 124 Eastwood Drive. All interested faculty members and students are invited to attend.

Beta Phi Beta fraternity held two meetings recently at the home of Al Raynal and Chuck Thompson. Discussion was held on the topic of a booth and float for the May Festival, and plans for the Golden Slipper dance. President Jim Ryan and pledge master Mario Cassulo met in order to complete arrangements for the dance, to be held May 24.

The Engineering Society of the college is holding a dinner with the engineering faculty on May 29, at the Colonial Inn. Tickets are being sold by Wallace A. Sellman, John I. Hallock and officers of the society. Regular meetings are held by the society each college hour in Room S-200.

The Veterans Club has prepared its constitution and will present it to the Student Council and Club Activities Board at the earliest possible time.

4 Major Awards Go To Graduates

Four awards, two for scholarship and two for outstanding contributions to student activities, will be presented to graduating students at the annual commencement exercises to be held at Riordan High School auditorium on Friday, June 14, according to John J. Brady, director of commencement preparations.

The man and woman with the highest academic standing will each be awarded a Scholastic Cup; and two students, one man and one woman, who in the opinion of an administrative committee have contributed most in the field of service to the college, will each receive a President's Award Plaque, Brady said.

One week before finals, there will be a pre-commencement assembly held in the library, and all graduating students will be asked to attend. At this ceremony, Brady will outline for the students the details of the commencement schedule.

Students who have won scholarships to higher institutions of learning as well as the Alice Eastwood, floriculture, and Wall Street Journal, business, will receive their awards at the meeting, Brady said.

52 File Applications For College Scholarships

Fifty-two students, 29 women and 13 men, have applied for the 10 scholarships available this semester, Mary Golding, dean of women, announced yesterday.

Most of the students, Dean Golding stated, who submitted their applications are majoring in teaching, secretarial work, or business administration.

Scholarships to be awarded include the Dr. A. J. Cloud Scholarships, the Denman Scholarships, the Chinese Scholarships, the Graduating Class Scholarships, and the scholarships sponsored by the Associated Students, Dean Golding further added.

New AS Transcript Revision Plan Wins Council Support, Is Offered To All Students

By Dick Moore

Winning instant informal Student Council approval in last Thursday's meeting of the group was a new proposal for the inclusion of work in student activities on the official college transcript of record of each student.

Introduced to the council by Jim Woods, the proposal offers greater feasibility, diversification and over-all fairness than previously considered ideas on transcript revision.

Woods' outline of his plan stressed the idea of eligibility for all Associated Student members, with the final qualifying factor to be determined by a cumulative point system.

Under the plan any student who is an AS member can file a record of his activities, regardless of the nature or extent of those activities, and at the student's termination of his studies here, his entire activity record will be reviewed, considered for cumulative value and given an appropriate number of points.

The number of points accumulated by the individual will then either qualify or disqualify the request for official recognition of student activities in the transcript.

The council will discuss the plan further this week with the idea in mind of effecting a speedy and efficient means for getting the program approved by the administration and under way.

Other council business concerned the legality of Finance Chairman Brower Dimond's appointment as a temporary officer of the Associated Men Students while AMS President Mike Monteith is in the hospital.

AS President Bob Varni suggested, during a lively discussion of the matter by council, that the constitution should be amended to prevent future confusion concerning one student's eligibility for holding two offices.

Campus Police On Duty For May Festivities

Campus Police will assume special duties during the May Festival this Friday night at the Cow Palace, according to Fred Fitzgerald, head of the criminology department.

Following the May Festival, the campus police class will shoot at the San Francisco police range at Lake Merced. Monday, May 27, the students will hold their inter-class pistol shoot at the Colma police range. Trophies and medals will be awarded.

Rounding out the month's activities, the Campus Police will stage a dinner for its students. James L. Chambers, former student here and currently Chief of Police at the newly organized Newark police force in Alameda, will be the guest speaker.

Chambers topped a field of 91 applicants seeking the newly created position. He then went on to organize and develop the town's police force.

Student Cooperation Excellent In Library

Student cooperation in the college library has been excellent this semester, according to Irene E. Mensing, library staff member here.

"Students using the library for research, subject study and leisure reading have shown great respect for the welfare of one another," Miss Mensing stated. Books, magazines and catalogues borrowed from the library have on the most part been returned on time.

"City College has a beautiful library where the fruits of knowledge are always ripe for picking," Miss Mensing commented.

Summer Sessions Open Here June 24

Summer session at the college is scheduled from Monday, June 24, until Friday, August 2, according to Lloyd D. Luckmann, co-ordinator, Division of Instruction.

Students wishing to register for the summer classes can apply at S-117 until Friday, June 7. Most students are programming with their counselors now.

"If a student plans on attending the summer session, he must appear at the registrar's office on Thursday, June 20, to notify the office and confirm his registration," Luckmann said.

Band Association Off Campus, May Appeal To Council

Club Activities Board recently ruled the Band Association off campus because of its failure to fulfill CAB requirements, according to Bob Wendt, CAB president.

No further action will be taken regarding the Horticulture Society, Drama Club, and Christian Fellowship, which were declared off-campus in April, until they appeal CAB's decision to the Student Council. These groups can take this action by appealing the decision and by sending a representative to council with a valid excuse for and its nonfulfillment of the requirements as set up by CAB.

Although the band will continue to participate in college activities as a group, it will not be recognized by CAB as an official organization.

Handbook Staff Gets Three New Members

A Publicity Committee meeting during college hour on Friday, May 3, resulted in the appointment of three members to the staff of the college handbook, according to Kaj Kristoffersen, committee chairman.

The committee appointed John Hard as copy editor of the publication and Tom Tatera as head of its advertisements. Tom Hailer was also named to work on the handbook staff.

On May 7, a special meeting was held for the staff. Kristoffersen stressed that the writers for the book should avoid dead and dry literature and brought up the fact that perhaps more pictures will be used this year.

Artists' designs for the cover should have been in to Kristoffersen by last Monday for consideration.

Varni To Preside At California College Government Meeting

A majority of votes by eight bay area colleges placed City College as host next fall at the state conference of the California Junior College Student Government Association, which was held in Los Angeles from May 2 to 6, Bob Varni, Associated Student president, stated.

Varni was honored at this meeting when he was installed as the president of next year's conference, which will be held at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel in San Francisco.

While in Los Angeles, the representatives from the college, who included Debbie Rudser, Mike Monteith, Brower Dimond, Metta Weddleton and Louise von Emster, resided at the well-known Ambassador Hotel along with student leaders from 56 other California two-year colleges.

Proceedings at the event started with a banquet and a follow-up dance, both of which were held in the Embassy Room of the hotel on Thursday night. Keynoting the night's activities was a speech by actor Vincent Price, who talked on the subject of art.

The first general assembly of the conference was held in the hotel the following morning, at which time all student officers present were formally introduced to each other, and workshops were set up to divide the group into separate sections, each dealing with individual problems of student government.

Activities for the evening consisted of another banquet, which was followed by a general assembly to discuss the day's events, Varni stated.

Saturday morning began with the installation of Varni into his position as president of next year's state conference, and went on to the passing of resolutions which were brought up at the workshop meetings.

One of the important resolutions which was passed by a majority of the students present dealt with the furtherance of Associated Student card sales by establishing their discounts on a state-wide level.

As originator of this resolution, Dimond was put in charge of a special committee to investigate the possibilities of gaining discounts from various business firms throughout the state.

"This will be the biggest committee formed yet by any student government in California," Varni declared. Other members of this group will include student leaders from colleges in Los Angeles, East Contra Costa, San Mateo, Fresno and Bakersfield.

Another important resolution, which was passed unanimously, recognized the supporting of the California Junior College Association movement to establish equal representation for two-year colleges with four-year colleges on the State Board of Education.

Looking forward to next year's convention, Varni is seeking to fill the offices of State Secretary and State Information Chairman, which City College will be responsible for supplying in its role as "host."

Three state secretaries will be appointed by Varni to aid him in his preparations for the coming conference. Of the three, one will be chosen to hold the office of official State Chairman at convention time, Varni said.

No selection has been made yet for these offices, and Varni urged any student who is an AS member, and who desires to hold these positions, to inform him through the office of Ralph O. Hillsman, dean of Student Activities.

Apples were first cultivated in America in 1629. They were brought from England by the Governor of Massachusetts.

Feminine Fling

DEBBIE RUDSER, AWS President.

Three Women's Groups Schedule Dinner May 31

Associated Women Students will get together for the traditional Feminine Fling, Friday, May 31, according to Debbie Rudser, AWS president.

Sponsored by the AWS, the Inter-Sorority Council and the Recreation Association, the event is slated to take place in the faculty dining room at 6:30 p.m. Highlight of the evening will be the presentation of the Dougherty Trophy for the highest sorority grade point average. After the presentation, the new presidents of the AWS, ISC, and the RA will be installed.

The Feminine Fling is the wind-up of social events for women students. It gives them a chance to meet before the end of the semester. The occasion is informal, and pedal pushers are the appropriate attire, Miss Rudser added.

Special invitations for the event will be sent to all women students who are members of the AS, and to women faculty members.

Chairmen of the committees are Darlene Enfield, Joan White, Bev Schroth and Margie Saba. Refreshments for the evening will be prepared by the Hotel and Restaurant Department and served by women members of the organizations.

First university on the Pacific Coast was Willamette University in Salem, Oregon. It opened in 1844.

Floriculture Club Visits Different Botanical Gardens

Day and evening students of floriculture classes here took an all day field trip last Friday to the Berkeley Rose Gardens, Salhack Iris Gardens and the University of California Botanical Gardens.

Members of the Horticulture Society took an all-day field trip yesterday to the Ferry-Morse Seed Company in Salinas. Ferry-Morse Seed Company, which is the leading flower and vegetable seed grower on the Pacific Coast, showed the students through their grounds.

Harry Nelson, floriculture instructor, who accompanied the students on the two trips, said the purpose of these field trips is to show students the different types of flowers that can be grown commercially, and how the work is actually done by the different operations. This also gives the students an opportunity to discover individual interest in these particular industries.

Hank Sciaroni, farm adviser of Half Moon Bay, will be guest speaker at a Horticulture Society meeting this Friday, May 17. Sciaroni will speak to the students on the possibilities for horticulture employment in the bay area.

Ron Ghezzi, a floriculture major, received three third prizes and honorable mention with his entries in the annual invitational San Francisco Garden Club Flower Show, held at Palace of the Legion of Honor last month.

Five floriculture students have been named as candidates for the $100 Alice Eastwood Award, which is presented by the San Francisco Garden Club in honor of the late Alice Eastwood, well known bay area botanist. This award, which is given at commencement time, will be awarded to the outstanding student majoring in floriculture.

The five students nominated are Louis Ferrario, Allen Willis, Frank Salte, Paul Mitchell and Edward Schuster.

Art Student Does College Brochure

Maurice Gulliiams, commercial art student here, has completed the layout for a Come To San Francisco brochure, to be distributed to teachers colleges on a nation-wide scale, according to William J. Eckert, commercial art instructor here.

Most of the photographs which are included in the brochure, depicting various phases of college life, were taken by members of the photography department, making the production almost a 100 percent effort on the part of this college, Eckert said.

Ward Nichols, personnel director of the San Francisco Board of Education and former faculty member here, for whom the folder is being produced, said this advertising of educational techniques, pay and pension scales, is being distributed to satisfy queries asking for specific information concerning the advantages to be secured by college graduates who are considering a teaching career in one of San Francisco's public schools.

"Many people are not aware of the acute shortage of qualified instructors we have in the bay area, and with the number of students enrolling in schools increasing at all levels, drastic action is necessary on our part," Nichols said.

More About Associated Student May Elections

Jones, Shelley Osborne and Rich Pels.

On May 18 letters will be sent to all AS card holders announcing the names of the candidates vieing for the student offices. The letter will also contain a sample ballot, Aanonsen explained.

Candidates may put up five posters not exceeding 14 by 22 inches, and may also print handbills but these must be passed out by hand, Aanonsen declared. All posters and handbills must be approved by Aanonsen before they may be distributed.

Aanonsen again stressed the fact that the election cannot be a success without every AS cardholder voting. Voting will be done by machines to be set up in the Science Building, Cloud Hall, and Smith Hall, Aanonsen said.

The first college extension courses granting college credits were offered by the University of Chicago in 1893.

Election Polls To Open On Friday

Fraternity Statement

If I am elected to the high position of President of the Associated Students of City College it will be my aim to strive to promote a more self-governing body, truly representative of all students and groups without bias or favor to any.

I will endeavor to initiate a program to elevate the college before the eyes of similar colleges during our term as host to the next State Conference Convention in Fall of 1957.

I shall try to dispatch all the functions of office in the most expeditious means under the constitution of the Associated Students of this college, in a harmonious manner with the elected and appointed officers of the administration.

I believe the record of past offices I have held will show that efficient handling of affairs and a spirit of co-operation have prevailed during my term of office.

BILL DRISCOLL

BILL DRISCOLL, Fraternity candidate for AS President.

MIKE MONTEITH, Independent candidate for AS President.

Independent Statement

As the Independent candidate for Associated Student President, I wish to represent 100 per cent of you, the Associated Students. This would mean representation of the association by qualified, unselfish and willing students.

While serving as Freshman President and currently as your Associated Men Student President, I have seen the need for more privileges for the AS member, a need for an association for veterans and more activities for all students. We have progressed in these fields, but more can be done.

Next semester will be a very important semester at City College. With the right kind of representation, the college can attain the same recognition in our community as the four-year colleges and universities in this area.

In the coming semester I pledge myself to work in the best interests of the Associated Students.

Record Field Of 46 Candidates In Race For AS Posts; Three Day Voting Hints Big Turnout

By Jacquie Waite

With Bill Driscoll and Mike Monteith running a close race for the office of Associated Student President and leading a record field of 46 candidates, a large percentage of the 2,000 eligible voters here is expected at the polls Friday, May 24; Monday, May 27, and Tuesday, May 28.

Voting will be by machine, and locations of the polls are the Science Building, where one will be centrally located on each floor by the main stairwell; at the entrance to the library, the entrance to the cafeteria and the bookstore in Smith Hall.

This election marks the return of the Inter-Fraternity party after a two-year period. The IFC candidate for President is Driscoll, who is IFC president this semester.

Monteith heads the Independent ticket in this election. This semester he served as President of the Associated Men Students.

Beverly Schroth, Independent, and Sal D'Angelo, IFC candidate, are staging a battle for the office of AS Vice-President. Miss Schroth is this semester's Inter-Sorority Council president.

Darlene Enfield, Independent, and Shirley Greenberg, IFC candidate, are vying for the office of Associated Women Student President. Both women have worked for the AWS this semester.

Brower Dimond, Independent, this semester's Finance Chairman, and Bob Rodriguez, IFC, both hope to hold the office of AMS President next semester.

Next semester's Sophomore class will be led by either Art Paul, Independent; Jerry Engelhaupt, IFC, or Bob Wendt, who are all trying for the office of Sophomore Class President, while Freddie Hicks, Independent, and Lee Belland, IFC, are both hoping to become Freshman Class President.

Both the sophomore and the freshman sections of the council have large groups vying for the seven seats specified for each class.

Hugh Aanonsen, election commissioner, was unable to determine the ticket affiliation of all council candidates, some of whose petitions were

Candidates To Speak At Friday's Rally

Candidates for major Associated Student offices will give their campaign speeches at a special election rally this Friday during college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m., in the cafeteria, according to Hugh Aanonsen, election commissioner.

Speeches that will be delivered are for the offices of AS President, Vice-President, Associated Men Student President, Associated Women Student President, and Sophomore and Freshman Class Presidents.

All those competing for the Student Council will be introduced, since the purpose of the rally is to acquaint students with the candidates.

Aanonsen urged all students to attend to get a clearer perspective of the candidates and the issues.

The college band will fill out the program by playing at the beginning and at the end of the rally, Aanonsen stated.

Campus Cops Win First Place Trophy At Oakland Match

City College's Campus Police pistol teams won their first trophy by taking first place in matches held at the Oakland Pistol Club on May 5, according to Robert Ford, chief of Campus Police.

Pointing out that the teams have only been in existence for two years, Ford also stressed that competition consisted of California Highway Patrolmen and sheriff department and municipal policemen from Northern California.

Team number two won the first place trophy with a team total of 1037. Members of this team are Marion Timm who scored 250, Louie Pagliarani 277, Robert Ford 261, and Ralph Brown 249.

Team number one took third place with a team score of 1016. Members of this team are James Keane 261, Raymon Nielsen 260, Fred Fitzgerald 249 and Tom Severson 246.

"Eight medals were won by individual marksmen in this and other events," Ford stated.

On June 1 and 2, the pistol teams will compete in the Western Revolver Association Grand Aggregate Revolver competition. Two teams will shoot in the 22 caliber match, two will shoot in the 38 caliber matches, and one in the .45 caliber match, according to Ford.

35 San Francisco High School Student Leaders Expected Here Tomorrow For Prep Day Affair

Thirty-five student leaders from seven San Francisco public high schools will be welcomed here tomorrow for Prep Day activities, according to Metta Weddleton, vice-president of the Associated Students.

High school guests from Lowell, Washington, Balboa, Lincoln, Galileo, Mission, and Polytechnic will start the day at 9 a.m. with an orientation period in the library. Here the students will be informed by members of the Associated Students of the various courses, organizations and activities offered at the college.

Following this period, the high school students will be divided into separate groups of five each and taken on a tour of the college by selected guides from the AS.

After touring the different departments, the guest students will be given the opportunity to visit a class of their choice from 11 a.m. to 12 noon, Miss Weddleton added.

Lunch will be served in the faculty dining room at noon, and will be followed with a short talk by George Effenberger, assistant to the District Manager of the Kaiser Aluminum Company. Effenberger's talk will deal with two-year colleges.

Highlight of the day will be the presentation of City College scholarships to three high school seniors, and the awarding of a Denman Scholarship to a woman student presently enrolled at the college who is a graduate of a San Francisco public high school. The other scholarships to be awarded are the $150 McGlade Scholarship, the Women's Real Estate Board Scholarship of $100, and the $50 Chinese Students Scholarship.

Members of the welcoming committee will be Beverly Castellacci, Freddie Hicks, John Kelly, Beverly Schroth, Elise Laubscher, Carol Olson, Debbie Rudser, Ellie Smith and Metta Weddleton.

"The purpose of the Prep Day is to enlighten high school seniors as to the educational benefits available at the college, and to help undecided students make up their mind about college," Miss Weddleton said.

No Lofty Phrases Here; Just A Proposal To Get Out The Vote

EACH SEMESTER at election time here, it has been, and still is, the policy of this newspaper to comment editorially concerning the lack of student interest in this event.

Lofty phrases are purposely employed in an attempt to induce students to take an active part. "Important function" and "precious possession" and "disappointing student apathy" are usually sprinkled liberally throughout these editorials.

Then, the editor who has written the editorial looks at the finished product critically, and hopes very optimistically that his work will have some positive result.

"This can't fail to be successful," he muses. "I've pointed out to the students their shortcomings as voters. Now that they know their faults, they will probably turn out en masse at the polls."

When the election is over and the votes are counted, however, it is found that his work had little, if any, result. For instance, the total votes cast last semester represented only about 25 per cent of the eligible student voters.

Since a student newspaper is supposed to be an influence for its student body, this result is rather frustrating each time. To avoid frustration this semester, we will depart from our usual election editorial theme. Instead, we would like to offer a possible solution to achieve a better election turnout.

We would venture to guess that the majority of Associated Student members here belong to a campus club, organization, or group of one type or another. At the hub of all campus activities is the Student Council—and here is where the important part of our solution begins.

The leaders of most student activities will all be present at the council meeting tomorrow, and these leaders should be impressed by council with the importance of the election.

Then, if these campus leaders will carry this thought to the students whom they represent, a chain reaction of interest will result.

A "Get Out The Vote Committee" might also be appointed by the council to circulate about the campus and assist in publicizing the election and the election rally. The rally is an especially important factor—if more students attend and "get to know" the candidates, more votes will be cast.

These suggestions will prove effective only if each group realizes its part and carries it out. Council should supervise by checking with the groups at next Tuesday's session. Each of the group leaders should have, by this time, thoroughly impressed his respective group with the importance of the election.

If council decides to give these suggestions a try, and if they are successful—as we feel sure they will be—they will have accomplished an end result never before achieved here.

Latin America Fiesta

IRC Show Draws Together Talent From 14 South Of Border Nations

Smith Hall became a piece of south-of-the-border land for one night, when an audience of 600, including newspapermen, photographers, 16 Latin American consuls to San Francisco, music, songs, dances and displays by student-performers in the Fiesta Latino Americana participated the cabaret-decorated place's colorful transformation.

Originally scheduled for 90 minutes' duration, the revue lasted two hours, with a cast of 60 men and women skillfully representing modern and native numbers from 14 nations of the hemisphere.

Migueilto Clarque, professional Cuban dancer attending the college, in his interpretation of an Afro-Cuban ritual; Julio Menjivar, Princesa, Pastor Valle and Daisy Loasiga doing the Cha-Cha-Cha; Jose Velez and Sagrario Baltodano in a Dominican Republic's Merengue, and Sergio Carmona and Lydia Cabezas dancing a mambo, "rocked" the place the Latin way for the highlights.

As a special attraction of the night, Hilda Losada, from the Argentine, swayed and tapped with utmost perfection to a Flamenco number, with the Guatemalan representation offering the public an authentic Indian dance.

Display cases gave the eye views from Nicaraguan and Peruvian cities, native costumes and products, while the students from El Salvador, headed by Tancho Diaz, made tamales, enchiladas and other well-prepared typical foods, the round-off-point of a successful show.

Held for the first time here, the Latin American Festival has struck acceptance from out-of-the-college organizations that the whole troupe has been requested during the semester for presentations at the Cow Palace, University of California at Berkeley, Mill Valley's Old Mill School, and Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Proceeds from the Fiesta Latino Americana, Joseph Jacobsen, sponsor of the International Relations Club, said, will go to the IRC's scholarship fund for foreign students.

The first swimming pool in the White House, Washington, D. C., was built by popular subscription. It was located in the west terrace of the mansion and is 50 feet long, 15 feet wide, with a depth ranging from 4 to 8 feet.

Nowadays, it seems you have to be an adult to enjoy the western series on TV.

Almost every western is advertised and exploited as being adult. People sometimes wonder whatever happened to the good old days when the good guy always got the bad guy plus the girl.

Gunsmoke fits into this adult category. For Junior, right must be clearly differentiated from wrong. This is not always the case in Gunsmoke. An adult realizes the psychological aspects of the plot. A child doesn't.

Sometimes, the episode ends tragically. This is a definite departure from the traditional happy ending where the hero rides off into the gathering dust, on his horse, of course.

If you still aren't satisfied it is an adult western, take a look at the commercial. Would L&M cigarettes sponsor the Lone Ranger?

For those who like a little Freud slipped in, there is Wyatt Earp. Some of the characters exhibit psychopathic tendencies.

The newest character for the viewer to try to figure out is Doc Holliday. He seems to be a combination of Jack the Ripper and Santa Claus.

Wyatt Earp is good viewing, in spite of the fact some of the characters are actually weird. Hugh O'Brien is convincing in the role of the notorious Earp.

Broken Arrow is at the other extreme. The good guy is all good, and the bad guy is all bad. It's refreshing to watch this type for a change.

The bad guy is mean and a killer not because he was inhibited as a child, but because the script says he is.

Wells Fargo also attempts this kind of production, but fails miserably. The dialogue went out with the original Tom Mix. Dale Robertson is good, but with the material given him, even he cannot save the show.

The Gun Panner is the newest adult western being filmed. It is described as "an adult western children will enjoy having explained to them."

From DP Camp To College

Yugoslavian Student Enrolled Here As Mechanical Engineering Major

Europe during the early 1940's was no desirable place to be, yet millions of people did the best they could, on what they could. Most of these people had one thought in mind—to get out of Europe.

Among the more fortunate families who were put into Displaced Person Camps were Cyrill Glushkoff and his parents. Glushkoff, now a fourth semester student at the college, saw a dream come true when he reached the United States in 1949.

Four years of waiting after World War II in a DP camp in Austria and the Glushkoffs had finally reached the United States. Since this time they have been residents of California.

The 27 years of Glushkoff's life have been anything but inactive. During the war the family moved from place to place trying to escape the ever-growing closer front of the enemy. Moving from Belgrade to Poland after it was bombed by the Germans, and being bombed in Poland by the Russians, the Glushkoff family witnessed many of the terrors of war that the United States only hears about. They lived in Yugoslavia, Germany, Czechoslovakia, Poland, and finally Austria.

Glushkoff was still in high school when his family moved to the United States. He attended many different high schools in Europe, but he did not actually graduate from the twelfth grade. His grade average and the courses that he had completed, however, allowed him to enter the college in 1955.

After one semester here he entered the Army for two years, during his tour of duty he was sent (that's right) to Europe. While he was there he returned to the DP camp where he had earlier spent the four years. "It had all changed so much, and only the old, and the ones who had nowhere to go were still there," Glushkoff said. While he was in Europe he went to Berlin. "I was shaking in my boots while I was in Berlin," he said. "My name is very Russian."

He speaks four languages—Russian,

CYRILL GLUSHKOFF.

Yugoslavian, German, Polish, and a little French.

Glushkoff married when he came back from the service. His wife, although he met her in the United States, is from Poland and of Russian descent. She graduated from University of California and is now employed as a bacteriologist. His future plans include continuation of his mechanical engineering major at U. C.

During the interview Glushkoff was asked what his first thoughts were when he arrived in the United States in 1949. He said, "The ship we came here on docked at New Orleans. It reminded me of Mark Twain's books. As we headed toward the dock I felt as though I would see Tom Sawyer sitting on the bank somewhere."

Revolution Seen As Grammarians Predict Uniform English Language

In 1780 Noah Webster predicted that someday the English language would be uniform, and today, some 368 years later, grammarians still predict a uniform English language.

Today's trend is not only toward uniformity but also toward a system by which words would be spelt as they sound. To the modern generation this "revolution" would be quite difficult to adjust to, but for their children and grandchildren it would be the only correct way.

Of course, the change of a practice used for centuries would not come about in a matter of months, or even years. Textbooks would have to be rewritten, instructors would have to be reconstructed, dictionaries would have to be re-edited so that the new spelling could be found, and any number of other changes would have to be made.

Grammarians would then stress the dropping of double consonants, and the unpronounced letters such as k, p, and other silent letters; ed at the end of a word might possibly be changed to t.

The main trouble with this theory is that if so revolutionary a change were to come about the language could never become uniform.

Maybe the English language had better stay just the way it is, and the grammarians should go back to making it uniform. As students in G-English courses can well tell, it's difficult enough to learn the language the way it is, and new reforms would land most college graduates right back where they started.

Ugly Man

A Phi O Contest Raises Funds For Medical Center

Centuries from now when historians attempt to list the characteristics of Americans of the 20th century, humor and generosity will be high on the list. Americans are known for their many charities and their sense of humor, which admittedly appears warped at times.

If the grey-haired historian delves deeply into this subject, his research will find the college the perfect example to prove his point. Because of his findings a professor will stand in front of a class, probably in front of a TV camera, and cite how a contest at City College of San Francisco in 1957 proved that Americans were generous and possessed a sense of humor.

"They had an Ugly Man Contest to raise funds for City of Hope National Medical Center," he'll add as an afterthought. "This is a good example of what I've been saying." Why? And before anyone can reply he'll state, "Because none of the contestants was ugly!" and with a chuckle he'll further state, "Well, not any uglier than the rest of the species."

This will end his lecture on the social habits of early atomic age Americans.

Later, when further excavation is done on the location where the college once was, a weary archaeologist will discover a yellow piece of paper and written on it the names Ray Herrick, Gus Davis, John Dunn, Howard Klein, Larry Vargo, Bob Rodriguez, Hal Dimond, Bill Driscoll, Ron Daher, Vern Huth and Gordon Beal.

After much investigation, scientists will theorize that this scrap of paper was the list of contestants for the Ugly Man Contest but the result of the contest will remain a mystery for coming generations to unravel.

Two centuries from now where in a dimly lit cellar two bearded intellectuals discuss the 20th century, one will mention an Ugly Man Contest to prove that Americans used humor to further their generosity."

The other will mention the City of Hope National Medical Center that boasts, and justly so, that no patient treated there has ever paid for the care and medical treatment given. The City of Hope, a nation-wide organization specializing in the treatment and care of cancer, leukemia, tuberculosis and heart disease, is supported by contributions and volunteer services.

BIG RAZZLE-DAZZLE deal for the Sophomore ball this time. Sophomore President Gordon Beal intends to make the Colonial Room down at the St. Francis rock a little with some extra (besides Maury Wolohan's band) outside entertainment. In addition a Grand March will be staged just before the coronation of the K and Q.

Dress for the dance will be semi-formal, BUT Beal hastens to warn that anyone coming to the ball attired in a dinner jacket over jeans will be summarily ejected. They might even be requested to leave.

THE NOISE coming from the vicinity of the fountain during the lunch hour last Wednesday was from some members of the A Cappella Choir having an "iced-tea bust" and trying to whip some of their repertoire (Bloody Mary, etc.) into shape.

GENE CRAFT, Ram baseball catcher and football star, has caught every league game the Rams have played. Noted for his speed in both sports, the 155-pound star is generally considered to be one of the best catchers in the Big Eight.

MIKE REID, shown throwing the discus, has been a top point-getter for the Rams during the regular season and was one of the seven City College tracksmen entered in the Northern California Meet.

Top Versatile Athlete Gene Craft Sparks Footballers; Possible Pick For All-Conference Baseball Team

One of the more versatile athletes harbored by the college this year is the outstanding football halfback and baseball catcher, Gene Craft. A product of Galileo High School, Craft received honorable mention on the All-City teams in three major sports, football, basketball and baseball.

Last fall Craft led the Ram football squad in scoring and yards gained. Racking up a total of 565 yards, Craft averaged 7.7 yards per carry, scoring five touchdowns. His flashy brokenfield running accounted for scoring sprees of 60 and 70 yards.

Turning toward baseball this semester, Craft has caught all of the Rams' league games this year. In the first game of the season against Santa Rosa, a clutch hit by Craft in the ninth inning exploded into an eight-run rally for the Rams, sending the game into extra innings and aiding the team to a final 13-9 victory.

In the crucial Modesto games, Craft again was a main figure, batting in one of the two runs scored by the Rams in the second game and advancing teammate Ray Bower to scoring position by drawing a base on balls. A followup single by Bill Flanagan gave the Rams their second tally.

At Stockton, Craft's catching ability and handling of pitchers drew plaudits from Mustang Coach Don Hall, who claimed that Craft was one of the best catchers he had seen this season.

A hard man to pitch to because of his small size, Craft drew numerous walks throughout the baseball campaign. It is also his ability to get down low in a crouch that prompted one umpire to remark that Craft was the easiest catcher he had worked behind.

He is also a threat on the base paths and along with Bower gives the Rams two of the fastest runners in the Big Eight.

Culminating his duties behind the plate with the San Mateo games last week, Craft looms as a possible All-Conference choice.

RA Fencing Team Loses To Lincoln

Recreation Association's fencing team was narrowly defeated by the visiting Lincoln High fencing team last May 9. The losing bout was lost by John Kelly, who dislocated his shoulder during the contest.

In preparation for a fencing meet with San Francisco State on Thursday, May 23, the fencing team has been practicing during the evenings.

Four RA members acted as hostesses at the annual Northern California tennis matches held at Golden Gate Park last Friday and Saturday, May 17, 18. They were Joyce Anderson, Carol Goldenberg, Carol Herman, Norene Philips and Margaret Saba.

Last Sunday, 28 women from RA's modern dance group participated in the annual pageant type play held on Mount Tamalpais, which is the world's largest outdoor theater. The choreography for their three dances was arranged by Lene Johnson, RA sponsor. Proceeds of the play go to the state fund to keep up the trails in Mount Tamalpais State Park.

Golfers Second In Conference, Vie For State Titles

Two conference matches marked the golf team's calendar the past two weeks, one the Big Eight match at Stockton, and the second the state conference meet at San Diego.

At Stockton Friday and Saturday, May 10 and 11, the Ram golfers played their normal game, which landed a second place berth in league standings.

Normal playing form wasn't good enough for the conference outing, though, since the Rams failed to place on either of the two teams.

Coach Grover Klemmer explained that the Big Eight match is an individual rather than a team effort. An attempt is made here to find the best six golfers in the league and the best man to qualify in each of the positions on a regular five-man golf team.

Outstanding for the Ram team were Larry Barr and Mike Evans, whom Klemmer described as playing their best games of the season. Barr shot a 73 the first day before failing back to an 81 on Saturday.

Last Sunday and Monday the Rams' top four golfers journeyed to San Diego for the State Meet. The men included Don McDowell, Frank Hubert, Barr and Evans.

Two Ram Netters Qualify For Finals

Two City College tennis players, Nick Scharf and Vic Saschin, qualified for the State Championships, which were held in Golden Gate Park May 17 and 18, with results unavailable at press time.

In the North Section Championships held on May 10 and 11 at Visalia, Scharf defeated Bill Cowan of Hartnell College, 6-4, 6-4, in the first round. After defeating the College of Sequoia entrant in the second round, Scharf was defeated by Ed Panui of Modesto, 6-0, 6-4, in the quarter-finals.

In the doubles, Scharf and Saschin defeated Jim Bean and George Powers of San Mateo, 7-5, 6-2, in the first round. In the quarter-finals, Saschin and Scharf were defeated by Panui and John Le Maitre of Modesto, 6-1, 7-5. Both Scharf and Saschin have qualified for the state finals.

Next season, City College should have the strongest tennis team it has ever had, Coach Roy Diederichsen believes. Return of such veterans as Scharf, Jim Howard and Saschin, accompanied by Fred Waters, a good netter who was ineligible this year because of the transfer rule, may make the difference, Diederichsen added.

The first baseball team was the Knickerbocker Club of New York. Its first game was played at Hoboken in 1846.

Qualifying Track Men Will Enter All-State Meet

Modesto took over as host for the Northern California Meet, which was originally set for Santa Rosa last Saturday, after the Santa Rosa meet was canceled because of rain. Trackmen qualifying at Modesto will participate in the All-State Meet to be held at the same locale this Saturday.

The Modesto meet was held last night and the results will appear in next week's issue of The Guardsman. Those participating in the Northern California meet include members of the Big Eight who placed in the first four positions at the Stockton All-Conference Meet.

With the exception of Bob Hammond, who is now with the U. S. Army, City College trackmen who qualified at Stockton and subsequently journeyed to Modesto include:

Record-holding high jumper and pole vaulter Wilfred Gasper, who boasts a season best jump of 6-5½ and a vault of 13 feet; and Steve Pickney, who qualified in the quarter-mile and holds a best seasonal time of 88.5.

Blake Westman, who replaced Eddie Chavez in the two-mile, Chavez, City College's top two-miler, didn't attend the Stockton trials, but his teammate Westman went on to place in the first four.

Talented James Thomas qualified in the 120 high hurdles, the 220 low hurdles, the high jump and the mile relay.

Mike Reid, one of the top discus throwers in the Big Eight, qualified easily in his event. Dick Atkins went along as broadjumper and Pete Morgan in the shot-put.

Also qualifying was the four-man college relay team, three members of which have broken 50 seconds during the season. The team, which was nosed out by Modesto at Stockton, is made up of lead off man Don Nasser, and quarter-milers James Thomas, Steve Pickney and Les Richter.

Rain Interrupts Soph-Prof Drills For Annual Fray

Rains during the past two weeks have limited the practice sessions of both the faculty and sophomore softball clubs. Practice games have been postponed, but otherwise all are in pretty good shape and awaiting the crucial tilt which will be played on Friday, May 31, during a double college hour.

Both clubs are hoping for sunny skies to prevail on the day of the game. The sophs figure that wet grounds will hamper their slower rivals and should the profs lose on such an occasion they might use the slow diamond as an excuse for the upset.

The rivalry between these two teams is growing and whether it's rain or shine, all fans should be in for a wild and woolly contest. Meanwhile, the profs have said that they could beat the sophs in any kind of weather, including snow.

It is rumored that Gordon Beal, soph manager, has enlisted the aid of a sideline coach to help steal the opposition's signals. Referred to as "Glorious Q. Eyeball," the sign stealer will join the squad as soon as he is able to receive probation.

A third base coach has not been named as yet but Beal has high hopes of getting John Fenworthy Dillinger. Dillinger is noted for his ability to run very fast and leading others to do the same. He is still running, in fact, and prison warden Peter Lorreford says that he's the fastest man alive.

The instructors have also announced that they have added another slugger to their "Murderer's Row." He is Tom "Terrible Trojan" Dutcher, who is either an outfielder or first baseman. Dutcher is noted for his long ball hitting and his big bat should bolster the already strong faculty hitting department.

The profs had to postpone a practice game last Tuesday because of rain. They were scheduled to meet an always tough Spanish-American War Veterans' Wives' Club team, but the tilt was moved ahead a week, and the results will be published in the next edition of The Guardsman.

Ted Williams, in the first three games of the 1955 season, made four hits in this order: single, double, triple and then a home run.

Baseballers Shut Out Twice By San Mateo In Final Conference Games; Lyttle Has .400 Mark

By Nick Peters

Superior pitching led to the downfall of the Rams at the hands of San Mateo's Bulldogs in a duo of games on May 14 and 16, as the college team lost the home contest at Nealon, 3-0, and the Peninsula affair, 2-0.

The twin loss, chalked up as a result of Reggie Christmas' five-hitter and Ron Krieger's six-hit shutout, left the Rams with a final 5-9 won-lost record in Big Eight Conference play.

Krieger's masterpiece dealt Ram mound ace Bob Bandettini a tough loss, since the stocky college flinger pitched a four-hitter himself. San Mateo bunched its four hits, which were consecutive singles, in the seventh for their two tallies. Krieger allowed two hits in an inning but once—in the seventh canto after two were out.

Centerfielder Bill Flanagan and righthelder Blair LeMire paced the scoreless Ram attack with two hits apiece.

Freshman Christmas was at his best at Nealon, striking out eight and coming through in the clutch to win, 3-0. In the fifth with first baseman Roger Ferrari on third via a triple and one away, he proceeded to strike out Gene Craft and Francis Brinkley with his speedy fastball.

Losing hurler Flanagan, although allowing 12 safeties, kept the scoring at a minimum, holding the Bulldogs to three tallies. Bulldog second baseman Bob Freschi was the leading hitter, getting three for three.

Leading Ram hitter for the season was outfielder - first baseman Brian Lyttle, who slugged the horseside at a .400 clip (12 for 30). Medaglia and Flanagan followed with .350 and .320, respectively. LeMire, last season's leader, and slugger Tom Roper tied for the fourth spot at .293.

Freshman infielder Ray Bower scored the most runs (10), while Roper was leading in RBI's (14), homers (2), and was co-champion in doubles (2) and triples (1). Bob Bandettini was the top hurler by an easy margin, winning the most games (4) and having one of the best earned run averages in the league.

Dads View Nine Boxing Matches At AMS Smoker

Boxing highlighted the Associated Men Student Smoker on Wednesday, May 8, with nine interesting bouts presented to the crowd consisting of AMS members and their fathers, as part of the highly successful Dads' Night program.

Announcer Sid Phelan started the ball rolling with the introduction of the 120-lb. clash. The decision of Judges Grover Glemmer, Lee Elsan, and Alex Schwarz, with the added vote of Referee Al Woo, gave the nod to Carlos Orrige over Ben Vitales in the first three-round encounter. In the 126-lb. class, Yasef Mirza outpointed Nick Tohey and Kim Yee whipped Roger Moreno in the 132-lb. fray.

The 139-lb. battle produced a win for Bill Mirabelli over Ed Bolman. Vince Filipello, who subsequently won the outstanding boxer award for his tremendous glovework, unanimously decisioned Gorwen Fong in the 146-lb. division. Ed Hirley bested Richard Montserrat in the clash of 153-pounders.

A draw, the only one of the evening, was recorded in the 160-lb. go between Rurich Bunge and Jim Wallace. Bunge was the recipient of an award for being the "Fightingest" Fighter. The 170-lb. champ was John Ferris as a result of his conquest of Joe Ashley.

Heavyweights Jerry Mulligan and Mike Curley fought a very close battle with Curley being crowned king of his class. The Dads' Night program, in its ninth year at the college, was completely successful. Masters of Ceremonies Brower Dimond and Bill Driscoll conducted the program, which included entertainment, with comparative ease.

RAMBLINGS

Shoeless Joe Jackson Troubled By Big Toes

By Lou Lucia

KEEP it a secret but we recently found out that Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb and Tris Speaker all struck out at least once, although according to some of the old timers around, these players never did any wrong. This is not a jibe at the abovementioned horseshiders for they are all-time greats.

Old-timers will say, "Well, of course they did, for they were hitting against the emery ball, the spitter, and the ball wasn't as lively today." Yet they'll declaim the current crop of pitchers who have to throw that very same "live" ball and win 20 games while doing it.

Told as a humorous story is one where "Shoeless" Joe Jackson often had to wait on one side of a train that went right through the outfield while the ball was lying on the other side. Also, he sometimes had toe trouble with glass and rocks in the outfield. This was surely a help to the dead ball hitters.

Today's infields are cleaned of rocks and pebbles so that infield grounders won't take bad hops. We'll give 100-1 odds that the early diamonds were not combed clean and many base hits were added to the averages on account of this.

Of course, things are much simpler now. All Ted Williams or Stan Musial have to do to get a home run is simply to stick the bat out or bunt and the ball will go zooming over the fence. Infielders no longer have to run after baseballs; just dial in the right wavelength and the ball will plop right into their big mitts.

They are going to bring the fences into the infield and crowd all seven fielders around the pitcher. Naturally, when "Home Run" Baker smashed the ball to smithereens while bashing his nine home runs in 1911 to lead the league, the fences were 1,000 feet away, and had walls 200 feet high! Those were the days! (The days of what?)

In those slightly tarnished "golden" days only one umpire sometimes worked a game. One writer related the story of an ump who had to stand behind the pitcher and brought all the extra baseballs out with him and piled them behind the pitcher's mound. The next batter lined a drive into the midst of them and as the balls flew in different directions he rounded the bases fo[illegible]. The umpire had to rule it that way for he didn't know which ball was the one the batter hit.

Of course if Mickey Mantle only hits a 320-foot homer they seem to forget this 90-foot 6-inch home run, or the one that fell on one side of the tracks as "Shoeless" Joe Jackson was picking glass out of his feet and waiting for the train to pass by, or the one that took a bad hop out of the infield and rolled to the outfield while the opposing outfielder was being chased by a bull from a nearby pasture.

As we said before, we're for giving credit to the all-time greats but meanwhile, we don't want the old timers to undermine the present crop of ballplayers.

Cloud Hall Photo Exhibit Features Debut By Four Outstanding Students; Series To Continue Through June 14

By Kaj Kristoffersen

Currently on view in a new photo gallery area, located by the faculty offices in Cloud Hall, is the first in a series of photo exhibits which will continue through June 14, according to Emmet E. Smith, art and photo instructor in charge of the shows.

Design In Living, an exhibit by Carol Jean Harley, inaugurated the series yesterday. Miss Harley's exhibit, described as "decorative fragments abstracted from everyday objects, and candids of children," will be shown until May 24.

Photo debuts by four outstanding students, including Miss Harley, are included in the current series which is sponsored by the college photography department.

"The photos to be shown are not in the nature of routine class assignments," Smith pointed out, "but are independent creative productions on the part of each exhibitor in a bid for artistic recognition."

Other exhibits will include The City Dweller, to be presented by Lorin Hamlin from May 27 to May 31; Nature in the Precise Eye, by Richard Brooks, to be shown during the week of June 3; and Studies in Low Key, to be presented by Richard Gray during the week of June 10, Smith announced.

Featured as an additional attraction, prints from the work of a special guest exhibitor will be included in a separate section of the series. Titled Experiments, by Wolfgang Pianz, this first American showing by the Austrian artist will be displayed from May 21 to June 7, Smith said.

Completing the semester series will be a section titled Best of the Year, during which a miscellany of student work in the various class assignments will be presented by the photography classes. It will be shown from June 10 until June 14.

The gallery area will be open while classes are in session and on Wednesday nights from 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m., Smith further stated, adding that the program, if successful, will be continued next semester.

Organizations In Fervor Of Final Activity Plans

By Mary Ann Bogart

SOCIAL LIFE has returned to the campus with its usual amount of preparations, filling the calendars of the campus clubs and organizations with joint meetings, dances, pledge dinners, basketball games, swimming parties and teas.

Lambda Phi was kept busy last week bringing into their activities a joint meeting at Marvelmar with Delta Psi and a beach party with Phi Beta Rho.

Beta Tau, new IFC basketball champions, trampled Phi Beta Delta in a 51-25 victory match held last week. A meeting was held Monday evening at Ken Riehter's house to complete plans for victory over the Chinese Club basketball team for the AMS title.

Le Chateau was the setting for a formal pledge dinner-dance given by Alpha Sigma Delta. Furnishing the music for the affair was the Stephan Paul Trio.

Newly elected Beta Phi Beta officers supervising the work for the Golden Slipper dance this Friday are Walt Schultz, chairman; Bill Driscoll, tickets and tallies; Jim Ryan, refreshments and coats, and Frank Rodgers, delegated to arrange a surprise presentation.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity had a very successful booth and float at the May Festival. Plans are now being made for the pledge dinner, to be held Saturday at the Flor d'Italia Restaurant. Pins will be presented to eight pledges at that time.

Phi Beta Rho had their annual Parents' Tea last Tuesday in the faculty dining room, giving the parents an opportunity to see the sorority in action. Entertainment furnished by the sorority sisters included Elvera Steiner singing Out Of My Dreams, accompanied by Margie Schiller; a calypso number by Ellie Benton and Renada Marston, and an interpretative mambo by Shirley Stortz.

Zeta Chi sorority women were guests of their sponsor, Ruth Inskipp, at a swimming party Sunday, held in Sleepy Hollow, Marin County. This seemed to fulfill the desire for relaxation sorely needed after the many hours of work put in on the May Festival.

The Engineering Society extends an invitation to its members to meet the faculty and fellow engineers at a student-faculty dinner to be held Wednesday, May 29, at the Colonial Inn. Officers should be contacted for those desiring further information.

Dental Students Awarded Caps At Ceremony

Ruth Inskipp, dental instructor here, presented eight dental assistant students with their caps in capping ceremonies in Smith Hall last night. Receiving their caps were Barbara Benetti, Connie Fong, Dianne Hillaman, Margie Mattos, Carol Melodia, Shirley Stortz, Victoria Yu and Barbara Zook.

To meet the two years of the required dental training, the dental student curriculum includes courses in dental anatomy, techniques, chairside assistance, radiography, office procedures and practical clinic experience.

Opportunities for observing dental procedures used by the University of California Dental College and the Dental College of Physicians and Surgeons are given to each student during the training period.

In reviewing the salary of a dental nurse, Mrs. Inskipp stated the dentist is continually observing the amount of interest and the progress of his assistant.

She added that as the dental assistant becomes more familiar and adept in applying the dentist's methods, her salary will increase.

Pointing out that a dental assistant's training goes beyond laboratory techniques, Mrs. Inskipp stated that office work is an important feature of dentistry. The nurse must be an accountant in addition to her other duties, since part of her work is in assuming the role of a secretary.

Personality, according to Mrs. Inskipp, is an important part of the nurse's character. She went on to say, "Students interested in being dental nurses should have a pleasant disposition, be of medium stature, sympathetic and able to assume responsibility."

Capra's Hemo To Be Shown Friday

Hemo The Magnificent, last of the college hour film series this semester, will be shown in S-136 this Friday, May 24, Madison Devlin, audio-visual aids instructor here announced yesterday.

"The film provides a glimpse into the organization of the blood," Devlin said. "It takes the student on an amusing trip through a microscope to visit the different cells."

Narrated by Richard Carlson and Dr. Frank Baxter, noted Shakespearean expert, it tells the story of blood from the time of ancient man to present day scientific knowledge, Devlin said.

"Equal in quality with Our Mr. Sun, shown here recently, the film is sure to be enjoyed by all," Devlin commented.

It was presented on television two months ago and is filmed in color with animation, Devlin said. "The college is fortunate to procure this movie, which was just released and is still in great demand," he pointed out.

When Our Mr. Sun was shown last month, there was a record attendance of 275. Devlin announced that students wishing to see Hemo The Magnificent should come early.

The film was produced for the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company as the second of four in their scientific series.

The first submarine built for the United States was the Plunger, which was completed in 1897. She was 85 feet in length, almost 12 feet in diameter and had a displacement of 168 tons.

Effenberger was AS President in Fall 1953 and actually originated Prep Day—the day on which the student officers of all San Francisco public high schools are invited to the college. After his graduation in 1953, Effenberger attended the University of California and Stanford Law School. (See Prep Day story, page 1.)

Crime Scenes Re-Enacted

Campus Police Search For Body

Glendora, a mannequin used by the Criminology Department here to re-enact crime scenes, was the object of much concern recently.

Lloyd Hill and Geraldine Rush, students of the police photography class, were instructed to take Glendora to the woods near Smith Hall, reconstruct a crime scene and photograph the same.

While in the process of doing this, they were closely observed by an unidentified student, who suddenly whirled and started a fast sprint across the campus, running rapidly until he found Officer Phillip Payton of the Campus Police and Fred Fitzgerald, head of the criminology department.

Fitzgerald stopped, said, "You go, Officer Payton, I haven't got a gun." Payton questioned Hill and Miss Rush and concluded that no crime had actually been committed. End of case.

Fitzgerald warned all students that for the next few weeks, Glendora will be frequently seen about the campus.

Three Coeds Here Qualify For Finals In Miss SF Contest, Make Bid For City Title At Fairmont Tomorrow

By Denny Delman

Three coeds here came through the semi-finals of the annual Miss San Francisco Pageant last week, to enter the final judging for the bay city title at the Terrace Room of the Fairmont Hotel tomorrow night at 8 p.m.

Audrey Bocek, Jo Cataffo and Shirley Payton amassed enough points at the Junior Chamber of Commerce sponsored contest to join six others in the finals.

Judging throughout the pageant was based on three separate items, each carrying an equal amount of weight. The contestants first paraded before the audience in their evening gowns while the judges began the gruelling task of rating each girl.

Following the evening gown presentation, each contestant came back on stage with a three-minute display in talent competition. Three songstresses topped the vocal field including Miss Cataffo, whose styling of September In The Rain helped place her in the finals.

Three out of four dancers entered in the competition made their way into the finals, including Miss Bocek, who danced to Ralph Marteri's Shishkebob, and Miss Payton doing an old soft shoe routine to As Close As I Want To Be To You.

During the interim periods, the show featured two special guests, night club star Monique Van Vooren, winding up an engagement at Facks II, and song star Vic Damone, currently at the Fairmont Hotel.

Damone, upon requests from the audience, agreed to do a song if he could sing directly to one of the mothers of the contestants, whereupon two or three unidentified members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce "pulled" Mrs. Mildred Payton from her chair and escorted her on stage, where Damone sang Embraceable You.

Going to a variety of sources to pick a qualified field of judges, the Pageant Committee decided on the following people for both the semi-finals and the finals:

Carolyn Parks, director, Academy of Ballet; Edna Fischer, composer, pianist and music instructor; Ruth Redell, fashion coordinator for Livingston Brothers; Burdette Fitzgerald, director of the Children's Theater at State College; Harold Christens, director of the San Francisco Ballet;

Robert Birehenall, president of the Key Man Society of the Junior Chamber of Commerce; Winifred Schmale, producer at television station KQED; Dwight Newton, radio-television editor of the Examiner; David Hulburd, columnist for the Chronicle, and Terrence O'Flaherty, radio-television columnist of the Chronicle.

Tickets for the finals tomorrow night are $2.25 and may be obtained from the chamber office, 333 Pine Street, or from any member of the organization.

Forum Material Shows Variety

Poems, short stories, satires and essays will be published in the Forum, the college literary magazine, which will be distributed on June 3, Josephine Hanson, editor of the Forum, announced yesterday.

"Our staff has tried to pick a variety of items to show the versatility of the writers at the college," Miss Hanson said.

The poems are written on such topics as love, spring and other abstract subjects. Adventure and satire head the list of the short stories, with one or two essays on interesting subjects, Miss Hanson reported.

"We had to leave out material that should have been published, but we just did not have room for it," Miss Hanson added.

Forum will be distributed by members of the Forum Club and is free to Associated Student cardholders and 50 cents to non-members.

Gamma Phi Leads Clean-Up Contest

With only 34 demerit points, Gamma Phi Ypsilon is in the lead for the steak dinner which will be given to the winner of the cafeteria cleanliness contest, according to John Dunn, instructor in charge of the cafeteria.

"Some of the clubs are doing a remarkable job of keeping their areas clean," Dunn said. "If everyone would just pick up their own papers and bus their own dishes, the cafeteria would be cleaner, the prices would be lower and everyone would be happy," he added.

Randy Neuman, chairman of the Gamma Phi Ypsilon cleanliness committee, indicated that everyone in the club took an active part in the campaign. A sign urging clean-up action was placed on their table. "Every day someone is delegated to sweep under the table, empty ashtrays and keep the area clean," he said. "In addition," he added, "every member buses his own dishes and picks up his own paper."

City Coroner Turkel To Speak Here Today

Dr. Henry Turkey, coroner for the City of San Francisco, will present a lecture to the criminal investigation class today, according to Morris Grodsky, criminology instructor at the college.

"We feel that Dr. Turkel's presentation is of great value in that it shows the close cooperation between the law enforcement branch and the coroner's office," Grodsky commented.

Two Here Win Special Awards

Lew Flores Named For Wall Street Journal Honors For Scholarship, Leadership, Athletic Ability Here

Business major Lewis Flores will be this year's recipient of the Wall Street Journal award, business instructor Edward Larson announced today.

Identical awards, which consist of a silver medal encased in plastic and a one-year subscription to the Wall Street Journal, have been presented by the sponsors to over 600 other higher institutions, as well as the college, for the past nine years, Larson stated.

Flores was chosen to receive the distinction by virtue of his outstanding scholastic achievement and potential promise in the field of finance and investment. "The committee which selected Flores was made up of the business department faculty and members of the administration," Larson stated.

Flores, who completed his degree requirements here in January and will graduate officially in June, is now working as a trainee district manager for the American Building Maintenance Co., of San Francisco.

He indicated that this job will be that of supervising a facet of the maintenance organization which his company operates in hanks, theaters and hotels throughout California. It will require him to travel extensively within the state, once his training period is over.

Beside being an honor student at the college, Flores also received the Magna Cum Laude cup upon graduation from Balboa High School. The trophy was awarded for outstanding scholarship, leadership and athletic ability, Larson pointed out.

"From my experience with this young man, his keen intelligence, wit, and all-around ability, should carry him far in the business world," Larson said.

Flores' athletic ability has enabled him to gain a starting berth as a left fielder on the championship Ram baseball team of 1956. Flores was the leadoff hitter and provided extra base punch for the college nine. In addition he was picked on the Examiner All-Northern California baseball team for his athletic prowess.

AS Scholarships Highlight Award Assembly Today

Louise von Emster and Phillip Malnick will receive the Associated Student scholarships of $125 each in the pre-commencement scholarship award assembly to be held today at 10 a.m. in the Cloud Hall library, according to Mary Golding, dean of women.

Other scholarships to be awarded at the meeting include the Dr. A. J. Cloud Scholarships to Iidiko Vegaya and Raymond Davis; the Graduating Class of 1956 Scholarships to Georgeanna Riordan and LeRoy Bronstein; the J. Paul Mohr Scholarships to Dick Moore and Lydia Norwood.

The Chinese Students' Club Scholarships to Jane Wong, Victoria Yu, Norman Lew, and Andrew Yang; the Square and Circle Scholarships to Yvonne Mar; the Alice Eastwood Scholarship to Louis Ferrario; the Hotel and Restaurant Scholarships to Al Brame and Lynn Godfrey.

The Bank of America Junior Awards to Deanna Sjogren and Aimee Or; the Music Scholarship to Armen Boyd; and the University of California Scholarships to Amihud Cohen, David Takahashi and John Lipford.

All prospective graduates received an invitation to attend the assembly and will be excused from their 10 o'clock classes, Dean Golding stated.

Included in the program for the occasion ... speeches by Louis Conlan, president of the college, and by Gordon Beal, president of the Sophomore class, and by Miriam Escher, English instructor here.

Jim Stettler To Be Awarded Art Scholarship

Continuing the tradition of giving outstanding students an opportunity for further advancement in the world of advertising art, the Academy of Advertising Art in San Francisco, through William Eckert, commercial art instructor here, recently awarded a tuition scholarship to honor student Jim Stettler.

This scholarship has a monetary value of $400, and will last for one year with an extension to two years if the student progresses satisfactorily.

Stettler's contribution to the artistic affairs of the college include the designing of May Festival posters for 1956, and the "place card" used at official college luncheons and dinners. He is also art editor and designer of the cover of this year's Forum magazine.

"These contributions seem to indicate that a successful continuation of Stettler's studies as a scholarship student would be a certainty rather than a possibility," Eckert commented recently.

"Stettler has received a long line of straight "A's" for his work in my department," he added, "and to prove his consistency, he is an honor student at the moment. When he graduates in June, if he remains consistent to the last, it will be with honors."

When he completes his college career, Stettler's further aim is to work for a major advertising concern, specializing in lettering and design, and finally to join the major concerns in the highly competitive field of free lance commercial art.

Ferrario To Get Eastwood Award In Horticulture

Floriculture student Louis Ferrario will be this year's winner of the Alice Eastwood award, given annually to the college's outstanding prospective graduate in ornamental horticulture, according to Harry Nelson, college floriculture instructor.

The award, a $100 check, will be presented by a board member of the San Francisco Garden Club at the pre-commencement assembly to be held in Cloud Hall today.

After interviewing the five aspirants who were originally selected by the floriculture faculty members, the Garden Club board finally chose Ferrario, basing their choice on scholarship and outstanding ability in the field of ornamental horticulture, Nelson said, adding,

"Ferrario is a mature student who acquired some experience in this line while serving in the army; and he now intends to make it his life's work upon completion of his college career."

The award is presented in honor of the late Alice Eastwood, a noted member of the California Academy of Science and a distinguished bontanist and horticulturalist.

3 Factors Increase Prices In Cafe—Poor Student Cooperation, Food Cost, Civil Service Pay

Cafeteria food prices were increased last Thursday. Three factors were cited as the cause—the gradual rising cost of food, increase in civil service pay and failure on the part of the students to cooperate in keeping the cafeteria clean.

As a result of student carelessness, four additional civil service employees were hired to assist in alleviating the clean-up problems confronting the cafeteria management, John Dunn, instructor in charge of the cafeteria, said.

A special committee, composed of administrative officials, Hotel and Restaurant faculty, and students, studied the problem for some time, and its recommendation for price increases was submitted to President Louis G. Conlan. He approved the official increase list which is as follows:

Scrambled eggs up from 20 to 30 cents; potatoes from 10 to 11 cents; ham from 20 to 25 cents; fried eggs from 25 to 35 cents; French toast from 25 to 30 cents; doughnuts from seven to eight cents; coffee from eight to ten cents a cup with refills costing ten cents apiece; vegetables from 10 to 11 cents; all salads currently 20 cents will be raised to 25 cents, and salads now 25 cents will be upped to 30 cents.

Special salads from 50 to 60 cents, with bread and butter included; dinner dessert from 10 to 12 cents; cakes and pies from 15 to 17 cents; spaghetti from 15 to 20 cents; malts from 27 to 30 cents; turnovers from 12 to 15 cents, and fruit from 10 to 15 cents.

All entries a la carte will be up five cents. The lunch entree, which includes one vegetable, potato or salad, dinner dessert, roll and butter, has been raised to 60 cents. No prices were lowered, but those foods not mentioned will keep their present price.

Expressing his regrets, Dunn stated that "no one feels sadder than I do. It was hoped by the entire Hotel and Restaurant department that enough interest in the cleanup and bussing would be sparked by the cleanup contest and support from The Guardsman so that less help would be needed and the prices could be reduced."

Gamma Phi Ypsilon won the recent steak dinner contest with only a minus 40 points. The club's officers, who spurred the members to their victory are Bob Rodriguez, president; Bob King, vice-president; Randy Newman, cleanup ehairman, and Fred McFarland, the club's sponsor.

Runners-up in the contest were Phi Beta Delta with 168 demerits, Zeta Chi 167, Delta Psi 179, and Kappa Phi 207. Booby prize went to an unnamed organization that amassed 2,357 demerits.

11 O'Clock Classes Cut For Sophs, Profs

The first pitch for the Soph-Prof baseball game, to be held on the football field near the campus parking lot, is scheduled for 10:40 this Friday, Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, announced last week.

The regularly scheduled Friday 11 a.m. classes, ordinarily held on Fridays from 11:30 a.m. to 12:20 p.m., will be cancelled in order to allow sufficient time for the Soph-Prof game, Dean Hillsman added.

Also taking place at this time will be the awarding of trophies to the college's basketball league winners.

St. Francis Hotel Site Of Soph Ball On Saturday Night

June Fantasy will be the official theme for the Sophomore Ball, which will be held in the Colonial Room of the St. Francis Hotel this Saturday night from 9 p.m. to midnight, Gordon Beal, Sophomore class president, announced last week.

The dance will be without charge to those with Associated Student cards, and a cover charge fee of $2.50 per couple for non-card holders. Dress for the occasion will be semi-formal—dark suits for the men and cocktail dresses or formals for the women.

Maury Wolohan and his nine-piece orchestra will be on hand to supply the music for the evening's festivities, Beal stated.

A highlight of the ball will be the Grand March, to be staged just before the coronation of the winners of the King and Queen contest. There is a possibility that these new members of royalty will be interviewed on KPIX-TV sometime previous to the dance.

Refreshments for the festivities will be available in the Green Room, adjacent to the Colonial Room, according to Beal.

In addition to the Grand March and announcement of King and Queen, Beal is endeavoring to obtain some outside entertainment for this affair.

The title theme of June Fantasy was chosen by members of the Sophomore class committee at their college hour meeting of May 10.

Second Photo Gallery Exhibit Depicts Lorin Hamlin's Views Of Urban Life

Second in a series, The City Dweller, a photography exhibit depicting facets of urban life, will be presented in the new college photo gallery through this Friday, May 31, according to Emmett E. Smith, art and photo instructor in charge of the show.

Photo debuts of four outstanding students are included in the currently displayed photo series, which is being sponsored by the college photography department and is scheduled until Friday, June 14.

Featured as a special additional attraction of the photo series will be a group of prints titled Experiments, by the Austrian artist Wolfgang Pfianz. This separate section of the exhibition, containing the first showing in America of Pfianz's work, will be displayed at the college until and including Friday, June 7.

Fine and sensitive perception of character details in persons, places, and things, is described as the theme for Nature In The Precise Eye, an exhibit by Richard Brooks. It will be shown in the gallery during the week starting next Monday, Smith stated.

Richard Gray will present Studies In Low Key during the week starting Monday, June 10. Candid Nights In North Beach will be combined with "before and behind little theater scenes" to set the theme of Gray's exhibit.

Located by the faculty offices in Cloud Hall, the current program of exhibits was inaugurated last week by Carol Jean Harley's Design In Living.

Decorative fragments abstracted from everyday objects and candids of children were the themes of Miss Harley's exhibit, according to Smith, was "highly successful." Following through with this sueeess, other shows are already in the planning stage for next semester, he added.

Nationally known photographer Ansel Adams visited the college last week to view Miss Harley's exhibit.

Completing the semester series, which is composed of "independent creative produetions on the part of each exhibitor in a bid for artistie recognition," will be a section titled Best Of The Year. To be shown during finals week, it will include a miscellany of student work in the various class assignments and will be presented by the photography classes, Smith announced.

Peter Varcados Named Graduating Speaker

Peter Varcados, history major, was the honor student selected as the graduating speaker for the 22nd annual commencement exercises for the fall and spring semester ... 1957, to be held on Friday, June 14, at 8 p.m. in the Riordan High School auditorium, according to John J. Brady, commencement committee chairman.

Approximately 700 students will receive their Associate in Arts degrees on this occasion, Brady said.

Traditional and special commencement awards will be presented at this time. These include two Scholastic Cups, to be awarded to the two students, one man and one woman, with the highest scholastic standing, and the President's Award Plaque to the man and woman graduating students who have given the most service to the college. Winners of the plaque will be announced during commencement, Brady added.

Latin Music Spins Along At 33⅓ Revolutions Per Day

By Pastor Valle-Garay

IT IS SAID that if three Americans were to be locked up in a room, some minutes later they would have voted and elected themselves president, secretary and treasurer, respectively, of a real, or imaginary, organization they would be running rather nicely afterward.

With our south-of-the-border amigos, things are somewhat different. Get two Latins, provide them with an argument—the political kind especially—add some spicy government talk, let it boil for a little while until it gets hot—a few seconds will do—and there it is . . . a revolution is born.

The military junta, or whatever they call the resulting directive body, will come later as the winner takes over the country's reins; at least until the next plot comes along.

These details, from a Latin American student's point of view, have become, after centuries of training, "a tireless, endlessly practiced game down south, and a bloody, dangerous one." Students at the college know it just too well. Their attitudes are more active than passive in this field of the Spanish life, when they are in their home lands.

They will be the first ones promoting construction of high schools, colleges, universities and workers' strikes when the situation calls for it. The situation, meaning the students' discontent with the government's unjustified acts against a nation's constitution, against the press and some erroneously-called patriotic ideals such as political tradition, spirit of adventure, ambition and, last but not least, join-the-free-for-all-fun reasons.

Paradise must have been located in South America, someone said, referring to Adam's and Eve's "trouble" as a revolt against God because of an apple. "We would have, and we have, fought for a banana, as long as the United Fruit Co. was involved," the source of information assured.

Adam, according to widely known public opinion, just wanted to take it easy the easy way. He desired to be like God and after that, do nothing but enjoy himself. His failure didn't stop the bad example he had set and left behind, namely in manana land, where some happy-go-lucky Latins still believe in not doing tomorrow what can be done after tomorrow. They attempt to follow Senor Adam's steps, except where revolts—right-away businesses—are concerned.

These facts, plus too much siesta time, a burning sun and a few "free thinkers" who, owning nothing, desire to own the world, often provide the necessary ingredients for revolution.

Like ping pong and other games, it's kid stuff for these trigger-nervous people. Nothing better than a little plot now and then to change the atmosphere, especially when sports and bullfights are under-rated.

Actually the revolutionary craze works, perfectly timed, in a round-the-clock basis all year long. Someone accidentally lights a match in Nicaragua, and that's it! A voice shouts fire or viva whoever is near him, and with the cry of revolution, the music starts to play everywhere at 33⅓ revolutions.

It's deadly, contagious: it spreads and travels fast, faster than the fastest jet planes through Central and South America, while professional agitators increase the trouble by using every handy device. One device is the Caribbean Legion, composed of forces that won't stop for anything when money is paid in order to have someone killed (someone in a government post, that is).

The general belief of these people seems to be, "You-know-what? Nicaragua's having a plot. Let's make a better one ourselves." Then all of a sudden Argentine's Peron is ousted; Colombia follows with Rojas Pinilla; Cuba's Batista is vainly attached; Nicaragua's Somoza's had it, shot to death; Remon from Panama dies from an assassin's bullets; Arbenz from Guatemala is ousted for communism, and Honduras kicks out its recently elected president.

As a consequence, a number of reforms are announced. Among them are restoration of freedom of the press by the new government, which in many cases means that newspapermen can write anything they please as long as they give hell to the over-thrown government.

Latin America could and probably should have been divided into only three strong countries, at the most, when time for independence came.

Although the fighting spirit of the Indians was and will always accompany their mixed generations of successors, with three countries the story could be told differently now. Just think of all those little riots so often imported and exported like merchandise from one nation to another. They wouldn't have happened, or could have been controlled. All of them put together might have even started the past two world wars and, after such an experience, the three places would now be quiet for keeps.

It came out differently though, and the situation hasn't improved lately. About two months ago, in an article on Latin American sports, it was mentioned that the two Latin American national pastimes were ball games of all sorts and revolutions. A month later the article was proved wrong.

Nicaragua's national baseball stadium was closed and empty, the professional league called off, and the teams' total membership had joined the army to fight a border line dispute to stop an alleged attack on Nicaragua's soil by the neighboring country of Honduras.

Time had changed the statement. As far as Nicaragua and Honduras were concerned, they had only one national pastime, revolutions.

Nicaraguan ball pitchers played the game of throwing hand grenades against the forces from Honduras while the latter's ex-soccermen try to catch the "greetings" and kick them back before exploding. Fun, isn't it? Not for those in the vicinity.

Students Misuse Of Cafeteria Deciding Factor In Price Rise

FOUR WEEKS AGO, The Guardsman carried editorial comment concerning the lack of student interest and pride in the maintenance of their cafeteria.

At that time, we pointed out the problems encountered by the Hotel and Restaurant Department—carelessness, messiness and disorderliness on the part of students.

We also called student attention to the fact that "It is not the intent or purpose of this department to make a profit," but that prices in the cafeteria "are dependent, for the most part, upon the amount of civil service help that must be hired to clean up after them."

Then, we warned that administration officials were "considering drastic action unless a reasonable solution could be reached to alleviate the many problems that face the cafeteria management." As a final note, we had hopes "optimistically that some solution" would "be brought forth by the students themselves."

To a reasonable, thinking person, this warning would appear to have been enough to stimulate some type of positive student action; however, it is now evident that this editorial cue had little, if any, effect.

A committee, composed of administrators, H&R faculty and students, after a reasonable period of time during which a solution could have been brought forth by the students, finally felt that action was imperative.

Last week, it was announced officially that cafeteria food prices would be raised. We are not saying that this action was taken solely because of the students' misuse of the cafeteria, but we are saying that it was definitely the deciding factor.

Of late, wholesale food prices and the wages of civil service employees for the cafeteria have gradually risen, so cafeteria officials had been pondering whether an increase in food prices would have to be made. For quite a time, however, they had been holding back with this increase.

Then, last week, they were forced to put it through because it was found that four additional civil service employes were needed to bus dishes and clean up after students.

Officials have stated that at least half of the increase is directly attributable to the additional cost incurred in the hiring of these employees. They emphasize, however, that hiring personnel to keep the cafeteria clean does not relieve students of their responsibility and pride in keeping their cafeteria clean.

Since they didn't feel that any action was necessary on their part, students now have no one but themselves to blame for this administrative action. If they had taken some action at the proper time, this price increase could possibly have been avoided.

Misguided Juveniles Deface Posters

DURING the recent Associated Student elections, many misguided juveniles attending the college found a highly entertaining new pastime—that of defacing election posters.

Candidates running for office who were maligned by these child-like jokesters were justly angered—and rightly so.

Students were warned that if found involved in this defacing, they would be expelled. It's really too bad that students of college age have to be treated like grade school children.

Further action of this sort could result, as has been the case in some high schools, in an edict being issued that would ban any and all posters during elections.

We hope the jokesters will realize that their debased form of "art" has no place on this campus.

FRANK CAPRA, whose productions of Our Mr. Sun and Hemo The Magnificent have been shown at the college, is now completing the third in the scientific series.

Titled Cosmic Rays, the movie will be shown over CBS some time next fall.

Playhouse 90 has once again achieved a dramatic and technical triumph.

The Helen Morgan Story will long be remembered, not only as an outstanding production, but also for sending Polly Bergen on her way to stardom.

Miss Bergen turned what could have been a repulsive character into one toward whom pity was felt. Her portrayal of torch singer Miss Morgan proved she is not only a singer, but also an actress. This is a rare combination.

The story of Miss Morgan's life was not a pretty one. She fell in love with a married man. She was an alcoholic. She married a young boy one night when she was too drunk to realize what she was doing.

The script writers made no attempt to white-wash it. Yet the play was not offensive; it was a tragedy.

As Miss Morgan's mother, Sylvia Sidney was outstanding. The viewer felt sympathetic toward her, knowing the problem she had to cope with. Her fault seemed to be that she was not strong enough to push her daughter in the right direction.

Ronnie Burns, who played Miss Morgan's youthful husband, also deserves mention. Burns, the son of George Burns and Gracie Allen, showed he could be a dramatic actor as well as supporting his parents in their comedy series.

At the conclusion, Miss Morgan asked, "Why was I born?" The answer given by the script writers was: "She had a mother who wasn't strong enough. She married a man who wasn't mature enough. And she had a baby she couldn't keep long enough. Why was she born? Maybe she was born just to sing."

The Helen Morgan Story will certainly be in the running for an "Emmy." Miss Bergen, too, may capture one for her portrayal.

African Safari Draws Women To Hunt Panthers, Water Buffalo

By Pat Metsack

With a pt. 378 Weatherby (a rifle) in one hand and a compact in the other, Helen Huffman, counselor here, and three other members of the feminine gender will set out for the wilds of Africa on the last day of this semester.

Looking forward to 15 months in Africa and Europe, Mrs. Huffman informs us that plans are well underway for the journey. "I think it will be just mad," Mrs. Huffman exclaimed. "We're having such fun planning it, and we are really looking forward to it."

The idea of a safari to Africa came about last year at a Christmas party given by the gun club to which Mrs. Huffman belongs. One of her friends said, "Let's go game hunting." The idea sounded like fun. Africa was decided upon, and since January 2 the plans have been in the making. It was just that easy.

HELEN HUFFMAN, counselor, is planning a 15-month trip to Europe and Africa during sabbatical leave from college. Mrs. Huffman will return to the college in the fall of 1958.

It might be well to mention at this point just how complicated plans for a safari are. Fifteen months away from the United States is a long time, and many essentials will have to be bought before the four leave the states. For example, a year's supply of cosmetics (what else?)—clothing, medical supplies, a tool kit, and something they already have, 5,000 water purification hills. Also gas. It's $1.50 per gallon in Africa.

Along the lines of other essentials Mrs. Huffman rubbed her arm and said, "You have to get every shot in the book to go to Africa."

The four women will leave San Francisco in Mrs. Huffman's car on June 15. When they reach New York they will sell her car and board a boat for France. Upon their arrival in Europe they plan to purchase a Volkswagon bus, fully equipped with bunks, and other portable necessities.

Scandinavia, Spain, and then to Gibraltar. Africa is their planned route. They plan to drive down the West coast, the Ivory coast, the Gold coast and then to Liberia. When the roads run out they will board a river boat, bus and all, and travel across the Congo, through the jungle to Kenya. Kenya is game country, and about there they will probably be polishing their firearms. They plan to take a safari into Uganda where they will spend considerable time hunting.

The women will be looking for panthers. "It's open season on them," Mrs. Huffman explained, "and then if I'm good enough I'll try by luck on water buffalo." Water buffalo are fiercest . . . of to Carol.

"I'd like to bring back a head," Mrs. Huffman said, and then she added, "preferably my own."

Mrs. Huffman said if they get enough of Africa before they expect to, then they have a homeward route planned.

Mrs. Huffman has been interested in guns ever since she was five. For her fifth birthday her father (they lived in Louisiana) gave her a 38 Smith Wesson pistol, and she has been shooting ever since. Mrs. Huffman speaks proudly of her father. "He could cut a playing card in half at 60 feet with a rifle."

The end of the interview in sight, Mrs. Huffman added that she had no fear of the natives, "If they get me, it serves them right."

TRUE, it's a man's world, but the situation in Dr. George E. Gould's Zoo (that's short for zoology) 10 class must surely border on the ridiculous.

Studying as zoology students are wont to, the various systems of the body (digestive, excretory, reproductive) Dr. G.'s class eventually came to the topic of proper pre-natal care for expectant mothers - to - be. What kind of food they should eat . . . proper exercises . . . and all that.

When it came time for an open class discussion and question-asking session on the subject, guess which of the two sexes present asked the most questions The women? They couldn't get a word in edgewise, even had they wanted to, so intense was the barrage of male questions.

BOB FELLER was pleased that Hollywood decided to do his life story for the screen, but was somewhat miffed because "There was no controversy of any type in my life." The picture should be pure baseball facts and, unlike the Lou Gehrig and Babe Ruth, without too much sentiment.

Differing from Jim Piersall's story, Fear Strikes Out, there will be no controversy. It should prove an interesting movie for the sports fan. Incidentally, what price for "The Spitter" Ted Williams life story? No doubt Williams is one of the all-time most controversial players — not for his diamond ability but his tantrums.

TWO WEEKS AGO Joe DeMaestri of the Kansas City Athletics was still ninth in the batting order. At that time he was the eighth leading batter in the American League with a fat .348 average. Manager Marty Marion either has a definite purpose for not putting his weakest hitter last, has little confidence in DeMaestri, or doesn't read the averages.

WERE THOSE BOOS we detected over the television set when Mickey Mantle and Yogi Berra came to bat during the Detroit game at Yankee Stadium? Praise the winner but the second he starts to lose, step all over him.

Diederichsen, Allen Take Pitcher's Mound In Annual Soph-Prof Clash During Double College Hour Friday

By John Henry

Tomorrow's Memorial Day holiday is the last day left before the big game, and it will give the Sophs and Profs a whole day's rest before the first ball is thrown out in a double college hour on Friday to start the annual Soph-Prof softball game.

Fans are urged to come early in order to get the better seats at the football field, with the first pitch scheduled for 10:40, and watch this titanic battle between two squads that have been waiting for some time to get at each other's throats.

The majority of instructors at the college have had smug, confident smiles on their faces the past weeks and it looks as though they expect little trouble from the hopeful student team.

The Prof coaching staff has announced the arrival of some new talent in camp. "Tricky" Dick Maia, Lou "Big Klu" Batmale, Al "Rappin" Tapson, and the two "Mighty Mikes"—Monaco and Lo Presti. All of these experienced hands are good hitters and hope to boost their averages at the expense of the Soph pitching staff.

All of the Profs are in top condition after a month of training and are all set to take to the diamond in quest of another victory.

Starting Prof pitcher Roy Diederichsen's chuckin' arm is once again ready to face the bats of the Soph hitters. He has beaten them many times in the past; can he keep their bats silent again this year? The Sophs don't think so! They aren't saying much, in fact, they're downright mysterious.

Have they a secret weapon? No lineup was released to the press for the game. A few players are now known to fans through earlier coverage of the Soph squad, but the sports staff has been unable to get a team roster. What are the Sophs planning for the heavily favored Profs?

Maybe prospective starting hurler, "Wild" Bill Allen has a new pitch that will baffle the opposing hitters. The Sophs may have something up their sleeve, but it may not be enough to knock off the "Murderer's Row" that the faculty is expected to put up to plate."

Anything can happen when these two giants of the diamond face each other on Friday. This could very easily turn out to be the game of the century.

Trophies for the winning team and May Festival float will be awarded after the game.

ROY DIEDERICHSEN, tennis coach here, will ascend the mound on Friday for the annual Soph-Prof softball game. One of the Soph clan has already intimated that Diederichsen will attempt to throw the illegal "spit" ball. Joe "Yogi" Amori will be the catcher of the dreaded pitch.

Golfers Sixth In State Tourney; Barr Leads Team

City College's golf squad took a sixth place at the California State Junior College State Tournament at San Diego on Sunday and Monday, May 20 and 21.

With 30 teams represented at the tournament, the southern part of the state, led by San Bernardino in first place and Santa Monica finishing second, dominated the entire field. Menlo followed the two teams in third place with San Mateo, Santa Ana, City College, Orange and San Jose finishing in that order.

Third ranked team member Larry Barr was low medalist for the Ram squad, shooting a 36-hole total of 161. Following close behind Barr were Don McDowell, Frank Hubert and Mike Evans. Evans was high medalist for the team, carding a 176.

Top man for the Big Eight Conference was San Mateo ace Bill West, whose two-round score of 150 earned him a sixth place in individual competition. Leading the entire field the southland colleges dominated the top positions in the standings.

Shooting a winning 148, Tom Self of San Bernardino, teamed with Ron Gillespie, who carded a 149, giving the Indians a stronghold on the first place berth.

Only the Rams, San Mateo and Menlo kept the southern colleges from making a complete rout of the top standings. Menlo's Al Geiberger, shooting a 149 and winning a sudden death playoff from Gillespie, kept the southlanders from sweeping the first five positions.

Ending the semester's activities for the Block SF will be the semi-annual Block SF dinner, to be held on Monday, June 3, in Smith Hall, according to Bill Fischer, sponsor of the organization.

At this time athletes of the spring sports who are eligible will receive their Block award. Along with this, the Most Valuable Player award for each sport will also be made, Fischer said.

This semester the basketball team placed first in the Big Eight League and in State competition was third. Because of their outstanding achievement, Fischer said, the guest speaker has been chosen from the basketball sport. The speaker will be renowned Phil Woolpert, coach of the University of San Francisco Dons.

Receiving their blocks for basketball shiffy will be Rich DeConti, John Henry, Malcolm McCormiek, Gary Merritt, Al Mock, Doug North, James O'Connor, Stan Rosenberg, Rich Russell, Bob Tenler, Al Vidal and Bill Wooten.

Eighteen members of the track team will also be receiving their blocks. They are Rich Atkins, Don Baiki, Stan Breed, Wilfred Gasper, Bob Guddee, Bob Hammond, Pete Morgan, Don Nasser, Doug Neathery, Marion Page, Steve Pinkney, Mike Reid, Ken Richter, Rich Ristow, James Thomas, Blake Westman, Jim Williams and Will Wilson.

Winners of blocks for the ... team are Nick Scharf, Vic Saschin, Pete Schwartz, Joe Henderson, Jim Howard and Bob Norwood.

The final group to receive blocks are the members of the golf team. They are Larry Barr, Mike Evans, Frank Hubert, Martin Kilgareff, Don McDowell and John White.

The five coaches who will be taking part in the ceremonies are Sid Phelan, basketball coach; Lou Vasquez, track coach; Grover Klemmer, golf coach; Roy Diederichsen, tennis coach; and Bill Fischer, basketball coach, and sponsor of the Block SF.

Johnny Vander Meer's second straight no-hitter in 1938 against the Brooklyn Dodgers was the first night game ever played in Ebbets Field.

Baseballers Hard Hit By Graduation

Both the track and baseball teams will face a rebuilding job next year as the Rams' top stars end their final season with the college.

Coach Lou Vasquez will lose three tracksters this semester when Ken Richter, Myron Zimmerman and Bob Guddee graduate in June. Richter, a physical education major, will enter San Jose State in the fall, while Guddee, still undecided on his major, and Zimmerman, specializing in business administration, will enter the University of California.

With the rest of the track team this season mostly freshmen, the graduation of these three will not impair the Rams' victory hopes next year.

Coach Bill Fischer's prospect isn't as bright as Vasquez' since the loss of the baseball team's top players will mean a complete overhaul for next season's competition.

Ram ace pitcher Bob Bandettini may attend Stanford, while teammate Roger Ferrari enters the University of San Francisco. Two other players, Blair LeMire and Tom Roper, have used up their two years of eligibility and will be out of next year's lineup.

Two more Ram stars, Ray Bower and Bill Flanagan, are considering a transfer to Berkeley and tentative plans to enter have been started. Both players are eyeing the coaching profession after graduation.

Beta Tau-Chinese Club Playoff For Basketball Title

The Chinese Club of the Independent League and Beta Tau of the Inter-Fraternity League, were scheduled to lock horns last night in the men's gymnasium where they vied for the Associated Men Student basketball title.

Beta Tau was the top team of the fraternities as they posted a six and one record to grab the IFC championship.

Three teams tied for the runner-up spot with identical five and one records, behind the Independent League champion Chinese Club. These clubs were the Hotel & Restaurant Society, the Filipino Club, and Alpha Phi Omega. The Filipino Club proved itself top competition as the team downed the Hotel & Restaurant five and suffered a one-point setback at the hands of the champion quintet.

John Chan of the Chinese Club and George Ivelich of Beta Tau were consistent high scorers for their squads. Both players hit over 75 points in league play.

40 RA Members To Get Awards Today

Forty Recreation Association members will receive awards at an award social today, according to Lene Johnson, RA sponsor. The students who are to receive awards have taken part in nine out of 12 games, maintained a C average, and hold an Associated Student card.

Elections for next year's RA officers will also take place this week and the names will be announced Friday during the Feminine Fling.

Next semester, RA is planning to have more co-ed sports nights.

RA received honorable mention on its May Festival float and second prize on its booth. Bev Wilson was in charge of the former and Jean Kreig the latter. Credit is also given to Charlene Winters for the animal characters and to Lois Bamberger for the barnyard scene.

Coaches On Ram Staff Rate High

Some facts and figures on the coaches show that baseball mentor Bill Fischer, football coach Grover Klemmer, and basketball coach Sid Phelan rank high in the list of coaches throughout the Big Eight Conference.

Fischer experienced one of his most disastrous seasons at the helm of the Rams, but his record is outstanding as he has led the horsehiders to the pennant four times and tied once for the crown in the past 12 years. The ...

Klemmer, who recently had his 440 high school track record broken, has consistently placed the grid team in the first division. The 1948 issue of The Guardsman referred to him as "Tarzan." Seems that pictures of him were sent to the studio looking for an heir apparent for the then aging Johnny Weismuller. Fortunately for the college, Klemmer remained here.

Phelan's Big Eight champion basketball team was 12th in the nation in defense for two-year colleges with a final 61 points allowed per game.

The National Junior College Athletic Association magazine discloses that all two-year college track and field records are held by California colleges. City College does not have any of these record holders.

Thomas Scores In Four Events As Ram Track Team Finishes Fifth At Northern Cal Meet

By George Grasso

James Thomas, talented all-around Ram trackman, placed in four events as City College took fifth in the Northern California Junior College Meet which was held in Modesto last Friday. Thomas captured a second place in the low hurdles from a very tough field of competitors. He then went on to place third in the high jump, and fourth in the high hurdles. Toward the end of the meet, Thomas ran the third lap for the mile relay team, which placed second to Modesto.

Wilfred Gasper highjumped 6-4½, and along with Tyler Wilbon of West Contra Costa, who tied him, set a new Northern California meet record. Records were shattered in 8 of the 14 events in what was probably the best northern meet of all time.

Urbane Gasperi of Modesto lowered a very fast 880 record from 1:56.5 to 1:53.4, in which turned out to be a thrilling duel with San Mateo's John Montour. Gasperi squeezed the Canadian transfer out of first place by inches.

Other records broken were: the 440, lowered from 49.8 to 48.8 by Dorsey of Sacramento; the high hurdles, lowered from 15.1 to 14.8 by Jackson of Sequoia; the low hurdles, lowered from 24.22 to 23.5 by Kellogg of American River. (Both hurdle records were previously held by Clint Redus of this college.)

The 220, lowered from 21.9 to 21.1 by Kellogg of American River; the two-mile lowered from 9:52.0 to 9:51.4 by Brown of Modesto; the high jump (old record held by Leroy Thomas of this college at 6-3½), raised to 6-4½ by Gasper of this college; the mile relay, lowered from 3:23.9 to 3:22.3 by Modesto's team.

The final scores were Modesto 83; Sequoia 58⅓, Sacramento 42, West Contra Costa 39, City College 36, American River 30, Hartnell 19, San Jose 18, San Mateo 14¼, Santa Rosa 14, Reedley 11¼, Yuba 9, Vallejo 7, East Contra Costa 6, Sierra 5½, Stockton 5⅓, Taft 4, Fresno 3, Shasta 1½.

Four Records Fall At All-State Meet

Four National Two-Year College records were broken at the Modesto All-State meet, which was won by Mt. San Antonio last Saturday.

At this meet, the Ram mile relay team ran the fastest race of their lives as they broke this college's record by three seconds and beat their Northern California rivals, Modesto, in 3:19.8.

Individually Don Nasser ran 50.8; Steve Piekney ran 50.; James Thomas ran 49.4, and Ken Richter ran 49.4. But the Ram performance was overshadowed by Mt. San Antonio as they ran 3:15.3 for a new national junior college record.

In the high jump Wilfred Gasper went over the bar at 6-4½ to take a tie for fourth. James Thomas ran his best low hurdle race, hitting 23.8, which was good enough for a fifth in all-state competition.

The National Junior College records which were broken were the pole vault, with a jump of 14-4 by Hopkins of Orange Coast Costa Mesa; the 100-yard dash, run in 9.4 by White of Los Angeles Harbor; the two-mile run, completed in 9:22 by Ron Larrieu of Mt. San Antonio; and the mile relay, run in 3:15.3 by Mt. San Antonio.

Rams Blanked In State Tennis Championships

Modesto Junior College completely dominated the field in both the singles and doubles to win the California State Tennis Championships, which were held on May 17 and 19.

City College's Nick Scharf, playing with a sprained wrist, was defeated in the first round singles. Scharf and Vic Saschin were also defeated in the doubles.

Golden Gate Park, originally the site for the entire tournament, saw only the first rounds played as rain forced the entrants to finish the quarter-finals at the Stanford University courts that same day. On the next day, May 18, rain completely blanketed the bay area and postponed play. On May 19, the semi-finals were played at Modesto.

In the finals, Ed Guzman played Ed Panui in singles; both are from Modesto. In the doubles finals, Guzman and Gil Rodriquez played Panui and John LeMaitre, also of Modesto.

Eight Amendments Brought Before Students In Special Election As Polls Open Today For Balloting

Voting on eight amendments to the Associated Student Constitution will take place today through a special election which was decided on by Student Council last week.

The amendments were barely approved by council in time for inclusion on this semester's election ballot, and it was decided not to include the amendment propositions on voting machines which were used during the regular election.

Ballot boxes will be used for today's voting, and AS members will be asked to decide on acceptance of propositions A through H.

Amendments were discussed and considered by the council in its last two meetings after AS President Bob Varni presented his ideas on strengthening some sections of the constitution and eliminating such dead points as the council considered wise.

Originally the group had endeavored to rush through the propositions so that they could be put to the voters at the same time that balloting was going on for AS officers.

Election Commissioner Hugh Aanonsen, though, commented on whether or not the propositions had been posted long enough before the opening day of the elections. The constitution states that issues must be made public a week before the election.

The amendment propositions are as follows:

Proposition A is an amendment of Article II, section, 5 and disallows a candidate for Vice-President to have more than 60 units.

Proposition B provides that the Yell Leader be removed from the President's Cabinet and places that position under the jurisdiction of the Rally Commissioner.

Proposition C would delete Article VI, section 3, which provided that any elected officer must be enrolled in Political Science G5. This provision is now a dead issue since the college no longer offers that course.

Proposition D would give the AS President the power to veto any measures taken by the Student Council.

Proposition E would be a counterbalance to Proposition D by giving the council power to override the President's veto by a two-thirds vote.

Proposition F provides that in case of disqualification of an elected council member because of low grade point average, the candidate next highest in the number of votes succeeds to the council seat. The proposition also provides for replacement of executive officers.

Proposition G asks for the deletion of Article II, section 2, which deals with the duties of the Yell Leader.

Proposition H enumerates the duties of the Men's Athletic Commissioner, the Election Commissioner and the Finance Committee Chairman.

By Mary Ann Bogart

DINNER DANCES dominated the social scene of campus organizations last week, setting the stage for the presentation of pins to new pledge members of sororities and fraternities.

The members of Alpha Lamba Chi sorority presented their past president, Joetta Colwell, with a lavaller and gavel at a dinner at The Shadows last Sunday, May 26. The new officers for the fall semester were chosen at a recent meeting of the sorority. They are Jo Anne Kirkeby, president; Debbie Asmussin, vice-president; Roselie Andre, recording secretary; Sue Cremm, corresponding secretary; Pat Piffero, historian; Marilyn Shoolman, photographer; Nadja Clees, sergeant-at-arms; and Charlene Peterson, ISC representative.

Zeta Chi sorority held its election meeting last night at the home of Anne and Ellie Smith. Plans were completed for the Mothers' Tea, which will be held on Sunday, June 2, at the Fort Scott Officers' Club. Zeta Chi Paola Villa was married last Thursday to Dwane Shippy at Holy Names Church. Three Zeta Chi pledges, Gwen Smith, Diane Donohue and Jeanne Kreig held a pledge supper for their sorority sisters last Sunday evening at the home of Miss Donohue.

Theta Tau presented new pledges with pins last Saturday evening at the home of Joan Hillesto. Immediately following the pinnings, the sorority sisters and their escorts enjoyed an evening of swimming, dining and dancing at Bermuda Palms. Pledges who received their pins included Beverly Morrison, Lueille Crisei, Fran de Zordo, Phyllis Longstreet, Linda Farrell, Corrine Godfry, Miss Hillsto, Nancy McCormick, Barbara Burrell and Carolee Locke. An election and business meeting was held last night.

Beta Tau gave a surprise going away party for one of its fraternity brothers, Jeff Rodden, last week at the home of Jackie Toepfer. Rodden will be leaving the states with the army. John Rasmussen's home was the site of a meeting last Monday evening. Discussions centered on semester-end plans, and the basketball game with the Chinese Club, held last night.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity held its pledge dinner last Saturday evening at the Fior d'Italia Restaurant. The eight pledges who received pins were John Anzalone, Marc Felbusch, Al Morales, Dick Pheul, Nick Rommel, John Rosso, Dave Vargo and Ron Vierra. Vierra received the fraternity's perpetual trophy for being the outstanding pledge.

All Korean war veterans who are on the GI schooling bill must report to the veterans affairs office for their May signup a week earlier, according to Robin Dunn, coordinator of Veteran Affairs.

The signup dates for the month of May started last Monday, and end this Friday, Dunn said.

For the month of June, he added, veterans ofill be required to report to the office sometime during finals week, ending Friday, June 14.

AWS Awards Party Set For Friday

DARLENE ENFIELD, general chairman of the Feminine Fling.

Fashion Show, Wedding In Pink, To Highlight Feminine Fling Here Friday; Officers To Be Installed

Associated Women Students will close this semester with their annual Feminine Fling awards and installation party, sponsored by the AWS, the Inter-Sorority Council, the Recreation Association and the Home Economics Club, this Friday, at 6:30 p.m., in the faculty dining room of Smith Hall, according to Darlene Enfield, chairman for the program.

Theme of the entertainment will be a fashion show, Wedding In Pink, by City of Paris, and the program will be presented by Peg Pragoff, bridal consultant of City of Paris. She will bring two models and a fashion coordinator. Miss Pragoff will show to those present a model bride's trousseau and answer any questions. Margie Saba, of the RA, is in charge of entertainment.

The buffet dinner will consist of a salad, rolls, dessert and coffee. Miss Enfield, who was in charge of the Big and Little Sister program, and Joan White are chairmen of the food committee. Darlene Oakley, of the Home Economics Club, will be in charge of serving for the dinner.

Main event of the evening will be the presentation of the Dougherty Trophy, which is given to the sorority with the highest grade point average. The presentation will be made by Bev Schroth, ISC president. Following the presentation, new presidents of the AWS, ISC, RA and the Home Economics Club will be installed.

Additional committees are the publicity committee, Sheldeen Osborne, chairman; set-up committee, Ruby Broadway, chairman; and programs, Bev McGuire, chairman.

Decorations for the affair will be pink and white, and Miss Schroth is in charge. All women students of the college are invited to attend, Miss Enfield added.

Student Leaders To Get Recognition Via Point System

Student council has come up with what it believes to be a solution to the problem of recognition for the student who has consistently contributed to student activities here at the college, according to Ellie Smith, council member.

The plan, as introduced to the council by Jim Woods, provides that each semester a student may receive a petition from the Associated Student secretary, and file a record of his activities for that semester. A point system has been worked out for each activity.

At the termination of a student's studies here, he will submit a letter to the AS secretary asking that his points be totaled and his activities recorded on a separate page which will be attached to his official transcript.

A student must have at least six points before his activities record will be recorded. By doing this, those students will be eliminated who have held only one or two offices, and the hard working students will be recognized, Miss Smith said.

The point system as set up at the present time is as follows: Class A: five points will be given to the AS President, AS Vice-President, AMS President, AWS President and the President of the California Junior College Student Government Association.

Class B: four points each will be given to the Sophomore class president and the Freshman class president.

Class C: three points will be given to each council member, cabinet member and the CAB, IFC and IRC presidents.

Class D: two points will be given to any other state officer of the CJCSCA, the Presidents and Vice-Presidents of any on-campus organization and the chairman of any major AS or class committee.

Class E: song girls, cheerleaders and other officers of any on-campus organization will receive one point.

Forum Magazine On Sale Monday

Forum, the college's annual literary magazine, will be distributed beginning next Monday, June 3, Josephine Hanson, editor of the Forum, announced this week.

Forum will be distributed by staff members at strategic points on the campus. The cover for this year will be a new modern design by Jim Stetler, and will replace the somewhat traditional Ram's head.

Free to Associated Student card holders and 50 cents to non-members, the magazine will contain poems, short stories and essays which were submitted to the Forum staff. The staff picked 32 of the best for publication.

Seven Summer Session Classes Cancelled

Seven different courses which were scheduled at the college for the coming summer sessions are now being cancelled, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, announced yesterday.

Students who have signed up for Business 60, 61, or 119, French 1 or 1A, and Spanish 1 or 1A are requested to report immediately to the registrar's office to reschedule classes.

H&R Hosts Hotel Association Here

Mayor George Christopher was among the honored guests invited to the annual spring luncheon for the California Northern Hotel Association held last Monday in the Hotel and Restaurant department here, according to Lawrence Wong, H&R instructor.

"Each spring the Hotel and Restaurant Department holds a special luncheon for the CNHA in order to enable employers to see our program in operation," Wong said. "The fourth semester students take charge of planning the luncheon and supervising its preparation. The undergraduates do the actual cooking, giving everyone a chance to take part. This gives the H&R department an opportunity to show the skill and training of the graduate and undergraduate students."

Among those present at the luncheon were members of the faculty, including President Louis G. Conlan and Dean Louis Batmale. A copy of H&R's Blue Book, which contains a list and photographs of the faculty and graduates, was given to each guest.

Building Program Plans Underway

Plans are under way for a building program on this campus, to be completed by the Spring 1959 semester, according to Louis G. Conlan, president of the college.

A new building will be on the north campus called the Fine Arts and class room building. It will include a little theater, band room, choral room, art and music inboratories, art and music store rooms and more later.

"Several months will be needed to draw plans and then construction should start after the first of the year," Conlan said.

Additions to the cafeteria are planned by eliminating the little court outside the coffee shop and adding to the south end of the faculty dining room.

"This is a very slow process, but we are ahead of all other building programs in the city," Conlan said, adding that the $27,000,000 bond issue in the last election is the source of the funds.

There will be additions to both gymnasiums and a football and track field to be located west of the gymnasiums. A practice field and more parking space will also be added.

Newly Elected AS Officers, Council Sworn In Tonight

By Jacquie Waite

Newly elected officers will be announced and sworn in at the semi-annual council awards dinner tonight in Smith Hall, beginning at 6:30 p.m. with a social hour, according to Metta Weddleton, AS vice-president.

Since voting was not concluded until 2 p.m. yesterday, results were not available at press time but will be announced over the campus carrier today, according to Hugh Aanonsen, election commissioner. At the close of the polls on Monday, 500 students had cast ballots.

The dinner tonight is open to all AS members, but reservations must have been made beforehand with Miss Weddleton.

One of the main features at the dinner tonight will be the presentation of a gold key to Paola Villa Shippey, chosen for the outstanding student Service Award of the Spring 1957 semester by the Student Council, Miss Weddleton announced.

Seven students were nominated two weeks ago, and the Student Council considered the nominees for a week. Miss Weddleton stressed the fact that it was almost as important to be nominated as to receive the award because the selection was difficult.

Those nominated were Darlene Enfield, Pat Jones, Walt Schultz, Jim Stettler, Dave Taylor, Jim Woods and Mrs. Shippey.

At 6:30 p.m., there will be a social hour with hors d'oeuvres served. Dinner, which will be roast sirloin of beef, prepared by the Hotel and Restaurant department, will be served at 7 p.m.

President Louis G. Conlan will be the featured speaker and will give the keynote address of the evening. Short acceptance speeches will be made by the major AS officers.

Service keys will be awarded to all council and cabinet members to round out the evening, Miss Weddleton declared.

Ramporium To Buy Back Used Textbooks

Students desiring to turn in their books at the Ramporium can do so today, according to Richard Main, Ramporium manager.

"We would appreciate it very much if students would bring their books in at this time and not during the start of next semester when the rush for new books starts," he said.

Books in good condition will receive 50 per cent of their original value, Main said.

SF Law School Offers 6 Awards

Six law scholarships have been offered to six Bay area colleges by the San Francisco Law School, according to information received by President Louis G. Conlan. All classes meet in the evening.

Incorporated seven years ago as a permanent part of the law school program, the scholarships are designed to help the working individual reach his objective, law as his profession.

Awards are made in accordance with scholastic achievement, and one or all six of the awards may be given to any one college.

Other bay area institutes offered the scholarships include East and West Contra Costa, Marin, Oakland, San Jose and San Mateo Colleges.

Students interested in these awards and wishing to qualify for them can obtain further information from the law school's registrar, Helen Willson, at the school's new quarters, 1044 Post Street, San Francisco.

Statewide Discounts For AS Card Holders Available In Near Future

Following adoption of a resolution by the California Junior College Student Government Association at its bi-annual conference this semester in Los Angeles, statewide discounts for Associated Card holders will soon be possible, according to Brower Dimond, Finance Chairman here.

Passed by the largest committee in the association, the City College sponsored document is the first such resolution to pass through the conference with widespread approval.

According to the resolution, the president of the association will set up a special committee under the guidance of the State Controller. Dimond will head the committee and make a special report at next semester's conference, which will be held in San Francisco.

Proposed in order to aid the smaller colleges in the state, the resolution will allow the committee to seek discounts from businesses whose products are statewide.

Dimond pointed out that the committee will concentrate on finding discounts at service stations, from theater owners, clothing retailers and appliance dealers.

The plan, according to Dimond, would work on a two-way basis. He illustrated his point by stating the student government association represents 150,000 students throughout the state. A discount to these students, he indicated, would mean a rise in business for the firms concerned, and at the same time increase the sales of student cards in the colleges.

Individual colleges will continue to arrange for local discounts.

Election Failings Can Guide AS Planning In Future Years

EXPERIENCE has always been man's wisest and best teacher, tempering and maturing his insight and future judgment. To those persons who are wise, unsuccessful undertakings only serve to promote later success.

The Guardsman hopes that the experience of this semester's student election will strengthen, guide, and generally improve future Associated Student planning of this semesterly event.

To—in a sense—supplement the teachings of experience in this matter, we would like to offer some suggestions in the form of constructive criticism that can prove helpful to coming AS planners. We trust that this criticism will not be taken as a personal slight by members and assistants of the present election committee, because this is definitely not our intent.

Timing for these elections is an important factor that should be most carefully considered; we feel that this semester's election was scheduled a trifle late. As a result, there was not really sufficient time left in which to cope with any unexpected last-minute problem, such as the need this time for a runoff vote.

While the timing is being considered, we would also like to suggest that some consideration be given to the selection of the particular days of the week during which balloting will take place.

Our reasoning here is that we feel the AS election deserves maximum Guardsman publicity support, and, unless election days are synchronized with our deadline and publication days, it is virtually impossible for us to provide timely and sufficient election coverage.

Another important factor concerns the selection of competent persons for the manning of all voting booths. This election, although most booth-keepers were competent, members of The Guardsman staff observed many discrepancies—one booth was observed to be totally unattended, some AS cards were checked off in pencil, and other cards were checked in different squares by different booth-keepers.

We realize that it is probably difficult to gather a sufficient number of students to work in the booths who can spare the time, and who are capable, and politically unbiased. However, we can't help but feel that the only solution is to persuade a campus club to donate their time. In this way, with responsibility clearly established for one source, discrepancies should not occur.

Driscoll, Monteith In Runoff Battle As Independents Cinch 13 AS Offices; 590 (?) Vote

By Jacquie Waite

Because of discrepancies in Associated Student elections last week, a special runoff election was held Monday to decide the office of AS President, and one Freshman and one Sophomore Council member. Results of the election were not available at press time.

Approximately 590 students voted in the election which closed last Tuesday. Cause of the discrepancy is that 20 AS cards were misused. Some card holders voted two or three times, while other cards were used by students other than those who had purchased them.

In the primary election two votes separated Bill Driscoll, Inter-Fraternity Council candidate, and Mike Monteith, Independent candidate. Hugh Aanonsen, election commissioner, withheld the name of the candidate who held the two-vote margin.

For the one remaining Freshman Council seat, Kal Peterson, IFC; Joan Hellesto, IFC; Bill Thomas, IFC, and Shelly Osborne, Independent, were awaiting Monday's results. Fewer than 20 votes separated the four candidates in the primary election.

John Kelly, Independent; Nadine Wilson, IFC, and Jerry Hoffman, Independent, staged a battle for the one remaining Sophomore Council seat.

Bev Schroth, Independent candidate, defeated Sal D'Angelo, IFC candidate, for the office of AS Vice-President by a margin of 369 to 205 votes.

Bob Rodriguez, IFC, defeated Brower Dimond, Independent, by a margin of 43 votes for the Associated Men Student Presidency. Rodriguez collected 300 votes to Dimond's 257.

The Associated Women Student Presidency went to Darlene Enfield, who defeated Shirley Greenlee, by the narrow margin of 298 to 258 votes.

The Sophomore class will be led by Art Paul, Independent, who defeated Jerry Engelhaupt by a vote of 358 to 192. Freddie Hicks, Independent, captured the Freshman Class Presidency by defeating Lee Belland by a vote of 349 to 210.

In the race for the seven Sophomore Council seats, Larry Vargo, Independent, captured the most votes, receiving a total of 314.

The other five students elected to the council were Marge Saba, Independent, with 293 votes; Marilyn Milanesio, Independent, 290 votes; Renada Marston, IFC, with 276 votes; Jerry Redford, Independent, with 267 votes, and Jack Patterson, Independent, with 265 votes. The seventh seat was decided in the election Monday.

Pat Jones, Independent, with 338 votes led the Freshman Council candidates. Nancy McCormiek, IFC, with 287 votes followed, and following her were Bev Castellacci, Independent, 250; Hal Dimond, Independent, 246; Vern Peterson, IFC, 243, and Rich Pelis, Independent, with 237. The seventh council seat was decided last Monday.

This election marked the first time in the history of the college's elections that AS cards had to be checked before the results of the election could be released.

In the special amendment election which was held last week, all amendments passed with the necessary two-thirds majority. Article IV, Section 2, having to do with the Student Council having the power to over-ride the President's veto by a two-thirds majority passed with the biggest majority, 49 to 8. In the closest competition, Article VI, Section 3, passed by a margin of 35 to 22. This amendment provided that Student Council members no longer had to enroll in Political Science G5, which is no longer offered here.

Dick Moore Elected Fall Guardsman Editor

Dick Moore, assistant news editor for The Guardsman this semester, was elected Editor-in-Chief for the fall 1957 semester at an editorial board meeting held during college hour last Friday.

Current managing editor, Carol Harris, was elected to the position of associate editor. Managing editor will be Pat Metsack, who was feature editor this semester.

Reporters advanced to editorial positions are Nick Peters, who was named sports editor, and Jerry Redford, who was named staff editor. Other vacant staff positions will be filled after the opening of the fall 1957 semester.

835 Students Here To Receive Degrees On June 14 At Riordan

June 14 Commencement Rehearsal Scheduled

A rehearsal for commencement exercises is scheduled for Friday, June 14, from 2 to 3:30 p.m. in the Riordan High School auditorium, according to John J. Brady, chairman of the commencement committee.

Caps and gowns may be obtained in the student bank located in Smith Hall. There will be no charge to Associated Student members and a rental charge of $5 to non-members. Bids may currently be secured at the bank. Each graduating sophomore is eligible for 10 bids.

Coffee and doughnuts will be served following the rehearsal.

Presentation Of President's Award Plaque, Scholastic Cup, Honor Pins Highlight Program

Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, will confer Associate in Arts degrees upon 835 students in the 22nd annual commencement exercises on Friday, June 14, at 8 p.m. in Riordan High School auditorium, according to John J. Brady, chairman of the commencement committee.

A feature of the evening will be the graduation speech by Peter Varcados, history major at the college. Varcados, who has a 3.5 grade average, was selected from a group of honor students who were asked to submit trial speeches. Because of his fluency of style and good speaking ability, the committee selected Varcados, Brady said.

A second major event of the evening will be the presentation of the President's Award Plaque to one man and one woman graduating student who have contributed the most to the college. The award will be presented by Dr. Harold Spears, Superintendent of San Francisco Public Schools. Names of the winners will be withheld until commencement night.

Previous to the speaker and the award presentation, the concert band will open the commencement exercises with a few musical selections. Their first selection will be the processional, Die Meistersinger by Wagner. Before the opening selection, the band will present a concert under the direction of Meyer M. Cahn, band instructor.

Bert Levit, president of the Board of Education, will present the welcoming address. Then the honor graduates and the Scholastic Cup winners will be given their scholastic awards by Dr. Spears.

Toward the end of the program, President Conlan will confer the degrees to the graduating sophomores.

Commencement exercises will end with some choral arrangements by the A Cappella Choir, under the direction of Robert Morton. They will sing In The Beginning, God, by Foltz; Joshua, and the college Alma Mater. Armen Boyd, a graduating student, will sing the solo lead in the Alma Mater.

Two students from Flossita Badger's voice class, Suzanne Bellinger, soprano, and Howard Clarke, tenor, will sing a duet, On Wings Of Song by Mendelssohn. The evening will draw to a close as the graduates leave the auditorium to strains of the Recessional, which will be played by the concert band.

After the program has ended a reception will be held in the cafeteria of the high school. Parents and friends are invited to attend, Brady said.

Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction, will present the candidates for degrees earlier in the program, and Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management, will act as Marshal.

Two Straight A Graduates Win Scholastic Cups

Helen Blumberg and George Hendry, each with a 4. average in their two years at City College, will be the recipients of the Scholastic Cups at the commeneement exercises Friday, June 14, according to William Richardson, sponsor of Alpha Gamma Sigma, the college scholastic honor society.

Runners-up for the awards were Fred Bickford, with a 3.9 average, and Dorothy Marr, with a 3.8 average.

Thirty-five students will graduate with honors this semester, Richardson stated. Those eligible to receive these honors are students with permanent membership in Alpha Gamma Sigma. To become permanent members, students must be eligible for Alpha Gamma Sigma for three out of five, or four out of five semesters, and have maintained a grade point average of 3.3 or higher in all their semesters here.

Others graduating with honors are Timmy Awyong, Lloyd Back, Theodore Belsky, Suzanne Blake, Armen Boyd, Faith Bunting, Ronald Geraghty, Maria Giron-Cerna, Ellis Jacob, Louise Johnson, Stanley Kettlewell, Donald Kittredge, Nola Knight, Mabel Manning, Jack McGudy, Richard McDonnell, Aimee Or, Alexander Panasenko, Beverly Schroth, Ralph Sibley, Eleanor Smith, James Stetler, Diana Strickland, David Takahashi, Nelson Tom, Peter Varcados, Lillian Vitaly, Stanley Weston, Edna Williams, Nancy Young, and Barbara Zook.

Cafeteria Closes Doors Last Three Days Of Semester

Because of finals week, the cafeteria will be closed Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, June 12, 13 and 14, the last three days of the semester, but will continue in normal operation until that time, according to John Dunn, instructor in charge of the cafeteria and fountain.

Fountain hours will not be affected.

Dunn added that students have been very [illegible] about the [illegible] in food prices. "Only one student complained about the prices," he said, "and about 20 told me they wondered why prices weren't increased before. More students bussed their dishes the first week it went into effect than ever before. Whether they thought they could reverse the increase or not, I really don't know."

Although he felt unhappy that the increase was necessary, Dunn also indicated that it has some good advantages; the cafeteria is cleaner because of the addition of four new bus girls, dish breakage is less because trained personnel stack the dishes properly, and the tray room is much cleaner and easier to handle because dishes come in at the proper place.

Eighteen Students Make Literary Debut In Forum

One thousand copies of Forum, the college's annual literary magazine, are now being distributed by staff members of the club, according to Josephine Hanson, editor.

Of the contents, poems were written by F. H. Stivender, Clare Jonte, Kenneth K. Kitch, Adolfo Bonilla, and Solbritt Bjorkman. Parodies were written by Harold E. Riley, Richard Moore and Elmer Gentry.

"Muhamed Iman contributed to the quality of the Forum with his story entitled Childhood Reflections Of My Father, a story which contains remarkable universality," Miss Hanson said. Other stories were written by Stephen Bartholomew, Kitch, and William E. Whitney.

Those students who have not yet done so may obtain copies at the Forum office, C-331A. Forum is offered without cost to Associated Students, and sold for 50 cents to non-members.

Placement Office To Remain Open Until June 22; Many Jobs Available

To assist regular session students, graduates and summer session students, the college placement center will remain [illegible] period June 17 to 22, according to Joseph Amori, placement director here.

Amori will be available throughout the entire week from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., to assist students with placement problems, and occupational counseling and guidance. All students desiring assistance on full time, summer and summer session part time jobs should make every effort to arrange for personal interviews during this special period, Amori said.

There is still a heavy demand for summer workers for public and private boys and girls' camps throughout California. Especially needed are all types of counselors—arts and crafts, aquatics, recreation, music, dramatics, nature study, and riflery. There is also a demand for women students who can type or take shorthand.

Men and women who have had [illegible] camping activities, YMCA, YWCA, or recreational leadership will be given preference. Salaries range from $25 per week with room and board, to $100 per week for outstanding leaders who are able to assume management roles, Amori added.

Students desiring part time summer jobs, either afternoons or evenings, should file their applications immediately in S-187.

Graduates who have not been placed yet in their chosen fields should call at the placement office for clearing. General education, liberal arts, and special area majors who desire full time career job opportunities, are needed in several categories, added Amori.

Some Journalistic Bouquets —And Well-Earned Brickbats

SINCE this is the final issue of The Guardsman for this semester, we felt this would be a fitting occasion to distribute a few choice journalistic bouquets to some very deserving persons whom we feel really earned them.

We're grateful to those persons who originated the idea, to those who made the plans, and to those who donated to the campus blood drive—this was a very worthwhile charity.

Thanks go to the Little Theater group of the college who consistently provided well-rounded and high quality drama for student enjoyment. It's too bad more students didn't attend and give these talented thespians the level of support they rightly deserved.

Our compliments to the International Relations Club for their recent Latin American Fiesta. Talented foreign students from 12 different parts of the hemisphere provided an evening of superb entertainment for all.

A vote of appreciation goes to the students who staged the May Festival celebration. Despite numerous obstacles and last minute problems which they encountered, the annual event was an extremely successful one.

Congratulations to the Campus Police pistol teams for taking first place in a recent match at the Oakland Pistol Club. This is their first trophy, but considering that the teams have been in existence only two years, and taking into account the competition with which they have been matched, their record is quite satisfactory. We feel certain that, as award winners go, these teams are only just beginning.

NOW, FOR A COUPLE OF BRICKBATS . . .

A sincere thank you goes to those creative students who managed to find time in their schedules to anonymously decorate many of this semester's election posters.

Many of these spontaneous drawings and ingenious bits of writing revealed a great deal of talent on the part of the originators—talent that could possibly be put to use—somewhere else.

A hearty thank you to students for their splendid cooperation in keeping conversation and other distracting noise to an absolute minimum in the library this semester. Under these ideal conditions, concentration and study were greatly facilitated. It was usually so quiet there that it was possible to hear a ten ton pin drop.

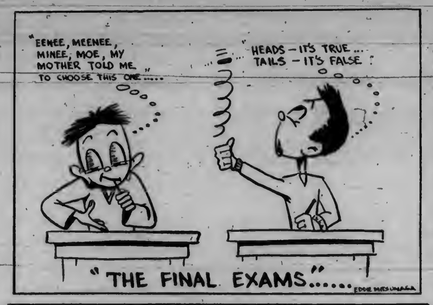
MORE ACTIVITIES and personalities than could be mentioned went in to making Spring of '57 a memorable semester at the college. Among the notable events could be counted all the dances given by the various clubs and organizations on campus. Financially (and that is the important thing, isn't it?) this semester's events were lulu's.



Thanks to a straight-shooting, level-headed, quietly humorous and imaginative Student Council, most Associated Student business was carried off without incident, and such council members as Freddie Hicks, John Kelly, Lily Kowalski and Linda McArdle, to name a few, showed original and responsible thinking.

Bob Varni as AS President made an impression on the traditions of that office which should serve to guide and influence future presidents who desire to bring maturity, gentlemanliness and leadership to bear on the execution of duties of that position.

Duane Shippey's job as car sales chairman will not be forgotten quickly, and Brower Dimond's handling of several trying budget allocations was done with tact and good humor.

LARGELY, what has been done by student leaders this semester will show up next semester in the way of a stronger AS constitution, the college's hosting of the State Conference and a wonderful new plan to give each and every qualified AS member recognition for student activities. Many of the people who worked so hard to push through these things will be out of the college and unable to benefit from them.

Foresight — Accident Prevention Series 'Live' On KQED

San Francisco's educational TV station, KQED, is currently presenting a "live" series on industrial accident prevention.

Entitled Safety On The Job, this new series is presented on Tuesday night at 8:30 p.m.

Although aimed at those engaged in industrial occupations, the program will be of interest to future engineers and industrial workers. The subject to be covered on June 18 is Slips And Falls.

Guy Madison will step out of his western togs when he appears on Climax! on KPIX.

The production will take place at 8:30 p.m. on Thursday, June 13. Title of the play in which Madison will demonstrate his dramatic ability is The Man Who Stole The Bible.

The three nation-wide TV stations are now engaging in Operation Cancellation. They seem to be competing with each other to see who can cancel more shows. According to Variety, over 45 per cent of the network shows are being cancelled.

Some of the major shows to be discontinued include:

NBC—Sid Caesar, George Gobel, Alcoa Hour-Goodyear Playhouse, Robert Montgomery, Jane Wyman, Big Surprise, Panic and Kaiser Aluminum Hour.

CBS—Jackie Gleason, High Finance, Private Secretary, Arthur Godfrey And His Friends, 20th Century-Fox Hour and West Point.

ABC—Galen Drake, Omnibus, Wire Service, Ford Theatre, Crossroads and Ray Anthony.

No final plans have been completed as to what will happen to I Love Lucy. It is possible it will become a monthly hour-long show. Those Whiting Girls will fill in for the summer. The final I Love Lucy show will be June 24.

• • •

Gleason is another major star who is undecided about his future plans. His Saturday night show on KPIX has definitely been cancelled. A new series, Perry Mason, will take over the spot.

• • •

Also on the same station, the same night, at 9:30 p.m. Have Gun, Will Travel will replace Men Of Annapolis. Richard Boone, star of Medic, will be the featured player in this adult western series.

• • •

On KRON, Richard Diamond, Private Detective, is scheduled to replace December Bride. This show was a long-time favorite on radio. David Janssen will play the role Dick Powell originally created.

• • •

Just what success these new shows will have during the coming summer and fall months is a question still to be answered, but one thing is certain. The producers are attempting to gain new public interest in television viewing.

Old Mr. Firehouse

No. 38's Record Covers 50 Years Of 'Fire' History

By Ames Swartsfager

Old Mr. Firehouse, No. 38, located at Ocean and San Jose Avenues, isn't at all happy about New

Mr. Firehouse, No. 38, located on Ocean and Phelan Avenues, across the street from the campus.

With equipment and company set to move in September to the new location, Old Mr. Firehouse is all shook up.

"What will become of me?" he said sadly. "I'm too old to get another position."

Born in 1906, he was too young to help in the big fire, but since then the old boy has made quite a record. For instance. Soon after he was old enough, he was placed in charge of fire company No. 38, then composed of one red wagon with six lengths of hose and two coal black horses. Later, more honor came to him when the largest battalion headquarters in the city made its home there.

As time passed, things changed and "horseless carriages" began roaming the streets; this meant disaster to his friends the fire horses, but old methods must make way for the new.

Dubious as to its qualities, a bright red fire engine was rolled into the garage. "It took me a while to get accustomed to the monster," No. 38 said reminiscently, "but then new models came in—sleek, long, and with a lot of chrome.

For him this is disastrous, because his tower (where they hang the hoses to dry after a fire) is only 25 feet tall. Even though his engine company fought for his remodeling—his fate was sealed.

"Not to change the subject," he said, "but I personally believe that this new 'firehouse' will not be able to take care of my old company, much less the new hook - and - ladder company which is to be added. The only thing that makes the new house better is that his tower is 50 feet high."

"I only have a few months before they move out my whole complement of firemen," he cried.

Psychiatric Hare Loose

Reward Offered For 'Lost' Rabbit

If anyone should see a cute little pink, blue and green rabbit hopping around the campus, grab the cotton-picking hare and take it to the psychiatrist because it has gone stark raving insane.

It seems that no one has told the poor disillusioned bunny that he is made of plaster of Paris and shouldn't be able to move by himself.

It was last seen sitting on the table at the front of the cafeteria where it was used to advertise the May Festival. The bunny was rented from Party Props party decoration store and cost $17.50, which will have to be paid by the Associated Students if the bunny doesn't show his cute little long-eared face soon.

The bunny rabbit probably hopped right into the arms of some student who, through his inability to grow up and face adult life, always longed for an Easter bunny of his very own, and now refuses to part with his new found friend.

Surely! The rabbit wasn't stolen. No college student, especially one here at the college, would stoop to anything as juvenile as stealing a plaster of Paris rabbit.

If anyone should catch the elusive little rabbit, please turn it in to the Student Council room near the cafeteria, or to The Guardsman office, S-344. No questions will be asked. In fact, a reward will be given—all money spent for feeding the little bunny rabbit will be refunded.

Curious Cat? Natch

Ad 'English' Breeds Calypso Manhattanism

By Ray Hackett

"Curiosity killed a cat and satisfaction brought it back," is widely quoted and could be the axiom behind the modern expose magazines which have been so successful despite postoffice regulations. Attorney General Pat Brown and the fact that nobody will admit buying one.

P. T. Barnum once said, "Give the people what they want," so with ears to the door and eye to the keyhole the following has been discovered, or perhaps it is best to say uncovered.

Millions of Americans have been led to believe they speak, read and write the English language. The truth is they don't. They speak either "Americanism" or "Manhattanism."

English-speaking people would ask for bracers, not suspenders, and cravats, not neckties. Their ads contain such words as labour, colour, and honour. The Englishman asks his boss for a holiday, since vacation is an unknown word, so that he can become a "traveller." At least one state, Illinois, has recognized this, and according to its state constitution, Illinoians speak "Americanism."

"Manhattanism" has claimed many victims since advertising has become a big business. They no longer say advertisement but ad, not naturally but natch. The word night has become nite; not through, thru. The longer spelling has become archaic because it would not fit into modern ads.

Although "Manhattanism" can't be blamed entirely for the language in this country, it must take all the blame for the pseudo-Calypso fad now sweeping the country.

It conforms to the popular music Americans know rather than to the West Indian music they don't. In other words, it's Manhattan Calypso, music to make the "almighty dollar by." Calypso, like English, has fallen under the spell of "Manhattanism."

"Manhattanism" must have spread further than English and Calypso but how far only time and expose magazines will tell.

Miss SF Contest

Shirley Payton, Audrey Bocek In Pageant Finals

With the Miss America Pageant foremost in several minds, the advanced preliminary contests begin to move into the limelight, while many contenders eliminated in city wide proceedings are left with fleeting memories of their attempts at the national crown.

First of the college's four entrants is runner-up in third place Shirley Payton, who paved her way through a month of judging to win her position. In the talent competition Miss Payton revised the old soft shoe routine to the tune, That's How Close I Want To Be To You.

Close behind Miss Payton was Audrey Bocek, who finished as one of the top five contestants. Her contribution to the talent phase of the contest was an interpretation of the new Ralph Marterie version of Shishkebob.

Finishing in the finalist division, Australian born Jo Cataffo made it three for four in the college's attempt to enter the last phase of the local pageant. Miss Cataffo's display of talent was a strong rendition of September In The Rain.

Continuing to glance back at the San Francisco Pageant, the final judging should bring to Miss Payton and Miss Bocek memories of their sterling answers to the three questions put to them by Master of Ceremonies Paul Speegle.

First, Miss Payton was asked to name the outstanding quality that makes San Francisco distinctive. She replied simply, "The people who make it up." Miss Bocek, being a little more explicit, pinpointed her answer by replying, "The Golden Gate Bridge," using pertinent structural statistics for a reason.

Responding to the second question, Miss Payton thought business was her most rewarding high school subject, while Miss Bocek answered English literature. To the final question, Miss Bocek said that Germany was the foreign country she would like to visit, while Miss Payton answered England, because "I can understand them."

Shots At Ramdom

By Dick Moore

THOSE students who are low freshmen this semester, and who, it is assumed, will be high freshmen next semester, will be happy to cram their way in and out of finals (it can be a tight squeeze) with the singularly gladdening thought in their heads that graduation is only 19 months, or 81 weeks, or 570 days, or 13,680 hours away for them. Them, of course, that makes it.

• • •

MORE ACTIVITIES and personalities than could be mentioned went in to making Spring of '57 a memorable semester at the college. Among the notable events could be counted all the dances given by the various clubs and organizations on campus. Financially (and that is the important thing, isn't it?) this semester's events were lulu's.

• • •

Two men interviewed cleaned rugs, one man worked for Rand water heater company installing water heaters, and another man cleaned pots and pans in a bakery.

Unless people stop dirtying their rugs, buying from department stores or having water heaters, students will be able to continue their studies here with money earned from part time jobs.

Part Time Jobs Satisfy Students' Money Problems

A common problem among students here at the college is money! Everyone seems to need it!

To satisfy the need for funds, most students have part time jobs and some even hold two or three positions. Among the women who were asked their profession, the most common was a department store clerk.

A few women interviewed were telephone operators or held other similar positions at the telephone company.

One male student interviewed worked in one florist shop from 5 to 7 a.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, in another florist shop from 2 to 6 p.m. Tuesdays through Fridays, in a gas station from 3 to 8 a.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and in a department store on Monday nights and Saturdays. This is real ambition!

Profs Outclass Sophs, 16-1 In Annual Classic

By John Henry

A hard-hitting and hustling Prof squad dumped a wild-throwing, outclassed Soph team last Friday to win the annual Prof-Soph softball classic for the 13th time.

The final count was 16 to 1 in favor of the instructors as they batted starting Soph pitcher Bill Allen for six runs in the first inning, and seven more in the second stanza.

The Profs sent nine men to the plate in the first inning before pitcher Roy Diederichsen popped out to third base his second time at bat during the inning for the third out. Winning pitcher Diederichsen had the honor of also tallying the first Prof run when he crossed the plate after Tom Wilson's hard hit single to left field.

The Sophs' only score was in the first frame when first baseman Bob Tealer got to first after his hard hit ball bounced out of Prof shortstop Tom Nesbitt's hands. Tealer was advanced to third on Allen's safety over second base, and finally scored on Pat Lucy's grounder to the shortstop. This was the only serious threat on the part of the Sophs as Diederichsen managed to keep the rest of the students scoreless for the remainder of the game.

Prof power continued in the second inning when Roy Burkhead greeted Allen with a sharp single to centerfield. Alex Schwarz, a thorn in the side of the Sophs all day, drew a walk and then Wilson connected for his second straight single of the day to score Roy Burkhead for the first run of the inning.

Dick Main got life on an error, and Nesbitt sent him to second with another single. Maury Power drew a walk and the bases were cleaned on Sid Phelan's and Grover Klemmer's twin hits to left field.

In the third inning catcher Lon Earnshaw traded positions with Allen and took the mound. Earnshaw was a little more effective on the faculty hit parade as he held them to only 3 more runs the rest of the contest.

A bit of excitement took place in the third inning when Prof second baseman "Clemmy" Skrabak blocked the bag on Earnshaw who was coming in hard and fast. Both players met with a boom and went flying head over heels. Skrabak hung on to the ball and the 150-pound scrapper jumped to his feet as Earnshaw at 215 was called out.

Fans were witnesses to a near scrape in the fourth frame when agitator Schwarz knocked runner Josh Williams off his feet while passing by first base.

Delicate Game Of Tennis Now A Rugged Sport

For a number of years "rugged" sports were determined by the amount of physical stamina displayed by personal contact between combatants.

During this period of time, high society took up a sport suitable to the dainty qualities of its breed. Not until the inauguration of the fast serve, coupled with swift hard action, did tennis develop and become a "rugged" sport.

Tennis is an intensive sport requiring players to be in good physical condition. Like a boxer, a tennis player must have strong legs and good wind.

On the average, a player covers approximately four miles in the course of a three set match, during which time there are no time outs.

Roy Diederichsen, tennis coach here, commented on what he termed "carry over values" of tennis. Pointing out that football, baseball and basketball players can only play a limited period of time, tennis players can take part in the sport most of their life.

Adding that the majority of the players at the 24 courts in Golden Gate Park are between the ages of 35 and 60 years of age, Diederichsen stated that the game keeps a person physically fit for an entire lifetime.

Proving his point, Diederichsen listed as an example Bill Wright, a 43-year-old tennis star here in 1953 who was ranked fourth in the entire state in two-year college competition.

Probably the youngest stockholder in organized baseball is Pee Wee Reese's son. Mark Allen Reese, born on February 4, 1957, owns a share of stock in the Louisville Colonels.

13 Chosen for Hall Of Fame

Guardsman Sports
Volume 44, No. 13 WEDNESDAY, JUNE 5, 1957 Page 3

Matson Picked By All Voters; Hillsman, Hudson, Toler Other Top Majority Ballot Choices

By Nick Peters

Unanimous choices for entrance to the college's Sports Hall of Fame were Ralph Hillsman, Ollie Matson, Burl Toler, and Willie Hudson. In addition to this quartet nine others were also admitted to the coveted society, bringing to 13 the total number of past athletes admitted to the Hall of Fame after the inaugural voting session.

Other athletes admitted to the select group were Helen Crlenkovich, Jim Cromm, Jack Egan, Stan Keith, Van Parish, Art Psaltis, Al Wycoff, Clint Redus and Don Stillwell.

Hillsman, now dean of Student Activities at the college, was a member of the college's first basketball team in 1935. In 1936 he captained the squad and was named to the All-League team.

Three footballers, Matson, Toler and Hudson, are the college's most famed gridders. The celebrated Matson played halfback for the Rams in 1948, made the All-Conference and All-American Junior College eleven, and went on to fame as an All-American at USF, an Olympian, and is an outstanding professional gridder. Toler, a teammate of Matson's here and at USF, played center and was picked for the All-Conference and All-American teams.

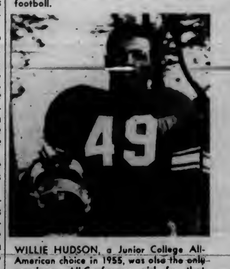
Hudson was an All-Conference guard on the 1955 grid squad and was named to the All-Junior College All-American team.

The lone woman admitted to the Hall of Fame was Miss Crlenkovich, and she certainly earned the Hall of Fame committee's vote, as she placed second in the Far Western and National diving championships in 1938 and 1939.

Glue-fingered Cromm was an All-Conference end for the 1944 Ram footballers. He combined with quarterback George Newell to produce the most fearsome pass-catch duo of that era.

Tracksters elected to the Hall of Fame were Egan, Parish and Redus. The massive Egan set a college record in the shot put at 45'8" and in the discus at 143'7". At the Fresno Relays in 1954 he bettered the discus mark with a heave of 155'11".

Parish, on the cinders in 1953, was outstanding in the 100, 220 and 180-yard low hurdles. He also made great use of his speed as an end on the football team. Redus was at his best in '56, running both hurdles, the 100 and 220. He set league marks in the 120-yard highs (15:1) and the 220-yard lows (24:2).



Psaltis made the All-Conference cage squad in 1947 as a guard and was also an outstanding end on the 1946 grid squad. Stillwell played end on the great 1948 squad with Toler and Matson. With his deceptive play he took a lot of pressure off the unparalleled Matson. The speedy Wycoff played halfback and fullback for the Ram pigskinners of '50 and '51.

A site housing the names of the athletes on a plaque plus their biographical sketches has not yet been chosen.

OLLIE MATSON, the only former Ram player to be picked on all votes during the first annual Hall of Fame vote. Matson is currently a star with the professional Chicago Cardinal football team.

RALPH HILLSMAN, current Dean of Student Activities, was the first captain of a Ram basketball team and led his team to first place in the Big Eight Conference.

BURL TOLER, a teammate of Matson's on the 1948 championship squad, gained later recognition as a star lineman at the University of San Francisco and professional football.

WILLIE HUDSON, a Junior College All-American choice in 1955, was also the only unanimous All-Conference pick for that year.

Gridders Prepare For Big Eight Conference Race; Start Summer Practice Sessions In Late August

City College's varsity football squad will start its practice sessions in late August in preparation for the Big Eight Conference race, Ram football coach Grover Klemmer announced last week.

Coach Klemmer will welcome back a number of outstanding stars from last year's second place team. Among them are All-Conference tackle Ernie Ibarra, Tony Jones and Pete Morgan. These along with Bill Barrington and Josh Williams, will strengthen the tackle and center positions. With a few additions at guards and ends, Klemmer should have a sound and swift line.

ERNIE IBARRA, 6-0, 220-pound veteran of the Ram football squad, hopes to end the two-year reign of the Stockton Mustangs as league champions. Ibarra was on All-Conference choice last year at the tackle position and also plays guard.

Returning in the backfield are two fast and shifty halfbacks, second team All-Conference choice Gene Craft and Dave Tyree. Bill Rathbun, a powerful, hard-charging fullback, and quarterback candidate Larry Bolton. Also on the list for the upcoming season will be Sam Rios, who can play either full or halfback.

If a few promising athletes can get their academic credits and grade points up to the requirements, and included with a few of San Francisco's outstanding preps, this also would be a tremendous asset to the Rams.

Klemmer looks for two-time champion Stockton to furnish the toughest competition, with Oakland coming along in fast fashion. Modesto and Santa Rosa should be hard to handle, as they usually are.

RAMBLINGS

By Lou Lucia

WITH all this talking of getting a major league franchise in the Bay Area, it may be noted that if the Pacific Coast League had turned into an independent loop in the 1930's, a power laden team with a composite .336 average may have been this league's contribution to some sort of all-star game arrangement.

The players chosen on the mythical PCL All-League team would be composed of stars now in the big leagues who received valuable training on the coast. Most of the players mentioned were bought outright, and a few were recalled through the major league teams' options. The team with our own mythical line-up would include (with major-coast league teams and batting averages—as of May 24—in parenthesis):

Gene Mauch, 2b (Bos-Oak, .333)
Gene Woodling, cf (Clev-SF, .324)
Ted Williams, lf (Bos-SD, .417)
Hank Simpson, 1b (KC-SD, .333)
Ed Bailey, c (Chn-SD, .343)
Jackie Jensen, rf (Bos-Oak, .294)
Minnie Minoso (Ch-SD, .324)
Jim Brideweser, ss (Balt - SF, .317)
Lew Burdette, p (Mil-SF, 5-2)

Reserves are plentiful with such established stars as Jim Rivera, Billy Martin, Dale Long, Sam White, Bob Thurman, Sam Jones, Gus Bell, Al Smith, Ray Boone, Jim Wilson and Tommy Byrne. By the end of the year it is sure that the aforementioned players will have faced a decline in batting percentage but so will everyone else.

Therefore as a comparison, the May 24 batting averages will be fairly accurate in determining the strength of former PCL players. If the league had turned independent in the '30's they would today be closely on a par with the major league brand of ball.

The American Association and International League would have trouble trying to measure up to this team, and therefore must be rated second as seasoning grounds for major league ballplayers.

Each baseball fan has his own chance to get his current all-star team choices in the American and National League game on July 4 by voting for his stars. It is interesting to note if your personal selections measure up with the fans polled.

Beta Tau Defeats Chinese Club For AMS Championship

By John Henry

Beta Tau fraternity edged the Chinese Club, 51 to 48, last Tuesday night in the men's gymnasium to grab the 1957 Associated Men Student basketball championship.

The scrappy, high-leaping Chinese five were outscored but not outfought as they staged a terrific battle all of the way down to the wire. Height was to the advantage of the fraternity champs, whose tallest man was 6'3" George Ivelich, and the game's top scorer with 22 points. Johnny Chan at 5'9" was the Chinese Club's biggest.

Frank Chew was an outstanding performer all night with his playmaking ability. The former member of last season's Washington High 130's undefeated champs paced his mates in scoring with 15 digits.

Ivelich found his shooting range in the last eight minutes and the result was 10 important points, which eventually spelled disaster for the Chinese Club.

Vic Bogo hit 21 points for Beta Tau which made him and Ivelich a two-man scoring punch.

Chan ended the night's scoring with 12 points. Chan's defensive play bothered Ivelich and made the big boy work for all of his points. "Lefty" Lee chipped in 10 markers for the Chinese cause and Duncan Lee's great jumping ability and all-around play made the Chinese five a good, well-rounded squad.

Blocks Awarded To 58 At Dinner

Fifty-eight of the college's top athletes, from five different sports, were awarded their Block SF's last Monday at the semi-annual Block SF dinner, which was held in Smith Hall.

From each of the sports there was a most valuable player award for outstanding performance.

The most valuable players were Bob Tealer, from the basketball team that took first place in the Big Eight League this semester; Nick Schaff, number one man of the tennis team, and a newcomer this semester to the team; Don McDowell, also a first season performer who was top man on the golf team, and Bob Bandettini, one of the outstanding veterans of the baseball team.

Most valuable player award for the track team was not available at press time.

Because of the time element involved, the proposed Block SF jackets amendment to the Associated Student constitution was not added to the ballot for the amendment election that was held last week, according to Lon Earnshaw, author of the amendment.

Nature In The Precise Eye, an exhibit by Richard Brooks, is currently being shown and is scheduled for the remainder of this week. Third of the four featured photo debuts, this exhibit is described as "fine and sensitive perception of character details in persons, places, and things," in a critical analysis by Smith.

Experiments, a group of prints by the Austrian artist Wolfgang Pflanz, is currently featured as an additional attraction in the photo series. Containing the first showings in America of his work, the Austrian artist's exhibit will be displayed until this Friday, June 7.

Already a multi-title holder, the Kappa Phi beauty has held such titles as Miss South San Francisco, Miss San Mateo, Dream Girl of the Floral Fiesta, high school and college football queen, a member of the court of the Shrine East - West Game Queen and Maiden of California at the State Fair.

June 13 Deadline For Book Resale

Students wishing to receive 50 per cent value for used books are advised to resell their books to the Ramporium prior to Thursday, June 13, so they will be within the Ramporium's quota, according to Richard Main, Ramporium manager.

Books turned in after the quota is reached will receive only Blue Book value.

Students wishing to return summer school books should do so before July 31. "No books may be returned after the summer session," Main stated.

Proper identification must be shown when returning books such as Associated Student cards, or driver's license. "A registration card must also be shown," Main said.

"The earlier books are returned, the better chance students will have for receiving 50 per cent value."

Kappa Phi Receives 2nd Dougherty Trophy

Kappa Phi sorority was awarded the Margaret Dougherty trophy at the Feminine Fling last Friday.

The Dougherty trophy, in honor of Margaret Dougherty, former dean of women here, is awarded to the sorority with the highest schoiastic standing, Dean Mary Golding stated.

This was the eighth time the trophy has been awarded and the second time that Kappa Phi sorority has received it.

Sports Sampler On Sale Today At Student Bank

Sports Sampler, a pocket-sized book containing admission tickets to $90 worth of popular local events, will be on sale at the Associated Student bank in Smith Hall for ten days starting today. Price of this magazine and the $90 worth of tickets is $3.75.

Students who purchase one of these $3.75 magazines will be given the opportunity to view a University of California football game against Oregon State, the September 21 Stanford game and two San Francisco State games.

Other sports include two USF basketball games, two Pacific Coast collegiate basketball double - headers, a University of California basketball game, and two San Francisco State games.

Varied entertainment is offered in the way of scenic seaplane flights over San Francisco, horseback rides, motorcycle and motor racing tickets, admittance to three drive-in theaters, a bay cruise, and six movie tickets.

Two of the programs, those pertaining to seaplane rides and horseback riding, require an accompanying paid admission, the publishers of Sports Sampler magazine stated.

Since copies of the previous (1954) Bay Area issue of the Sports Sampler magazine ran out of stock before many could purchase them, the publishers announced that the supply of their magazine is limited, and available only on a "first come - first served" basis.

Summer Session Applications Due

Last day for applicants who wish to make their tentative programs to attend summer session here is tomorrow, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

Students are expected to plan their programs with their counselors before reporting to S-117 to fill out the registration books, Miss Learnard said, adding that veterans are also expected to file a copy of their programs with the veterans affairs office.

Registration must be confirmed on Thursday, June 20. Classes will start on Monday, June 24, and a maximum of six units, plus physical education, will be the limit the college allows students to carry for the summer session.

Men or women desiring to take either Chemistry 1A, 1B or Zoology 1A or 1B may not enroll in any additional courses. These classes are worth respectively five and four units, and considered by the college acceptables as "full-load" courses.

AS Card Sales Week Shifts To High Gear As AMS, AWS Vie For Competition Trophies

Getting into high gear this week is the drive to top last semester's sale of Associated Student cards in what is termed "Card Sales Week" at the college.

This campaign has developed into a selling contest between the Associated Men Students and the Associated Women Students, with 10 members of each organization combing the campus and striving to convince non-members of the advantages of owning an AS card.

BROWER DIMOND, AS card sales chairman.

Advantages are many, as outlined by Card Sales Chairman Brower Dimond. Holders of the card are permitted free admittance to Associated Students' dances, athletic contests, the homecoming pageant, and other social activities.

Other privileges available to holders include on-campus parking and discounts at numerous local establishments such as clothing stores, service stations, cleaners and florists. Spouse cards are provided for married couples, entitling the holders to all the aforementioned privileges.

The number of cards sold by each group during the week of competition will not be revealed during the sales period, but will be announced at the Club Activities Board dance on September 27 in Smith Hall, at which time a trophy will be awarded to the group selling the most cards.

In last semester's drive the AWS outsold the AMS. The two organizations will again be trying to outdo each other in an effort to give as many students here as possible the opportunity to participate in the numerous activities planned for this semester.

Trophies will also be presented to the leading card salesman of each organization at the CAB dance.

Card sales have already surpassed last year's quota by 253 cards, Dimond added. It is hoped that sales will reach an all time high.

Radio Club Acts To Extend KCSF News Broadcasts

Students, both old and new, were greeted by an entirely new medium during registration on September 4. It was the college's own radio station, KCSF, the brainchild of the newly formed KCSF Broadcasters' Club, and will serve both a functional as well as an entertaining end.

This club was conceived and initiated by three of its present members, Dave Tipton, president; John Wolff and Dan Syufy. Its goals are two-fold. It serves the Associated Students by bringing up-to-the-minute newscasts on campus events as well as programs of music during the noon hour.

An unofficial survey of the faculty, after the announcements during registration, was met with a general note of approval and the students' acceptance of the format presented in the noon program has been equally enthusiastic.

The second and most important purpose of the club is to give its members, who are all students in radio broadcasting, ground training in the way in which a radio station actually operates.

The campus carrier system is nothing new, but its treatment by the Broadcasters' Club makes it unique. It is geared to operate in exactly the same fashion as any one of the major network stations.

Fall Enrollment Hits Highest Peak

Total student enrollment at the college this semester rose during the past two weeks and is now in excess of 6,900, making it the highest in the college's history, Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, announced this week.

Of this total, more than 5,570 are daytime students, marking the greatest increase in daytime enrollment since 1955. The 5,570 students attending day classes surpass last Fall's enrollment by virtually 300.

Miss Learnard also advised students that Friday, October 4, is the final day for filing petitions for graduation. It is essential, she declared, that the petitions be submitted well in advance so that they may be checked to insure that all graduation requirements have been met. The petitions are obtainable at the office of the registrar.

Kelly Elected AS President To Fill Vacancy Left In Spring Balloting

Kelly Pledges Full AS Representation

"I would like to express my sincere gratitude to those who voted for me in the special election. I would also like to thank those who aided me in my campaign.

"During my term in office I will do my best to give you, the Associated Students, the kind of representation you want.

"In the student office there is a suggestion box for your ideas in regard to student government. I am hoping that you will use it.

"Student Council meets Tuesday and Thursday at 12 noon in B-2. You are invited to attend these meetings. For those of you who are unable to attend, the minutes of Student Council will be posted around the campus."

—John Kelly, AS President

316 Students Vote In Final-Round Of Special Election

By John Rosso

In a special election held here Friday, September 13, and Monday, September 16, John Kelly was elected President of the Associated Students, winning 149 votes from a total of 316 cast.

The election was held this semester to choose an AS President because of the failure of two earlier elections held in the previous semester in selecting a winning candidate.

Then a runoff election was held to decide the office of AS President and one remaining office in both Freshman and Sophomore Council membership.

This proved to be of no avail in deciding the selection of AS President because of a later constitutional disqualification of the two candidates for that office.

Tabulated results of the election held September 13 and 16 saw the defeat of Kelly's opponents, Jim Woods and Howard Klein, Woods winning 117 votes and Klein 40.

At the end of last semester's previous election, candidates for Student Council found themselves moved up into higher offices through a similar disqualification of other candidates.

Larry Vargo, running for Sophomore Council membership, found himself moved up to the office of Sophomore President.

Kelly, then running for an open Sophomore Council seat, defeated Jerry Hoffman and Nadine Wilson in the runoff election.

In the race for Freshman Council membership, six out of the ten candidates won, which left one seat vacant. The runoff election saw four candidates competing for this seat, which resulted in the election of Kai Peterson. It was then found that four winning candidates were disqualified under the same rule. This moved in the losing candidates. Final results saw Mary McCormick, Vern Peterson, Rich Pels, Bill Thomas, Shelly Osborne, Peterson and George Fesunoff as Freshman members of council.

Again in the earlier election, Bob Rodriguez defeated Brower Dimond by a margin of 43 votes for the Associated Men Student presidency. Rodriguez collected 300 votes to Dimond's 257.

Defeating Shirley Greenberg by a narrow margin of 298 to 258 votes, the Associated Women Student presidency went to Darlene Enfield.

Ninth Annual IFC Smoker To Inaugurate Rush Activities

Each of the ten fraternities on campus will present the ninth consecutive Inter-Fraternity Council Smoker tonight at 8 p.m. in the men's gymnasium, according to Bill Robinson, IFC president.

All men students are invited to attend the smoker, he said, which will give men a chance to meet members of the college's fraternities. Each fraternity will have a booth set up where members of the group will answer any questions on their group that may arise. Signups for the different fraternities will take place in an individual IFC booth, with the preferences of each prospective pledge listed.

Scheduled as speaker of the evening will be Joe Verducci, head football coach at San Francisco State College, Robinson said. Other entertainment features will be two singing groups and a trampoline act by Lambda Phi fraternity, he said, as well as a basketball game between the fraternities.

Refreshments including doughnuts, cigarettes and cokes, will be arranged by Phi Beta Delta fraternity. Beta Phi Beta has taken the responsibility of arranging a program, Robinson said, which will include a small rundown on each of the 10 fraternity activities and some of their history. They will be distributed tonight at the beginning of the Smoker.

There is no obligation to a man who signs up for a fraternity, Robinson said. This is only a meeting for prospective pledges to get acquainted with the different fraternities, and for the brothers of each fraternity to meet the possible pledges.

The ten fraternities that will be represented in tonight's Smoker are Alpha Kappa Rho, Alpha Phi Omega, Alpha Sigma Delta, Beta Phi Beta, Beta Tau, Gamma Phi Ypsilon, Lambda Phi, Phi Beta Delta, Tau Chi Sigma and Zeta Phi Sigma.

TV Success Story To Feature H&R Here October 3

Success Story, the mobile television show that moves around the Bay Area, will bring its cameras to the Hotel and Restaurant department here for a visit on Thursday, October 3, at 6:30 p.m. over KGO-TV, channel 7.

The show itself was the brainchild of fourth semester student Dave Hagar. It was Hager who contacted the Richfield people and the Success Story staff, suggesting the program.

The student president of the Hotel and Restaurant department, John Murphy, has since been working closely with "Story," over the thousand and one problems which must be ironed out before a television show goes on the air.

The program will consist of interviews with celebrities of industry and many of the various committee members around the college. It will also include a tour of the laboratories of the Hotel and Restaurant department, featuring the entire 120-man cafeteria crew.

The cameras will show the students carrying out assignments as they would during a normal working day. Still pictures of former graduates and where they now work will be flashed on the screen from time to time, as an example of the kind of top grade people this department turns out.

Two high ranking men in this business will be interviewed during the course of the program. On camera for a short [illegible] will be George [illegible] Smith, who is now general manager for the Hotel Mark Hopkins. It was for Smith that the college's Smith Hall was named during the dedication in 1956.

Sharing the spotlight will be Tremain Loud, owner of the Hotel Californian and President of the Hotel and Restaurant Foundation.

Following the opening of the program, in which still shots of the college campus will be shown, certain high points will follow. Some of these will be the special interviews with the foreign instructor-chefs, a demonstration of the H&R's system of lining up students with lunch trays — the square system.

Guardsman Schedules 12 Issues This Fall

Members of the board this semester, appointed by Moore, are Carol Harris, Pat Metsack, Brower Dimond, Linda McArdle, Jerry Redford, John Kelly and Pauline Rodriguez.

Sorority Rushing Begins Sunday With ISC Tea

Sorority activities will be officially started this Sunday, September 29, with the Inter-Sorority Council joint tea for prospective rushees to be held at Laurel Hall, 2676 California Street, from 2 to 5 p.m., according to Carol Olson, ISC president.

Purpose of the tea will be to acquaint all rushees with members of the various sororities, Miss Olson said. Dress will be wool dresses or suits, gloves, heels and hats for rushees and cocktail dresses for sorority members.

Those interested in rushing this semester must sign up in Dean Mary Golding's office in Room S-150 by this Friday, September 27. Prospective rushees should register between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. and should bring a $1.00 fee. Members of the various sororities will be in the office between the above hours to answer any questions students may have.

During college hour on Friday, September 27, there will be a meeting of rushees in S-100, where they will be oriented on all phases of sorority life.

Following the first midterms the sororities will hold invitational dinners, and on October 29 a preference coffee hour will be held. This is something new that has just been started this year, and it will give the rushees a chance to indicate the sorority they prefer to join, Miss Olson explained.

Invitations to pledge will be given out October 30, and pledge week will be November 4 to 8 with presents being held October 6.

At the tea Sunday the various sorority presidents and sponsors will stand in the receiving line along with Miss Golding, ISC sponsor.

Gamma Kappa Beta is led by Debbie Asminussion, president, and Marcie McDermott, sponsor. Nadine Wilson is president of Delta Psi and Martha Scott is sponsor. They will hold their dinner on October 22. On October 27 Delta Sigma Tau will hold their dinner. Joycelyn Perkins is their president and Olga Perkins is their [illegible].

Audrey Bell will lead Kappa Phi with help from Kathryn Hondius, sponsor. Their fireside will be on October 8. October 1 for their fireside and October 20 for the dinner are the dates Phi Beta Rho, led by Miss Olson, has chosen. Everyn Kirkiof is adviser.

Theta Tau has chosen October 6 for a fireside and October 27 for their dinner. Marilyn Galligani will lead them as president and Gertrude Norgard will be their adviser. Zeta Chi with Marilyn Milanesio as president and Ruth Inskepp as adviser has chosen October 3 for their fireside and October 24 for their dinner, Miss Olson stated.

Cloud Hall Memorial To Dr. Cloud

Building Called Step In 'Plan Of Vision' Of President Emeritus

By Pat Metsack

Although Dr. Archibald J. Cloud is no longer physically with the college, Cloud Hall, the building dedicated in his honor will long stand as a monument to him, the President Emeritus and founder of the college, who died last June 22.

The building, which presently houses the library, 54 faculty offices and 57 classrooms, was dedicated in April of 1954 with the conception that its construction was a step in the long range college "plan of vision."

The "vision" was actually Dr. Cloud's, who for 14 years acted as a friend, educator and administrator of the growing buildings on this hill. During his lifetime he contributed to the worthwhile cause of education, and now, after his death, Cloud Hall continues to contribute to education and higher learning.

Cloud Hall was constructed with an ultra-modern design and equipped to present the maximum of beauty and utility to students and faculty. Its purpose, and the strong feeling of the forces which made it possible, are still fresh in the minds of every student who considers himself a part of City College.

Dr. Cloud is still very much a part of the college that meant so much to him.

It is impossible to discuss the past and future of the college and the contribution of A. J. Cloud separately, for one is interwoven with the other. His contributions are both material and spiritual, for just a small idea of the enthusiasm this man had is inspiring.

When he retired in 1949, Dr. Cloud in a valedictory to the students said, "So in fond farewell I leave with you this thought: 'Education is not a destination—it is a journey—always, we are en route.'"

In a recent address to the faculty, Dr. Lloyd Luckmann told of Dr. Cloud's habit of strolling around on campus talking and mixing with students who did not know that he was president of the college. Dr. Luckmann said that Dr. Cloud's explanatio of this was, "I like to find out just what is going on around the campus, and I bet they wonder who the old man asking questions is."

This is the type of person that he was. Editorially, the San Francisco Examiner said that Dr. Cloud had a wonderful capacity for inspiring those he taught. "He will always be remembered as he wanted to be remembered —as a teacher."

Memory Of Dr. Cloud Bestows Noble Tradition Upon College

OVER the summer vacation the college suffered what must surely be the most severe loss it has had to bear since being founded 22 years ago.

The death of Dr. Archibald J. Cloud, founder and first president of the college, came as a shock not only because of Dr. Cloud's popularity with all who are connected with the college, but because as president emeritus of the college he was a "spiritual head" and living symbol of all that his "baby" was and is.

He will continue, of course, to be a symbol of the college, so intense was the relationship between what Dr. Cloud was and what the college is and will be.

We as young people will miss Dr. Cloud especially, for it was always the young people—the students of the college—whom he thought of in every step and every fight that went into the making of this institution.

The memory of Dr. Cloud marks the beginning of the most noble and enduring tradition that City College will ever have.

A Thousand And One Nights Trip For College Sailor—Quixote Style

Halfway around the world in nine weeks, or Smogville by way of Formosa, could be the theme song of Bill Weinman, a student at the college. It all began when the Spring semester ended and Weinman and some friends entered a Regatta race to Hawaii. The race started from Los Angeles and Weinman sailed on a 63-foot sloop named the Orient.

The trip to Hawaii was uneventful but not as romantic as adventure is supposed to be. Weinman's schedule went like this: four hours sleep, four hours work, and by the time Hawaii was reached, six-four, 185 pound Weinman was six-four, but 170 pounds. This is not recommended as a reducing plan to the ladies.

Seven glorious days were had by Weinman in Hawaii and he became an avid surfboarder and claims it's quite easy. But all good things must come to an end, and the Orient, with Weinman aboard left Hawaii bound for the States.

Seventeen hundred miles from Hawaii the sloop was struck by a winch, a nautical term for a crank, which resulted in a fractured skull. The Orient was no place for Weinman and a radio message was sent out. A troop ship, the M. M. Patrick, bound for Formosa, picked Weinman up Navy fashion. Weinman spent 15 days in sick bay on the Patrick. His adventure was not ending but in reality just beginning, because on the Patrick he was introduced to a new lady, Agnes, a regular hurricane.

Upon arriving in Formosa Weinman wasn't, because of security police, allowed off ship. He speaks of this phase of his trip, saying, "They thought I was Stalin's son or something."

"Wandering Bill" was then transferred to the Okinawa, which he found he couldn't get off. It seems he hadn't foreseen this accident and didn't have the proper papers.

Another of his problems was the natives; it seems they hadn't had communication G6 and couldn't understand Weinman, so he needed an interpreter wherever he went. After four days, the correct papers came and he was off for Tokyo.

In Tokyo, "Wandering Bill" missed his plane—this kid's a regular Phileas Fogg—and when he caught the next one it was home by way of Alaska with one engine failing. For Weinman this was just routine.

Asked if he'd like to repeat his Quixotean adventure, Weinman answered "No," and, as an afterthought, with a twinkle in his eye, he said, "You know, we came in fourth in the race even though it took me nine weeks to get home."

Shots At Ramdom

BEGINNING of the semester blues were being sung by the personnel in the registration office a couple of weeks ago, as floods of change of program cards and requests for time schedules overwhelmed them.

But if these people had it rough, so did the poor student who suddenly found himself "between-classes" because he was not adaptable to the course he had originally planned to take. Everyone has troubles!

* * *

REGRETS ARE ALSO in order for the three students who signed up for course 35A, dealing with the legal aspects of journalism, only to find that class closed because of insufficient registration. Too bad.

* * *

OR HOW ABOUT the scores of recently discharged servicemen who were on hand to undergo the torturous proceedings on the last day of registration. They are the ones who usually burn their uniforms in a midnight ritual, and swear at the same time never to wait in line for anything again. The congested congregation in Cloud Hall that day must have given them a rude awakening. Oh, well. They had to learn the bitter truths of civilian life sooner or later

THE COLLEGE INSTRUCTOR, over a period of years lecturing to various classes, becomes adept in the art of delivering the punchline to his collection of humorous stories which can be told in class.

An instructor here pleaded with his surveying class. "Please," he said, "wear your raincoats on days when you are going out into the field surveying. I can't emphasize too strongly how important it is to wear raincoats. Because the second it starts to rain, I want you to take off your coats and throw them over your instruments."

TOOK IN the filmed report of the Floyd Patterson - Pete Rademacher massacre at a Market street theater a couple of weeks ago, and was quite impressed by a few words of wisdom which came from the announcer. Rademacher, the mis-matched contender for the heavyweight crown, was stretched on the mats for the second time in the round, and looking rather confused about the whole thing, when the announcer, after due deliberation, remarked, "The challenger is obviously in trouble." This is obviously the height of something or other.

Ram Coach Hangs Up Spikes, Uniform, To Wear White Shirt, Tie For Counseling

By John Henry

Former Ram baseball Coach William "Bill" Fischer has hung up his spikes and uniform and is now wearing the white shirt and tie of a member of the college's counseling department.

No longer will Bill Fischer guide the fortunes of the baseball team, but instead he will guide the academic fortunes of many students, so it looks as though he will bear the title of "coach" for some time.

BILL FISCHER.

Coming from Commerce High in 1946, where he was football and baseball coach, Fischer stepped into the role of baseball coach and assistant football coach at the college. After 1950, he devoted full attention to baseball where his squads always proved tough competition. Coach Fischer was at the helm of the Ram squads of 1946, '47, '50, '55 (tie) and '56, who all annexed the pennant.

Some outstanding players left Coach Fischer's teams to enter pro baseball. A recent example is Stan Johnson from the 1955 championship squad. Although it is always hard to pick the best team, Fischer believes his 1955 and 1956 aggregations were outstanding.

A lot of Fischer's coaching ability stems from the fact that he was an outstanding athlete in his own right. After attending high school at nearby Balboa, he went to St. Mary's College at Moraga, whose teams, under the famous "Slip" Madigan, were always respected.

Fischer played baseball and football for the "Galloping Gaels" and was an All-American guard in his senior year. Fischer helped coach at St. Mary's until 1934 when he moved over to Livermore Union High.

In 1936 Fischer started coaching at Commerce High, where he stayed until coming to the college.

Bill Fischer has not resigned all of his athletic relations as he is still adviser to the Block SF Society.

After a long time at advising athletes Bill Fischer is now advising students. He has traded the gridiron and basepaths for a desk and chair, and he enjoys his new job, because he is still coaching.

RAMBLINGS

By Nick Peters

WITH summer behind us, developments of the last three months have resulted in these conclusions: An amateur champ CANNOT defeat a pro champ (or the Painful Plight of Profess Petey); the Yankees (what again?) are in like Flynn; the Cardinals are pecking at the Braves' pennant teepee, but the Redmen have the horses to go all the way.

The Seals bowed out as great champions; Ted Williams, the greatest hitter of his day, is showing a promising Yankee star (name of Mantle) how to hit a horsehide despite being an aging 39.

Robin Roberts has reached the coveted 20 mark again, only this time it's unfortunately in losses; Steve Bilko has been given a well deserved shot at the majors again; Leo Kiely has shown relievers how to relieve; Albie Pearson proved that there is a place for the SMALL man in sports other than horseracing; and last but not least major league ball will grace our town in 1958.

Recently Coaches Steve Museau of Orange Coast College and Jim Strangeland of Long Beach City College have used an electronic device to determine an opponent's football plays. The coaches ask the IBM machine what an opponent will do in a specific situation. Within a matter of seconds the device analyzes the situation and presents a printed answer.

Perhaps Coach Klemmer better beware when he plays the Los Angeles eleven at Kezar on Saturday. It's hard enough to outguess an opposing coach, let alone having to cope with an electronic wizard.

We'd be on the lookout for a boxcar pulling into 3rd and Townsend on Friday surrounded by Pinkertons and ready to be shipped to Kezar. Those Southerners might just want to take advantage of "us poor defenseless Northerners."

Rams-Cubs Meet Saturday At Kezar In Season Opener

City College's Rams meet the Los Angeles City College eleven for the twentieth time this Saturday at 2:30 p.m. in Kezar Stadium. Of the previous 19 games, the two rivals have won nine games each, with the 1953 struggle ending in a 19-19 deadlock at Kezar.

The last Ram victory was a 20-14 decision at Kezar in 1955. Last year the Rams journeyed to Los Angeles as the number five rated two-year year college in the country, but were upended 6-0 on a 31-yard pass play with three minutes left to play.

As evidenced by last year's outcome, a team's rating has no value in competition such as this. When two teams of largely competitive cities meet, anything can happen, (witness SF-LA pro-grid spectacles). The '57 Rams are again a top squad, but the Southland invaders, who yearly have a high caliber grid squad, will undoubtedly again be one of the college's top foes.

This year's squad is fortunate in that it will base its attack on a largely experienced backfield. Returning are 11 veteran backfield men. In Dave Tyree, Cal Holman, Bob Roper, Sam Rios, Ray Portue, Gene Craft, and Ted Camicia, Coach Grover Klemmer has a septet of top-flight halfbacks. Craft and Tyree hold the advantage because of their spectacular 1956 performances (7.7 and 6.0 yds. per carry, respectively).

Bill Rathbun, first string '56 fullback, will again man that slot for the Rams. Sophomore quarterbacks Larry Beldon, Bob Higgonbotham, and Don Balke, a trio of competent field generals, will do the pitching and passing for the college eleven.

Klemmer is weak on veteran linemen, since only five with previous college experience are returning. They are ends Dennis "Doc" O'Conner and Ray Harris, centers Josh White and Bill Barrington, and tackle Ernie Ibarra. There are no veteran guards, but the good crop of freshmen will easily fill the line cavities.

1400 Veterans Enroll

Veteran enrollment this semester was estimated in the 1400's by Veterans' Counselor Robin L. Dunn.

He stated that the total figure, when compiled, would certainly approach last semester's enrollment of 1500. The monthly report forms are due Tuesday, October 1.

Distance Track Initiated Here

Cross Country will begin as an organized sport at the college for the first time this year under the direction of head track coach, Lou Vasquez.

Vasquez, laboring under the personal conviction that a good fall cross country program can have a strong effect on improving the spring track team, set the wheels in motion to produce this squad.

The class has been divided into two groups: first of all the athletes who will actually run the long distance race, and secondly the sprinters and special event men who will work with the distance runners two or three days a week to keep in training for regular track.

Not having had a cross country team before, there can, of course, be no returning lettermen. But Vasquez will probably look for his stars in two-milers Ray Batz and Blake Westmen. Also up to support the new squad will be track lettermen such as James Thomas and Myron Zimmerman.

The race itself is approximately three and one-half miles long. It is not run on a regular curved track, but follows a marked route usually set over a golf course or a park.

Heavy Schedule Cuts IFC Sporting Events

This semester the Inter-Fraternity Council's calendar will be lacking sporting events, not because of a lack of interest in sports by the fraternities, but because of the heavy scheduling of events this semester.

Rushing affairs, beginning tonight with the IFC smoker, will take up most of the beginning of the semester, to be followed with pledging activities. Next semester the sports program is expected to be resumed.

Rams Win Grid Opener

Beldon, Ibarra Spark 31-13 Triumph Over L. A. Valley

By Nick Peters

Stunning their Los Angeles Valley opponents with two quick touchdowns, the college Rams swept to an easy 31-13 victory last Friday night in Van Nuys to inaugurate their 1957 grid season.

After taking the opening kickoff Valley had its back to the wall on its own 20. Monarch quarterback Jerry Steele, taking no chances, punted to the Ram 43 on first down. In the ensuing 14 plays the Rams marched 57 yards for the game's first tally, with fullback Bill Rathbun charging the final three yards for the touchdown. Beldon converted with Craft holding for 7-0. Chief ground eaters on this drive, which netted four first downs, were an 8½-yard ramble by halfback Dave Tyree and a 14-yard aerial from quarterback Beldon to veteran end Wayne Lawrence.

Beldon's kickoff sailed to the Valley 10 where Gary Smith ran it up to the 31 and subsequently fumbled. Taking advantage of this early break, the college reached paydirt in six plays. Rathbun skirted right end for six yards and the td. Beldon's conversion with Craft holding brought the count to 14-0. Principle contribution to this score was Rathbun's 19-yard run to the Valley 8.

As the second quarter began, Valley had the ball in a third-and-eight situation. On the following play the hard charging Ram line caused Monarch quarterback Jim Erbes to fumble and the college took over on the Valley 45. Two first downs brought the Rams to the 16 and in a fourth down situation Beldon accomplished the unbelievable—a college field goal from 23 yards for 17-0.

Valley, after an exchange of punts, had the pigskin on its own 10 with six minutes remaining in the half. Halfback Paul Smith proceeded to make the games' longest run, a 30-yard gallop to the 40. The drive was halted, however, when Steele's 22-yard aerial was intercepted by Craft and carried back 25 yards. With no further scoring the half ended, 17-0.

Monareh Ron Winkle kicked off to Ram Bill Rathbun to start the second half action. He received the ball on the 18 and returned it to his own 36, from where the Rams moved 64 yards in 14 plays for the score. Rathhun bucked over from the one for his third td. Beldon added his third conversion with Sam Rios holding for 24-0. With 1:30 remaining in the quarter, freshman tackle Ron Gardner recovered a Valley fumble on the Monarch 13. Halfback Bob Roper hit for 9½ yards to the 3½ where fullback Marion Page wasted no time in crashing over right tackle for six points. Don Balke converted with Rios holding for 31-0 and that was all for the Rams.

Numerous Ram reserves were inserted for the start of the fourth quarter. In that period the Monarchs romped to their two tds. Fullback Bob Burrows, the most impressive Monareh back, tallied the first on a two-yard plunge and the second on a nine-yard spurt up the middle. Doug Kirby's conversion after the nine-yarder brought the score to 31-13.

Prep Grid Stars Aid In Quest Of '57 Championship

City College's Ram football team has been endowed this fall with one of its finest rookie crops in years, according to Grover Klemmer, football coach here.

Judging from the number of men who proved themselves outstanding during their high school careers, Coach Grover Klemmer should have an abundance of material for his assault on the championship position held by the perennial league leaders, the Stockton Mustangs.

In the backfield, the newcomer who seems most likely to prove a running mate for veteran halfbacks Gene Craft and Dave Tyree, is Clarence Carr. Carr played All-City football for Polytechnic High School two years in a row and should do as well for the Rams this season.

Rated right along with Carr as a rookie fullback prospect is Marion Page, whom Coach Klemmer expects to do well despite his lack of size.

With only five returning linemen this season the Rams will have to rely on new men to fill in the holes. Thus far workouts have seemed to favor Bob Bieggi, another former high school All-City performer, as the best end along with Wayne Lawrence.

In the battle for the tackle position the nod goes to Jeff Stahl, a converted end from Abraham Lincoln High School. In the race for the guard positions Ed Johnson, former quarterback at Lincoln; Carl Mitchell, All-City from George Washington; and Gerry Ranghiasi, another former Lincoln player, seem to be the best prospects for seeing first string action.

Lew Krausse gave up 29 hits and 14 runs in 17 innings of relief pitching. He won the game, 18-17, as the Philadelphia Athletics beat the Cleveland Indians.

Co-Ed Sports Curtailed By Instructor Shortage

Shortage of an instructor in the women's physical education department has made necessary the elimination of men students in several previously coeducational classes, according to Laurine Bergin, department head.

Last semester archery, badminton, bowling, fencing, and folk, modern, and social danee welcomed men students. Now all classes are filled far above normal with one instructor having over 70 students in a single class. Instructors would like men in the classes but it is impossible at the present time, Miss Bergin added.

Arts Building Scheduled Soon; Remodeled Biology Lab Shines As College Plans '59 Expansion

By Ames Swartzfager

Plans for a major building project, which is slated to begin this January on the campus, were disclosed this week by Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management.

At the same time Anderson announced that construction of the biology laboratory on the third floor of the Science Building will be completed next week.

Three rooms, S313, S314 and S315, are being transformed into a large biology laboratory and preparation room. "The Science Building was designed for flexibility," Anderson reported. "We plan to add another biology laboratory if the enrollment in these classes continues to grow.

"An enlargement of the electronics laboratory is also in future plans," he said, adding, "that is, after we complete the tentative Creative Arts Building."

The Little Theater will be moved to the Creative Arts Building when that structure is finished. Then the electronics laboratory will be expanded into the Little Theater's old home.

Plans call for the new building to be constructed where Hurley Village is now situated.

It will house 26 classrooms in addition to art laboratories and music rooms. "The Little Theater there will have a permanent seating capacity of 250," Anderson said.

Additions to both gymnasiums are also planned. A recreation room is to be added to the women's gymnasium, and a combination boxing, weight-lifting and trampoline room will be added to the men's. The buildings will also have their walls improved.

An athletic field will be situated between Cloud Hall and the gymnasiums to provide a place for the football and track teams to work out.

"We expect at least 7,000 students by the fall of 1959 so we are planning to expand the coffee shop in Smith Hall," Anderson said. The shop will be extended into the court and the Ramporium Book Store will be moved into bungalows one and two.

"These new buildings will not only provide room for the expected increase in students, but they will also be an asset to the beauty of the college," Anderson said.

There will be parking facilities located around the proposed Creative Arts Building and walkways will be provided to expedite movement between classes.

Backwards Dance Opens AWS Social Calendar

Opening event of the Associated Women Students' calendar for this semester will be a "backwards" dance titled Annie Get Your Gun, on Friday, October 11.

AWS officers, Darlene Enfield, president; Joan White, vice-president; Judi Ricketts, recording secretary; Ruby Broadway, corresponding secretary; Marlene Hannon, treasurer; and Marilou VonKleist, historian, have served on committees in preparation for the dance.

Any woman student interested in helping with the decorations should inform Ellen Cleary or Ann Finneran, chairmen of the decoration committee, or attend one of the AWS meetings, which are held every Tuesday at 1 p.m. in the office of Mary Golding, dean of women. Every meeting is open to all women students belonging to the AWS.

Student Council Sees Kelly Sworn In As New AS Head

By John Rosso

With the swearing in of John Kelly to the office of Associated Student President on September 17, Student Council saw the start of what should be an active fall semester.

Commenting on the excellent job done by the previous cabinet and council, Dean Ralph Hillsman and Mary Golding, dean of women, expressed their welcome and confidence that council this semester would earn equal praise.

Plans for a student card sales contest were announced by Brower Dimond, card sales chairman. Dimond hopes to promote more student activities through the increased sales of AS cards. The contest will be held through this week.

Under new business, Kelly asked council for the approval of Jim Woods as State Information Chairman. Jack Patterson moved to accept Woods. It was seconded and passed 13-0. Kelly then proceeded to swear in Woods along with Willie Thomas as a Freshman member of council.

A special consideration was given to Bev Castellacci in her appointment to council. She had been ruled ineligible for the office because of the number of units she had been carrying while running for office last semester.

Having been only one unit short of [illegible] council approved her appointment 13-0, when Dean Hillsman stated that she had a better than a 2.0 average.

In the council meeting on September 17, Carol Olsen, ISC President, asked for approval of a new sorority on campus, Gamma Kappa Beta. Renada Marston moved to adopt the proposal. It was seconded and passed, 13-0.

In an effort to improve the air conditioning system in the cafeteria, Patterson was placed in charge of a committee to investigate this matter.

Devlin Outlines Film Series Here

A new series of general interest films is scheduled to be shown in S-136 during the college hour periods, which begin Friday, October 11, Madison W. Devlin, in charge of the audio-visual department here, announced last week.

Selection of these films will be made at 40 Modern Talking Film Service stations located within the city, such as the Ford Motor Company, Goodrich Tire Co., and Curtis Publishing Co., and will be chosen on the merit of their human interest matter and general quality.

Devlin stated that he hopes to have films which [illegible] Yank with the well-received Our Mr. Sun and Hemo The Magnificent, which he brought to the college last semester.

On hand at the audio-visual department, to aid Devlin with his film presentations, are a new crew of potential movie-projectionists, picked from this semester's engineering classes.

They will be trained in the art of handling movie projeetors, including the accurate insertion of films within the machine to insure their being projected on the screen in the customary manner, with heads at the top and feet at the bottom.

The Veterans Club held their first meeting on September 13, during college hour. The club's new officers were introduced and their sponsor, Albert Peterson, delivered a short run-down on the purpose of the club and its activities for the semester. The officers are Don Smith, president; Bob Welch, vice-president; Vern Huth, secretary, and Don Gifford, CAB representative.

Alpha Phi Omega officers for this semester are Elmer Eckart, president; Jerry Hoffman, vice-president; Rich Hulsmann, treasurer; George Fesunoff, corresponding secretary; and Dick Portello, recording secretary. A social hour was held before the Hello Day Dance for students interested in joining the fraternity.

Delta Pai's new officers include Nadine Wilson, president; Chloe McFarland, vice-president; Gretchen Brede, second vice-president; Joan Peterson, pledge mistress, and Betty Cook, treasurer. Besides the sorority's library project, the sisters helped in the recent City of Hope charity drive.

All contributions for Club Cavalcade should be turned in to The Guardsman office, S304, no later than Wednesday afternoon.

New Counselors Take Over Posts

Two changes in counselors were announced by John J. Brady, coordinator, Division of Student Welfare. William Fischer has replaced Mildred B. Barnard, who resigned to accept an administrative position with the San Rafael school system. Fischer was formerly a member of the men's physical education department and baseball coach.

The other change is the replacement of Helen Huffman who, on Sabbatical leave, is traveling through Europe and Africa. She has been replaced by Dorothy Hill, formerly a counselor at Galileo High School.

Another service offered by the counselors is a testing service located in S142 under the direction of Thomas Nesbitt. Tests of all kinds are administered here on the advice of the counselors.

Brady also pointed out that students should go to see their counselors on all problems, scholastic and personal, as often as they wish.

Rally Committee Sets Program Of Activities

Plans by the Rally Committee this semester include a series of five to six rallies, the first of which will be held Friday, October 11, according to Don Baikie, Rally Commissioner.

The next rally is on Friday, October 25, and a November 1 rally will include a bus trip to that Friday's Sacramento game. On Thursday evening, November 7, there will be a bonfire rally. November 22 is a rally date also, and if possible to obtain a date in December a final rally will be held to welcome the basketball season.

Seven song girls and one yell leader were chosen. These are Dave Crockett, yell leader; Gerry Payne, head song leader. Other song girls are Caroldean Tolifsen, Nyla Puccinelli, Marian Peterson, Vicki Mason, Naureen Mattioli and Joan Camisa.

Freshman Officers Set Ball Date October 19

Freshman Class members and officers will present their annual dance, the Frosh Ball, Saturday, October 19. Under the management of Fred Hicks, president of the class, whose officers include Vera Malinovsky, vice-president, and Imogene Butler, secretary, it will be the semester's first off-campus college dance, the location to be announced later, Hicks said. Committee heads, appointed for the dance, are Roseanne Chervin, publicity chairman, and Pat Jones, chairman of the cutest couple contest.

One of their main goals will be to create interest for freshman students in college activities, which in turn will stimulate college spirit.

Courtyard Club Displays Featured During College Hour; Smith Hall Dance To Culminate Day's Events

Social life at the college moves into full swing this week with Club Activities Board Day on Friday helping to culminate the week's events.

Clubs participating in CAB Day will have their information booths located between the Science Building and Cloud Hall during college hour. Space will be allocated to the clubs on a first come first serve basis.

The deadline for clubs to submit petitions to participate in CAB Day is today. Each club must submit $1.00 with application, CAB President Jim Foster said.

"The purpose of CAB Day is to familiarize the student with all the clubs and organization on the campus, and to encourage him to join the club of his choice," Foster said.

There are more than 30 clubs and organizations on the campus to choose from.

CAB Day will be culminated by a dance and talent contest from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight in Smith Hall. Music will be provided by the "swinging band" of Rudy Salvini.

Admission to the dance is free with Associated Student or registration card.

Don Baikie, Rally Commissioner, said, "In order to bring a guest a student must have a registration card. If he has the card and $1.00 then he should go to Dean Golding's office and there he will be given the proper credentials.

"One year at the CAB dance," he added, "we had more high school students there than college students."

The talent contest is to select someone to represent the college at the Regional Conference at Marin Junior College on Saturday, October 5.

Anyone interested in participating in the talent contest should inform Baikie.

118 Members Now In Honor Society

Alpha Gamma Sigma's present eligibility roster lists 118 this semester, according to William Richardson, adviser to the scholarship honor society.

The list released by Richardson does not include freshmen associate members eligible through California Scholarship Federation from high school.

Membership requirements are completion of at least 12 units during the present semester, a minimum of 42 grade points and no less than a B average exclusive of physical education and no grade below C, inclusive of physical education.

Permanent membership is the equivalent of graduation with honors. It is open to students who have held regular membership during their entire two-year college course, with the possible exception of one semester.

Officers for the fall semester are President Richard Womich, Vice-president Nancy Mulch, and Secretary-Treasurer Patricia Owens.

Qualifying students are urged to attend the next meeting of the chapter, to be held Friday, October 4, during college hour in C232.

Drama Group Offers Merchant Of Venice

An Elizabethan atmosphere will be duplicated in the Little Theater for Shakespeare's romantic comedy, The Merchant Of Venice. The play, directed by Michael Griffin, will be produced on October 18, 19, 25 and 26, and on November 1 and 2.

The characters of this play will include the following: Duke of Venice, played by Saul Bar; Shylock, the [illegible] of usury, portrayed by Carl Mayo, who is also the publicity man for the play. Mayo grew a beard to portray more accurately the crafty merchant. Antonio will be brought to life by Stan Church, a new student at the college. Many members of the cast will do technical work as well as act.

It is the purpose of the drama class to make this play as authentic as possible, Griffin said. Part of the audience will sit on the stage, such as they did in the days of Shakespeare.

The shows start at 8 p.m. The admission is by Associated Student card or $1.00 for general admission and 50 cents for other students.

H&R Has Success Story Debut Tomorrow

Tremain Loud, George Smith To Appear In Live Telecast

By George Grasso

Richfield's Success Story pays tribute tomorrow at 6:30 p.m. to the Hotel and Restaurant Department of the college in a live half-hour telecast here, over KGO-TV, channel 7.

The show is to be mainly a tour of the H&R Department, with cameras moving in on students carrying out various assignments as they would do in a normal working day. The program will also feature interviews with members of the college staff and celebrities of the industry.

Two prominent persons interviewed will be Tremain Loud, owner of the Hotel Californian and president of the Hotel and Restaurant Foundation, and George T. Smith, general manager of the Mark Hopkins Hotel. Smith was instrumental in working with the late Dr. A. J. Cloud in establishing an Hotel and Restaurant department here. It was for Smith that Smith Hall was named in its dedication of 1956.

Recently, Larry Russel, script writer for "Story," came to the H&R Department to do research for the program. The script was completed and since then has been edited for technical errors by college administrators Louis Batmale, Lloyd Luckmann and Louis G. Conlan.

Today there will be a practice run-through to work out the flaws and to time the script.

This will be done to allow time for the KGO staff to set up the equipment and take camera angles. There will be three live cameras in action when the show goes on the air. While one camera is operating, the other two will be moving around to get different shots.

The cameras and equipment will be moved into Smith Hall about 10 a.m. and more than 300 students will assist in setting it up. The area in back of the loading platform will be cleared for the truck TV mobile units.

Accomplishing a complex job is college electrician, Ed Banderod, who will supply power to all this machinery.

Three advertising and commercial arts students created the poster display concerning the Hotel and Restaurant Department Success Story in the Science Building, William Eckert, Advertising Arts instruetor, announced recently.

The art students who designed the displays are George Hopkins, posters; Frances Wong, lettering and design, and Paulene Rodriquez, over-all planning and installation.

The display consists of two posters. One poster is of two cameramen televising Smith Hall. The other poster is a four-foot admission tieket inviting students to watch the story in the comfort of their own homes.

In March of last year the department came of age, celebrating its 21st anniversary. Since 1936, H&R has grown from two instructors and eight students to 30 instructors and 120 students.

When the show goes on the air tomorrow, the staff of H&R will be wearing special blulsh or beige uniforms so as not to reflect too much light into the cameras. This is just one of the many incidental problems which must be ironed out before broadcast time, when, at 6:30 p.m., the Bay Area will be able to see how food is prepared at City College of San Francisco.

Lions Honor Dr. Spears At Luncheon Here Today

A surprise luncheon, given by the Twin Peaks Lions Club in honor of Dr. Harold Spears, superintendent of public schools, will be held today in the faculty dining room at 12:15 p.m., according to Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college.

"The Twin Peaks Lions Club, of which Dr. Spears is a member, has shown great interest in the college. We have benefited from this interest and support," Dr. Conlan stated.

Approximately 85 Lion members and administrative staff members will attend the luncheon honoring Dr. Spears. It is expected, Dr. Conlan added, that the Twin Peaks Lions Club will hold an annual meeting on the college campus each year.

Phi Beta Delta Holds Shipwreck Dance On Friday

Phi Beta Delta's traditional Shipwreck Dance is scheduled for this Friday evening in Smith Hall, according to Frank Benaderet, vice-president of the fraternity.

Music for the evening will be presented by The Five, an established band, with Benaderet's promises that "they will give outstanding entertainment." Midway through the dance, the band will present a jam session.

The entire student body is invited to attend the event, but there are only 200 tickets available and they will be sold on first come, first served basis by members of the fraternity at $1.50 per couple.

Since it is a costume affair, the appropriate dress will be shipwreck style, which, according to Benaderet, may be middies, navy whites or beachcomber trousers.

Palm trees and flowers, resembling an island, will decorate Smith Hall and, if the weather permits, the court will be opened.

Fraternity members in charge of committees for the affair are. Bill Tweedie, publicity; Ken Piscitelli, tickets and bids; Dave Gash, decoration; Ed Bolman, refreshments, and Rich Ghiselin, coat check.

The dance, which will be held from 9 p.m. to midnight, has been presented annually since the fall semester of 1947.

TV Show Preparations Will Close Cafeteria To Students Thursday

Because of preparations which must be made for the Success Story telecast, the cafeteria section of Smith Hall will be closed all day tomorrow.

There will be no hot food served tomorrow, but the fountain will be open and carrying a complete new layout of cold lunch to serve upwards of 4,000 students.

John W. Dunn, general manager of the H&R Department, has stated the need for student cooperation. "We are sorry about the inconveniences, but we will give students every possible service we can."

Everyone concerned is hoping for clear weather on Thursday. After students purchase their lunch in the fountain, most of them will be sent outside to eat on the lawn or at the tables to be placed out there for the day.

Student Council Approves 5 Fall Campus Budgets

Of the 26 organizations here submitting budget requests for the fall semester, five were passed at last week's Student Council meetings and several others are awaiting approval.

This announcement was made by Finance Chairman Linda McArdle, who last week presented to the council budgets for the Social Committee, Controller, Rally Committee, Executive Budget, and The Guardsman, all of which were formally passed.

Combined requests submitted by campus organizations amounted to $30,967.13, Miss McArdle added. She estimates this semester's Associated Student income at $28,000, with $12,000 coming from AS cards sales, $10,000 from the Ramporium, and $2,000 each from vending machines, athletics and miscellaneous activities.

Other organizations here awaiting passage of their budget requests are Associated Men Students, A Cappella Choir, Alpha Gamma Sigma, Band, Dramatics, Sophomore Class, Freshman Class, Campus Police, Treble Clef, Associated Women Students, Recreation Association, Club Activities Board, Publicity Committee, Men's Glee Club, Basketball, Foothall, Intramural Sports, Track, Physical Education Department and KCSF Broadcasting Station.

Making his first appearance of the semester last Thursday, Dr. Louis Conlan, president of the college, welcomed and noted the importance of Student Council and Cabinet this semester.

AS President Names Karpenske, Tipton To Posts In Cabinet

Appointment and approval of Roger Karpenske and Dave Tipton last week to high posts in the cabinet of Associated Student President John Kelly lowered to three the number of vacant cabinet positions for the fall semester, Kelly announced.

Karpenske has been named the new Junior Chamber of Commerce representative, while Tipton assumes the position of Campus Affairs Coordinator.

Tipton is familiar to many students on the campus as president of the KCSF Broadcasters.

The appointments were approved at the Student Council meeting on September 24.

Kelly stated that the three remaining vacant posts, expected to be filled soon, are Men's Athletic Commissioner, Awards Commissioner, and Alumni Liaison Officer.

Forty-Two Students Plan To Attend Regional Conference At College Of Marin This Friday

In preparation for the State Conference of Junior Colleges to be held in San Francisco on November 14, 15 and 16, 42 key members of the Associated Students here, headed by President John Kelly, will attend a regional conference of Junior Colleges at College of Marin this Saturday.

The ultimate purpose of these conferences is to meet with students from other colleges, compare mutual problems and attempt to find solutions. This preliminary meeting at College of Marin will include all participating two-year colleges in Northern California.

At this conference, the various problems will be narrowed down and summarized so that only the most universal and most important ones will be submitted at the State Conference. The delegation from this college will be comprised of representatives from the various clubs and organizations on campus plus interested students who have signed up at the Associated Student office.

They will have 11 separate workshops, one for each phase of student life. They will include Activities, Associated Men Students, Associated Women Students, Athletics, Rallies and Assemblies, Current Problems, Public Relations, Finance, Publications (yearbook), Student Government and Veterans.

Jim Woods, State Information Service chairman, will coordinate the programs of the various workshops. They will be handled in a manner similar to those in past years.

The conference will be in the form of an open discussion presided over by a general chairman, Bill Yager of College of Marin. The different workshops will be set up in separate rooms.

This form will persist throughout the morning and, after a break for lunch, into the afternoon. Before the conference is over, however, the separate workshops will come together into a general assembly, or critique, where the findings of the individuals will be brought to light and discussed.

Alphabetical Pre-Registration Plan To End Rush

Pre-registration by alphabet, but with no disadvantage to the X, Y, Z names, will go into effect this semester through a rearranged program for pre-registration in S-160, according to Waddington Blair, counselor here.

Advantage of the plan is to end the overwhelming rush typical of previous first days of pre-registration.

Six days will be set aside for "preferred" pre-registration beginning next Monday, with the available numbers for each registration hour equally divided into six alphabetical groups.

For example, if 300 students register each hour, 50 numbers for each hour will be reserved for the alphabetical groups as follows: A-C, Monday, October 7; D-G, Tuesday, October 8; H-K, Wednesday, October 9; L-N, Thursday, Oetober 10; O-R, Friday, Oetober 11; S-Z, Monday, Oetober 14.

Starting Tuesday, October 15, students may apply for appointments without regard to any alphabetical division. Prior to this date, the schedule listed above must be followed, Blair said.

Eleven Appointed To Campus Police

Eleven criminology students were appointed to the Campus Police Force last week, according to Fred Fitzgerald, criminology instructor here.

New members of the force are Robert Becker, William Donohoe, David Gehringer, Frank Graber, Charles Lewis, Roy Mathers, Richard Mohr, Randall Neuman, David Notaro, Francis Williams, and Garth Wright.

Chief of Campus Police is Marion Timm; Deputy Chief, Donald Lauter; Assistant Deputy Chief, George Poppe; and Sergeants, Alan Sperne and Richard Willis.

City College's Campus Police pistol team placed second in pistol matches held at the Oakland Pistol Club, on September 1, according to Fitzgerald.

Only one team was entered by the Campus Police. Members of the team are Jim Keane, who fired a score of 253, Fred Fitzgerald, 246; Joe Karp, 242, and Ralph Brown, 213. "A second team is now in the process of being chosen," according to Geraldine Rush, criminology recording secretary. The teams' next match will be next Sunday at the Oakland Pistol Club.

AS Transcript Revision Plan Awaits Final Council Review

LAST SEMESTER Student Council and officers of the Associated Students wisely, and with due consideration for the interests and desires of AS members-at-large, originated and pushed through a transcript revision program.

This program provided for the inclusion, on the college's official transcript, of designations of student government offices held and AS activities participated in by all AS members who qualified for the privilege under a point system.

As most recently outlined by transcript committee members, the plan calls for a five category, evaluational breakdown of student government participation and leadership. Each category, or class, has been ascribed a certain amount of points, ranging from five points for the highest class to one point for the lowest, and is inclusive of the specific office held or duty performed according to relative importance. To qualify for the program an AS member would have to amass a total of six points before he could petition for the inclusion of his service record on his transcript.

Now as this program stands at present it would seem advisable that this semester's Student Council review the plan with the idea in mind of completing and strengthening it.

As it is, the program appears, generally speaking, to be admirable in its aim and intent, but specific details and minor inconsistencies in its structure warrant an examination by the council so that their conversance with AS needs and ideas in regard to student government policy may be brought to bear on the program's permanent framework.

Suggested changes in the plan's format would, for the good of AS members-at-large, necessarily have to take in the debatable point of whether or not the program should be so rigid, as it now seems, in the matter of its insisting that eligibility be decided on the pure basis of the individual being a leader, in the strict dictionary sense, in student government, as opposed to his being merely an outstanding citizen.

We suggest that a student NOT have to be a leader in this narrow sense of the term to be considered for eligibility.

The council should look into the possibility of reworking the program's construction so as to provide for the student who through no fault of his own cannot accept an elective or appointive AS office.

The term "leader" limits too greatly the eligible persons to those who possess a certain type of gregarious, political personality.

Some provision must be made by the council for those participants in the community and student government activities who could not, should not or, for personal reasons, desire not to direct their service for the college toward the limited and essentially political areas of the AS office-holder.

We know the council will act promptly and wisely in considering and consummating the structural organization of this very important program.

Success Story Comes Up With Good Idea In Featuring H&R Epic On Show

PRODUCERS of KGO-TV's Success Story have hit the proverbial nail on the head in deciding to showcase the college's Hotel and Restaurant Department on their program tomorrow evening.

The Hotel and Restaurant people have always been so synonymous with phrases like "success story" that it is by now almost an understatement of fact to refer to their amazing accomplishments and 21-year-old history as a "Success Story."

We congratulate the department in general and Dave Hagar in particular for their effective campaign to have the Hotel and Restaurant story told to local viewers by the KGO-TV cameras.

The program and the Hotel and Restaurant people should blend together just fine. Understatement or not, SUCCESS is our H&R department's middle name.

New Elevator Takes Pressure Off Short Winded Instructors

Students who have early classes in the Science Building have noticed that their instructors are in class huffing and puffing.

Down on the first floor of the same building near the silver pole is the elevator which isn't going up or down as elevators should but just sits there.

It seems that the old elevator was about 17 years old and wasn't functioning properly; it was a forerunner of rock and roll. During the summer it was to be replaced by a brand new automatic elevator, which was to be ready for the fall semester. But the pre-fabricated case which was to be sent from the big city—New York—didn't arrive, and therefore the elevator wasn't ready when the college opened. Thus, the instructors in the Science Building find themselves "hoofing" it to class. Since it was known that the elevator would be working, all handicapped students have been scheduled classes in Cloud Hall so they wouldn't be inconvenienced.

Now the elevator is installed, but the Otis company has a man testing for a week, to make sure all its automatic gadgets are functioning properly. So sometime next week the instructors will "ride to work" once again.

The difficulty in keeping well informed today is not that news is scarce, but that there is so much more news each day than the average man can assimilate.

Shots At Ramdom

NOTE to new students: That proud, red and white statue which stands facing the college from outside the cafeteria is not a goat. This haughty looking animal happens to be a ram, which has symbolized the spirit of aggressiveness and perseverance among City College students for many years now.

This ram has one female characteristic. It is very fussy about its dress, and demands a change of wardrobe at least once a semester, usually during the initiation period of Hell Week. This change of wardrobe is usually accomplished by one fraternity's pledges, equipped with paint brushes and paint can.

BOB VARNI, former Associated Student president and present chairman of the forthcoming State Conference of California Junior Colleges, remarked at a recent Oakland Junior College meeting that the most interesting thing about a student officer is his ability to devote some time to college studies.

This should dispel the rumor that members of the student government do not hold down classes like everyone else, and exemplify the fact that they are doing a remarkable job of struggling for credits and representing us at the same time.

KCSF On The Air

Radio Club Gives Music, News To Students Daily

By Tom Tatera

Radio takes a firm hold at the college this semester as KCSF, a new broadcasting organization here, sets up its mikes and control-boards as a service to the Associated Students and faculty members and as a training ground for radio-TV students.

Supervised by Henry Leff, instructor of radio and television at the college and a man of much experience in the field, this broadcasting club has managed to give a new scope to the college's radio studio.

Besides supplying music to the cafeteria every day from 12:10 p.m. to 1 p.m., the studio, located in room S-127, will deliver sports highlights on Friday, interviews with different people on Wednesday, and short speeches from members of the student government on Monday, Dave Tipton, president of the radio group, explained.

A few of the albums which will be featured by the station during their cafeteria interludes include Wonderful by Johnny Mathis, Dancing The Bop by Ray Coniff, and Romantic Music Of Rachmaninoff by Andre Kostelanetz.

Another feature of the club will be the enactment of dramatic radio sketches every Tuesday at 11 a.m., which will be open to a visual audience in front of S-127.

Members of KCSF had already proven their worth at registration, when they broadcast news and music to the faculty, announced the scratched classes, and helped find a little girl who had gotten lost in the shuffle.

A constitution, drawn up for the club this semester, states that every member must hold an Associated Student card and be enrolled in a broadcasting course at the college, and that any KCSF broadcaster has the power to suspend one of his co-workers if that person proves unfit to carry out his responsibilities.

At the present, the total enrollment of the KCSF club consists of 23 men and 2 women, all engaged in the various processes of radio broadcasting, such as producing, writing, handling of control board.

Jim Day, an announcer of station KOBY, was present at the recent college hour to deliver a short talk on the various aspects of radio broadcasting. A formidable group of the faculty, including Dr. Louis G. Conlan, Dr. Lloyd D. Luekmann, Dean Edward E. Sandys, Leff, and Madison Devlin, sat in to listen with Tipton, Dan Murphy and John Rosso, members of the student body.

A luncheon, held in the faculty dining room, followed the talk.

Leff, in referring to his group, said, "These are the most active students of broadcasting I have seen thus far at the college, and I am sure their training will prove highly useful in their radio-television careers."

This season has proven to be a feast for those viewers who are ardent western fans.

In addition to the old standbys, Cheyenne, Wyatt Earp, Wells Fargo, Gunsmoke and Broken Arrow, an avalanche of new westerns have made debuts in the last few weeks. Several more are scheduled for later this month.

HAVE GUN, WILL TRAVEL (CBS) is the outstanding of the current offerings. One of the unusual aspects of this western is the hero, Paladin, portrayed by Richard Boone of Medic fame. What makes him unusual is the fact he is not handsome. He could even be called homely. Boone's acting has a quiet undertone to it, and his background is different from the usual western character. Paladin is a well-educated ex-Army officer, who leads a double life as a man-about-town and a deadly hired gun.

Also included in this unusual category is SUGARFOOT (ABC). The hero, Will Hutchins, is not an adventuresome, lightning quick type of westerner. He doesn't wear guns because he can't shoot straight. His defense against the villains is psychological. He plays on their emotions. He has to, because he couldn't shoot them if he tried. This bumbling hero characterization is refreshing for a change.

WAGON TRAIN (NBC) is unique in that it presents guest stars in many of its episodes. The stories also have peculiar twists to them.

ABC is now offering a full two hours of westerns on Tuesday evenings. Cheyenne alternates with Sugarfoot, then Wyatt Earp comes galloping into view followed by Broken Arrow. All are worth viewing, but an hour is the most one can comfortably digest at one sitting. Networks should stagger their westerns and offer no more than two in one evening.

MAVERICK (ABC) and RESTLESS GUN (NBC) do not qualify for the above average classification. Both of the plots in the opening sessions were remakes of stories which have been presented many times in many different forms. Of course, some programs can raise the caliber of their productions after the first attempts; others can deteriorate just as rapidly. Whether these programs will survive the competition appears to be doubtful.

A day of 23 hours, 56 minutes, and 4.09 seconds is required for one complete rotation of the globe.

Ram Soccermen Battle League Opener This Saturday Against San Francisco State College

Showing strength in both its defensive and offensive lines, according to Roy Diederichsen, soccer mentor here, the Ram booters will host San Francisco State College this Saturday, as the teams officially open the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference.

Last year, during the 1956 season, the college came close to defeat as the Gators kept a 3-0 score hung on Diederichsen's protegees until the end of the first half. However, a suddenly-awakened Ram eleven staged a miraculous comeback to defeat the Gators, 5-4.

Twenty-seven men, among them three returning veterans from last year's varsity soccer squad, have started to prepare for the 1957 season. Sign-ups are still open for those who would like to try out for the team. Diederichsen further stated, "All positions are yet to be filled." Enrollment can either be at the men's gymnasium, or by attending daily practices, from 3 to 5 p.m., at the Ocean View soccer field.

Halfback Al Morales, last year's choice by the NCISC for All-Conference honors; Joaquin Rodriguez, inside left, and Pastor Valle, goal keeper, will be the three lettermen back on the Ram roster, while other students, some heading from remote parts of the world as well as local high school graduates, form the promising group of newcomers.

They are, from the international angle, Morales, Valle, Allier Zelaya, Eddie Zelaya and Oscar Gutierrez, from Nicaragua; Julio Menjivar, Al Guerrero and Roberto Guerrero, El Salvador; Carlos Origgi, Peru; Max Pierre Rouzier, Haiti; George Salazar, Ecuador; Riehard and Roland Prydz, France; Axen Wildberg and Lennart Wiedenmeyer, Germany; Lorenzo Picchi, Italy; Noble Samn, Hong Kong; Yusuf Mirza, India; Sedat Oktay, Turkey, and Mohammad Ahramian from Iran.

Rounding off this group of college booters are Rodriguez, Mission High School; Bryan Saasta and Peter Kimball, Washington High School; Patrick Sarsfield, San Francisco State College; Andrew Baldi, Carlos Bush and Ben Dominguez.

Ramblings

By Nick Peters

IMPRESSIVE is the word when talking of our highly rated Ram grid squad. In its recent 31-13 shellacking of LA Valley it displayed a strong defense and an excellent offense—two important ingredients for successful football.

Singled out for outstanding play were quarterback Larry Beldon, who proved to be an alert field general as well as a very capable kicker; backs Dave Tyree (105 yds.—5 yds. per carry) and Bill Rathbun (55 yds.—3 td's), who apparently lost none of their 1956 form; lineman Ernie Ibarra, Bill Barrington, Josh Williams, and Carl Mitchell, who, as indicated by their first outing, will provide a very strong forward wall for the talented Ram backfield.

In Beldon the college certainly has one of the Big Eight's better qb's. An intelligent student, he mixes his plays well and to boot he can kick. In the grid opener he displayed a toe of magnificent accuracy, sending three conversions through the uprights and making good on a 23-yard field goal—a college rarity.

About the trip to LA Valley. The 42-man aggregation left International Airport at 10:15 and arrived at Smogville in an hour and a quarter (by plane). In another two hours the group arrived at its downtown hotel accommodations where rooms were handed out and a short chat was given to the players. Soon dinner was eaten. Some has steak (Mr. Shields said it was dee-lish-ous) and others had fish for the halibut. Why go on?

At dusk the men boarded a bus, which hacked and dodged its way through the Hollywood Freeway, finally arriving at the game site after an hour of interesting scenery. Upon arriving at Reseda Field the squad was informed that a welcoming committee was all set up, but that it had gone to the wrong airport. Yessiree, those Southerners really know their town.

After the game the bus rushed back to the hotel, so that the men could get a good night's rest, (or the catastrophe of the Clark).

If conduct and order and an adherance to coaches' regulations mean anything, this squad will go places. Punctuality was predominant in the obeyance of curfew regulations and in boarding busses. Unfortunately, a member of the Fourth Estate was fast asleep in his Fourth Floor Estate when the bus left for home. C'est la vie.

The Braves will win the World Series in six. Spahn will win two, Conley and Buhl one each. Larsen will get belted off the mound in his sole appearance. Hitting of Aaron, Schoendienst, Mathews, and Adcock will make the papers forget Mantle and Berra.

Foes, Books Hit By Pro Boxer On Way To Fame

By John Henry

The old saying that you can't judge a book by its cover is very much true when one looks at "Irish" Bobby Scanlon, lightweight boxing standout who is now attending classes at the college.

At a glance, 21-year-old Scanlon looks like the ordinary college student on any campus. Actually, Scanlon is an ordinary student, with the exception that he is also a young professional fighter with a bright future if he keeps going the way he has been.

Although he has had 26 professional bouts, winning 25 and fighting to a draw in the other, Scanlon is unmarked and still retains his big grin and good looks. The 5'6" scrapper imigrated to San Francisco with his former manager Mike Scanlon (no relation) from Buffalo, New York. Mike Scanlon is still the manager of Joey Giambra, outstanding middleweight contender, who also headed west from New York.

BOBBY SCANLON.

Bobby Scanlon started fighting as an amateur while attending Our Lady of Victory High School in Buffalo, where he also played varsity football, baseball and basketball. Before his graduation from high school in 1954, Scanlon had turned professional and had a number of fights under his belt. Before coming to San Francisco, he had made ring appearances at St. Nicholas' Arena and also at the famed Madison Square Garden in New York.

Scanlon has had several tough fights, but he considers the Pete Kawaia tussle in Chicago his toughest. Kawaia, who is now ranked 10th in the lightweight division by Ring Magazine, could not answer the bell for the seventh round. Davy Gallardo, a seasoned vet, was Scanlon's first opponent on the west coast. Scanlon decisioned Gallardo in Los Angeles and was awarded a watch by Italian movie starlet Gia Scala after the bout.

When asked to recall who had hit him the hardest, Scanlon told the story of when he was in the ring and suffered his hardest blow. The punch, however, was not thrown by his opponent, but by the ring microphone which hung down in the center of the ring. After a few words with a vanquished foe, Scanlon was heading back to his corner when he walked right into the "mike" which left him with a sore head and a beautiful "shiner."

Left weakened by the flu last week, Scanlon was forced to postpone his fight with Leo Aghulos in Richmond next Monday. Although not sure who his next opponent may be, Scanlon thinks it could be Lulu Perez or [illegible], who are [illegible] with a lot of ring savvy.

Scanlon is a physical education major who was persuaded by his new manager, Art Benjamin, to continue his schooling. He likes the college and is glad he is back in school.

San Francisco weather agrees with Scanlon, who, commenting on the climate in the east, said, "When it's cold you freeze, and when it's hot you burn." Scanlon is more or less a weatherman to his foes in the ring. He makes things pretty hot for them and sometimes even puts them on ice.

The last foreign-born fighter to hold the heavyweight championship was Primo Carnera.

Fumbles, Line Weaknesses Result In 13-5 Ram Loss To Club Rivals In Home Opener

By Nick Peters

Inept pass protection, a series of fumbles, and a general lack of precision caused a 13-5 Ram defeat at the hands of Los Angeles' Cubs in the 1957 college home opener at rain-drenched Galileo Field last Saturday.

Taking advantage of every break fumbled their way, the Cubs, although not displaying a spectacular offense themselves, managed to win the tie-breaker in the 20th meeting between the two schools. The Cubs have now won 10 and the college 9, with the 1953 contest ending in a deadlock.

The college drew first blood near the end of the first quarter when a 15-yard penalty had the Cubs with their backs to the wall on their own 1-yard line. Cub quarterback Rudy Gutib punted to his own 30 where the Rams gained possession. After three unsuccessful advance attempts, Ram quarterback Larry Beldon booted a 29-yard field goal, his second in as many games. As the quarter ended the Rams retained their short-lived 3-0 lead.

Los Angeles scored its first of two "gift" touchdowns early in the second period, as Ram fullback Marion Page fumbled the ball to set up the Cubs on the Ram 19. On first down halfback John Zinda raced to the 10. Gutib's fumble on second down could have changed the pattern of the game had the Rams taken advantage of the miseue. However, several Cubs pounced on the ball to regain possession and keep their scoring chances alive.

Capitalizing on this "break," the Cubs scored on the next play, as halfback Joe Womack zipped for 10 yards off right tackle for the tally. The conversion attempt was missed and with no further scoring in the quarter the half ended: Cubs 6, Rams 3.

Cub fullback Biagio Pennino's kickoff to start the third quarter action sailed to halfback Sam Rios, who returned the hide 25 yards to the 30. Dave Tyree picked up 3, Rios 4, and Bill Rathbun 5, for a first down on the Ram 42.

On the next play quarterback Don Baike's pitchout was a trifle low. Tyree got his hands on the ball, but couldn't hold it, as a swarm of opponent linemen recovered the pigskin to nip the Ram thrust in the bud.

Within five plays the Cubs were on the Ram 19. On a second down situation, Gutib handed off to Zinda, who ran to the 15 where, upon meeting a wall of Ram tacklers, he lateralled to the speedy Womack, who raced the remaining 15 for his second td. Pennino's conversion sailed through the uprights for 13-3.

The most spectacular Ram play came near the end of the third quarter when Baike hit end Bob Bleggi on a 30-yard pass play to the Cub 19. Page plunged to the 16, but on the following play Tyree fumbled and the Cubs recovered to end that drive.

The college was "given" two points midway in the fourth period after a 15-yard penalty forced the Cubs back to their 1. Cub quarterback Jerry Wrenn downed the ball in the end zone for a Ram safety and 13-5, the score at the game's end.

Coach Klemmer's forces draw a bye this week-end, giving them ample time to straighten out their weaknesses for the league opener against Santa Rosa on October 12 at Kezar.

First round-the-world tour by two major league teams was in 1913, by the New York Giants and the Chicago White Sox.

Varsity Cagers Begin Practice On November 1

Varsity basketball coach Sid Phelan announced last week that practice for the 1957-'58 Ram squad will get underway on November 1, with the first practice tilt scheduled against the USF JV's on December 2.

This will be Phelan's third season leading the college eagers in the tough Big "8" Conference, and he has hopes of snagging his second straight title.

Last year's squad ended the season in a deadlock with Modesto, but the Rams managed to knock off the Modestans in a playoff game to gain the right to enter the state tournament, in which they grabbed third place.

Five letter winners from last year's team return to action this season and along with some new talent should form a tough squad to help defend last year's title.

Centers Doug North (6'8"), a second team All-Conference center last season, and John Henry (6'5") return, along with regular forward Mal McCormick (6'5"), forward Gary Merritt (6'4") and guard Stan (Rosie) Rosenberg (5'10").

Al Holder, former Lowell High eager, has returned from the army as has Bill Fowler, ex-Poly performer. Vic Cori, also from Poly, dropped out of college last year but has returned, along with Aubrey Tendell, another player from Lowell's hoop reservation.

Other newcomers who have signed up for the squad include Phil Carville (Lincoln), Ron McDonald (Washington), Dave Campbell and Jackie Tillman (Poly), Fred Williams (Mission) and Val Carter, from Dorsey High, Los Angeles.

RA Sports Night Friday Starts Fall Activities

The officers of the RA have been working hard so that all students who are signed up in the association will have an enjoyable, as well as instructive sports program, Miss Wilson said.

Sports included in the RA program are modern dancing, social and folk dancing, archery, fencing, tennis and badminton.

Schwarz Initiated As New Block SF Adviser During College Hour

Alex Schwarz, popular member of the men's physical education department, will soon relieve Bill Fischer as adviser to the Block SF Society.

This Friday during college hour, Schwarz (pictured at right) will be introduced to the society members and become acquainted with the functions of the club. A highlight of the year's first meeting will be the showing of movies of last season's Stanford-Southern California football tilt in which the Indians upset the Trojans.

Schwarz, who is presently serving as line coach of the college grid squad, has always been interested in athletics and is looking forward to becoming a part of the lettermen's club.

An outstanding tackle at the University of San Francisco in his college days, he was selected to play in the annual East-West Shrine football game. Schwarz was head football coach at Mission High, until he left the high school in 1951.

Horticulture Society

Former Student Returns Here As Floriculture Faculty Member

Maryhope Cummings, formerly a student here, returned this semester to teach floral design and flower shop, according to Harry E. Nelson, head of the floriculture department.

Miss Cummings was previously employed by Albert O. Stein, a top San Francisco florist, before acquiring her present position at the college.

Members of the Horticulture Society, a student organization, are planning a series of visits to various phases of industry, and inviting guest speakers to lecture on their particular field.

Plans also include field trips to nurseries for the purpose of studying new methods of handling plants and observing how they are set up and distributed, Nelson said.

Used mostly for corsages, greenhouse roses will be the subject of an experiment by John Isaacs, a horticulture student, in the houseplant section of the greenhouse. Isaacs intends to study the effects that sprays and fertilizers, along with climatic conditions, will have on the flowers.

The campus greenhouse, which is divided into three separate sections, will be the scene of much activity this semester. Students, using pipes, spray nozzles and timers, will convert the propagation section of the greenhouse, which is used for the reproduction of plant life, into a "mist room."

Through the regulation of timers and spray nozzles, a constant mist will be created, allowing the moisture to permeate the air. The advantage of this process will enable students to propagate plants successfully when they are out of season, Nelson commented.

Glee Club Choir Hold Auditions For Talented Students

More than 50 per cent of last year's choir and glee club have returned but a few more voices are needed, according to Robert Morton, director of these activities here.

These groups are already preparing for the main program on their schedule, which is the annual Christmas program on December 12 and 13.

Although the Treble Clef is just an activity this year, both the Men's Glee Club and A Cappella Choir carry units of credit. All men who are free at 12 noon daily are invited to audition for the glee club, Morton said. Tenors are particularly invited and sopranos also to audition for the choir, he added. The choir meets at 1 p.m. daily. Both groups meet in B-6.

Several capable soloists in the individual voice classes, taught by Flossita Badger, will appear in various college and social functions both on and off the campus, and will also participate in the annual Christmas Concert.

Miss Badger returned last year from Hawaii where she spent the summer directing a production of Song Of Norway.

Modern Magazine Magic will be featured at the college hour film series this Friday in S-136, Madison W. Devlin, audio visual aids instructor here, announced this week.

"This film portrays the inner workings of the magazine industry," Devlin said, "and takes the viewer through the various phases of producing a large magazine."

Filmed at the Curtis Publishing Company, which publishes Holiday and the Ladies' Home Journal, it shows what happens in each department.

The viewer travels, via the film, from the editorial department, where the stories are written, to the composing department, where the stories are set in type, and then to the printing section.

Those students interested in journalism, graphic arts or creative writing will find information in this film which will help them in their studies, Devlin said.

"It is in color and should prove interesting as well as entertaining to the students," he added.

The film will start at 10:40 a.m. sharp, Devlin concluded.

On Friday, October 18, during college hour, the band will play for a rally in the courtyard. On Saturday, October 19, they will play for the City College-Stockton College football game.

Joan Of Arc Tryouts 7:30 Tonight At USF

University of San Francisco will hold tryouts tonight at 7:30 p.m. in their little theater for a young high school graduate with some acting experience to portray Joan of Arc in the University of San Francisco College Players' forthcoming production of Jean Anouilh's The Lark, according to Director Bennett.

Bennett announced that the reason for looking to outside help is due to the small number of USF women students available for casting and the unusual demands of the role.

The play will be seen for two weekends beginning Thursday, November 14, in the USF little theater.

Queen Contest To Highlight AMS Homecoming Week End; Sign-Up Applications Available October 14

Plans for this semester's Homecoming Week, to be held November 4-8, are currently underway, with attention being focused on the selection of a Homecoming Queen and her two attendants, according to Bob Rodriquez, president of the Associated Men Students.

Applications for the queen contest will be available by Monday, October 14, he announced, and will be due Friday, October 25. All women students attending the college, who are members of the Associated Students, are invited to enter the contest, Rodriquez added, stating that he is in hopes that each organization on campus will support a candidate for the contest.

Judges for the contest have not yet been picked, he said, but if possible some of the past AS presidents will be recruited.

Crowning of the queen will take place at a bonfire rally to be held Thursday, November 7. Details of the rally have not been worked out yet, Rodriquez stated, but he and Rally Commissioner Don Baikie promise that there will definitely be outside entertainment, possibly the Gateway Singers.

The rally will also serve to build up spirit for the Homecoming Game with Modesto, to be held Friday, November 8, at Kezar Stadium. The possibility of having a car parade has not yet been decided.

Following the football encounter, there will be an alumni dinner, Rodriquez stated, which will be held in the San Francisco Room of the Fairmont Hotel. Letters are now being prepared that will be sent to all alumni members, inviting them to attend the dinner, he added.

Later that evening the Homecoming Dance will be held, he said, which will conclude the week's events.

Proposed site for the affair is the Terrace Room of the Fairmont Hotel, which is located on California Street, bordered by Powell and Mason Streets.

The first dance will begin promptly at 9 p.m., Rodriquez stated, and will continue until midnight. Admission to the dance will be without charge to AS members, or $5 per couple, he said, with alumni members attending the dinner also being invited to the dance without further charge than for the dinner. Price for the dinner will be $5, Rodriquez added.

Engineering Group Plans Series Of Bay Area Visits

A group party, to be given jointly with the Home Economics Club on Friday, October 18, will mark the first activity on the Engineering Society's busy fall schedule, Mike Kram, president of the group, announced last week.

Also included on the society's agenda are tours to the Bay model in Sausalito, the RCA Communication Center, a Nike site and a brewery.

Later during the semester, a speaker will be engaged to lecture on the latest findings of the present International Geophysical year, the period in which scientists of the world collaborate to re-examine the earth.

If there is any question as to the date, time and place of any of these coming events, members of the society can consult the bulletin boards in Smith and Cloud Halls for verification of the same.

Meetings of the Engineering Society are scheduled to be held during college hour every Friday in S-200, and Kram urged all members to attend.

Those who have not as yet paid their fall dues of 50 cents are also asked by Kram to do so as soon as possible, so that the membership lists can be completed.

Student officers of the society are Kram, president; Chris Demuth, secretary; Chuck Coovert, treasurer, and Rolf Rosander, Club Activities Board representative.

Faculty sponsors include Wallace E. Sellman and John L. Hallock of the engineering department.

AWS Turnabout Friday Based On Broadway Theme

Annie Get Your Gun will be the theme for the Associated Women Student turnabout dance to be held Friday from 8 p.m. to 12 midnight in Smith Hall, Darlene Enfield, AWS president, announced recently.

Music will be donated through a grant from the Recording Industries Trust Fund Local No. 6 of the American Federation of Musicians. Steve Paul and his six-piece orchestra will play for the dance, Miss Enfield stated.

Women will invite their escorts to the event. Tickets are free with Associated Student card and will be distributed by sorority and club presidents and by the AWS executive board members in Dean Mary Golding's office, S-150, and at the women's gymnasium. Identification may be requested at the door, Miss Enfield said.

Decorations for the occasion will be in accordance with the theme. Women will wear full skirts resembling those of Annie's period and the men will wear jeans. The Hotel and Restaurant Department, going along with the theme, will serve cider, coffee and doughnuts.

During the intermission there will be an Indian Dance by Roland McNeil and songs from Annie Get Your Gun by Bob Shaw and Larry Vargo, Miss Enfield added.

Chairmen for the dance were already appointed by Miss Enfield as follows: Ann Finnerman and Ellen Cleary, decorations; Jane Wong, refreshments; Marilyn Milanesio, entertainment; Marilou von Kleist in charge of publicity, and Natalie Hoogasian, tickets.

Meetings of the AWS are scheduled at 1 p.m. every Tuesday in Dean Golding's office. Every woman Associated Student member is automatically a member of the AWS, and if interested may attend the weekly meetings in order to participate actively in the AWS program for the semester, Miss Enfield declared.

Klemmer Speaks At Rally Friday

Vocal entertainment, an introduction of the college's head football coach and some pertinent facts concerning the new gridiron season will highlight the first rally of the semester, slated for college hour Friday, from 10:40 to 11:20 a.m.

Rally Commissioner Don Baikie has announced that Grover Klemmer, head football coach here, will be on hand to give the audience the lowdown on the prospects of the Rams, who clash with Santa Rosa Junior College at 2:30 p.m. this Saturday at Kezar Stadium. This will be the Rams' first league encounter of the season in the Big Eight Conference.

Also on tap for Friday's rally, Baikie said, is a singer of popular music and a possible appearance of the Men's Glee, in addition to the college's yell leaders and song girls who will serve to build up spirit here for the game on Saturday.

Spears Surprised

Dr. Harold Spears Honored By West Twin Peaks Lions Club

A surprised Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Harold Spears, and President Louis G.Conlan were presented with gifts by the West O' Twin Peaks Lions Club during a surprise luncheon honoring Dr. Spears last Wednesday in the faculty dining room here.

After the lunch the club conducted its first meeting at the college this year. The Lions traditionally have been meeting here annually since the members are businessmen in this area and feel a close tie between the college and themselves.

Dr. Spears, who gave a brief talk and commented that he was delighted with the affair and being able to visit the college again, is himself a member of the club. He was presented with a large gift thermos with a handsome leather carrying case by his fellow Lions Club members.

The Hotel and Restaurant Department served the meal to some 85 members of the club.

Dr. Spears, too, seemed quite pleased with the lunch. When questioned on how he liked the food he beamed and commented, "Fine."

Dr. Conlan also spoke to the group on the extensively scaled building program on the campus. The cleh gave Conlan a large leather briefcase.

Following the meeting Dr. Spears, along with Dr. Conlan and other members of the administration, discussed the Success Story telecast of the next day in which Spears was to take part.

In addition to Dr. Spears' local responsibilities in the field of education, he is also the United States representative to the tremendously important five-man International Curriculum Commission. He was given the appointment last year.

Deans To Handle Applications For 8 Scholarships

Mary Golding, dean of women here, announced recently that students interested in obtaining scholarships this year should apply either to her or Ralph Hillsman, dean of men. Last year 32 scholarships were awarded, but this year only 8 will be offered to students, she added.

One is the Florence Louis Scholarship for $25, offered to a woman student of the college. This scholarship is made available by a woman graduate in appreciation of her experience here. Application deadline for this award is Thursday, October 31. It will again be offered in the spring.

An Associated Student scholarship of $125 will be available to one man and one woman. The last date to apply will also be October 31. It too will be offered again in the spring.

Two Denman Scholarships for $125 will be offered to two women students who are graduates of San Francisco public high schools. The deadline is also October 31, and it is awarded by the heirs of the late James Denman, former superintendent of San Francisco public schools.

A Square and Circle Scholarship may be won by an American born Chinese man or woman student.

Two Chinese Scholarships of $50 each will be offered to one Chinese man and one Chinese woman student. The application deadline for this will be October 31.

To apply for any of these scholarships, Dean Golding stated that a letter must be written to her or Dean Hillsman, listing ambitions, need and activities participated in outside of classes.

Last year's high school scholarship winners were Nancy Byers, from Mission, and Nancy Hanes from Poly. Chinese scholarship winners were Leonard Lim and Jean Lee. Recipients of scholarships from the International Institute Social Service Agency were David Fong, Dawson Lee, Samuel Lee, Fumye Ogawa and Frank Tom.

Students, H&R Staff Star In TV 'Cooks Tour' Of Hotel Industry Training Ground

By Tom Tatera

Well-earned laurels were bestowed upon the college's Hotel and Restaurant Department on the October 3 Success Story, a local television show which appeared on channel 7 at 6:30 p.m.

Four automatic egg-beaters, set off in unison, started the program, after which narrator Bob Day appeared on the scene to describe San Francisco as the "mecca of the gourmet."

With the idea of the show set firmly within the viewer's mind, a camera came to rest upon several parts of the City College campus, then drew in to focus upon the Smith Hall cafeteria, home of the H&R Department.

A portrait of George D. Smith, president and general manager of the Hotel Mark Hopkins, was then shown, followed by a scene of George Mardikian, famed Omar Khayyam owner and part-time instructor of the H&R Department, and a group of his students.

Students were then shown being served by other students in what the show termed a "Scramble-Ambie." Emphasis was made of the quality of the food by having a student "dig" happily into a pastry.

As the program progressed, Day was introduced to Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, and Lloyd Luckmann, coordinator of Instruction, in the faculty dining room. Luckmann then proceeded to give Day a general "cook's tour" of the cafeteria as seen behind the serving lines.

Brought into the conversation was a steak tenderizer from the meat preparation department, which seemed to strike Day's funny bone and give him a cue for a fast quip.

Louis Batmale, dean of Semiprofessional courses, also greeted Day and pointed out to him some of the modern steam tables, stoves and stock pots which the cafeteria possesses.

Next featured was a mock classroom situation in hotel management, illustrated by a group of H&R students and Lawrence Wong, H&R instructor. The importance of this was to show the need for specified training in a restaurant career.

At a hint from Day as to the lack of desserts to be found in the cafeteria, cameras were instantly focused on a table filled with pastry delicacies and an efficient looking doughnut frier.

One of the important facts stressed in the program was that students of the H&R Department are expected to work in all phases of the cafeteria's jobs—such as baking rolls, washing dishes, planning banquets and teas, serving at tables and behind the lines, and acting as purchasing agents.

Brought to light was the fact that City College is the only two-year college to have an H&R Department, and that the department works on a non-profit basis.

At the closing of the show, each chef instructor gave a view of his specialty dish.

Also interviewed on the program were Mardikian and Bob Grikon, of the Grison Chicken and Steak House fame, who spoke in representation of

A-B-C Registration Midway With H-K Group Slated Today

This semester's rearranged program for making pre-registration appointments, conferring alphabetical equality on all students by dividing available numbers for each registration hour into six alphabetical groups, began here Monday and continues daily through Monday, October 14.

Students in the H-K alphabetical group should report today to the counseling office here, S-160, to make their appointments, according to Waddington Blair, counselor here. Others are as follows: L-N, Thursday; O-R, Friday; and S-Z, next Monday.

Starting Tuesday, October 15, students may apply for appointments without regard to any alphabetical division. Prior to this date, the schedule listed above must be adhered to, announced Blair.

New instructions applying to students making appointments for interviews this week have been issued recently, Blair said.

He emphasized that students must either keep their pre-registration appointments as scheduled or, prior to the time of the appointment, cancel it and make a new one through the counseling office here.

Those who fail to follow this procedure may have to forfeit their registration numbers and accept numbers for a later registration hour.

Students were also advised to familiarize themselves with information contained in the college's bulletins and other catalogs.

First In Film Series To Be Shown Friday

Contrary to last week's announcement, the film, Modern Magazine Magic, will be shown this Friday during college hour, 10:40 to 11:30 a.m., in S-136, Madison W. Devlin, audio visual aids instructor here, announced last week.

This film takes the viewer through the complete process of producing a large magazine, Devlin pointed out.

"In color, it should provide an interesting view of the magazine industry," Devlin said.

The next film on the agenda will be A Hotel Is Born, the story of the famous Beverly Hilton Hotel, as Conrad Hilton, founder, tells it. The film is set to be shown Friday, October 18.

Apply Now For Christmas Work, Amori Says

More than 2,000 Christmas jobs will be offered by the placement office for qualified students in the field of retail merchandising, according to Joseph A. Amori, placement director here.

Amori also stated that students desiring part-time sales and/or stock work should make every effort now to fill these positions as there is an urgent demand for such people.

In an effort to acquaint students with the types of Christmas work available, Amori will hold a campus-wide conference on Friday, October 25, at 12 noon, in the men's gymnasium.

In addition to offering occupational counseling and job counseling, the placement office offers year round part-time, full-time, summer and holiday work. Amori stated that each job has specific requirements and emphasized that students wishing to see him should make sure that they have all the necessary qualifications so that he may speed the process.

As set forth by the prospective employer, the requirements range in scope from age, training, education, physical requirements, social and emotional attributes, geographical locations, and car ownership.

Working closely with the division of instruction, counseling and guidance, the department has developed wide contacts with employers throughout the entire San Francisco Bay Area, and is in a strategic position to refer students to employers for vocational advice.

One of the functions of the department is to assist people with classroom projects which deal with business and industry. It also gives lectures on business, industry and employment throughout the various business programs.

One lecture, delivered by Amori himself, has as its topic, What It Takes To Get Ahead In Modern Business. Amori explained the objective of his lectures is to orient students with the world of work, present an overall picture of work available, and set forth basic principles in entering and achieving success on the job.

The placement office is open daily, Monday through Friday, from 10 a.m. to 12 noon and from 2 to 4 p.m.

Veterans are requested to fill out application blanks early for Post Office jobs, Amori said.

CJCSGA State-Wide Conference Here Challenges AS Members

OUR ASSOCIATED STUDENT officers have already started preparing themselves for the November meeting at this college of the California Junior College Student Government Association's state convention.

This important meet will hold forth in San Francisco for two days and City College, as host for the convention, must necessarily take measures to insure the success of the event. Additionally, the college will be in a most advantageous position to show itself off during this time. Thus our student government leaders have recognized the advisability of making good use of every second of time between now and November 14, when the group convenes here to make ready for the serious job of putting the college on display as an exemplary specimen of the two-year educational institution.

If this is done as only City College is able to do it—with dignity, style and spirit—then the college as it is spotlighted during the conference will make the kind of sterling presentation of itself that can be expected to make heads swim.

This type of spectacular and gracious showing, if we accomplish it, will be more traditional than unusual for the college.

No one, including the other colleges participating in the meet, will be particularly surprised at the fact that City College is again setting the pace and indicating—as well as illustrating—which direction to take, which goals to aim for.

It is neither a simple matter nor an easy job to escape mediocrity and place oneself at the very highest level attainable. The college, in its present condition of dubious physical appearance in regard to neatness, good grooming and general campus-wide cleanliness, would, of course, never approach the polished form that is needed to set the ultimate example.

We would all do well to begin now in following our elected AS officers in preparing the college and ourselves for the scrutiny which is sure to be given us by visitors. Knowing the college, its history and its present meaning, being able to answer all questions likely to be asked about it and being able to direct a visitor's attention to phases and facets of the institution not ordinarily considered, will help as much as moulding the physical appearance to that needed state of crisp perfection.

Not the least important matter to us would be knowing exactly how, in all instances, to go about this work. Our surest procedure in this matter is to be guided by AS leaders and cooperate with everyone in getting the job done, and getting it done "the City College way."

Doing things "the City College way" is not very easy as we have pointed out, but it is what is expected of us. "To set the ultimate example, to lead the way."

—It's a rough tradition, but we're stuck with it.

Return To Civilian Life

Social Activities, Scholastic Aid Offered By Veterans' Organization

When asked to make a statement, the first draftee ever to be discharged from the military service said, "Man, I get out of this rat-race I'm not even going to join a church: I'd be afraid that it might be activated."

It is for this reason that most veterans hesitate before joining any organization. With these conditions in mind, the Veterans' Club of the college has chosen as its symbol, a suit of civilian clothes.

Incongruously, the chief function of any national veterans' organization seems to be participating in parades. Their resolutions dulled by the years, they march happily from one end of Market Street to the other.

This is not the case with the college's Veterans' Club, however. It is comprised of civilian students, and its primary concern is to offer benefits to its members as students and civilians.

Its main purpose is to provide a social atmosphere as well as to make available a place for the exchange of academic ideas to the veterans of the college, according to Don Smith, club president. It is designed to bring veterans together on both a social and scholastic level.

In the meeting, a varied social calendar is being arranged. In conjunction with the men's fraternity, Alpha Kappa Rho, the club is presenting its first dance Friday, October 25, at Smith Hall. In addition, a smoker and a tour of Hamm's Brewery are being planned for sometime in the near future.

An invitation to join is extended by the club to all veterans as well as to all persons who are interested in veteran affairs. It is understood by the club that most veterans are employed and, therefore, have not much time for extra-curricular activities. For this reason, all meetings of the club have been scheduled during college hours. In this way they will not interfere with any other activities.

Despite the fact that it is a social club, the academic aspect must not be lost. Since the beginning of the semester, a system has been set up by which the stronger students will meet with and assist the weaker ones. This is the most advantageous asset of the organization because its members are above all, students.

STUDENTS have the opportunity to become acquainted with some of the world's outstanding operas and to see and hear the stars and behind-the-scenes people who are responsible for the production of an opera.

The Junior League of San Francisco, in cooperation with the San Francisco Opera Association, is now holding its 10th season of Opera Previews. These Opera Previews are designed to acquaint opera-goers and the general public with the works of the San Francisco Opera Company which are not generally well known or are seldom performed.

Prominent musical authorities as speakers, interviews with opera personalities and recorded excerpts from operas are featured. The Previews are open to the public without charge and should be of great interest and value to music students and students in general who are interested in opera. Each program is an hour in length, so the student may fit it into his schedule.

The next Opera Preview (two have been presented previously) will be held tomorrow at Rickey's Studio Inn in Palo Alto at 11 a.m. James Schwabacher, tenor of the San Francisco Opera Company, will lecture and sing. His subject will be Macbeth by Verdi.

Final program of the season, Thursday, October 17, at the Peacock Court of the Mark Hopkins Hotel, will be a new idea in Opera Previews—a panel discussion entitled Behind The Curtain With The Producer. Moderator for this panel discussion is Alexander Fried, music editor of the San Francisco Examiner and art critic of the San Francisco Opera Company. His guests will include William Crocker, production co-ordinator of the San Francisco Opera Company; Matthew Farrugio, stage manager of the San Francisco Opera Company, and Robert Merrill, well-known baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

The panel will be a question and answer period on the highlights and sidelights of Aida, not a discussion of the opera. Scenic effects, lighting and costuming problems will be discussed.

This promises to be an outstanding program for those who would like to have an insight into the production of an opera.

CREATIVE Writing (English 35) is moved each year to a different room. These rooms are usually odd ball places where the class was put simply because there was no place else to send them. Last semester they were on top of the Science Building near the dome. This year they are in the cellar, in the refrigeration class squeezed in between pipes and gauges.

50,000 Ways To Knowledge

Honor System Allows Open Stacks And Lack Of Library Restrictions; Student Volunteers Aid Librarians

Available 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. five days a week are 50,000 opportunities for students of the college to acquire knowledge. Surrounding seating space for 700 persons is the splendidly equipped library open to all, and designed to make studying smoother for the struggling student.

The library is run on the open stack system—that is, any student can visit any part of the stacks at any time the library is open. Furthermore, while at other colleges there are inspection systems and restriction of library freedom, these are eliminated here by the honor system. (Trusting the students seems to be a very successful way to run a college library.)

Volunteer helpers in the library are either enrolled in Business 85, a course in library training, or are pledges of Delta Psi and Gamma Sigma Sigma sororities.

Many new books arrived at the library last June, and they are all awaiting perusal by patient students, as will be the new shipments due this month and next.

Under the open stack system, a student may look up a book under subject, title, or author in the card catalog, then find the appropriate stack—books 000-600 on the first floor stack, and 700-900 on the second floor stack.

Reserve book collection — books, pamphlets, and periodicals placed on reserve by instructors for one or two hours use, and overnight use after 2 p.m.—is available at the loan desk.

Unbound magazines, shelved alphabetically by title, which may be borrowed overnight, are to be found in the periodical room and browsing area, while bound volumes of magazines, for library use only, are available in the reserve reading room.

The reference reading room includes dictionaries, atlases, encyclopedias; periodical indexes, such as the Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature and Book Review Digest, and also the periodical location file.

Secretaries?

Men Students Infiltrating Business Class

By Ray Hackett

Every once in a while someone gets on her soap box and shouts about the emancipation of women, claiming that women can't do this or that, that it's a man's world. Here at the college the contrary seems to be taking place in some of the business classes, those of shorthand and typing.

Slowly but surely men are infiltrating classes which have traditionally been for women. Approximately 15 have integrated; it's a beginning! Men students are slowly awakening to the importance of the male secretary.

New executives must come from those who know the business, and who knows the business better than the boss' right hand man, his secretary. It's a job with opportunity unlimited. The man student has no trouble at all finding employment, because all who complete the necessary courses are placed in a job, or perhaps it's best to say a career.

One of the biggest hurdles for men students to overcome in the course is shorthand. It's something entirely new for them but once it is conquered (in about a year and a half), they are on their way to become full-fledged secretaries.

One of the men responsible for this awakening of students to the opportunities offered to men secretaries is James McConnell, instructor at the college. McConnell came to the college from South America where he was employed by Standard Oil, as, of all things, a secretary. McConnell is the man who has given the ideas of the secretary the big push here.

It's a man's world, maybe, and maybe it will become more evident when the opportunities of this career are realized by men students.

AGS Cool Heads Solve Mysteries

Psychology students are now troubled recognizing a gestalt? Math students—are some stymied when metamorphosizing feet to kilometers? Do quadrants plague? Is a history term paper clouding a usual salubrious outlook? Don't brew the hemlock. Even the zoological mysteries of genotypes and phenotypes can be unfolded.

Alpha Gamma Sigma scholastic honor society members' cool hands and heads are on call to unsnag dilemmas. Their coaching staff is prepared to keep bloody heads from bowing.

The frustrated can consult William Richardson, S-143, for an appointment with an analyst in his chosen problem course.

Columbus Too Late Landing, Ruins Holiday

Eagerness is the word for it. The Board of Education, the college, and apparently the instructors, had an eager look about starting classes here again last month.

Useless to say the students cooperated and came by the thousands. Even if they had to do it on a sunny Friday followed by an equally bright holiday the next Monday. Where one really begins to wonder about eagerness is as one looks over the college's official calendar.

What would the average student think if he were told about a fall semester with no holidays but two days for Thanksgiving, and one for the Veterans? Bless them.

Then, the odds appeared to be against those who expected longer free time (to study, of course), during the current semester, until the calendar hits December and shows that the college's men and women will actually gain as they'll be given three weeks off during Christmas time.

Before that time, even Columbus becomes a party-pooper as his day of days, October 12, falling on a Saturday, makes some students wonder, under the circumstances, what did he come to America for anyway?

Santa Rosa Bearcubs To Test Rams' Strength In League Lidlifter Saturday At Kezar

With hopes of winning the 1957 Big Eight Conference grid championship, and earning a shot at the Junior Rose Bowl, the college Rams will battle the Santa Rosa Bearcubs in the Rams' league opener on the Kezar turf at 2:00 p.m. this Saturday.

The highly rated Rams loom as favorites for the curtain raiser, since they defeated LA Valley 31-13 and lost to a tough LA City College eleven 13-5. The Bearcubs, however, won't be pushovers, as they defeated a good East Contra Costa aggregation 7-0 last Friday. In that contest the Santa Rosans displayed a stubborn defense, holding their opponents scoreless six times within the 10-yard line.

Of the 11 Bearcub starters only three are returning veterans, whereas the college boasts of having seven starters with previous college football experience. The Ram backfield, in its entirety, is composed of seasoned veterans. Fullback Bill Rathbun and halfback Dave Tyree were outstanding first stringers as freshmen on the '56 Ram squad. Quarterback Larry Beldon and halfback Sam Rios, although not manning starting positions in their first year, have also seen a considerable amount of action. A strong line, spearheaded by the irreplaceable Ernie Ibarra, also contains two year men in Bill Barrington and Wayne Lawrence.

Last years' league opener between the Rams and the Bearcubs was won handily by the college, 39-13, at Santa Rosa. It is possible that this year's game will be as lopsided, since the college boasts virtually the same lineup and maintains a home field advantage. Tentative starting lineups:

Star Athlete Craft Injured In Grid Opener

By John Henry

Gene Craft, swivel-hipped Ram scatback, will be lost to the squad for the remainder of the season, Coach Grover Klemmer disclosed last week.

Craft, who was a regular last season, had the starting right half job sewed up again this year until he suffered a knee injury in the season opener against L. A. Valley in Van Nuys on September 20.

The 34-13 victory proved costly for the college eleven as Craft pulled up lame with severely pulled ligaments in his right knee after being tackled in the third quarter of play.

The 140 lb. speedster is now wearing a cast from ankle to knee and he expects to have it with him for at least a month at which time the medics will decide whether an operation will be needed.

GENE CRAFT, versatile Ram athlete.

Craft was an outstanding back last season as he averaged about seven yards per carry while scoring five touchdowns. For his performance he was awarded a berth on the All-Conference second team.

If the injured knee responds satisfactorily, Craft hopes to be in shape for baseball in the spring. Although not the size of the average backstop, he has proved himself able to handle the job behind the plate.

Craft is a physical education major and is presently undecided as to where to finish his education, although he has mentioned the University of Idaho as a good possibility.

Veteran back Sam Rios has moved up to a starting role and is capably filling Craft's shoes. Although rugged Rios does not have Craft's ability to sneak through small holes, he has proved himself a hard runner and good blocker.

Sixty In Intra Boxing

About 60 men will participate in intramural boxing this semester, according to Roy Diederichsen, boxing coach here.

Asked about intercollegiate boxing, Diederichsen stated, "We hope for it in the near future when the new training room in the gmnasium is completed."

RA Plans First Sports Day; Coeducational Dates Set

A sports day at Oakland Junior College on Saturday, October 26, is the first major event of the semester for the Recreation Association. Activities scheduled are bowling, archery, and modern dance.

City College will host several two-year colleges on November 16 for volleyball, basketball, archery, tennis, and possibly bowling. Dates for other sports day were set at a meeting of all Bay Area recreation association representatives on September 27. Associated Student President John Kelly presented to the group a set of archery rules, which will be sent to each college for approval or suggestions.

RA coeducational activities have started, but interested students may still join. Badminton is held on Mondays at 3 p.m., basketball on Tuesdays at 3 p.m., modern dance and tennis on Wednesdays at 3 p.m., volleyball on Thursdays at 3 p.m., and fencing, archery, social and folk dance during college hour each Friday.

Ann M. Casey is sponsor of the RA with Beverly Jo Wilson, president; Mariko Soma, vice-president; Juanita Miranda, secretary, and Sue Johnson, treasurer.

Block SF Society Plans Increase In Activities

Block SF, the athletic organization reserved for men having earned their letter in a particular sport, is planning to have a larger amount of student activity this semester, according to Alex W. Schwarz, Block SF adviser.

Schwarz has had some past experience as sponsor of an athletic club in another school, but is especially honored in his appointment at the college.

Elections will be held at the second meeting. Bob Guddee is the present president, elected last semester.

Student Fans Lack Spirit, Enthusiasm

RAMBLINGS

By Nick Peters

RATINGS are for the birds, as evidenced by the disappointing 13-5 Ram loss to the Los Angeles City College Cubs. Prior to the game the Cavanaugh Rating System had the college tabbed as second in the nation, while the Cubs were listed as 34th. Witnesses will agree that at the termination of the game the two teams were definitely not 32 notches apart in talent.

To come right out and say that a squad is number two in the country can certainly have its ill effects. In many instances a highly rated outfit inherits an air of over-confidence. A damaging after effect can also occur if a team takes a loss to a lower rated club too seriously and loses its confidence altogether.

These last two examples obviously do not apply to the Ram grid squad, because it's no shame to lose to a team like the Cubs, who perennially give the Rams the ultimate in competition. Moral: Don't let rating sway your opinion. Be your own grandstand quarterback—chances are your opinion of a team will be just as good as that of an "expert."

On the bright side, Klemmer's forces drew a bye last weekend, enabling them to straighten out their weaknesses in preparation for Saturday's league opener. In our eyes Sam Rios proved to be an adequate replacement for the injured Gene Craft and should do even better as the season progresses. The defensive line fared well against the Cub running game, but on offense the 10 lb. per-man Cub weight advantage was certainly predominant.

We give special praise to reserve qb. Don Baike, who did a fine job in replacing Larry Beldon. On several occasions during the contest he was strewn on his back because of inadequate pass protection. It is a policy for SF fans to get on a players' back when he "eats the ball," (note fan reaction toward Y. A. Tittle). In our opinion, Baike was quite justified in eating the ball for the surest way to louse up a game is to throw to nonexistent receivers.

Spirit? Who heard of that at the college? We were embarrassed to view an eight man plus two song girl aggregation from Los Angeles make more noise and show more enthusiasm than the 100 fan gathering from the college. Five song girls showed up for the affair, but it was below their dignity to stay on the field, dirty their shoes, and arouse some lip from the audience.

Sure, they looked sharp in their glistening white, but they'd be better off in gunny sacks if they could generate some student participation. Perhaps the team couldn't have done much better with some student backing, but it certainly couldn't have done much worse.

The old adage that "there's no substitute for experience" positively applies to the professional sport scene. Three seasoned vets, who would be generally considered "over the hill" in their respective sports, have recently made the headlines as champions of one sort or another.

Ted Williams, the greatest hitter since Babe Ruth, grabbed the American League batting crown at .39 with a sizzling .388. This fantastic average was the highest recorded in the majors, since Ted's unbeatable .406 in 1941. Williams' prowess didn't end in averages, since he belted 38 homers, the second highest total of his major league career.

In the National League, 36-year-old Stan Musial copped the bat title with a sparkling .351. It was the highest NL mark since his .355 in 1951, and was "The Man's" seventh bat title, tying the total recorded by Rogers Hornsby.

The Methuselah of the ring, Archie Moore, gave Tony Anthony a sound trouncing to retain his light-heavy title. At 44 (some say 47) most exboxers who have fought 200 bouts are either dodging imaginary lefts and rights in their living rooms, having treatments on their pug noses and cauliflower ears, or are put away in the looney bin; but the tireless Archie is unmarked and it seems that he'll continue delivering KO's to kids half his age.

A fourth member of this elite trio would have been Sugar Ray Robinson, who lost his membership card because of some nasty judges.

Ram Booters Vie With UC In 2nd Game Saturday

Playing its second game in the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference, the Ram eleven will travel to Berkeley this Saturday to meet the University of California booters, Coach Roy Diederichsen announced today.

Last week the college's soccermen had their baptism of fire against the San Francisco State Gators, but results were not available at press time.

Roland and Richard Prydz; Ed Zelaya, fullback; and last year's All-City player from Galileo High School, rightwing Al Guerrero, have been singled out by Diederichsen as the most promising newcomers to the college's team for their outstanding performances during the recent praetice games.

Westman, Batz Pace Harriers In Track Meet Here

Blake Westman and Ray Batz, the only two track veterans with cross country experience, have been named by Coach Lou Vasquez as the probable top two men for the college's distance team.

Batz was ineligible last track season, but Westman had a successful year running the two mile with his record-breaking teammate, Eddie Chavez. Another member, who has had previous experience with this race, is newcomer Ken Dowdy, from Balboa High.

Cross country is starting its first season in organized league competition. Second year track men up to support the team include Dick Cossin, George Grasso, Don Nasser, John Rodriquez, Lionel Sims, and Myron Zimmerman.

Zimmerman, a 440 and 880 man, has been impressive in practice and continues to set the pace in the early Golden Gate Park workouts. First year men coming in to support the new team will be Les Blatly, Lincoln; Hal Evans, Alameda; Charles Fox, Mike MacCollum, Hayward; Roger Nyberg, Polytechnic; Dave Patton, Polytechnic, and Bill Thomas.

Coach Vasquez has set up the first meet of the season with Balboa High School this Saturday. It is also definite that there will be a meet with Santa Rosa and with Modesto. At present, he is working to set up meets with the Stanford Frosh, the Cal Frosh, and San Francisco State.

Position Of Athletic Commissioner To Be Awarded Here Soon

Due to be filled in the near future is the post of Men's Athletic Commissioner here, according to John Kelly, president of the Associated Students.

Kelly will arrive at his selection for position after consulting with members of the physical education department. His appointment will then be placed before the Student Council for consideration.

Duties of the Men's Athletic Commissioner are to cooperate, report and inform the president and council of inter-college athletic events and out-of-class participation.

Of the 11 baseball players picked on the 1946 Rookie All-Star Team by The Sporting News, only two remain in the major leagues today: Warren Spahn of the Milwaukee Braves and Del Ennis of the St. Louis Cardinals. San Francisco Seal infielder Grady Hatton was also picked on the team.

Sororities And Fraternities Hold Rush Activities In Preparation For Pledge Week November 4 To 8

By Jerry Redford

CAMPUS fraternities and sororities are now in the process of holding pledging affairs and meetings for the coming pledge week, November 4-8.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity held its first affair Sunday evening at the Golden West Branch of the YMCA. President Larry Vargo addressed the prospective pledges, stating the importance and advantages of belonging to a fraternity. Following was a buffet dinner, served by one hostess from each sorority.

Alpha Phi Omega brothers recently appointed Ralph Goben as chairman of their bindex committee. Bindex is the project of the brothers and pledges this semester. Profits will be used in a service project for the college. Also discussed were plans for organizing a bonfire for the Homecoming Rally.

Theta Tau sorority held a meeting last week at the home of Liz Thrush to rehearse the entertainment for their semi-annual luau. Plans were also made for the sorority's fireside which was held last week.

The Westminster Celtic Fellowship was recently formed and for its first meeting had Dr. John Hadsell speaking on the subject, Why Foundation.

Lambda Phi fraternity held its first affair last week at the home of Ed Degliantoni. Advantages of the fraternity were discussed by the officers. Last Saturday the fraternity journeyed to Half Moon Bay, where they held a beach party. Officers include Ron Dahor, president; Stan Rokes, vice-president, and Degliantoni, secretary.

Beta Phi Beta fraternity held a business meeting recently at the home of Herm Kobelle, where it was decided that the fraternity would again hold the Golden Slipper Dance, and that they would present a trophy to the cutest couple at the Frosh Ball.

Beta Tau fraternity announced that they will make a surprise award in Smith Hall during college hour Friday, October 18.

Zeta Chi sorority held its fireside last Thursday night at the home of Wynnelle McCarthy. One of the Zeta sisters, Ann Villanova, is running for queen of Columbus Day festivities. The sorority will act as hostesses at the Goodwill Industries open house to be held next week. This will be a service project for the group.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority held a very successful fireside last week at the home of Charlene Peterson. They are now in process of completing the plans for their luncheon to be held next week.

Student Council Approves Fourteen Campus Budgets

By Lois Cosden

Fourteen campus budgets, totalling $10,765.74, were approved and passed at the Student Council meetings of October 1 and 3 last.

Breakdown of the expenses submitted by Finance Chairman Linda McArdle at Tuesday's session included seven agencies: Freshman Class, $494; Campus Police, $838; Additional Executive Budget, $10; Football Budget, $4,993.78; KCSF Broadcasters, $521; Associated Women Students, $584; and Associated Men Students, $752.48.

Thursday's listing included the latter seven: Injury Fund (athletic), $1,000; Insurance for students and faculty, $300; Sophomore Class, $698; Club Activities Board, $197.02; Men's Glee Club, $127.55; Treble Clef (women's chorus), $73.55, and the A Cappella Choir, $174.33.

The sums voted provide equipment and transportation expenditures mainly.

Two new members were added to the cabinet. Sworn into cabinet positions last Thursday were Club Activities Board Representative Richard Allen and Stan Rosenberg, Awards Commissioner.

Roy Buckman took his oath of acceptance of council membership.

Brower Dimond, AS card sales chairman, drew attention to a regulation regarding the loss of a student card. A charge of $1 is made for renewal. Dimond quoted Fall '57 sales reached $12,023 at the last count with 2,407 cards sold.

Campus Affairs Coordinator Dave Tipton reported that a file of campus talent is available to student organizations in Dean Ralph Hillsman's office.

Fraternity Wins CAB Talent Show

Alpha Phi Epsilon's "Marching Hornets" marched themselves to victory at the Talent Show of the Club Activities Board dance last Friday, and thereby gained the honor of representing City College at the State Junior College convention to be held in November, with this college acting as host.

The group began marching during Hell Week last semester to keep up their morale. Response was so good that they were asked to perform at the May Festival rally last semester and the new student orientation rally beginning this semester.

Costume for the men include faney Bermuda shorts and long socks. Paddles with the fraternity letters are carried.

Captain of the group is Josh Williams, and members are Paul Clark, Herbert Collins, Gene Craft, Herbert Dotson, Ray Harris, Charles Henderson, Fred Hicks, Calvin Holman, and Eddie Thomas.

More Success Story

the pending Hotel and Restaurant convention here.

Format for the Success Story had originally been conceived by Larry Russel, script writer for the program. Some technical remodeling added to it later, however, by college administrators Louis Batmale, dean of Semi-professional Courses, Luckmann and Conlan.

More than 300 students assisted the KGO-TV people in setting up their cameras and equipment in Smith Hall, while the responsibility for supplying electrical power to the machinery was handed to Ed Banderob, college electrician.

Symphony Forum Tickets On Sale At Bank Today

A major change was announced in the annual Symphony Forum series of concerts this year by Meyer Cahn, band director. The usual Thursday night performances will be held on Wednesdays at 8:30 p.m. This is the 14th year the college has participated in the forum in cooperation with 35 other Northern California colleges.

Many great artists of varied musical backgrounds will be presented in the series of concerts starting December 4. Yehudi Menuhin will star on January 8, Isaac Stern and Gregor Piatigorsky will share the spotlight on February 19, Andres Segovia will appear on March 5, and Igor Stravinsky will be guest conductor on April 16. These are just a few of the artists scheduled to appear from December's first concert to the last on May 14.

Ordinarily the prices for a season ticket would range up to $56.00, but through the Symphony Forum, students can purchase tickets for as little as $18.00 for the balcony and $24.00 for the orchestra and dress circle.

Tickets will be on sale at the bank during normal banking hours starting today.

The present Symphony Forum committee will meet at the Opera House Saturday for a Board of Directors meeting to discover further benefits to be derived from musical presentations in the Bay Area. The committee members are Warren Robies, chairman, Kathy Robles, Kathleen McReady and William Forshay.

Cahn pointed out that this is an opportunity for college students to obtain high quality entertainment at low cost.

Tradition Broken

Nurse To Work On Full Time Basis

For the first time in its history a Public Health Nurse has been assigned to the college on a full-time work basis. Her name is Gloria Anderson and her office will be called Student Health Service Center, and is located in S-155.

One of Mrs. Anderson's duties will be to work with the doctors here in coordination of student physical examinations. She will also help separate medical records that must be kept from those that must be discarded.

Her office will be open for treatment of serious accidents but it will not be a first aid station. First aid treatment is to be administered as it has been in the past, by the instructors and must be brought to the attention of Mrs. Anderson only if the instructor does not feel competent to handle it.

The college receives a student's health record from the high school of graduation, but students are urged to visit their private physicians regularly in order that Mrs. Anderson can get accurate information whenever she needs it.

Frosh Ball Sets October 19 Date

Site of the Frosh Ball, Autumn Fantasy, to be held from 9 p.m. until midnight Saturday, October 19, will be the Mark Hopkins Hotel, according to Fred Hicks, president of the Freshman Class.

Two rooms, the Peacock Court and Room of the Dons, have been set aside for the first off-campus college dance scheduled this semester.

All students are invited to dance to the music of the Steven Paul orchestra, originating from the Peacock Court. Admission is free to Associated Students and $3 to couples without a card. Attire for the affair will be cocktail dresses for the women and suits with ties for the men.

Other highlights of the evening will include entertainment presented by City College students, and a cutest couple contest, under the direction of Pat Jones.

In addition to trophies awarded each member of the winning team by Beta Phi Beta fraternity, the winning lady will receive one dozen long-stemmed roses, compliments of Alpha Phi Epsilon, and the gentleman will receive a gift certificate from Bruce Bary of Stonestown, Hicks added.

Reese Wins AS Card Sales Trophy

Darlene Reese, representing the Associated Women Students, walked off with top honors and a trophy in this semester's Associated Student card sale contest. She was presented with her award at the Club Activities Board dance in Smith Hall September 27.

Her opponent, Don Nutig, was also presented with a trophy for his part in the card sales in representation of the Associated Men Students.

These two organizations have been trying to outdo each other in the contest for many years now. Last semester, the AWS forged ahead of the AMS—while the semester before AMS won out.

Figures for the AS cards, as of Monday, September 30, were reported to have reached a high of 2,407 sales for a total of $12,023, Brower Dimond, Finance Chairman, announced last week. He added that this is well over last year's total sales.

Advantages of having an AS card, as stated before, are the admittances to AS dances, athletic contests, and the homecoming pageant without additional cost, as well as the gaining of discounts from various clothing stores, service stations, cleaners and florists.

Spouse cards, provided for married couples, allow them the same privileges.

Dimond also pointed out that by purchasing a card, a student automatically becomes a member of the Associated Students, thereby helping to provide funds which are essential for the support of college activities.

Times Changed For Receiving Permits

Parking permits previously issued daily from 7:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. will now be issued every Friday during college hour, and on Tuesday and Thursday mornings at 11 a.m. in C-120, according to Fred Fitzgerald, criminology instructor here.

Students wishing to obtain permits must present an Associated Student card, a driver's license, and automobile registration. Citations will be issued to anyone parking in the campus parking areas without a permit.

"Campus policeman have devoted more than 200 hours of their own time in the issuing of parking permits," Fitzgerald said.

IRC To Present 4th International Fair November 1

For its fourth consecutive year the college's International Relations Club will bring together again, on November 1, talented men and women from all points of the world to present here another International Fair, Joseph M. Jacobsen, foreign students adviser and sponsor of the organization, stated last week.

Native dances, songs, music and fashions from these students' respective countries will be shown, Jacobsen said, adding that anyone wishing to participate in the affair should inform him in S-186.

As happened in the past spring semester, when the Latin American fiesta was staged here and toured the Bay Area, the club this fall will also be engaged in off-campus events. Four shows are scheduled to take place, before and after the main one at the college's Smith Hall.

These presentations will be held today at the Sunnyside School of San Francisco on October 20; and in conjunction with the American Association of the United Nations, at Golden Gate Park for the UN Week celebration; on October 30, a special guest-appearance at 5:30 p.m. in San Francisco's KPIX television station (channel 5), also commemorating UN Week, and on November 13, at the city's Paul Revere school.

Americans Joyce Carla Borelli, Sherry Wayne, Josephine Anzaloni and Ron Zachray; Mike Clarque from Cuba; Mauricio Rivera from El Salvador; Esmeralda Aguilar from Guatemala; Lorenzo Picelli from Italy, and Sergio Carmona, Ruddy Bunge and Pastor Valle from Nicaragua, are some of those to be featured by the college group at the several performances.

Ushering Tickets Available In S-150

Dean of Women Mary Golding announced today that students interested in ushering for the operas should consult her in her office, S-150.

Requirements for ushers are as follows: Women must wear a street length black dress; dark blue or brown suits or dresses are acceptable. No color may be worn in the outfit. Men must wear dark non-sport suits, white shirts and a necktie. Further details on dress may be obtained from Dean Golding.

Ushering is at one of three places: the Opera House, Veterans' Memorial or the Civic Auditorium. Admittance tickets and a list of regulations may be obtained in Dean Golding's office.

James Day Addresses Students Here

Newspapers in the metropolitan Bay Area were roundly praised for the support they have given in sustaining educational station KQED by James Day, general manager, in a talk delivered to radio and television students here recently.

Through support in times of distressing financial condition, Day told how the newspapers opened the doors for a community owned educational television station by awakening the people of the Bay Area to this new element in television broadcasting with news stories and supporting editorials.

Recalling the myriad of troubles encountered in developing a station of this kind, Day went on to tell how KQED started in a small one-room studio to wind up in its present spacious location at 4th and Bryant.

In connection with the methods of providing children with stimulating program fare, Day holds to the theory that children should imagine their own ideas of fantasy rather than have it presented to them in a manner which would not encourage their ability to imagine.

Under the requirements for job opportunities in television, Day told his audience they must not only have experience but imagination to mold ideas for television, and on this point he said this was far more difficult to achieve than experience.

Concluding his talk, Day left his audience in a state of mirth with the remark, "If you can keep your head while all others about you are losing theirs—you don't understand the situation."

AMS Homecoming Week, Annual Fair Program Planned

Final details for next month's Homecoming Week celebrations were discussed during an Associated Men Student meeting held recently.

AMS President Bob Rodrigues said the only point of debate arose over the price of the alumni dinner, presently set at $5 per head.

Arguments were that it was too expensive and suggestions were made to substitute a lower-costing buffet dinner. Final decisions, Rodrigues said, will be made at a joint AMS-Alumni meeting next week.

Homecoming Week, an annual affair, will be celebrated November 4 to 8.

The meeting also made popularity voting by students as the basis for the election of the Homecoming Queen. Previously it was hoped that Associated Student Presidents would form a judging panel.

Two other rules marked for eligible partieipation were possession of an AS card and a mimmum 12-unit program.

Applications for the contest will be available next Monday, October 14, Rodrigues said. They are due on Friday, October 25. The winner and two runners-up, besides reigning during the week, will be presented with trophies.

Rodrigues also expressed hopes for vivid floats, decorated by individual clubs. These floats will join the car parade to Kezar Stadium for the Homecoming football game against Modesto on Friday, November 8. Trophies are expected to be presented to the three outstanding floats.

Rodrigues also hopes to have the Homecoming Dance, to be held at the Fairmont Hotel November 8, extended by an hour to 1 a.m., but nothing definite has yet been arranged.

New Pin For 40 CAB Members

With the exception of a few minor details which are to be ironed out, the Club Activities Board is in full swing for the present semester. According to Jim Foster, CAB president, the board must elect officers and the budget must be approved for a CAB pin, a new development of the board.

Officers who have already been elected are Ron Wilson, membership committee chairman; Frank Benadero, athletic committee chairman; Denise Durkin, publicity committee chairman; Jackie Ruggeri, poster committee chairman; Bob Pecotich, constitutional and policy committee chairman; and George Fessunoff, plaque and trophy committee chairman.

At the CAB's regular meeting last Thursday, in addition to the appointment of officers, the discussion was centered around CAB pins for 40 members that would cost $56.77. The pins would be red and white (two dyes) with a gold filling.

Sophomore Meeting Set

The Sophomore Class will meet this Friday during college hour in S-100 for the introduction of officers and sponsors and to discuss the Soph Project, Soph Week and the Soph Ball, Larry Vargo, president of the class, announced last week.

The first electric tattoo machine was employed by Samuel F. O'Reilly in 1875 in the Bowery, New York. The electric tattoos were called "tattaugraphs."

ISC Announces Invitational Dinner Dates

Inter-Sorority Council officers announced the final dates for each sorority's invitational dinner or luncheon to be held from Sunday, October 20, through Sunday, October 27, according to Carol Olson, ISC president.

Four of the sororities are planing dinners for the 175 prospective rushees. Phi Beta Rho will present its dinner at the Forest Hill Club House this Sunday. On Tuesday, October 22, Delta Psi will entertain the rushees at the Golden West Y. Zeta Chi is planning its dinner Thursday, October 24, at the Wawona Lodge, while the Golden Gate Yacht Club will be the setting for Theta Tau's dinner Sunday, October 27.

Gamma Kappa Beta is planning a luncheon this Sunday at the Women's City Club, and Kappa Phi's luncheon is to be held at Forest Lodge October 27.

Preference coffee hours, a new idea this semester, will be held this Sunday. Each sorority will announce the time and place for visit with the rushees.

All prospective rushees should have a C average and be carrying at least 12 units of study. If a rushee's average drops below a C, the sororities will be forced to reject her, Miss Olson said.

Miss Olson added that a rushee should not accept a dinner invitation to a sorority in which she is not interested, nor should the rushee attend the coffee hour of that sorority.

The sororities and their respective presidents are Gamma Kappa Beta, Debbie Asminussion; Delta Sigma Tau, Joycelyn Perkins; Kappa Phi, Audrey Bell; Phi Beta Rho, Carol Olson; Theta Tau, Marilyn Galligani; and Zeta Chi, Marilyn Milanesio.

Massenkoff Named Student Band Leader

Student Band Director Herman Boxerbaum was tapped for active duty by the Naval Reserve recently but the band plays on.

The Executive Council of the band broke with tradition and elected Nicolai Massenkoff to fill the vacancy. Approved by Meyer Cahn, faculty adviser for the band, Massenkoff will appear in his new position at the Stockton game on Saturday at Kezar Stadium.

Formerly, no first semester student was permitted to hold office in the band, but Massenkoff proved to be the best available replacement. He has had previous experience in directing at Washington High School, where he also played the French horn. He is a music major.

Hotel Story Next In Film Series

A Hotel Is Born, story of the Beverly Hilton Hotel in Los Angeles, will be featured on the college hour film series this Friday in S-136, Madison W. Devlin, audio visual aids instructor here, announced today.

"There are excellent views of the interior decoration," Devlin added, "and also the restaurant and individual rooms will be portrayed.

"The Beverly Hilton is one of the nationally famous hotels," Devlin said, "and should prove interesting to any student, but especially those from the Hotel and Restaurant Department."

A Hotel Is Born is in color and will start at 10:40 a.m. Devlin pointed out that students should come early to insure seats.

THERE SEEMS to be some difference of opinion between (left to right) Carl Mayo as Shylock, Stanley Church as Antonio and Richard Oliver as Lancelot in this scene from the Little Theater's production of Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice." The romantic comedy opens this Friday in the college Little Theater at 8 p.m. This will be the rarely-seen play's first production at the college. Audiences will get the full treatment afforded to audiences of Shakespeare's own time in the authentically presented piece. —Guardsman photo by Ben Nishi.

Merchant Of Venice To Make Initial Performance Friday

Shakespearean Play To Be Presented Eight Times; Thespians Carl Mayo, Jeanne Graham Seen In Lead Roles

A fast-paced, four plot play combining suspense and humor will be presented here Friday when the curtain opens on Shakespeare's The Merchant Of Venice in the college Little Theater, Michael Griffin, play director, said today.

The play will be performed six times, on October 18 and 19, October 25 and 26, and November 1 and 2, starting at 8 p.m.

Ram Game Rally Scheduled Friday

Members of the Rally Committee, headed by their chairman, Don Balkie, met last week to iron out difficulties entailed while preparing for their next rally, which will, according to Balkie, take place this Friday during college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m. Balkie stressed that in the event of rain, the rally would be held indoors, presumably in the men's gymnasium.

At the same time, Beta Tau fraternity will be making a surprise presentation in Smith Hall to one of the members of the college's staff, Bill Robinson, past Beta Tau president, announced.

"The song girls will take an active part in the program," Balkie said, "and the yell leaders through chants and acrobatics will lead the audience in yells to help support the team. A part of the program is to remain a surprise."

The committee was spoken to by Dr. Zarro, hypnotist by profession. Showing photographs of himself in action, Zarro told the committee of his appearance at Treasure Island Naval Station and promised them a good show if they decided to engage his services for a hypnotic show. Committee members voted to take up his proposal at their next meeting.

Griffin mentioned that several of the members of the cast are proving their versatility in handling more than one job. He cited Jeanne Graham, who plays Portia and also designed the costumes; Carl Mayo, who plays Shylock and is also publicity man for the show; and Aloysius Cooney, who plays the parts of Old Gobbo and also of Tubal, a friend of Shylock.

Half of the remaining members of the cast are new to the college and for some, this is their first performance. The cast includes Stan Chureh as Antonio, John Rose as Salarino, Bob Lasley as Salanio, Warren Henderson as Bassanio, William Forshay as Lorenzo, Fred Fischer as Gratiano, Virginia Rae as Nerissa, Ronald Allen as Prince of Morocco, Dick Oliver as Lancelot, Leah Pashoian as Jessica, Camille Mazzanti as Prince of Arragon, and Tanya Soleimani sa Balthazar.

The primary plot concerns Shylock's attempt to cut a pound of flesh from Antonio as a forfeiture for failing to pay a debt. The secondary plot concerns a choice of caskets suitors must make to win Portia.

The third plot is the elopement of Jessica and Lorenzo from the house of Shylock. Woven in with these three plots is the comedy of the rings that shows what happens when a man fails to keep his word to a woman.

Students with Associated Student cards will be admitted free to all performances, Griffin said, while the general admission is one dollar.

Opera Ushers Invited To Gala Ball October 20

All those who have ushered for the opera this season are invited to the Ushers' Annual Gala Ball, The Guardsman was told today by Bill Handly, head usher of the Orchestra Section.

The annual get-together of ushers, stars and critics will take place in the Royal Room of the Richelieu Hotel on Sunday, October 20, at 8:30 p.m. The admission is $2.50 per person and each usher can bring a friend.

Several of the stars from this year's opera season have already promised to attend; among them, Jan Peerce and Leontyne Price. In last year's ball, Peerce sang duets with himself on records brought by admirers.

David Hulburn, The Chronicle said of the ball, "From all reports, it should out-fol the Fol-de-Rol." Ushers are invited to come in costume if they wish. There will be dancing and door prizes.

Tickets for ushering as such may be obtained in her office, Mary Golding, dean of women, announced today. Students who wish to usher for the opera may sign up for desired dates in this 35th annual season, which will last until Thursday, October 24.

Besides ushering for the opera, students may also usher for the Royal Ballet, formerly the Sadler's Wells Ballet from the Royal Opera House in London. Nine performances will be held starting November 20 through November 27. The Ballet will take place at the War Memorial Opera House.

Ushering tickets will also be available for the symphony which begins November 20 and continues through November 27 at the War Memorial Opera House.

Backstage Workers Get New Facilities

Pre-curtain preparation by the cast and technicians for the upcoming play, The Merchant Of Venice, has been eased by the new working facilities built in S-19 this summer, according to Michael Griffin, drama instructor.

Griffin declared that the freshly renovated S-19 is in full use for the first college play of the fall semester. Props and scenery were made and painted in one of the half-dozen working areas.

The other additions to the one-time storeroom are a prop room and a scene dock. Dressing rooms will be built in S-19 when the necessary space is cleared.

The Little Theater office, too, was given a going over this summer.

Police Gun Team Wins First Place, Marksman Trophy

Against strong competition, the Campus Police pistol team won the first place trophy in the marksman class in pistol matches, held at the Oakland Pistol Club on October 6, according to Geraldine Rush, criminology recording secretary.

The Campus Police first team had a score of 1005; McClellan Air Force Base took second place with a score of 990; Alameda Police Department was third with a score of 937; and fourth place went to this college's second team with a score of 908.

Members of the Campus Police first team and their scores are Louis Paglierani, 258; Tom Severson, 245; Marion Timm, 253, and Jim Keane, 249.

First place medal was won by Louis Paglierani in the marksman class of the Camp Perry match, a division of the Oakland match, with a score of 286 out of 300.

In the National match, another division of the Oakland match, Paglierani won second place medal with a score of 258. Marion Timm won third place medal in the National match with a score of 256.

William Lee Tranor, former Campus Police chief here, has become the only man to make the San Francisco Police pistol team in his rookie year, according to Miss Rush.

Two other former Campus Police officers, Patrick Davoren and Richard Dunn, are now members of the South Pasadena Police pistol team.

22 At Regional Plan For State Conference

Preparing for the state conference in November, 22 Associated Student officers and council members attended the regional Northern California Junior College Student Government Conference held at Marin Junior College October 5.

Held to weed out vital topics to be discussed at the state conference, the regional proved to be an asset by clearing the way of topics that were deemed unnecessary.

Conferences of this type are held every year to discuss ways to improve the operation of student governments on individual campuses.

Ideas and new methods are submitted, and after a discussion on their merits and demerits, they can be adopted depending on the discretion of the student president.

A result of the conference saw Walt Shultz of this college elected State Parliamentarian. Also elected from this college to state offices earlier were Eugenia Lary as State Secretary; Jim Woods as State Information Officer, and Bob Varni as State Conference President.

Elven scheduled workshops were for Associated Men Students, Athletics, Associated Women Students, Current Problems, Finance, Public Relations, Publications, Rallies and Assemblies, Social Activities, Student Government and Veterans.

Also brought up was the next meeting place for the next regional conference. John Kelly, AS president here, submitted the name of this college which was unanimously accepted by the group, making it the first time that the regional conference will be held here.

Agenda for the conference included two general assemblies, two workshop sessions. Entertainment for the day was provided by the Jazz Showease group known as The Mastersounds.

The statewide conference is slated for three days, Thursday through Saturday, November 14 to 16, with headquarters at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel where an official dinner for delegates will climax the sessions November 16.

Pre-Reg System Successful Here

Equal distribution over a six day period of students applying for pre-registration appointments, avoiding the one-day rush predominant in the past, has proven extremely successful, Waddington Blair, counselor here, announced.

Under the old system all the college's students came on the same day to make their appointments. The result was an overwhelming work load for counselors and time difficulties for students.

This semester's revised system of equal distribution has met with favor among faculty members and students, Blair said. He also remarked that the faculty feels that this system is not so disruptive to the college, while students haven't been caused any undue delay by standing in long lines and consequently have reached their classes on time.

Blair added that the quota of students was evenly distributed throughout each day.

College Clubs, AS Members Urged To Visit Council Meets

EVERY Tuesday and Thursday, in building B-2 at 12 noon, officers of the Associated Students convene for Student Council meetings.

The purpose of these meetings is two-fold. First these student leaders must execute and manage student affairs, finances and other facets of AS business. At present the Finance Chairman, along with members of Student Council who serve in an advisory capacity to the Finance Committee, are preparing and passing on the various budgets which are to be allocated to on-campus organizations during the present semester.

The money given to these groups is your money. Close to thirty thousand dollars will be taken in and disposed of by the council in this present semester. If any AS member is interested in how elected student officers are spending this money, they might drop in on one of these council meetings.

The second purpose behind these meetings is to enable the AS leaders to discuss, consider and resolve the problems and ideas which arise in the college community.

Members of the president's cabinet cooperate with the 14 members of Student Council in laying out plans for the social and business activities of the entire membership of the Associated Students. The only way you, as an individual, can participate in shaping these many and varied activities of your campus organization is to attend these meetings on a regular basis. Your presence is invited and your interest and advice is solicited by your student leaders.

Every campus organization and interest should be represented at these important meetings. Many clubs, by not giving these meetings proper attention, are defeating the very aims which they otherwise are working so ambitiously and intelligently to attain.

We suggest that an investigation of the council's noon hour business discussions will prove to be a most efficient move on the part of any individual or organization on the campus.

KCSF Broadcaster's Club Sets Fast Pace For College Groups To Follow

KCSF, the college radio station run by students of Henry Leff's radio-TV curriculum, has so far this semester been way out in front of all but a few campus organizations in providing the college with outstanding service.

Dave Tipton, president of the KCSF Broadcaster's Club, Dan Syufy and John Wolff have shown great initiative, capability and leadership in getting their station's plans for this semester off the ground and into working, community-serving reality at an unusually early stage.

We are sure that we speak for the Associated Students in commending these people on the job they have done. Other of the college's clubs and organizations would do well to observe the KCSF staff's way of getting things done.

Even at this early point in the semester they have already achieved what less talented organizations take a whole semester or more to do.

For the KCSF people, this amazing beginning of theirs is only the "beginning" of their greatly welcomed and appreciated service to the college.

P&H Society Makes Extensive Plans For Field Trips In Fall

Geology is by no means a "dead" science, or so claim members of the Pick and Hammer Society, the oldest organization at the college.

This lively little group, composed of 36 members and presided over by geology student Glenn Pratt, has some exciting field trip plans in store for the fall semester of 1957.

One of their plans is to visit Copper Canyon in Marin county, where fossils of age-old animals may be found imbedded in the surrounding stone.

Since its founding by George A. Green in 1935, this society has been on the move to different parts of the country, always seeking the remains of yesteryear's man.

In 1955 they saw the remains of sea-going reptiles preserved in the colorful landseape of Nevada, while in 1954 they took a trip to the country's Pyramid Lake.

Members of the group continue their far-flung foragings even after they have concluded their stay with the society.

Roy Douglas, for example, graduated from the P&H Society to be curator at the well-known Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D. C.

Anthon Clavier, another student of semesters gone by, is now serving as a mineral geologist in Libya.

Supervisors of the Pick and Hammer Society are George Baffico and Chester E. Crowell, instructors of geology at the college. Meetings to propose plans for future tours are held every Saturday night at Baffico's residence.

Student officers of the club include Pratt, president; Bill Davies, treasurer, and Vicki Mason, secretary.

Graduate Gains Local Art Job

Talented and well-liked Faith Bunting, a graduate of City College, is now an artist on the staff for The Letter Shop, a direct mail agency near Market Street. During an over-the-phone interview, Miss Bunting talked enthusiastically about her new job of three weeks. With only two artists on the staff, she is kept quite busy, but "just loves it."

Miss Bunting boasted proudly that The Letter Shop had just won the Howe Wright trophy, a much coveted award in the field of art.

Miss Bunting spent the summer free-lancing and preparing books for publication. Right now she is learning the process of production. Her ambition after this is to become an art director.

This eager young lady graduated from City College last semester, and is anxious to gain a foothold in the art world.

Ivan Learns His Lesson

Citation Teaches Student To Rise, Shine For Proper Parking Space

By Rich Pels

A student here named Ivan Tardy, learned a very unusual lesson last week about the consequences of parking in the faculty parking area.

Ivan, it seemed, arrived a little late for an 8 o'clock math class. After careful navigation through the filled-to-the-brim student parking area, Ivan came to the conclusion that others had got there before him. (Ivan is very good at reasoning.)

In desperation, Ivan drove his Chevvy coupe into the faculty parking area where he joined the steady stream of instructors also looking for a place to park. Suddenly, a definite gap loomed up between two parked cars, which Ivan quickly filled. After he had looked in all directions for signs of the Campus Police, he was convinced he had committed the perfect crime.

Strangely enough, one of the unfortunate souls whom Ivan deprived of a parking place was his math instructor. Ivan, not knowing he had taken the last parking place, arrived in class ahead of his instructor.

Ten minutes later, weary and irritable after walking to class from Monterey Boulevard, where he was forced to park, the instructor entered. Reaching into his brief case, the instructor removed the math tests which had been scheduled for that day. With TEN minutes less to do the test in, Ivan failed—because he couldn't finish.

After classes that day Ivan was horrified to find a traffic citation on his windshield. This really burned our boy up. After all, he did have a parking permit. So there was some slight technicality about parking in the faculty parking area. Oh, well, if Ivan could have followed directions he would have saved himself $2.00. Sadly he drove his Chevvy out of the faculty area with his eyes trained on the precious student area. Maybe it would pay to get up early!

'This Is San Francisco'

Photographic Show Lines Gallery Of 'Faculty Row' In Cloud Hall

This Is San Francisco, a collection of photographs depicting the city, is currently on exhibit along the Faculty Row gallery in Cloud Hall. It is the first in a series of photographic shows this semester, which will be shown once every three or four weeks.

This display of pictures was originally created to represent the college at the annual Photography Day at Stern Grove last semester, where it was received with much favorable comment, Emmett Smith, photography instructor, declared.

In an effort to keep the Cloud Hall Photo Show alive this semester, Smith has on schedule for the not-too-far future other exhibits. They include Scope Of Photography, which will deal with the various aspects of picture-taking techniques, and Experimental Photography, which will be an exhibit of unusual shots showing the different things which can be done with a camera.

These pictures will be taken from the Photography department, and will comprise only the finest work done, Smith added.

Also on tap is a showing of current works of alumni who followed picture-taking courses at the college, and are now paving a successful road in their flicker careers.

As Smith put it, "This monthly picture exhibit we are attempting to establish at the college has been met, thus far, with wholehearted satisfaction from a majority of the students and the faculty."

This means that those students who are lucky enough to get their work hung in the Faculty Row can have the satisfaction of knowing that they received an honor which is equivalent to a citation given for a job well done.

AN ALL-NEGRO cast will be featured tomorrow night when NBC presents its fourth spectacular of the season.

Ethel Waters and William Warfield have the leading roles in Green Pastures. Time for this outstanding production is 9:30 p.m.

• • •

Five new shows, two of them westerns, are scheduled to make their initial TV appearances this week. The two westerns are Tombstone Territory and Colt .45. Also making their first appearance are The Frank Sinatra Show, The Patrice Munsel Show and The Twentieth Century.

• • •

Tombstone Territory will debut tonight on ABC. The story, based on the files of the Tombstone Epitaph, famous newspaper of the Old West, deals with the life and times of Sheriff Clay Hollister.

• • •

Colt .45 premieres on ABC this Friday, October 18. The life of Christopher Colt will be depicted. Colt is an undercover agent for the government and the son of the famous gunmaker. In the lead role is Wayde Preston (which means nothing to anybody, but aren't you glad you know?).

• • •

In the musical field, Patrice Munsel and Frank Sinatra will each have their own variety show on ABC beginning Friday. It is unfortunate that two talented persons, as Miss Munsel and Sinatra certainly are, should be placed on the same night and station with the same type of program.

• • •

Sunday, October 20, is the starting date for the new documentary show, The Twentieth Century, on CBS. Narrated by Walter Cronkite, this program is a panoramic, pictorial review of events which have occurred during the past 50 years. The opening production will feature a biography of Winston Churchill. John Davenport is the author.

WELCOME to the Space Age —Moscow style!

Of course, it seems obvious that Russia's successful launching of a satellite was more of a diplomatic move than an actual scientific achievement, designed to allow her a hearty pat on the back for having "beaten the capitalists to the punch."

Granted, the 184-pound piece of tempered alloy which Russia has sent spiraling around the earth at 18,000 miles per hour was quite a feat, and it has managed to leave the United States a little taken aback—but of what practical purpose is it?

As far as we know, the machine holds nothing more than radio equipment, controlled by Russia. No photographic equipment for scanning the heavens, no implementations for studying the cosmic rays which bombard the earth's surface.

One thing overlooked, until mentioned on a Sunday afternoon radio program, is that we have not been left completely in the lurch, unable to set up a spiraling satellite similar to Russia's "Sputnik." The only reason we haven't set up our own satellite program yet, according to the program, is that we have long-range plans for a more practical and complex machine, which will be capable of greater heights, longer life and more informative usefulness.

The one possible danger is that this rotund little object might be loaded with an atomic warhead—but unless the Russians have found a way of completely obliterating the United States beyond possibility of retaliation, it's not conceivable that they would try attacking us. Let's hope not, anyway.

We are just as eager as Russia to enter the Space Age, but not in the mood to base it on a purely "grandstand play."

RECENT innovation of music in the cafeteria seems to be highly satisfying. Students who tend to linger over their coffee, while anxious waitresses hover nearby, are sped on their way by a fast rhumba or rock and roll, while others who gulp down their food are urged to take it easier to the soft strains of Rachmaninoff or Tschaikowsky.

Soccer Squad To Host San Jose State Tomorrow; Morales, Guerrero Star In First Game

By Pastor Valle-Garay

Meeting its third opponent in the Nothern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference, the Ram eleven will host San Jose State College tomorrow at 3 p.m. at the Beach Chalet soccer field.

When the Spartan-Ram game was held at San Jose last year, the college defeated State 5-2, but not before the visiting Rams had to overcome a 2-1 half-time deficit.

More than a week ago, on October 4, as the Red and White soccermen edged the S. F. State Gators in this year's league opener with a 4-1 score at the loser's field, the Rams proved again to be a team specializing in the handling of difficult situations.

Hardly a minute had gone after the game started when Bob Guerrero, the college's center forward, blasted the Gator net with a 30-yard kick to put the college ahead, 1-0. State, however, didn't let down. They kept constantly attacking the Rams' back lines, and seven minutes later they succeeded, so even the count as the college's goalkeeper misjudged a high flying Gator boot.

Playing under pressure before the second quarter was over, the Rams caught fire when left wing Al Guerrero, taking a pass from his brother Bob, literally applied his head to the oncoming ball and, on a perfect play, directed it to the Gator goal post, breaking the tie.

From then on, the Rams' defensive line, strengthened with the sudden change of events and the outstanding play of All-Conference halfback Al Morales and fullback Ed Zelaya, turned into a concrete wall which no Gator could break.

As the game's third quarter progressed, the college's front line took complete charge of the situation. Playing a neat, short passing contest, Morales continued to feed the Rams' offensive, and sparked two more successive attacks on the Gators.

Inside left Richard Prydz booted home another tally, and two minutes before the game's end Bob Guerrero went into action again by connecting with a well-pieced shot that State couldn't stop. The game ended with a score of 4-1.

Beldon Elected Men's Athletic Commissioner

Larry Beldon, who is prominent in athletic affairs at the college, last week accepted the post of Men's Athletic Commissioner here.

"One of my main objectives as MAC this semester will be to encourage attendance at college athletic events," Beldon declared. "Our football team has an important game coming up against Stockton at Kezar Stadium Saturday and the players would like to see a large crowd rooting them on."

Nomination of Beldon was made by Alex Schwarz, sponsor of Block SF and a member of the college's athletic department. Associated Student President John Kelly presented the nomination to the Student Council for approval.

Beldon also serves as President of Block SF, the society composed of letter-winning athletes here. As Men's Athletic Commissioner, his duties will be to coordinate, report and inform the AS President and Student Council of athletic events at the college and off-campus.

Beldon attended Washington High School in San Francisco, where he had similar duties. A radio and television major here, Beldon hopes to further his education at a four-year college somewhere in California upon graduation.

Block SF Members Elect Officers In First Meeting Under Schwarz

The Block SF Society held its first meeting of the Fall Semester on October 4 and proceeded to elect officers for the new semester. Larry Beldon, grid quarterback, took over the President's post as Bill Barrington was elected to the Vice-Presidency. John Henry is the new Secretary and "Honest" Ernie Ibarra ascended to the position of Treasurer.

Ibarra proved himself the right man for the job as he kept a watchful eye on the doughnuts and cokes that were served after the meeting. As Malcolm McCormick made a grab for his third doughnut, Ibarra laid a perfect block on him and warned him that doughnuts cost money and club members should be conservative.

Society members and guests watched pictures of last year's 49ers highlights as line coach and new adviser Alex Schwarz pointed out key plays. Schwarz was welcomed as the new adviser by outgoing aide Bill Fischer who thanked former President Bob Guddee and all members for all the help given him in previous years as the organizations' adviser.

The next meeting will take place this Friday in room C-246 with soccer, tennis and boxing coach Roy Diederichson being the honored guest. Boxing films will be shown as the feature of the day.

Diana Porter Elected To RA Managerial Post

Prospects for another undefeated season for the Recreation Association women's basketball team seem possible, according to Bev Wilson, RA president here.

Diane Porter was elected manager to represent the team on the RA council. Her job includes helping to plan sports days, arranging games and coaching the team.

About 20 women turned out last week for the largest response so far to any RA activity. Seven women returned from last semester, when the team was undefeated in several games. Ann M. Casey is sponsor again this semester.

City College will host other two-year colleges Friday for the first sports day of the semester.

Football Players Express View On Stockton Clash

To acquire a true picture of how the Ram football players feel about the Stockton game this Saturday, two representatives of the squad, one from the backfield and the other from the line, were interviewed.

Larry Beldon, the first string quarterback for the Rams, represents the backfield department, while Carl Mitchell speaks for the men in the line.

The first question put to them was, "What do you think of the Rams' chances against Stockton?"

Mitchell: "We expect a very rough game, although I will say this, that we have an excellent chance, and it will be a close game."

Beldon: "Our chances of winning are just as good as Stockton's."

"If the Rams win this one, will they go all the way?"

Mitchell: "Yes, we should, but are not positive about anything."

Beldon: "Yes, because Stockton is one of the top-rated teams in the Big Eight Conference. Also, it is considered a grudge game because of the past two seasons, in which the Rams were upended by the Colts."

"Do you feel that the student body spirit is up for this game?"

Mitchell: "Spirit here at the college is rotten. Not only in football, but in all the rest of the sports as well. I only hope that the student body proves me wrong this time, and that a large percentage turns out."

Beldon: "Thumbs down on that question. My two years here at the college showed me that the seagulls at our games outnumber the college students."

To summarize the interview, the men feel quite confident that the team will win; however, to assure that they will be victorious, they urge students to come and root for the Rams.

Verrel Weber In Top Ten Of Bow, Arrow Amateurs

Verrel A. Weber, health education instructor here, is a nationally ranked target archer as the result of her intense interest in archery as a hobby.

Currently ranked fifth nationally, Miss Weber has, during the last eight years, always placed above tenth, usually being among the top three. She has been the Northern California champion eight years in succession. During that time she has also placed first or second each year in the California state tournament. This year she won second place.

Besides participating in tournaments, Miss Weber is responsible for more interest shown in the target archery field. She is chairman of the Board of Governors of the National Archery Association.

She is a strong supporter of the world championship tournaments held in Europe every second year. Money was raised by the National Archery Association to send a full team to Prague, Czechoslovakia, this summer. The three men and three women competing for the United States made a clean sweep of the event to be the first team in the history of target archery to accomplish such a feat.

Miss Weber was unable to attend the United States qualifying tournament for this event, but if nothing interrupts she may be a representative of the U. S. in 1959.

Powerful Running Game, Able Reserves, Produce 20-12 Ram Victory In Big Eight Opener

By Nick Peters

Grinding out 364 yards with a powerful rushing attack, receiving able assistance from a spirited bench, and maintaining a steady ball control game, the college Rams whipped Santa Rosa's Bearcubs 20-12 in their Big Eight Conference inaugural last Saturday at Kezar.

The visitors acquired a short-lived 6-0 lead midway in the first quarter on a spectacular defensive maneuver by Bearcub tackle Roger La Pointe. The 290-lb. lineman stole the pigskin from a surprised Larry Beldon on the Santa Rosa 29 and wobbled, behind a four-man interference, 65 yards to the Ram 6, where he was neatly stopped by tackle Al Kent.

Four plays later Bearcub fullback Art Blunt plunged over from the 1 for the game's first tally. Kent, prior to his excellent clutch tackle, had intercepted a Santa Rosa aerial in the early stages of the contest to halt a Bearcub drive, therefore proving himself an efficient replacement for L. C. Shields.

Making the second period their most productive, the college eleven scored two touchdowns. The first came after the college took possession on the Santa Rosa 37. A five-yard penalty pushed the Rams back to the 42 then Bill Rathbun charged for 37 yards to the 5, Dave Tyree fell to the 2½ and on the next play Rathbun sneaked over right tackle for the equalizer. Beldon's conversion put the Rams ahead to stay with 7-6.

An interception set up the second td, as Joe Cossins' pass was stolen by the crafty Tyree and returned to the SR 17. Sam Rios carried to the 7½ and Tyree to the 4, whence it took workhorse Rathbun two plays to score his second td from the 2½ over left tackle. Beldon again converted for 14-6.

Santa Rosa's second tally came with a minute of play remaining in the half. Two beautifully executed passes from quarterback Sid Kelley to Norm Hansen and Delaney Nutt, respectively, brought the ball from the Ram 44 to the 4. Bearcub Art Blunt, apparently desiring to keep up with his fullback adversary Rathbun, scored his second td from the 4. The attempt was missed and at halftime the Rams held a 14-12 lead.

There was no scoring in the third quarter, but in that period the Rams started a drive, which culminated in the game's last td in the fourth quarter. The college moved 85 yards in 13 plays, Tyree scoring a well earned tally from 5 yards. With no further scoring the game ended with the Rams victorious, 20-12.

Rathbun and Tyree, with 122 and 121 yards gained, respectively, took rushing honors. Halfback Roger Grimes proved himself a valuable backfield understudy with 57 yards in 8 carries. Strong relief assignments were also turned in by Ted Camacia and Al Kent. Playing their regular strong game, Ernie Ibarra and Wayne Lawrence were outstanding on defense.

Ted Williams set an American League record this year by twice belting three homers in a single game.

Rams Challenge Perennial League Champs Saturday

The college's Rambling Rams, with horns lowered, are set to tangle with the Mighty Mustangs from Stockton this Saturday, October 19, at Kezar Stadium. This game, as has been true for the past two seasons, will more than likely be the definite decider of the Big Eight Conference crown.

Coach Grover Klemmer's eleven will be out to avenge last year's 18 to 9 loss at the hands of the Mustangs, which was the only defeat suffered by the Rams in conference play.

The Mustangs, coached by Don Hall, boast a record of winning their last 15 league games and knocking off Orange Coast of Los Angeles, 20-12, in last year's Potato Bowl contest. Fifteen lettermen from last year's squad have returned, along with a good crop of new talent.

Heading the list of vets are quarterback Earl Moreno, halfbacks Marshall Dragomanovich and Warren Pettit, fullback Ken Steele, tackles Jim Burrows, John Ransom, and guard Larry Lavey. One of the outstanding newcomers is Willie Simpson, a 6-foot, 200-pound plunger from Stockton High who is expected to help out at the fullback spot.

The defending champs have a veteran line and experienced backfield which makes them a tough team to come up against, Coach Hall calls this team his "best ever" as far as depth in each position is concerned.

Last season, Stockton averaged 260 yards on the ground and about 75 yards in the air, which makes them a predominantly running team, although Hall stated he expects to do a little more passing this season, using split ends and flankers. Stockton held an edge in statistics against the Rams last year by outgaining them on the ground 135 yards to 103, and also outpassed them 111 yards to 101.

On paper the Mustangs will outweigh the Rams on the line and in the backfield, but these facts do not win ball games. A team can be outweighed but not outfought. City College will be gunning for the Mustangs, and a win over the Valley power would be a big step in the direction of the Big Eight crown.

RAMBLINGS Winning Series Best 'Asiatic Flu' Cure

By Nick Peters

AT THE beginning of the recent Braves - Yankees World Series, Milwaukee school attendance was down by 25 per cent because of several eases of "Asiatic flu." Apparently the best remedy for the bug was the winning of the Series by the Braves, since school attendance was back to normal after the termination of the classic.

• • •

Numerous are the star gridders who are now attending the college, but are not playing football. Willie Hudson, who was an All-American as a Ram in 1954, is back at the college after a year at Cal Poly. The hard-hitting Hudson had already played two years at the college, therefore he has no eligibility remaining. However, upon his return to Cal Poly, he will have three years of varsity play ahead of him.

Lincoln High's Mike Lewis and Chris Hontalas are two other star gridders who are not chewing up the turf for the Rams this season. Lewis, a versatile athlete, was a star halfback for Lincoln as a junior in 1955, but a knee injury limited his participation to basketball and track in 1956. If the knee should respond favorably, Lewis could be playing football for the Rams next season.

Hontalas, All-City gridder in 1956, is a very hard and gutty runner. His plans are to save his eligibility for university grid, preferably at UC. St. Ignatius' talented halfback Bob "The King" Isola is, like Hontalas, hitting the books and giving some serious study to save his eligibility for a long tenure of grid at Berkeley.

The majority of The Guardsman sports staff predicts that the Stockton Mustangs will whip the Rams in the Big Eight's "big game." If we ever hoped that a prediction proved us wrong, this is the time for it. A supreme team effort, utilizing spirit both from the bench and the stands, can bring us this important victory and, supposedly along with it, the conference championship.

We have also expressed our opinions on the poor student backing of HIS team. Again we hope that we're proven wrong and that the team will receive the ultimate in student spirit from the largest two-year college in Northern California.

End Of First Midterm Period Cuts Down On Activities Of Fraternities, Sororities; Final Rushing Events Set

By Jerry Redford

WITH the majority of first affairs completed, campus fraternities and sororities have settled down for the grind through the first midterms of the semester, to be followed by final meetings between prospective pledges and members before the beginning of Pledge Week.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity held a business meeting last week at the home of Marc Feibusch, at which time plans for its dance were made. The dance, to have a Halloween theme, will be held next Friday in Smith Hall. Pledge week plans were also discussed by the group.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority held a meeting recently to discuss plans for its service project this semester. It was decided that the sisters would take up the aid of foreign students in their learning of the English language. Also discussed were plans for the sorority's luncheon to be held at the University Room of the Women's City Club next week.

The California Student Teachers Association will hold a short meeting Friday during college hour, C-269, to make final plans for its participation in the Modesto Junior College Conference to be held soon. Officers include Frank Brinkley, president; Martin Wormuth, vice-president; Nadine Sims, secretary, and Milo Fong, treasurer.

Zeta Chi sorority held a business meeting Friday during college hour in order to discuss plans for its dinner to be held soon at the Wawona Club. Pledge mistress Marge Saba also related the plans that she has been making for Pledge Week. The sisters also chose a model and alternate to represent them in the AWS fashion show. They are Carol Thomas and alternate Gwen Smith.

Phi Beta Delta had its traditional first affair dinner recently at San Remo Restaurant. Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities; John Ross, sponsor of the fraternity, and Don Garison, past president, were guest speakers. Present president, Jim Davis, addressed the rushees on the advantages of belonging to a fraternity.

Delta Psi sorority held a fireside last week at the home of Louise Behring. The sisters are making plans for the traditional rushee dinner, to be held in the near future.

Kappa Phi sorority held a very successful fireside recently at the home of Sally Mierson. Sisters are now in the process of planning their traditional Chinese dinner to be held soon. Fran McMurray was elected to represent Kappa Phi in the Homecoming Queen contest.

The Inter-Fraternity Council, now finished with its smoker, is delegating most of its work to committees. One of the committees is now preparing a resolution to be presented to the Club Activities Board on the delegation of dance dates on the campus.

Gamma Phi Epsilon fraternity has set the date of its first affair as next Monday, to be held at the home of Randy Neuman. The number of prospective pledges this semester is larger than ever before, suggesting a very prosperous and successful semester.

Home Economics Club will hold a meeting Friday during college hour in Smith Hall, at which time Edward Nylund, head of the bakery and pastry division of the H&R department, will demonstrate cake decorating to members of the group. Any woman student interested in attending will meet in front of the faculty dining room at 10:35 a.m.

H&R Has Booth In Auditorium At Hotel Convention

Members of the Hotel and Restaurant Department, under the supervision of Lawrence Wong, are attending the Western States Restaurant Convention and Exposition which is being held at the Civic Auditorium here through tomorrow.

The H&R students have a booth at the convention, where information on the college's courses and a display of their products are being shown.

Today, the second day of the convention, the future chefs are staging a live demonstration on the preparation of certain fancy foods. Besides being represented by the exhibit and demonstration, the department will enter into a culinary contest, competing with other organizations of their class.

Wong was recently honored by being elected to the posts of Western Director of Stewards & Caterers and Educational Director of all Western States at a Foods Service Executives meeting in Texas last week.

H&R department activities are depicted in a spread in the October issue of Pacific Coast Record, a restaurant magazine, concerning the facilities engaged in the training of students.

Applications For Scholarships Due In By October 31

Deadline for all scholarships this semester is Thursday, October 31, Mary Golding, dean of women, announced last week.

Scholarships being offered are the Florence Louis Scholarship for $25, offered to a woman student of the college, and two Associated Student scholarships for $125 each, available to one man and one woman.

Also being awarded are two Denman Scholarships, offered to two women graduates of a San Francisco public high school. This award, which is one of the highest honors women can receive here, started in 1939 when Judge William Denman and his sister, Mrs. Mary Cheatham, sent a check for $250 to the Superintendent of Schools requesting that it be used for scholarships at the college, and stating it was for women graduating from a San Francisco public high school.

The original source of the scholarship came from the James Denman Medal Fund. The medals were for scholastic achievement and were awarded to women graduating from the eighth grade who were preparing for high school. The Board of Education discontinued the medals 38 years ago because of the absorption of the eighth grade into junior high school.

Throughout the years the money accumulated, and in 1939 the court turned the money back to the Denman estate, which in turn decided to use the fund for a series of scholarships for the college.

Any American-born Chinese man or woman student is offered a Square and Circle Scholarship of $125 apiece. Also available for Chinese students are two Chinese Scholarships of $50 apiece to one Chinese man and one Chinese woman student.

Dean Golding announced that to apply for these scholarships a letter must be written to her or to Ralph Hillsman, dean of men. The letter must state ambition, need and activities participated in outside of classes.

Spanish moss is not moss. It is a flowering plant related to the pineapple.

Frosh Ball Set For Saturday At Mark Hopkins

Cutest Couple To Be Featured At Autumn Fantasy

Autumn Fantasy, theme of the Frosh Ball, will be held this Saturday night from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight in the Peacock Court and Room of the Dons at the Mark Hopkins Hotel.

Freddie Hicks, president of the Freshman Class, expects the dance to be a big success, since Autumn Fantasy is the first off-campus college dance scheduled this semester. Two committees have been working under the direction of Rosanne Chervin, chairman of publicity, and Pat Jones, chairman of the cutest couple contest.

Main feature of the dance will be this contest. Anyone interested in signing up for the contest may do so at Smith Hall tomorrow and Friday, Miss Jones said. The qualification for entering the contest is that one of the contestants from each dance couple be a member of the Freshman Class.

A board of six judges, she added, will be chosen from officers, members and advisers of the Freshman Class. Couples will be graded on their appearance, poise, personality, and ability to dance well together.

First prize for the contest will be two trophies, donated by Beta Phi Beta fraternity, one for each partner of the winning couple. In addition, the woman winner will receive two dozen long-stemmed roses from Alpha Phi Epsilon fraternity. The leading man will win a gift certificate for use at Bruce Bary of Stonestown.

All students are invited to the Frosh Ball, Hicks declared, adding that admission is by card to Associated Students and only one member of a couple needs a card. For couples without a card, the charge is $3.00.

Students will dance to the music of Steven Paul and his orchestra. The women will wear cocktail dresses and the men suits with ties.

Leading the Freshman Class and in organizing the dance, together with Hicks, are Vera Malinovsky, vice-president of the class, and Imogene Butler, secretary.

A large turnout at the dance will create interest in the Freshman Class along with unity for the entire college to stimulate college spirit, Hicks said.

By Lois Cosden

With the exception of one tabled budget, $27,895 was granted by the Student Council this semester. The Phi Rho Pi debating society's request of $105 was shelved, pending investigation of its delinquency of representation at seven consecutive meetings of the Club Activities Board.

Entertainment By IRC Opens UN Week Officially

International Relations Club, the college's foreign student organization, in conjunction with the American Association for the United Nations and the San Francisco Citizens Committee for UN Week, will entertainment-wise, officially open UN Week this Sunday at 2 p.m. in the Golden Gate Park Music Concourse, Joseph M. Jacobsen, the club's sponsor, announced today.

Preparing for the organization's own International Fair, which is scheduled to take place Friday, November 1, at Smith Hall, is a cast of 52 foreign student performers. Members will participate in Sunday's program to acquaint the American audience with native cultures in the way of songs, dances, music and costumes.

Members of the IRC from the Philippines, Japan, Thailand, Ghana, El Salvador, Guatemala, Bolivia and Nicaragua will appear in the two hour long affair at Golden Gate Park, with the entire group and audience singing the show's theme, Getting To Know You, as the closing number.

Goodwin J. Knight, Governor of California, has been invited to address the public, Althya Clark Youngman, conductor of the event, disclosed. She added his acceptance of the invitation has not yet been confirmed.

College Hiking Club Under Consideration

A branch of the Sierra Club, California's famous hiking and conservation club, is now being considered here for establishment, according to Raymond Early, English instructor and faculty adviser.

Anyone interested in becoming a member of this organization is urged to meet in C-331 during college hour this Friday, Early said.

Queen To Preside Over Homecoming Week Activities

Homecoming Week will commence Monday, November 4, and extend through Friday, November 8, according to Bob Rodriguez, president of the Associated Men Students.

A contest to select the Homecoming Queen will begin Monday, October 28. All interested women students must file applications with the dean of women, S-150, or in the Associated Student office. Voting will be done by students instead of the usual panel of judges, Rodriguez said. A previous rule requiring eligible students to have a minimum of 12 units of study completed has been canceled, but each contestant must own an AS card.

Two ballot boxes, one in the cafeteria and one in the main lobby of the Science Building, will be set up to receive the votes. Pictures of each contestant will be on display at each of the locations.

Because of the current situation in San Francisco concerning burning-in-the-open, plans for the bonfire rally were cancelled last week. Dean Ralph Hillsman, however, declared that there will definitely be some outdoor entertainment at which the queen will be crowned and two princesses introduced.

Highlighting the week will be Homecoming Day, Friday, November 8, when a car parade will form at the college and proceed to Kezar Stadium for the Homecoming game between this college and Modesto. Also listed for the day is an alumni dinner at the Fairmont Hotel, to be followed by the Homecoming Dance in the Terrace Room of the same hotel.

Dress for the affair, which will be held from 9 p.m. until midnight, will be semi-formal. Admission is by AS cards, or $2 per couple. Jimmy Price and his orchestra will provide the music and entertainment.

Bi-Annual Event Planned By AWS

Plans are now underway for the Associated Women Student bi-annual fashion show and tea, which is scheduled Wednesday, November 6, at 2:50 p.m., in the library of Cloud Hall, Darlene Enfield, AWS president, announced yesterday.

Purpose of the fashion show and tea is to honor the senior women of San Francisco public high schools and to acquaint them with the college, Miss Enfield added.

Frocks to be modeled are from Livingston Brothers. All women students are invited to attend, and those interested in an active participation on the committee may sign up at Dean Mary Golding's office in S-150.

Band Sports Headgear For Cloud Hall Concert November 15; Dvorak, Whoop-Dee-Doo Share Honors

By Bill Forshay

Thrift and music are two of the attributes of the college band. The first was recently illustrated by the purchase of derbies for the entire band for the sum of $23.64. The other will be demonstrated during a concert in Cloud Hall library on Friday, November 15, during college hour.

Band instructor Meyer Cahn credited Lloyd Gomez, band manager, for the sharp appearance of the novel headgear, because it was the free labor of Gomez in painting the derbies that had them ready for the first home football game.

Gomez is also responsible for the care of band uniforms and is in part responsible for their condition. Although the uniforms were purchased in 1948, they still look smart because of the policy of saving them for special events.

The band is a team effort and not a soloist's organization, according to Cahn, who has been in charge of the group since 1947. The band fills a triple function on the campus since it is a "pep" band on the athletic field, a dance band in the ballroom, and a concert band in the auditorium.

The three functions are combined in the Spring semester, while only the "pep" and concert are active in the fall.

"Versatility is the keynote of the band," Cahn said, "as anyone who heard last Wednesday's rehearsal can attest." The practice included a Bach prelude and fugue, Standing On The Corner, Whoop-Dee-Doo, and the finale of Dvorak's New World Symphony.

"Another example of this versatility," Cahn added, "will be the appearance of Deanna Thomas, assistant student director, who usually plays first clarinet. She will be featured in a piano solo with band accompaniment during the November program. Besides Miss Thomas, several of the other band members have already shown their ability by playing for combos and dance bands in the Bay Area."

Cahn added that he would like to meet all the college instrumentalists and that all such students are welcome to attend rehearsals during college hour in B-65. "We open the doors when we rehearse," Cahn said, "so just follow the sound of the music."

Auditions Open Today For Band's Gettysburg

Open auditions will be held today in building B-6 for any student interested in reading the Gettysburg Address with the band in the November 15 band concert, Meyer Cahn, faculty adviser for the band, said today.

Don Gillis' Abe Lincoln, Gettysburg 1863, for narrator and band, will be one of the features on the program, Cahn said.

Auditions start at 2 p.m. and last until 3 p.m. today, but students who cannot make the audition are invited to inform Henry Leff of the radio-television department so that a special audition may be arranged. Cahn and Leff will be judges of the auditions and will select the winner who will make the appearance with the band.

Pam Havener Wins Samuels Award

For the second time in three years, Albert S. Samuels, Sr., a San Francisco jeweler, recently awarded a sponsoring scholarship to a graduate of the college.

Pamela Havner, now attending the University of California, was awarded this honor. The sponsorship is offered to students who need financial help during their final years in college.

First to receive this award was Roberta Usher, who was graduated from the college in the spring of 1954. Miss Usher also won a scholastic cup and scholarship to Pomona College.

Miss Havner is now majoring in English as she intends to go into the field of advertising. She was graduated from the college last semester.

Christmas Job Orientation Friday

The date set for the campus-wide Christmas job conference to be held in the men's gymnasium is this Friday at 12 noon, according to Joseph Amori, placement director here.

The conference was inaugurated last year by the college placement service in order to inform all college men and women interested in Christmas jobs of the opportunities for students desiring employment during the coming holiday season. The conference is open to all those who want yuletide season jobs.

The San Francisco Bay Area is one of the most dynamic employment centers in the nation and offers a wide range of jobs during the holiday season, Amori declared. Included among the firms offering positions for students are department stores, florists, express agencies, railroads, airlines, confectioners, the postal service, bakeries, nurseries and specialty shops.

Although retail outlets, such as department stores, hire more women students than men, the post office and railroads hire men exclusively, with the possible exception of women veterans.

"It is evident," Amori said, "that

Merchant Of Venice Continues With Graham, Henderson In Leading Roles This Weekend

Shakespeare's The Merchant Of Venice, which was presented for the first time here last week-end, will again be produced in the college's little theater this Friday and Saturday nights with curtain time at 8 p.m.

Starring Jeanne Graham in the lead role as Portia and Bill Henderson as the wise suitor Bassanio, the play moved into production with a large cast composed of veterans and newcomers.

Two of the newest and youngest were the son and daughter of Bob Lasley, who plays Salanio. Marta, 4, and Geoff, 3, are the two pages in the play. Others in the cast include Carl Mayo in the role of the grasping Shylock, Stan Church as Antonio, whose flesh is the key to one of the four interlocking plots.

Michael Griffin, director of the play, complimented the stage crew and the various wives and friends who had done the sewing and arranging of scenery.

Arthur Lubin, noted director and producer, visited the college on October 14 and had an informal talk with members of the Drama Club and the cast of The Merchant Of Venice.

He has recently completed several foreign films, which include the newly released Escapade In Japan. He is also the original producer of the Francis talking mule series.

Asked for the difference between a producer and director, Lubin replied that, "A producer is the business manager . . . the director makes the picture."

Of most interest to his audience, since the college's own production opened here last Friday and Saturday, was his description of the Stratford production of The Merchant Of Venice. He said of the Stratford production, that he did not care for Portia as portrayed by Katharine Hepburn, and that he did not like the interpretation of Shylock.

He also said that the little theater set was more in keeping with the dramatic values of the play than the "precious" and "fragile" scenic effects of the Stratford production.

With the instincts of a true director, Lubin picked out unerringly from the audience Henderson as Bassanio, George Cooney as Old Gobbo and Mayo as Shylock. He said he felt that Miss Graham was a "marked contrast" to Miss Hepburn, and promised to take in the production if his Hollywood commitments did not call him out of town.

Sacto Game Rooter Bus Tickets On Sale

Transportation to the Sacramento football game to be held on Friday, November 1, will be provided by Rooter Buses for all those who wish to go but do not have their own transportation, according to Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities.

The buses will leave from the Rampodium at 4 p.m., and they will return after the game the same night.

All those interested in going on the buses to the game will be able to buy tickets starting this Friday at the bank in Smith Hall, and from members of the Rally Committee. The tickets will cost $2.75 round trip, Hillsman said.

Students here are urged to attend the game because the Rally Committee is in hopes of having as many college students present as possible.

Restaurant Meet Awards Top Prize To College's H&R

First prize in the education category for an outstanding display of culinary arts was awarded to the college's Hotel and Restaurant department last week at the Western States Restaurant Convention banquet at the St. Francis Hotel.

All told, the judges awarded prizes in seven different competitive categories. Officials of the Western Restaurant Association, which is a division of the National Restaurant Association, presented the Hotel and Restaurant department here with a valuable silver tray for its prize-winning exhibit. In addition, individual students who cooperated in preparing the H&R display were given certificates for their work.

The college's exhibit consisted of various specimens of culinary art including cured hams, specially prepared boneless chicken and prepared mushrooms.

Other prize winners were the St. Francis Hotel, Foster's, Bob's Steak House, Mount Zion Hospital, Swiss Pastry Chalet and Romanoff's.

This was the first year that the Western Restaurant Convention and Exposition was held on the Pacific Coast, previously having convened in Chicago.

A great deal of recognition was shown toward the college's activities in the field by representatives of the business, according to Lawrence Wong, in charge of the H&R department here.

The department was also presented with a $500 check by food authority Duncan Hines for use as a scholarship fund.

Today Last Day To Submit Drop Slips

Students here were warned today that this is the deadline for dropping courses. As the second third of the semester gets under way, students desiring to drop a course were advised by Mary Jane Learnard, registrar, "Now is the time to do it."

A student may not file if he has exceeded the maximum number of unexcused cuts for the course, and therefore has been assigned an F grade.

Outdoor Dancing Featured At Gals And Ghouls Hop

Gals And Ghouls, a Halloween dance, will be presented this Friday evening at Smith Hall between 9 p.m. and midnight by Alpha Kappa Rho and the Veterans Club, according to Dave Vargo, chairman of the joint dance committee of these two groups.

Because of the proximity of Halloween, this theme is being carried out to the fullest. It will be strictly costume, and to assure an interesting variety of attire, a prize will be given to the couple showing the most imagination and originality in their costumes, Vargo said.

It will be different from most dances in that the courtyard of Smith Hall will be used, he added, and loudspeakers will be set up in the courtyard so that couples can dance there.

Providing the weather is clement, tables will also be set up so that refreshments can be taken out of doors.

Entertainment will be supplied by the Mello-Tones, a five-piece local combo that has just finished a successful engagement at the Tin Pan Alley.

Tickets, costing $1.50 per couple, may be secured from members of either of the two sponsoring organizations or at the entrance to the dance. The entrance being used this time is the faculty entrance to the cafeteria. Members of the joint dance committee include Vern Huth, Sam Franzella, Dave Vargo and Larry Vargo.

Wrong-Date Rally On Right Day—Friday

The rally which was erroneously reported in The Guardsman as scheduled for last Friday will be held this Friday during college hour from 10:40 to 11:20 a.m. in the men's gymnasium.

According to Don Balkie, Rally Committee chairman, the song girls and yell leaders will be taking active participation in the rally.

By means of acrobatics and chants the yell leaders will try to build up spirit.

Purpose of the rally is to build up interest and bolster attendance at the Oakland football game to be held this Friday in Oakland.

Noreen Rende was awarded the Beta Tau fraternity's Orchid Award for her friendly and courteous service to students as a cafeteria worker at last Friday's college hour.

ISC Presents Preference Coffee Hour As Last Of Rushing Activities Here

A new idea this semester of the Inter-Sorority Council will be the preference coffee hours, the last of the rushing activities, which will be held on Tuesday, October 29, according to Carol Olson, ISC president.

Miss Olson stated that it will be possible for the rushees to attend only two or three of these coffee hours because of the time element, and they should not plan to stay longer than 15 minutes at each coffee hour.

If a prospective rushee attends a sorority's coffee hour, it will mean that she will be looking forward to an invitation from that sorority, but the sorority is not bound to send one to the rushee.

On Wednesday morning, October 30, in S-150 the rushees will come and sign preference slips. At noon the invitations for the rushees to pledge a sorority will be in the office of S-150.

Miss Olson added five points to help the prospective rushee in selecting a sorority. Her suggestions are as follows: choose a sorority that offers opportunities for friendships; choose a group whose members have wide and varied interests; choose a group which works congenially on the solution of its problems; choose a group which thinks well of other groups and allows individual selection without using "high pressure salesmanship"; choose a group which, though it does not stress the value of the dollar, has enough business sense to be in sound financial condition.

Traditional Coffee Hour Set For Nov. 1

Student-Faculty coffee hour, which has become a once-a-semester tradition here, is scheduled for college hour on Friday, November 1—but it might have a different name by that time.

Plans for this popular affair, which enables students and faculty members to get together on an informal, out-of-the-classroom basis in the area between the Science Building and Cloud Hall, are currently being formulated by the Student-Faculty Relations Committee, John F. Fawcett, committee member, said.

Among the possible changes to be made in this semester's coffee hour are a new name for the event, and a different setup, which would have the respective departments set apart from each other and clearly recognizable for the convenience of students seeking certain instructors.

College Grid Team Deserves, Asks 'Big League' Enthusiasm

ATTENDANCE at football games this semester has so far been typical of the spirit usually shown by students of the so-called "street-car" colleges toward their representatives on the field of sports.

In a word this spirit and attendance have been ludicrous.

This college—as a "street-car" college—has all the excuses it needs to rationalize about the skimpy support given to the football team. It is difficult for the Rally Committee to whip up all the needed enthusiasm and so the blame can hardly be laid on them.

Semester after semester our athletes here are tops in their leagues. Their efforts, and most important of all, their fine showings in competition have not been "street-car college" efforts and showings. These teams also are from a "street-car" college, but they themselves are far from humiliated by having this term tagged onto them. They like to play the game in a much "bigger" way and this is in part the reason for their successes.

Perhaps we, too, as supporters can put forth greater efforts and join our football team in playing the game the "big" league way and getting away from our "little" league ideas and "street-car college" enthusiasm.

Studio One Explores Mercy Killing Debate

By Carol Harris

The question of mercy killing was the problem in focus on Studio One's recent production, Act Of Mercy.

A difficult situation was handled without giving offense to anyone. The leading roles were competently portrayed by Richard Kiley and Beatrice Straight.

For those of you who were not fortunate enough to view this provocative program, a brief resume of the plot follows. The story dealt with a young engineer whose brain was damaged in an auto accident. He had been in a complete coma for several months. His brother, seeing the effect of this tragedy upon his family, commits what he believes to be an act of mercy and kills him.

Surprisingly enough, the only person who objected to the killing was the doctor. The family seemed to feel it was better, as the brother pointed out, "to sacrifice one life instead of three," the other two referring to the wife and son.

Mercy killing will long be a subject of debate and controversy. There are those who feel it is justified; others contend it constitutes murder just as killing for revenge does. Studio One did not attempt to answer the question. It merely presented the pros and cons.

On one side is the viewpoint of why let a human being suffer when nothing short of a miracle will save him. If an animal is suffering and there is little hope for its recovery, it is quietly put to sleep. To relieve the person of his misery would be the humane thing to do. Persons who share this view say it is not murder.

The opposing side, which the doctor represented, asks the question, who's to judge when there can be no hope of recovery? It is possible several years from now, next year, next month, next week or even during the new hour, a discovery will be made which will perform the needed miracle. Therefore, mercy killing is murder. It is depriving a person of his life.

It was left to the viewer's own conscience to judge which is the best answer. Studio One will long be remembered for not only a brilliant production, but also for presenting the public with a social and moral problem to which, as yet, no applicable solution has been found.

Students Test Fertilizers

Horticulture students have begun experimentation with seeds and fertilizers in the college greenhouse, according to Harry E. Nelson, head of the horticulture department.

Instead of using sand and peat moss, students are placing corn and various types of bean seeds in a special compound of loam, super phosphate and lime. Originating from the John Innes Institute in England, the experiment has already shown results in determining factors involved in germination, Nelson said.

Another experiment in progress, under the direction of the soil and fertilizer class, is the effect of different fertilizers on plant life. With Romaine lettuce as the indicator, the class will study the values of fertilizers in detail, Nelson added.

The first World Series was played in 1903 with the AL's Boston entry defeating the NL's Pittsburgh outfit five games to three.

Shots At Random

HEARING aids were the rage a few weeks back, and this worried the poor instructors no end. The mystery was solved, however, when a little voice was heard to emerge from one of the aids, giving a blow-by-blow account of the World Series game. A college education breeds ingenuity as well as knowledge.

ONE OF THE SADDEST things to date on campus is the lack of spirit shown for the Ram football team.

It seems that at most of their games, the opposition's cheering section manages to make more noise than the sum total of students present from City College, and the only knowledge that the Rams have of their own rooting section is the faint murmur of breathing overheard from the stands.

A football team cannot win with this type of half-hearted support.

6,982 Enroll Here

Enrollment at the college this semester is at an all-time high of 6,982, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar here.

This total includes both daytime and evening students, Miss Learnard added. Breakdown of the enrollment figures reveals 5,628 daytime students and 1,354 enrolled in evening classes here.

Raymond Early's Columbia, Story Of Famous Gold Rush Town, Is Book To Send To Folks Back Home

By Ray Hackett

Some moderns for some reason or another have labeled authors bearded, lonely and mysterious, but Raymond Early of the English department, who recently had a book published, is neither bearded nor lonely, and the only mystery about him seems to be where he found time to write such an authentic and interesting book about "California's most famous gold rush town."

Columbia is the title of the book, and is the history of this famous gold mining town. It is more than just a history, however, and is rather a fantastic tale which time after time seems to prove that truth is stranger than fiction. The reader feels as though he has lived in Columbia when knife-fights were common and a certain woman paraded in broad daylight with a pair of Colt revolvers on her hips.

Early is no stranger to Columbia, having lived there six summers, and the book is a reflection of the fondness the author has for the town. Early received assistance from two persons here—Madison Devlin of the audio visual department, who shot many of the photographs in the book, including the cover, and Faith Bunting, art major who was graduated last year, and was a staff assistant. She is also designing posters which will be placed in downtown bookstores.

Columbia is visited by more than half a million people annually. It is a photographer's mecca, and many "they went thataway flickers" are filmed there. Unfortunately, however, its interesting and colorful history is known to relatively few.

Early's Columbia fills this void as it tells of Columbia's history divided into three sections, Columbia Today, Columbia Yesterday and Areas Around Columbia . . . Side Trips, Resorts, Campsites.

It has 350 illustrations, including a photo of "Papeete," Columbia's first fire engine purchased at the bargain price of $800. It was originally made for Tahiti but the Tahitians wouldn't accept it because it wasn't French-made, and it was sent to Australia where it met a similar fate because it was not English-made. It was then sold to Columbia.

Early's style of writing makes interesting and easy reading; the illustrations, photographs and maps bring Columbia to life. It will makes those who have never visited Columbia want to, while those who have will wish to revisit, armed with the wealth of knowledge gained from the book.

Early's Columbia is for those who desire a knowledge of early California's mining towns. Readers from the East especially will enjoy this interesting and unique book, and will probably send one to the folks back home.

Speed Ushers In Psychology Era

Psychology: a science as old as the ancient philosophical musings of the first man, yet as new as tomorrow. This was given as a definition by one of the many students here who is studying psychology.

Many students enroll in psychology because it is a prerequisite for their major. The State Board of Education has long realized that students, upon entering a field of endeavor which necessitates their being in contact with the public, need a layman's knowledge of psychology. This, however, accounts for only half of the enrollment. The other half is voluntary, and psychology majors form only a small segment of it.

Because of the complexities of the subject it is doubtful that the students enroll in psychology expecting it to be a snap course. Why then, it is often asked by students and instructors alike, is psychology shown such favor?

Answers to that question have been many. During this age of high horsepower, jets and satellites, it is believed that the student feels more need to look within himself to see the reasons which motivate his and others actions.

There has been a steady increase in the interest in psychology since World War II. It has been found that during times of tension, speed, fear and fast living people look to psychology for solace. In that respect this (the jet age is comparable to the jazz age (the twenties).

Opera Ring Star Acts In Little Theater

Virginia Rae Has 'Merchant' Role

By Tom Tatera

A new and welcome addition to the college's drama club this semester is pert and energetic Virginia Rae, who is making a name for herself at the Opera Ring, San Francisco's musical theater in the-round.

At the present time this aspiring young actress has the leading role of the heroine in the "eight Mellon" dramas, a series of take-offs on the old-time hero-villain-hiss-clap plays, which take place every Saturday night at 12 midnight at the 123 South Van Ness Avenue theater.

Luckily, she is not called upon to be under a giant buzz-saw and yell "Save me" to a stout-hearted hero who is many miles away, digging up the money for the mortgage. This, as one may or may not remember, was the pattern for the old-time plays.

In addition to her "melter-drama" roles, Miss Rae is featured as the harsh and cruel Mrs. Van Winkle in the Ring's Children's Theater adaptation of Rip (Rip Van Winkle), on Saturday afternoons.

Experience wise, this young woman has had starring roles in the Opera Ring productions of Kiss Me Kate, Street Scene, Hansel and Gretel and The Skin Of Our Teeth, as well as extra parts in the forthcoming Pal Joey and Kiss Them For Me movies.

As a result of her promising acting ability, Miss Rae was recently offered special guidance and training by Mara Gilbert Aiexander, one of San Francisco's foremost drama coaches. But, after consulting her mother, she decided she should strive for a college education before undertaking anything else.

Miss Rae's decision to enter the college was based on the favorable reputation of its drama club, which has produced many successful plays in the past. At the present, Miss Rae and her classmates are performing in the Little Theater's adaptation of The Merchant Of Venice, in which she plays Merissa.

After graduation, Miss Rae would like to gain a little more acting background in the little theaters of San Francisco and then move to the East to try her hand at some summer stock. As far as she is concerned, the theaters can outrank the movies.

When, and if, Miss Rae has any spare time she enjoys listening to recorded music. In her own words, she is a "Hi-Fi fanatic," and enjoys the musical show songs and instrumentals. When asked her opinion of Elvis Presley, she replied, "No comment!"

This diversified young lady also enjoys working with lights and other aspects of little theaters, since she finds all phases of stage-life equally interesting and exciting.

Miss Rae reminded students of the college that a new play, Sand-Hog, opened at the Opera Ring last Thursday. Those with Associated Student cards will be afforded discount tickets, she said. Curtain time is 8:40 p.m.

Pamela Kurrell, Member Of 1956 U. S. Olympic Team, Attending Classrooms Here

Among the notables enrolled at the college is Pamela Kurrell, a member of the 1956 United States Olympic team at the youthful age of 17.

Through years of practice at the Laurel Athletic Club under the tutoring of Mrs. Roxanne Andersen, manager of the U. S. Olympic girls' team, Miss Kurrell claimed more honors than most star male athletes of her age.

First starting to attain nationwide attention, she won several medals at the 1955 Pan American Games in Mexico City, and also was outstanding at that year's AAU Tournament at Ponca City, Okla.

In the 1956 National AAU track and field meet in Philadelphia on August 17, Miss Kurrell, competing in the 14 to 17 girls' division, walked off with three medals. She won the baseball throw (252-8), the javelin (118-6½), and the discus (139-1), which at that time was a new American record.

On the following day Miss Kurrell entered the women's AAU competition. Continuing her winning ways toward an Olympic berth, she repeated her horsehide victory (269-5½) and bettered her new discus mark by projecting the disc 140 ft, 11 in. At this time the star athlete had garnered five gold medals in two days of competition, by far the best woman's performance.

Again breaking her discus record with a toss of 141 ft., 7½ in., Miss Kurrell earned a position on the Melbourne excursion at the Olympic trials at Washington, D. C., on August 25. Despite her betterment of the record, she was second best to Mrs. Earlene Brown, a 226-lb. housewife, who broke all existing discus records with a heave of 145 ft., 4½ in.

Nevertheless, she received her greatly deserved and much sought after trip to the Melbourne classic. At Melbourne, Miss Kurrell failed to qualify for the discus finals, but even so she was proud that she was selected to represent her country.

The attractive athlete came to the college from San Francisco's Abraham Lincoln High School. A recreation major, she plans to finish a two-year tenure here but is undecided about her future.

Presently Miss Kurrell is training, unattached, at the Jackson Heights Playground, where she is rounding into shape for the 1958 Pan American Games to be held next summer. She has been out of major competition since her Olympic jaunt, but is looking forward to top honors at the '58 games. Her main objectives now will be the betterment of her discus and javelin records.

A consensus of track coaches predicts that Miss Kurrell will reach her peak at the 1960 Olympics in Rome. By then she will be a mature 21, and perhaps one of the great woman athletes of our time.

Booters Face Indian Eleven, Lose To Bears

Stanford's Cardinals, handed a 4-0 defeat by the Rams in their 1956 league struggle, will host the college squad Saturday at 11 a.m. on the farm.

A silent procession of long-faced Rams left University of California's Edwards Field, October 12, as the college's soccermen bowed to the Bears by a score of 2-1, thus taking their first defeat of the Conference.

The Rams had a well balanced offensive, which constantly pressed and outplayed the Bears. But, as Coach Ray Diederichsen put it, "Luck's one thing that can't be discarded, and we didn't have it with us today.

"The men played a better game today than they did against San Francisco State, and remember, we beat the Gators 4-1. I'm very satisfied with their performance, and I'm sure this is a better team than last year's," Diederichsen added. The college finished second in the league and defeated Cal 2-1.

With the Bears leading 1-0 at the half, Bob DiGrazya, Cal's coach, commented, "The Rams are this year's team to beat," and his team did it the way it hurts the most.

In the third quarter of play, the college's inside left, Richard Prydz, broke loose on a fast play in Cal's area, dribbled around their fullbacks and kicked the goal that evened the score 1-1.

Still 40 seconds before the final whistle blew, with the count tied, it was anybody's game. The next minute, as the Ram's goal keeper, his fullback and Cal's forward Kirby Kwok collided in a vain attempt to control a flying ball directed at the college's net, the Bears obtained victory and the joy that comes with it.

The game was over and the day still cloudy, especially in the college dressing room. On October 17, the Rams hosted San Jose State. Results will be available next week.

Top Prep Outfit Edges Rams In Practice Run

Running on an unfamiliar and difficult cross country course at McLaren Park, the college's team lost its first and only practice meet to Balboa High School by a score of 25 to 31, October 15.

The race has been run annually for the past two years, with Balboa usually coming up with a slight edge because of better conditioning at the time the meet is run. The course is 1.9 miles, which is the regulation high school distance.

As originally scheduled, the first meet would have been October 11, against Santa Rosa; however, the meet was canceled because most of Santa Rosa's men had the flu.

Coach Lou Vasquez said he was glad he had the meet with Balboa because he got an idea of what he has to work with. "We are way behind Balboa in conditioning at this time, but judging from the times the prospects look good," Vasquez added.

Stockton Wallops Rams

RAMBLINGS

By Nick Peters

THE SEALS are gone after 55 years of exciting baseball in the city that knows how. In 1903 when the Pacific Coast League started operations, San Francisco was the largest city on the coast, three times as large as Los Arfgeles.

As the years whizzed by, LA passed SF in population; but the Seals were still the Kings of baseball with their Heilmann's, O'Doul's, Waner's, Jolley's, Kamm's, DiMaggios; and in later years the Jansen's, Fain's, and Woodling's.

The stability of the organization, built up by the late Charles H. Graham, who constructed Seals Stadium, is evidenced by its having only 12 managers in its 55-year span. During that era the Seals finished in the first division 39 times, copping their eleventh pennant just a month ago.

Stonsham's Giants, the new inhabitants of 16th and Bryant, will also bring with them a great record. In their 58 years in the modern National League (1900-57) they have finished fourth or better 40 times and have won all the marbles 15 seasons, the last in 1954. This year they finished sixth in a tough league and, with a little more luck, could have risen to fourth.

They are not by any means a weak club and can, at any given time, field a team of well-established veterans spotlighting the incredible Willie Mays. Their main needs to date are a couple of front line hurlers to back up Messrs. Antonelli, Gomez and Barclay, and a hard-hitting backstop. Baytowners cannot expect wonders in '58, but by '59 the team will begin to jell with service returnees Jackie Brandt, Whitey Kirkland and Bill White reaching their old form.

At any rate, it'll be well worth one's time to see fence-busting ball clubs like the Milwaukee Braves, LA Dodgers, Cincinnati Reds, and St. Louis Cardinals play "our" Giants.

Scanlon-Smith Bout Set For October 31

Bobby Scanlon, the college's scrappy undefeated lightweight, will get a chance to show his stuff for the first time in San Francisco when he meets Wallace "Bud" Smith, former lightweight champion, Thursday, October 31, at the Civic Auditorium.

Scanlon, who is undefeated in 26 fights, will add a feather in his cap if he can dispose of the former king, who lost his crown to the present champ, Joe Brown.

Klemmermen Meet Oakland T-Birds Friday

The college's Ram gridders will travel across the Bay Bridge this Friday afternoon, where they will meet the Oakland Thunderbirds. The T-Birds, coached by Gil Callies, will be going all out to knock off Grover Klemmer's eleven, who handed them a 25 to 7 beating last season.

Only three lettermen returned from last year's squad, and so Callies has had to do much rebuilding and a little position shuffling, as the loss of key players has left weak spots in both the line and backfield. Gone are quarterback Earl Norwood, halfbacks Buddy Allen and Wayne Schneider, and guard Billy Borders. Norwood, by the way, is the marine vet who lost a leg in Korea and returned bravely to the gridiron, where he was an outstanding signal caller last year.

Guard Tom Basile is back from last season, and former center Rich Wells has been moved to end, while Jack Forrest has been shifted from end to a tackle spot.

Newcomers who have helped out this year are lineman Joe Chrismon, Rich McKinney and Ray Peters, while quarterback Bill Steen, just out of the service, and fullback Jeff Chan have bolstered the squad.

Oakland opened their Big Eight season by dropping a game to the powerful Stockton Mustangs, and last week faced Sacramento.

The Oaklanders will be up for the Ram tilt and would like nothing better than to upset their West Bay rivals. The T-Birds boast a heavy line and a quick backfield, and so should give the Rams their share of trouble for the afternoon.

With student support, the college gridders should come back with a victory Friday. If they don't win this one their chances for at least a tie in the conference will be pretty slim.

Bushrod Park is at 59th and Telegraph streets near Berkeley. Kickoff is slated for 2:30 p.m.

Mustangs Strike On Turf, Through Air In Impressive 24-6 'Big Game' Triumph

By Nick Peters

Scoring once in each quarter, Stockton's Mustangs, utilizing an effective passing and running attack, upended an obviously outclassed home team eleven, 24-6, at Kezar last Saturday.

The college, playing without the services of first string quarterback Larry Beldon, who had a pinched shoulder muscle, failed to take advantage of early scoring opportunities and consequently didn't dent the scoreboard until the last quarter.

Perennial champion Stockton clearly showed its league supremacy with a terrific line, outweighing its Ram counterparts by 15 lbs. per man; a masterful backfield, netting 266 yards as compared to the college's 23; and a passing attack of pin-point accuracy, completing 8 out of 13 attempts.

Stockton hit paydirt with a minute remaining in the first quarter on a beautiful 47-yard sprint by reserve halfback Bob Costa.

The visitors went to the air for their second tally five minutes into the second period. After taking a punt on the Ram 37, quarterback Earl Moreno, hitting his targets with professional marksmanship, passed to end Gary Knecht, who was felled on the 30. On third down he tossed to halfback Marshall Dragomanovich on the 17 for the first down.

In a second down situation, halfback Lauren Pettis snared a Moreno aerial from four defenders and was brought down on the 1, wherein he scored on the following play with a dive over right guard.

Wasting no time after the halftime intermission, Stockton's Dragomanovich scored his team's third td early in the third quarter on a 3-yard slant over left tackle, ending a 47-yard drive in five plays. Pettis scored his second td in the fourth period, chalking up a six-pointer on a 9-yard jaunt over right tackle.

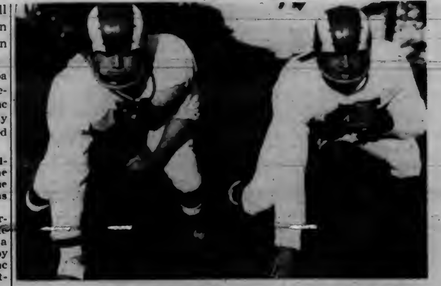
Preventing a whitewash for the Rams, end Bob Bieggi caught a 35-yard Bob Higgonbotham aerial on the Mustang 7 and raced untouched into the end zone for the lone college score.

Higgonbotham was the most impressive Ram field general on the field and Bieggi definitely established himself as the Rams' number 1 offensive end by nabbing four passes for 106 yards. Fullback Bill Rathbun bore the load of the college's ground attack, netting 49 yards in 10 carries. The unparalleled Ernie Ibarra again was the stronghold of the outweighed Ram line.

Stockton's QB Earl Moreno was an outstanding leader in his team's victory, completing four passes out of four attempts. Backs Costa and Dragomanovich gained 93 and 67 yards, respectively; guard Larry Lacey was a standout in the immovable Mustang line.

Gridders Ibarra, Shields Among Big 8's Best

The college has on its football team two of the best tackles in the Big Eight Conference in Ernie Ibarra and L. C. Shields.



Ibarra was graduated from Balboa High School in 1953, where he received All-City honors at guard. The Marines took three long years away from him and after being discharged he enrolled at the college.

Ibarra played football for the college last year and was named to the All-Conference squad. He said the hardest game he played last year was against Sacramento.

"This year's team has a good personnel," said the husky tackle. He went on to say, "The men play as a team." This is evidenced greatly by his own play. When asked about the remaining five league games, he stated, "There are no easy games."

Majoring in physical education, Ibarra plans to coach football after college graduation. He said, "Wherever I can go," as to the college of his choice, apparently the one that offers him the best opportunities.

At the other tackle slot is Shields, All-City performer from Polytechnic High School. Shields was graduated from there last June, and has a lot of experience under his belt. He was named captain of the North team in the annual North-South Prep Shrine football game at Los Angeles. He also captained the West squad in the East-West Prep Shrine game in San Francisco.

He feels that the Ram squad is very strong in all positions. "This is the greatest team I ever played for," he said, and added that, "All the students should come to the games."

Planning to attend the University of Oregon when he graduates from the college, his further goals include teaching, but, he added, "I would like to play professional football."

The experience, ability and desire of Ibarra and Shields are the reasons they are two of the top tackles in the Big Eight. This spirit typifies the brand of players on the Ram squad.

Scholarships To Be Given At 4th Annual IRC Fair

Two members of the International Relations Club will receive $50 scholarships Friday night, November 1, highlighting the organization's fourth International Fair, Joseph M. Jacobsen, IRC sponsor, announced yesterday.

Presented annually at the college by students from all points of the world attending classes here, this year's affair will take place at Smith Hall from 8:30 to midnight.

Students from Spain, France, Italy, Iran, Thailand, the Philippines, Japan, Fiji Islands, Central and South America will represent their respective countries, and will also stage, produce and direct the 90-minute-long show, with interpretations of their lands' modern and folk dances, songs, music and displays of native goods.

Tickets may be obtained at the sponsor's office in S-186, from members of the organization, and at the door the night of the fair.

As it has been done in past years, the IRC has been engaged in outside college events this fall. Last October 20, it successfully opened United Nations Week at the Golden Gate Park Music Concourse. Next Wednesday, October 30, the IRC will make a special appearance on KPIX-TV (Channel 5) at 5:30 p.m., commemorating also the city's celebration of UN Week.

What every prospective model needs here is Photo 91-A or 91-B, according to Ben Nishi, five-semester photography major here. The course, photographic modeling and model directing, gives interested students the opportunity to gain [illegible] in model posing and model directing.

Purposely designed to meet the requirements of both groups, student photographers and their novice models are instructed under a pre-scheduled routine. The course serves a dual purpose: to develop in the prospective model a repertoire of useful poses and expressions, and to develop in the student photographer a confidence in his direction of the model, both physically and emotionally.

Roy Sievers' 42 home runs this year broke his own club record by 13 clouts, he having slugged 29 in 1956 for the Washington Senators.

Armen Boyd, Helen Blumberg Receive Scholastic Honors

Top scholastic honors at the college this year are being awarded to Helen Blumberg and Armen Boyd, members of Alpha Gamma Sigma, college Scholastic Honor Society, as they gain permanent membership in the organization, and in addition a Kathleen Loly scholarship of $300.

The society has two levels of membership, temporary and permanent. The first is for any student earning at least a B average in 16 units with no grade below a C for one semester. The latter membership is offered to those who at graduation have had temporary standing for at least three semesters, a grade point average of 3.5 or better, and a total of 168 grade points.

Miss Blumberg, an education major, earned a straight A record, according to William Richardson, AGS adviser. Boyd's record was almost equivalent as a music major.

Richardson announced this week that a bequest of $30,000 was willed to the statewide honor society by the late Kathleen Loly, who was head of the language department at Pasadena Junior College. Miss Loly left a $10,000 scholarship fund for Pasadena Junior College students and a $30,000 grant to AGS.

Beginning this year two Kathleen Loly annual scholarships of $300 each will be awarded to permanent members of state chapters. One will go to a man and the other to a woman. These are the scholarships won by Miss Blumberg and Boyd of this college. The number of prizes will be increased as the income for the fund grows.

In addition to the establishment of the above, four grants of $200 each are also made by AGS. This money comes from yearly dues and donations from the various chapters, and is administered by the board of directors.

Richardson estimates that only one-half of students eligible for AGS membership here have applied for membership in the society. He urged deserving persons to make requests to join.

The group was founded at Fullerton Junior College in 1926. It has grown to 60 chapters, located on virtually every two-year college campus in California. Its purpose is the encouragement of scholarship.

Aluminum Film Shown Friday; 'Hemo' To Re-Run

Two films, Aluminum On The March and Hemo The Magnificent, will be shown during college hour this Friday, in rooms C-246 and S-136, respectively, Madison W. Devlin, audio visual aids instructor here, announced this week.

Aluminum On The March is the story of the aluminum industry, and is produced by the Reynolds Metal Company. It shows the new uses of aluminum today.

This film also features a behind-the-scene view of various processes of producing this metal, Devlin said.

"Hemo The Magnificent provides a glimpse into the organization of the blood," Devlin said. "It takes the student on an amusing trip via miscroscope to visit the different cells."

Narrated by Richard Carlson and Dr. Frank Baxter, noted Shakespearean expert, it tells the story of blood from the time of ancient man to present day scientific knowledge, Devlin added.

"The film was presented last year and was received so well that we procured the movie again so that the students who were turned away might have a chance to see it," Devlin said.

Hemo, an animated character representing blood, is disgusted with science in general, and it's up to Baxter and Carlson to prove that science has a great part in the world.

The film is in color and was produced for the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company.

"Students who wish to see Hemo should come early to get seats," Devlin advised. He also added that Hemo will run over into the 11 a.m. class as it is 70 minutes long.

Frank Benaderet Named CAB's New Vice President; Don Gifford In As Parliamentarian At Board Meet

Newest officer of the Club Activities Board is Frank Benaderet, who was elected Inter-Fraternity Council Representative and Vice-President of CAB, Jim Foster, president of the organization, announced last week.

In his new position, Benaderet will be expected to aid Foster in all of the organization's affairs and perform the duties of a social chairman.

Ron Wilson, vice-president-elect last semester, resigned his position upon leaving the college. Don Gifford, another member of the organization, was elected parliamentarian in last week's meeting.

of keeping the mail slots in Hut B-2 clear, and assuring the mail contained within them reaches the intended party.

Another of her jobs is to write thank you notes to the sponsors of the CAB's semi-annual dances. This semester's affair took place September 27 in Smith Hall under the auspices of Louis Vasquez, physical education instructor, and Ernest B. Ellertsen, mathematics instructor.

The approximate number of CAB representatives this semester totals 40, Foster stated, which means the same number of clubs are active on the campus and participating in Associated Student benefits.

A rule of the CAB, which applies to all clubs desiring recognition, is that a representative of any campus group is allowed to miss only seven CAB meetings before that group is disqualified from AS activities and benefits, Foster added.

Scholarship Applications Due Next Week; $500 In Awards To Be Given

Scholarship application deadlines will be Thursday, October 31, and students wishing to apply must do so soon or wait until next semester, Mary Golding, dean of women here, announced last week.

Scholarships being offered are the Florence Louis Scholarship for $25 offered to a woman student of the college, and two Denman Scholarships of $125 each, being awarded to two women who are graduates of a San Francisco public high school.

One Chinese man and one Chinese woman student may win a Chinese Scholarship for $50 apiece. Also available for Chinese students is a Square and Circle Scholarship for $125, being offered to any American-born Chinese man or woman.

To apply for any of these scholarships a letter must be written to Dean Golding or to Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities. Ambition, need and activities participated in outside of classes must be stated in the letter.

More About Jobs

there are many jobs available for able-bodied applicants, but all these jobs have specific requirements, they being age, sex, training, experience, residence, citizenship and the like."

All interested students should bring a fountain pen to the conference in order to fill out the proper application blanks, he added. In addition to the general discussion, those attending will be able to ask questions pertaining to the various phases of the work program.

Card Sales Reach Record Height As Total Hits 2,474

Associated Student card sales for this semester have reached $12,370 (2,474 cards) making it the first time the set goal has been met at this stage in the semester, according to Brower Dimond, AS card sales chairman here.

Passing last spring semester's record by more than $2,000, sales of cards are continuing for those who have not yet purchased them, Dimond declared.

Success of the program can be considered due to the persons selling cards during registration week and to the Card Sales Week held September 23 through 27, Dimond said.

Planning to improve the methods of the card sales program and sales promotion, Dimond announced that a committee is being established to work out a state-wide discount system. Upon completion, a report will be submitted for discussion at the California Junior College Student Government Association meeting here in November.

In his effort to offer more benefits to students, Dimond also announced he is planning to add eight new firms which will offer discounts.

For those not acquainted with the advantages offered AS members, Dimond listed some of the many discounts available. They include parking privileges, admission and reduced rates to dances, theaters, drama productions, rallies, home athletic contests, merchandise discounts, voting privileges in all student elections and added benefits determined by Student Council.

Members of the card sales committee include Linda McArdle, Pat Jones, Darlene Reitz, Don Nuti and John Kelly, AS president.

Phi Rho Pi Wins Council Approval On Budget Funds

Phi Rho Pi returned to the good graces of the Student Council when it received its budget request of $105 this week, after the budget was tabled at the previous meeting for violation of a Club Activities Board ruling on absenteeism. The debating society will continue to represent the college in inter-college persuasive oratory.

The budget was amended further as Linda McArdle, Finance Chairman, corrected the undistributed amount of $48.87 to $36.87 bringing the balanced result of $28,000 for this semester.

As new business, Associated Student President John Kelly swore in Larry Beldon as Men's Athletic Commissioner. Dave Tipton announced that the KCSF Broadcasters will purchase phonograph records with the funds allocated for their budget.

Representatives who attended the Northern Regional Conference at the College of Marin described activities of the individual workshops.

"In summarizing the achievement of the conference, we found that we had much to give as well as to receive from the exchange of information of our accomplishments and, conversely, mutual problems," Kelly observed.

Bev Schroth, AS vice-president, and Kelly are delegated to attend the State Conference at the Sheraton-Palace, November 14, 15 and 16.

Officers representing the college at the conference will be Jim Woods as state information officer; Bob Varni, state conference president; his state secretarial appointee, Eugenia Lary, and Walter Schultz, parliamentarian from the Northern Region. Schultz was elected at the NRC as one of three parliamentarians to the State Conference.

100% Membership Ruling Conflict Arises

President Asks Committee To Review Rules On Budget Allocation To Organizations

By Lois Cosden

Conflict over the Associated Student 100 per cent ruling enacted here in 1950 broke into the open at Student Council meeting last Tuesday, with the result that a committee was appointed to investigate the entire situation.

The ruling, which requires budget-spending organiaztions to have 100 per cent AS membership, this time directly jeopardized the college band and forced cancellation of its appearance at the college's football game with Sacramento this Friday night.

Meyer Cahn of the music department presented the band's problems before the council upon his request for a hearing. All further business was waived for the hour long meeting.

Cahn revealed that in order to maintain the band's standard quality, a trumpet player has been used who is not a student here. The scarcity of instrumentalists necessitates the borrowing of students from other college bands, which is a common practice among colleges and universities, he explained.

Compounding the problem of showing only 66 per cent AS card holders in the band is the time element. As it has been in past and present practice, a student may, with faculty cooperation, work on campus to earn an AS card. In the case of the college band, the football season would be over before the goal could be realized, Cahn illustrated.

The effect of the 100 per cent ruling upon the band, Cahn feels, has been to obstruct its service to the college.

To solve the dilemma, three alternatives were suggested by Cahn:

1. Charging the Associated Students for the band services.

2. Eliminating student activity from the band's program.

3. Participation with student card members only, regardless of the quality of the band and the discredit it would bring to the college.

"None of these would be in the best interest of the college, particularly the second and third solutions," was Cahn's lament. "The purpose of the memorandum is to propose that the present council assume responsibility for this situation and take appropriate action to remedy it."

AS President John Kelly invited questions from the floor. They came quickly.

Councilman Jack Patterson opened the discussion with, "Is this group unique?"

"Yes," was the quick response. "Consider the service the band offers the college. Only 10 per cent of the organization are music majors. The average student plays as a service."

Brower Dimond, card sales chairman, followed with, "Inter-Fraternity Council, Alpha Gamma Sigma, Campus Police and others give service to the college."

Dean Ralph Hillsman, council adviser, made at this point to ask permission through the chair (President Kelly) to answer Dimond.

"Campus Police give something for something—experience invested in future careers and remuneration. The band's services are 15 to 1 compared

Guardsman Wins 27th All-American ACP Honor Rating

Winning recognition for "distinctly superior achievement," The Guardsman this week was given its 27th All-American honor rating by the Associated Collegiate Press for the quality of the publication during the Spring, 1957 semester.

The ACP Critical Service awards semi-annual honor ratings to college and university newspapers entered in competition, and according to classification designates each paper as All-American, First Class, Second Class, Third Class or Fourth Class.

Of the 32 semesters that The Guardsman has been in competition in the ACP ratings, the college paper has been named First Class five times with all other semester's papers winning All-American. First Class in the ratings is comparable to "excellent."

Judging of the individual newspapers is based on excellence of coverage, content and physical properties.

In evaluation of coverage The Guardsman was cited for its interesting and thorough reporting of all phases of college news events. Treatment of copy and the maintaining of balance in covering all news sources by last semester's editorial and reporting staff were commended by the ACP.

Typography and page makeup, photography and writing were all rated excellent, while the editorials, sports coverage and editorial page features won especial commendation.

Spring semester editorial staff members who are again on the paper's staff this semester are Miss Harris, who is associate editor; Miss Metsaek, managing editor, and Moore, editor-in-chief.

Members of The Guardsman's All-American editorial staff are presented with special All-American award keys by the Associated Students.

Judging and rating of the present semester's Guardsman will be done during the Spring, 1958 semester.

Homecoming Queen To Be Crowned At Bonfire Rally On November 7

Crowning of the Homecoming Queen will highlight the re-established (with City Fire Department approval) bonfire rally Thursday, November 7, at 8 p.m. in the archery field near the women's gymnasium, according to Bob Rodriquez, president of the Associated Men Students, sponsors of Homecoming Week.

The choosing of the queen and her two attendants will be different this year from past years. The voting will be done by the men students of the college instead of by judges.

Voting will be held in Smith Hall throughout today, although it is the last day for casting a vote.

Along with the crowning of the queen there will be outside entertainment. Rally Commissioner Don Balkie said the entertainment may possibly be the Gateway Singers, stars of the Hungry i.

The next day, Friday, November 8, a car parade will commence from the college at 1:30 p.m. and proceed to Kezar Stadium prior to the Ram-Modesto football game. After the parade, trophies will be awarded to the three students having the best decorated cars, Rodriquez said.

The [illegible] held after the football game was cancelled because of the high prices of the dinners. Instead, alumni will meet in the Cirque Room of the Fairmont Hotel at 8:30 p.m.

Homecoming Week will be concluded with the homecoming danee. The site for the affair is the Terrace Room of the Fairmont Hotel, which is located on California Street, bordered by Powell and Mason Streets. The dance will begin at 9 p.m., and last until midnight, and dress will be semi-formal.

Admission to the dance, Rodriquez said, is by Associated Student card or $3 per couple to non-AS members.

120 Students Of 12 Nations Offer Pageant, Dance

More than 120 foreign students, members of the college's International Relations Club, will stage, produce, direct and perform in their fourth International Fair this Friday, November 1, at 8:30 p.m. in Smith Hall, Joseph M. Jacobsen, sponsor of the organization, announced yesterday.

The pageant, described by Jacobsen as one of the campus' traditional major events, presents in its two-hour show the culture, music, songs, dances and displays of native goods from all parts of the world.

Portraying their respective countries in the different phases of the affair and wearing colorful costumes, students from France, Spain, Italy, Iran, Thailand, Japan, Fiji Islands, the Philippines, Central America, Mexico, the Antilles and South America will offer interpretations of numbers representative of their culture.

One of the highlights will be Miguel Clarque's Afro-Cuban dance of fire with which the professional entertainer keeps the public in suspense as he does his number, barefooted, on burning coal.

Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, will award two members of the IRC with achievement scholarships, and a semi-formal dance will close the night's celebrations.

Proceeds from the event, which is open to the public, will go to the organization's fund for international scholarships. Tickets may be obtained at Jacobsen's office in S-186, from members of the IRC, or on Friday at the door of Smith Hall. The donation is 50 cents for Associated Students and $1 for non-members.

Heads of the different countries' committees in charge of staging the presentation are Michael Rios, for Spain; Etienne Brugerolle, France; Andrew Baldi, Italy; Iraj Tahmaseb, Iran; Ari Wong, Thailand; Yasuhiro Matsuda, Japan; Frank Mondero, the Philippines; Mehdi Hussain, Fiji Islands; Manuel Anez, South America; and Miguel Clarque, the Antilles.

Featured as special attractions of the [illegible] will be [illegible] and Dance. Joyce Carla Borelli, selected two weeks ago by America's disc jockeys as their Face of the Year Girl in a nation-wide contest, dancers Ron Zachray, Sherry Wayne, Josephine Anzalone, and the well-known San Francisco conga drummer, Cliff Anderson.

Other people coordinating the celebration are announcers Rene Motte and Sergio Carmona; Paul Chow, lighting; Allen Clark, sound; Vera Wu, usher; Bob Jackson, band; Esmeralda Aguilar, programs; Walter Peters, Saiko Suzuki and Hoosharg Pirdavari, decorations, and Pastor Valle-Garay, publicity.

Student-Faculty Social Hour To Be Held On Campus Friday

By Don Seratti

A student-faculty social hour, featuring a radical change from the familiar student-faculty coffee hours of past semesters but serving the same purpose, will be held here during college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m., this Friday.

The social hour, a presentation of the Faculty Association, offers students and faculty members an opportunity to meet on an informal basis and become better acquainted, John H. Fawcett, a member of the Student-Faculty Relations Committee which has planned and promoted the event, said.

During the 50-minute period, faculty members will be stationed in various classrooms throughout the science building and Cloud Hall representing their respective departments and acting as hosts. Students seeking certain instructors can locate them by visiting the departments listed below.

Participating departments and their room numbers for Friday listed by Fawcett are architecture, C-203; counseling, S-132; photography, C-249; home economics, floriculture, ceramics and dentistry, S-108; life science, S-307-327; engineering-electronics, S-48; mechanical engineering, S-5; chemistry, S-237; surveying, refrigeration, building and construction, architectural drawing, S-3; drama, English and communications, Little Theater (bottom floor, Science Building); social science, C-259; X-Ray technology, S-327; journalism, S-304, and business, Smith Hall.

Refreshments will be served during the hour, Fawcett added. Any assistance by students in the serving of refreshments will be appreciated, he said, for it will enable the faculty members to devote the entire period to their visitors. Students wishing to [illegible] for the year's [illegible] form Ralph O. Hillsman, dean of Student Activities.

Students are also advised that if a particular department is especially overcrowded, they may visit other departments.

Most members of the college's faculty will participate in the social hour. Many faculty members of departments not represented on Friday will go to the headquarters of other departments to meet and chat with students.

In past semesters the traditional affair known as the student-faculty coffee hour was held in the area be-

Phi Rho Pi Debate Society Dissolved

Phi Rho Pi, the forensic society of the college, has been dissolved, according to a recent statement made by Henry Leff, debate coach here.

The society, active for several years, was dissolved because of lack of interest by students, Leff added. The society was interested in all forms of public speaking, including debate, dramatic reading, extemporaneous and impromptu speaking.

Past Guardsman Writers Honored

Two former journalism majors of the college, Emile Portale and Gail Allan Moss, were recently awarded high honors in the newspaper field at the University of California.

Portale, who served as a sports reporter on The Guardsman staff in 1954, is Sports Editor of UC's Daily Californian.

He won this semester, from the Nothern California Chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, men's honorary journalism [illegible] for the year's [illegible] $100, marking the third time in three years that the scholarship awarded to journalism majors at UC, Stanford and San Jose State, has gone to a former Guardsman staff member.

Diek Meister, Guardsman Editor-in-Chief in Fall, 1953, and Spring, 1954, was awarded the scholarship at Stanford in Spring, 1955.

Bob Rezak, Guardsman Editor-in-Chief in Spring 1952, received a similar award while a senior at the Farm in 1954.

Moss, who was Editor-in-Chief of The Guardsman in 1955, is now Assistant City Editor of the Daily Californian.

IRC ON TV TODAY

Rock and Rally, the Bay Area's television program usually designed for the leisure of teen-agers, will go through a change of pattern today at 5:30 p.m., when its cameras focus on a group of students from the college talking as many languages as the different countries they represent, and come from.

The couples, dancing to French, Latin and Spanish music, no rock-and-rolls, will be there as special guests of KPIX-TV, Channel 5, in Dick Crest's show, and are all members of the college's International Relations Club.

100% Ruling Poses Important Query—'100% AS Exception?'

ON MARCH 2, 1950, the Student Council of that spring semester passed what is perhaps the most sorely debated legislation ever to come from that legislative body.

This March 2 date of 1950 marks the birth of the by now famous "100 per cent Associated Student membership" ruling. At the time of its stormy inception, the ruling was attacked and defended in turn by every diverse interest and persuasion on campus.

It has manifested its great power by raising the sale of AS cards—and by frustrating many of the college's most valued services and potentials.

It has been the stumbling block of every council that has convened since the eight members of that Spring 1950 council passed the measure. The ruling has kept many inequities from arising in regard to the proper and just disposition of AS funds to deserving groups. It has also remained rigid and unrealistically inflexible in the matter of intelligent appropriation of AS funds where they would do most for the organization and the college.

The 100 per cent rule's positive attributes have time and again been itemized by the rule's proponents in defending it against the charges of "weakness," "negativeness" and "impracticability" by the ruling's opponents.

Latest development in the 100 per cent ruling's stormy history came up in last week's council meeting when Meyer M. Cahn, director of the band, presented a memorandum to the councilmen concerning generally the plight of the band ever since the rule was passed. Specifically, Cahn concerned his written and oral address to the council with the sorry situation of the band this semester.

Obviously split down the middle on the question of the 100 per cent measure's merit, those student government officials in attendance at the meeting met Cahn's proposals and suggestions for effecting a solution to the problem with rebuttals, lively debate and calculated predilection and prejudice for and against any tampering with the 100 per cent rule.

The band's difficulty arises from the situation whereby the band, not being 100 per cent AS, can not receive AS budget consideration and hence cannot offer the Associated Students the service of playing for any game, rally, concert or any other activity of the AS.

Under a strict interpretation of the 100 per cent ruling, the Finance Chairman is bound to withhold funds from the band and any other organization—no matter how extreme the situation or extenuating the circumstances—until the organization's entire membership is 100 per cent in AS membership.

If the council decides, as Cahn has also suggested, that the band is a unique case deserving of special consideration, then an all too obvious precedent will have been set for every other "unique" group on campus to follow in petitioning the AS for special consideration.

Then, too, if this suggestion is followed by the council, the 100 per cent ruling will, for all practical purposes, have ceased to be.

Such a liberal interpretation of the rule would in effect destroy the 100 per cent rule's purpose. It would become a 100 per cent "sometimes" rule.

Student Council will be discussing the situation in the next few meetings. They will have to choose from a number of extreme decisions to resolve the matter. Exactly which course their good judgment leads them to take is a matter of considerable importance and interest. One hundred percent, but only 80 or 90 per cent of the time—or, 100 per cent all the time—or, 100 per cent none of the time?

Space Flights Bring New Importance To Astronomy

Astronomy, one of the small, ancient sciences, has grown up and suddenly burst into prominence as a result of the demands made upon it since the creation of the V-2.

Recent events have given astronomy an entirely new perspective. In the past it was of relative importance because it had no immediate effect on mankind. Now the effect is here and astronomy steps into its own.

In the dawn of space travel, colleges will be forced to recognize the sudden expansion and importance of the science of astronomy. Previously, there were few astronomers because there were few jobs open to them. Space flight will create new jobs, not only in astronomy, but in the fields of chemistry, physics, engineering, metallurgy, geology, mathematics and navigation.

Amateur astronomy will increase. Astronomy instructors will be flooded with questions on how to grind a telescope lens. Probably in the near future there will be a course on telescope construction here at the college.

In that department, it is the opinion of many that the college is fortunate to have as fine an instructor as Louis Berman. Dr. Berman has done research at the Lick Observatory, and has had the distinction of discovering some celestial real estate. While working with a 10½-inch refracting telescope in Minnesota, he discovered and listed a binary (double) star.

While Russia leads the world, at present, in space flight technology, America may take some solace in the fact that it leads the world in astronomy. Here on the north American continent have been erected the great temples to the stars.

The names are Lick, Yerkes, Wilson and MacDonald. Here, too, is the greatest cathedral of them all. It is a titanic, isolated monastery in Southern California. The building is a great domed struceture, 15 stories high, standing on a block of granite a mile high, and housing a telescope weighing 140 tons. It is the Mt. Palomar Observatory.

Because of Mt. Palomar and other observatories, the only way another country can get a closer look at the moon, is to go there.

Shots At Ramdom

BOUQUETS of the week are three and all go to the literary. What poetry? First goes to Paul Carrol, a student, who is the editor of the new Bay Area literary paper, the Bay Window. Second, to Dick Moore, editor of The Guardsman, who is Dance editor of the same sheet. Congrats, Twinkle Toes! Last but not least goes to Raymond Early of the English department who, while the rest of us rested this summer, had a book about Columbia, California, published which oddly enough is titled Columbia. Walk—don't run to your nearest bookstore and ask for it by name.

AN ENGLISH INSTRUCTOR here was quite shocked when, in the middle of an important lecture, one of the men students took a five dollar bill out of his pocket and began cleaning glasses with said green stuff. The instructor's remark was the only one possible under such circumstances. "I've heard of lighting cigars with money, but this is the first time I've ever seen anyone clean glasses with it." Anyone for kleenex?

THIS WAS recently heard, in reference to mid-term week: Political Science student at the library: "I want a book on Russia, small in size, 250 pages at the most (minimum indicated length), if possible typewritten in triple space, any title, a long preface and lots of pictures. It's for a book report, you know, due tomorrow."

Political Science students attending Southern Cal, as an experiment circulated a petition in neighboring areas. The first day they received 300 signatures from persons who agreed to be shot at sunrise the following morning.

Around The World

Photo Project Will Capture Female Beauty

Female pulchritude at its finest will be the idea behind "Girls Around the World," a new intra-college project undertaken by Ben Nishi of the photography department here.

Nishi's plan is to garner all the lovely young ladies of international background located at the college, and make a collection of photographs evolving around them. And who could ask for a more satisfying job.

There is, however, a definite purpose behind Nishi's camera sport—or so he tells the women. The completed "Girls Around the World" collection will be put on exhibit in Faculty Row at the end of this semester. They will be part of the photography exhibit, which started recently with This Is San Francisco.

Actually, Nishi's job is more of an assignment, given to him by Emmett Smith, instructor in the photography department. Smith told him to find the best representative of each nationality at the college, based upon looks and personality as judged by the particular race's standards, and capture their beauty on film. The result of this project will be a final grade in the course for Nishi. Some persons have all the luck.

Among the personalities still sought by him are those of Hungarian, Finnish, Russian, Egyptian, Arabic, Malayan, Scandinavian and Indian nationalities.

If any of these types of young ladies are in hiding at the college they are urged by Nishi and Smith to show their faces in C-126 between 9 a.m. and 12 noon, and 1 and 4 p.m. on Monday, or between 8 a.m. and 12 noon on Friday.

In the event this time is unsuitable, Smith can be reached between the hours of 9 a.m. and 12 noon on Tuesdays and Thursdays, either in C-126 or C-249.

Those chosen will be photographed in two ways, one depicting personality in natural dress, such as a Japanese girl in kimono; and another showing her in American status, replete with fuzzy sweater and cotton skirt.

'Old Bones' To Roam Tomorrow Night

Mystery, Evil Spirits No Longer Representative Of Halloween; Children Trick-Or-Treat For Fun

By Keven Mullen

Costumes are readied, jack-o-lanterns lighted, and supplies of trick-or-treat candy are cached in preparation for the most lighthearted of all holidays, Halloween.

The festivity that now personifies the holiday is in direct contrast to the original meaning of the day. The name, Halloween, refers to a Christian feast, the eve of All Saints Day, but the first meaning of the day has a pagan origin.

The ancient druids believed that on the eve of the first day of November, all the ghosts and skeletons of persons departed as well as witches and goblins walked the earth.

While young people now dunk for apples in front of a cheery fireplace, the druids of old clustered around immense bonfires to ward off the evil spirits.

While smiling jack-o-lanterns now bob about the country in the candy-soiled hands of laughing youngsters, an ancient Irish druid roamed the world for eternity with the first jack-o-lantern because he was not worthy of heaven and the devil did not want him.

Miniature witches and skeletons now scurry from door to door in quest of sweets where once witches on their broomsticks flitted across the moon and skeletons rattled in their graveyards. The Trick-or-Treat tradition has replaced the mob fear and bonfires.

Forced to smile at these naive and childishly superstitious ancestors, yet the question is how many of us could walk through a cemetery tomorrow night without whistling?

Seven Lively Arts To Make Debut Sunday

By Carol Harris

THIS SEASON CBS is dividing its time between spectaculars, westerns and documentaries.

In the latter field, KPIX will present the second new show of its documentary lineup this Sunday. The Seven Lively Arts makes its debut with a program titled The Changing Ways Of Love. It is billed as being a study of the techniques of great screen lovers of the past. Appearing will be Rudolph Valentino, John Barrymore, John Gilbert, Clark Gable, Van Johnson and Marlon Brando. S. J. Perelman is the script writer.

• • •

Conquest, beginning Monday, November 11, is the third to debut. This will be an hour-long show dealing with the progress of science.

• • •

Lowell Thomas rounds out the regularly scheduled documentaries. He has filmed his own program, titled High Adventure. Through this production the viewer will be transported to Tibet, the South Sea Island, New Guinea, Nepal, Antartica and Mexico.

• • •

If the first of CBS's documentary trend, The Twentieth Century, is a gauge of the programs to follow, this should be an entertaining, educational and informative season.

Sir Winston Churchill was the subject on The Twentieth Century's premiere show. The program viewed his life from his birth, through his triumphs and failures to the moment when Queen Elizabeth II entered Number 10 Downing Street to pay tribute to him. Photographs, motion pictures and excerpts from speeches were utilized. It is in his speeches that Churchill demonstrates both his courage and humor.

It is hoped The Twentieth Century will maintain the high caliber throughout the season that it attained on its initial appearance.

• • •

While on the subject of the British, it should be noted that Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip probably received the highest TV ratings of the month during their recent visit here. All three of the major stations carried at least an hour of the festivities.

Queen Elizabeth proved she is every inch a Queen. She would also give any movie star competition in the glamour department with her good looks, sleek figure and lovely clothes.

Despite the fact his wife is monarch, it was Prince Philip who almost stole the show. His good-natured humor was apparent in everything he did.

During the presentations at the Commonwealth Ball in New York, it was Philip who took the lead and paused to chat with each person presented. It was obvious to those watching that Elizabeth would smile politely at first, then become interested in the conversation and eventually converse as animatedly as her husband. Philip demonstrated he is more than just the Queen's consort; he is an intelligent, suave and an affable human being.

Movie and TV entertainers would benefit by following the example set by the visiting royalty. Their grace, poise, and dignity charmed everyone who came into contact with them, including the TV viewer.

Photogenic Face Sought As Model

A photogenic female face is being sought by Edward E. Sandys, dean of General College Courses, to be used in a series of portrait-posters, the purpose of which will be to remind students that a certain pattern of behavior — quiet — is desirable, in the Cloud Hall library.

Contestants will assemble in the photography studio, C-249, during college hour Friday, November 8, and the prettiest face will be chosen by Dean Sandys, Beverly Pasqualetti, Charles Lamp, Emmett Smith, photography instructors, William Eckert of the art department, and Guardsman chief photographer Fred Cates.

Beldon Asks Change In AS Rule For Band

By Don Serattl

A more practical interpretation of the student council resolution compelling 100 per cent Associated Student membership for each organization here requesting operational funds is what is needed to prevent the cessation of the college's band, Larry Beldon, Men's Athletic Commissioner here, declared yesterday.

The Student Council resolution states that any campus organization not attaining 100 per cent AS membership is ineligible for a budget allocation. The band currently lacks the necessary 100 per cent AS membership.

Beldon is a member of the committee of eight appointed recently by AS President John Kelly to investigate this situation, which has now reached the point where a rejection of the band's budget request means the band will be unable to perform at the Rams' gridiron encounter with Sacramento Junior College on Saturday at Sacramento.

"The band has absolutely no funds at present," Beldon declared, "and unless a change can be effected in this resolution, making an exception only for students who have perfectly acceptable reasons for not becoming AS members, the band, for lack of funds, will be forced to cease operation."

Consequences of the college's playing athletic events, such as football games, without a band representing it, would be indeed unfortunate," Beldon said.

"The band is a stimulant to our football team when they are out on the field during a game," Beldon added, who as signal caller for the Ram eleven this season can attest to this fact first hand.

Sports Night Planned

The first Recreation Association sponsored Sports Night, for all RA members and their dates, will be on Saturday night, November 2, according to Ann M. Casey, RA sponsor.

Games and sports including badminton, volleyball, and ping pong will be played, followed by dancing and refreshments. A Halloween theme will be used, with dress to be informal.

Giants Transfer Best Thing That Could Have Happened To Local Baseballers'—Fischer

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Yes, it's the "San Francisco Giants" now, and in seeking out the opinions of top notch diamond competitors, the one received from "Bull Dog" Bill Fischer, who developed the potentialities of Gil McDougald, while head coach at Commerce High, former baseball skipper here and now a member of the college's counseling staff, would be hard to beat in any league.

"San Francisco IS a major league town," Fisher insists. "Tony Morabito proved it with his Forty-Niners, as did USF with the basketball Dons. The move of the Giants here was the best thing that could have happened to us or them. We have always needed a major league club; they had too many clubs in their major league town. The results of the shift will prove more than satisfactory to all concerned, I'm sure."

Fischer pointed out that major league competition in this city will be a most advantageous event as far as the improvement of high school and bush league ball goes, as the participants in these criteria will now have an opportunity to get out and see how the real artists perform.

BILL FISCHER, college baseball authority.

When asked his opinion why the beloved Seals, who fittingly bowed out in a blaze of glory, were so unpopular this year, even though they produced a winner, having drawn but 77,000 more than the previous year when they were bums, Fischer said, "There are a lot of things to be taken into consideration in the answering of that question.

"First of all, Horace Stoneham publicly announced the possibility of his moving out here before the Coast League season even had a chance to warm up. That in itself did a lot to kill public interest in the Seals.

"Secondly, very few persons, even though they are a great part of it, realize that Dizzy Dean's Saturday morning telecasts of big league games do a lot to kill the desire of those who otherwise would get out and watch anything less than the top-noteh performers he brings them.

"And thirdly, the parking faeilities out at Sixteenth and Bryant are, at best, a mess. The stadium is cold, whereas the new park out in the Bayview district will be construeted to blockade cold weather.

"Tie the three together, and you have it pretty well sewed up. Inferior competitors; insufficient parking facilities; and cold. I went out there as often as I could, yet there were other occasions when I would like to have gone, but didn't relish the thought of parking way up somewhere near Thirtieth and Church, taking a cab to the park, and then sitting out there for two or three hours with an Indian blanket wrapped around us, watching the Seals play ball.

"You might consider me a little self-centered because of this, but before you read me off," the baseball authority said, "how about telling me how many ball games you saw out there this year? I'm sorry to see the Seals go, in a sentimental sort of way, but I honestly believe that everyone from Horace Stoneham himself, right down to Joe Doakes out on the corner of 99th Avenue and Nowhere Street will benefit from, and appreciate the San Francisco Giants."

Block SF Society Presents Awards Dinner In January

A guest-speaking appearance by Pete Elliott, head football coach at the University of California, will highlight this semester's athletic awards banquet at the college.

This announcement was made jointly last week by Larry Beldon, President of Block SF, and Alex Schwarz, sponsor of the society, who last week succeeded in securing Elliott for the guest speaker's slot on the program.

The banquet is set tentatively for some time in January in Smith Hall from 6:30 to 10 p.m.

Also appearing before the audience will be the football and soccer coaches and the outstanding athletes in those sports from all San Francisco high schools, plus sportswriters representing the city's four daily newspapers.

Schwarz estimates an attendance of 100, comprising individuals from the college receiving awards in athletics, and active members of Block SF.

Stockton's Big Eight Supremacy Witnessed

By Nick Peters

SORRY, no excuses for the Rams' grid loss to Stockton, perennial and present Big Eight championship favorites. It's miraculous how a single team can consistently come up with such a caliber of top-flight players. Not only was each one their regulars a highly effective performer, but the ability of their capable bench was also a vital factor in the impressive victory. In halfback Bob Costa, the Mustangs displayed a second-stringer who entered the game and, proceeded to make a 47-yard touchdown run on his way toward a 93-yard output in eight carries.

The Mustang linemen are the biggest and best we've seen this season and are undoubtedly one of the best aggregations in the Nation. In qb Earl Moreno, the Stocktons possess as good a field general as will be found in the Big Eight Conference. Marshall Draganovich, who peeled off runs of 33 and 23 yards for the Mudville eleven, was awarded a berth on the All-Big Eight second team in 1956 and certainly lived up to his advance billing.

Stockton could easily win the State title this year, since it has already upended Yuba, Golden Valley favorite and, finally, defeated the Ram squad, which is by no means a pushover.

The Rams haven't fared too badly themselves when it comes to discussing reserve strengths. Al Kent, a guard, has proven valuable in giving regulars Dick Erler and Carl Mitchell "breath-breaks." Backs Roger Grimes, Ted Camacia, Bob Roper, and Bob Higgonbotham have also had their "moments of glory" as understudies. Higgonbotham, who was a better-than-average passer in his Mission High prep days, has shown that he can throw at least as well as his qb counterparts.

• • •

Statistics compiled after the Stockton disaster reveal that backs Bill Rathbun and Dave Tyree are neck and neck for rushing honors. The powerful Rathbun maintains a total yardage lead with 261 yards in 57 carries for a 4.6 average, while the crafty Tyree leads with a 4.7 average on 254 yards gained in 54 carries.

Don Baikie, who completed 5 of 20 aerials, is the passing yardage leader with 117 yards. Higgonbotham, who is used sparingly, has connected on 2 for 5 for 56 yards and 1 td, that a beautiful 42-yard maneuver to end Bob Bleggi. Bleggi, incidentally, is the most productive end statistically, amassing 151 yards with 6 receptions for an average of 25 yards per.

An interesting sidelight shows that the college has recovered but 4 of its 17 fumbles, with most of the "slippery pigskin" incidents occurring within the enemy 20-yard marker; therefore costing the Rams a potential 5 or 10 touchdowns.

Venturing to Hughes Stadium in Sacramento the Rams play Sacramento this Friday night at 8:00 p.m. Last season, behind Tyree's productive ground game, the college eked out a 13-0 decision against the perennially tough Panthers.

Also well worth one's viewing are the baseball games at Seals Stadium this Friday and Sunday, pitting the PCL All-Stars against Willie Mays' barnstorming Major Leaguers, featuring the incomparable Willie and World Series fielding hero Wes Covington. Time—8:30 p.m. Friday and 1:30 p.m. Sunday.

Steve Van Buren of the Philadelphia Eagles (1944-51) holds the record of having gained more yards than any other pro gridder with 5,860. San Francisco 49'er Joe Perry is next in line with 5,337.

Play Of Rathbun, Sturdy Line, Results In 18-12 Victory Over Oakland, Tie For Big 8 Lead

By Nick Peters

The outstanding performance of fullback Bill Rathbun coupled with the efficiency of co-ordinated line play produced a hard-fought 18-12 Ram victory over Oakland's Thunderbirds at Bushrod Field last Friday.

This important triumph gave the college gridders a 2-1 league record, tying them with Stockton, Modesto, Sacramento, and West Contra Costa for the Big Eight Conference football leadership.

Drawing first blood, the college tallied with but a minute remaining in the first quarter of play. Taking possession at midfield on a beautiful Don Baikie interception of a Bill Steen aerial, the college accumulated four first downs prior to scoring on a Rathbun plunge over right guard from the 1-yard line.

Taking the kickoff after the college's td, the T-Birds marched 69 yards in 11 plays for the equalizer. On the Ram 27, quarterback Steen, fading back to pass and finding no receivers, elected to run and was virtually untouched as he romped the distance around right end for the score.

The Rams went ahead to stay in the last few minutes of the half on a four-yard excursion around right end by reserve fullback Marion Page. Baikie's 44-yard pass play to end Hank Gibson, which carried from the 48 to the 4, was the key maneuver of this drive.

Adding an insurance tally, the college scored in the early stages of the third period on a one-yard plunge over left guard by Page, his second td of the game.

Oakland scored the game's final marker after recovering a Sam Rios fumbie on the Ram 45. Halfback Lionel Hankins chalked up the score on a 15-yard skirt around right end.

Rathbun was a terror on defense as well as offense, making several key tackles while collecting 102 yards. Opening the holes for the Ram backfield with magnificent accuracy were Carl Mitchell, enjoying his best game, Al Kent, Ernie Ibarra, L. C. Shields, and Josh Williams.

The play of reserve halfback George "the Greek" Molakides was nothing short of spectacular, he having accounted for the contest's longest run, a 31-yard dash to start the fourth quarter.

Kickers Defeat Spartans; Don Game Saturday

The college will host its traditional soccer foe, the University of San Francisco's Dons, this Saturday at 10 a.m. in the Balboa soccer stadium.

The Dons are undefeated in this year's competition and were for nine consecutive seasons the league's champs. For the Rams they are again the team to beat.

In 1956, after leading the conference from the start, the college took its first loss to USF in the league's last game, 4-0, eventually handing the title tilt to the Dons in the conference's decider, 4-2.

Giving strength to victory hopes were the results of the Rams' game against San Jose State, held on October 17, at San Francisco's Beach Chalet soccer field.

Displaying superb ball control the college squad paved its way through the Spartan backs, recording a brilliant 5-1 victory.

Inside left Al Zelaya scored the initial goal in the first quarter. Twenty minutes later, in the second quarter, inside right Richard Prydz scored the college's second marker on a neat pass from right wing Oscar Gutierrez.

In the final frame, after a scoreless third quarter, the Rams doubled their attack and tallied three more times, while the outstanding performance of the Red and White fullbacks, Ed Zelaya and Charlie Wildberg, held the Spartans' front line at a respectable distance from shooting range.

Yusuf Mirza called it a day as he scored the fifth and last goal for the Rams. Armando Moreno, the Spartan left wing, saved his team from a shutout by conneeting for State's lone goal in the game's last moments of play.

Rams Overpower Viking Thinclads

Winning decisively, the college's cross country team defeated East Contra Costa October 22, by a score of 18 to 39, at East Contra Costa.

Running on what was described as a good cross country course, the team, led by Ray Batz, covered the three miles placing 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 8th.

This was the team's first praetice meet with a two-year college, having run their only other meet against Balboa High School.

The first five men from each team were eligible to score.

Results: 1st place, Batz, CCSF (17:47); 2nd, Patton, CCSF (17:53); 3rd, Westman, CCSF (18:15); 4th, Dawdy, CCSF (18:22); 5th, Kurtz, ECC (18:25); 6th, Dolliver, ECC (19:18); 7th, Holmes, ECC (19:29); 8th, Zimmerman, CCSF (19:41); 9th, Giddings, CCSF; 10th, Garcia, ECC; 11th, Trepagnier, ECC; 12th, Thomas, CCSF; 13th, Cooper, CCSF; 14th, Triedman, ECC, and 15th, Sassone, ECC.

Scanlon To Fight Ex-Ring Champ In Toughest Test Yet

"Irish" Bobby Seanlon, the college's highly rated lightweight prospect, will get his first big test tomorrow night at the Civic Auditorium where he will face ex-champ "Bud" Smith.

Smith lost his crown last year to Joey Brown of New Orleans, who is still the crown-wearer, and since then has lost a lot of championship luster. Nevertheless, Seanlon realizes this is his most important fight to date and will not step into the ring expecting an easy tussle with the former lightweight king.

In an interview with the popular adopted son of San Franeisco, Seanlon stated he feels confident but not over-confident. "Smith is still a tough scrapper, and it's really going to be a tough fight," Seanlon said.

Seanlon has been working hard the past weeks in preparation for this "big" one. Six days a week the 135-pounder runs four miles in the sand at the ocean beach, and spars five rounds at his headquarters at Newman's gymnasium.

Matchmaker Lou Thomas has a big crowd expected, as Seanlon is a favorite with boxing followers in this area. Seanlon himself reports that his whole National Guard outfit from Fort Funston will be in his corner.

Pledges To Choose Sororities This Morning In S-150; Silence Period Ends In College Hour Meet Friday

Prospective pledges must select their sorority preference this morning in S-150, according to Carol Olson, Inter-Sorority Council president.

Each rushee will fill out a preference slip to indicate her preference of the various sororities. A list of the pledges invited to join a sorority will be posted on the bulletin board outside of S-150 at 1 p.m. The pledges should respond to the invitations immediately, Miss Olson warned.

The ISC constitution states that no rushee will receive an invitation to pledge a sorority unless she has a C average and is carrying at least 12 units of study. A rushee who is unable to pledge this semester because of the requirements above may rush again next semester.

Miss Olson added that to avoid high - pressure salesmanship, there will be a period of silence which will last from the preference hours to college hour on this Friday. In observance of silence week, there must not be any conversation between members of sororities and pledges.

During the Friday college hour there will be a meeting of all the pledges in S-100. Each pledge will be seated according to the sorority from which she has accepted an invitation. At this time, the ISC will discuss a code of ethics accepted by the ISC after a joint committee meeting of the ISC and the IFC.

The chief reason for this meeting will be to plan the responsibilities pledges will carry in the Associated Women Student Fashion Show and Tea which will be held on Wednesday, November 6.

Miss Olson added that Gamma Sigma Sigma, a service sorority which has an unlimited membership and which is open to anyone who desires to join, will be in charge of the coat check room.

There will be no pledge activities on Wednesday, November 6, during the day or evening because of the fashion show and tea. Miss Olson further stated that pledge initiation will be held on Sunday, November 3.

Symphony Ticket Sales End Next Week; Forum Offers 50% Discount

Symphony Forum tickets are still on sale at the college bank during banking hours, Meyer Cahn, band director, announced today. They will be on sale for only one more week, he added. The tickets represent a 50 per cent saving on regular tickets and are good for 18 performances.

There has been a major change to accommodate college students who have previously complained that the Thursday night shows cut into their study time for Friday tests. The shows will all be presented on Wednesday nights this season. During the recent meeting of the Forum committee, it was noticed that this had resulted in increased sales in all the 35-member colleges.

A suggestion was also presented that the stars may be able to visit member colleges and talk informally with interested students. A plan is now under consideration to decide which stars will be invited and when.

This college symphony series began several years ago when it was decided to let students attend concert dress rehearsals.

to other groups. The athletic teams play for fun. Others serve during college. Normally, Cahn said, is a rallying group and gives many more hours of its time."

Cahn then correlated these facts with the existence of technical problems and the skills required of band members.

In response to Dimond's comparison of the band to the college's singing groups, Cahn pointed out that the difference is in the demand for skills.

In conclusion, Kelly appointed an investigating committee of nine. He named Jim Woods as chairman, Roy Buchman, Bev Castellacci, Walt Schultz, Jerry Redford, Dimond, Marilyn Milansio, Larry Beldon and Bill Robison.

CAB Adopts Club Charters To Be Posted Here

An up-to-date version of the club charters, listing all active clubs and organizations to be found on campus, was planned at a recent Clubs Activities Board meeting, Jim Foster, president of the CAB, said last week.

This group of charters will replace the one now on the bulletin board outside of the Registrar's office.

Other matters taken up at the CAB meetings, which are held in B-2 from 1 to 2 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays, include reports from the various committees within the board, each one containing approximately four members.

One of the committees deals with the problems of revisions and additions to the CAB's constitution and reports their present status at every meeting.

Meanwhile, another committee is responsible for keeping in shape the plaques which were made by the college's group in past semesters, and which are now on display in the cafeteria.

The membership committee is one of the more important divisions, since it holds the representatives of campus organizations responsible for regular attendance at the CAB meetings, Foster pointed out.

An absence of any member from seven or more CAB meetings could result in that member's club being declared "off-campus," which means it would be denied the rights and privileges of official recognition.

The publicity committee also plays an important function in the organization as a whole by reporting regularly on any of its campaign plans. It works hand in hand with the Foster Committee, whose duties entail attending to the posters which help publicize the various activities of the clubs.

Another group, the sports committee, is in charge of relaying the college sport news to the CAB members as it becomes known.

Finally, there is a cafeteria clean-up committee, which last year worked in conjunction with the hotel and restaurant department in an effort to gain and preserve cleanliness in the cafeteria. As of this semester, they are idle, but Foster has brought forward some recommendations to put them into force again.

"Many students have the idea that the CAB has little work to do," Foster stated, "but this is only because the CAB is mainly a behind-the-scenes activity, whose main responsibility is the coordination of all club activities."

AGS Attends Meet At Contra Costa

Richard Romich, president of the college chapter of Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society, represented the college as Recorder at the annual Northern Regional Conference of AGS at East Contra Costa College in Concord, October 26.

"Interpreting the Junior College in the High School" was the theme of the meeting. This was a problem posed at the State Convention last Spring.

A round table discussion included the questions of student opinion, parental influence, community influence and the function of public relations.

Each chapter was requested to send a delegate to act as Recorder in the student opinion section of the discussions.

AGS continues its highly successful coaching program during college hours in S-113. Students seeking tutoring aid are requested to consult William Richardson, AGS adviser, early in the week to insure the reservation of a coach by Friday.

The following college hour meetings have been scheduled in C-252: November 1, December 6 and January 10.

Merchant Of Venice Finale This Weekend

The last two performances of The Merchant Of Venice will be presented this Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. in the college Little Theater, Michael Griffin, director of the production, said Friday.

"The show has been well-received and has had many compliments. We have Carl Mayo to thank as he has been doing publicity for the show," Griffin added.

Rushing Affairs Draw To A Climax As Pledging Activities Begin Monday

By Jerry Redford

WITH all but final acceptance of chosen rushess as pledges, fraternities and sororities on campus are awaiting the beginning of pledge week, starting Monday at 7:30 a.m.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity held its dance along with the Veterans Club last Friday at Smith Hall, which was a great success. This Saturday evening, the group will hold its second affair for prospective pledges, which will be a Luau. Final interrogation will be held at the home of Jerry Redford the following night, at which time the rushees will officially become pledges of the fraternity. Final plans for the affairs and pledge week were completed last week at the home of Bill Pound.

Phi Beta Delta fraternity concluded its rushing program with a swimming party for prospective pledges and their dates at the Fairfax home of their sponsor, John Ross. Interrogation will be held this Sunday at the home of Jim Davis, president of the fraternity. At that time pledges will be formally introduced to the brotherhood.

Beta Phi Beta fraternity gave the cutest couple of the Frosh Ball their trophies last weekend at the dance. At the home of Bob Sorbi the group held a meeting, at which time final plans for pledge week were completed and plans for the fraternity's Golden Slipper Dance were discussed. The dance is scheduled for Friday, November 22, at the California Club, with music supplied by the Jimmy Price Orchestra.

Ram Cam, the college's photo club, had a very good time at the Frosh Ball snapping shots of the many couples. The photos will be given out November 4-8: Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., and Tuesday from 10 p.m. to 12 noon. The place to pick up pictures will be the AS office, B-1.

Alpha Phi Omega brothers made plans at a meeting last week for their service project for the semester. It will be in serving refreshments at the CJCSGA Conference to be held November 14-16. Plans were also made for a delegation from the college to attend the regional conference of their fraternity, to be held at San Luis Obispo. Pledges are giving service to the college by working in the chemistry storeroom, and in the library.

The California Student Teachers Association of the college will meet this Friday in C-269 during college hour. At that time a faculty group will be invited to aid the group in a discussion that will be informative as well as answering many of the questions that may arise in the mind of a prospective teacher.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority held a very successful preference coffee hour last night. Pledge week is the next activity for the sisters. They are planning ahead for presents, and for their pledge pinning to be held later in the semester.

Tomorrow Last Day To Petition For Scholarships

Application deadlines for scholarships this semester will be tomorrow, October 31, Mary Golding, dean of women here, warned last week.

Scholarships being offered are the Florence Louis Scholarship of $25 for a woman student of the college, two Denman Scholarships for $250 to two women students, a Square and Circle Scholarship of $125 offered to an American-born Chinese man or woman student and two Chinese Scholarships of $50 apiece offered to one Chinese man and one Chinese woman student.

Dean Golding said that applications should be sent to her or Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities. To apply for any of these scholarships a letter must be written to the dean stating ambition, need and activities participated in outside of classes.

California State Scholarships are again being offered. This is the third year the competition has been conducted, Dean Golding added.

Qualifications for a scholarship are as follows: Applicant must be a high school graduate, less than 24 years of age, must be a resident of California and have a financial need for the scholarship. The applicant must have also demonstrated high moral character, good citizenship and dedication to American ideals.

The scholarship is equal to tuition and necessary fees to a maximum of $600.

Dunn Speaks On Benefits Under Korean GI Bill

Robin Dunn, counselor for Veterans Affairs at the college, addressed the assembled Veterans Club concerning the varied benefits under the Korean GI bill at their last meeting.

In general, he discussed the eligibility for changing courses and the limiting dates for commencement of training. In addition, he pointed out some benefits of which most veterans are not aware.

According to Dunn, each veteran is entitled to one change of training objective. That is, he may change his major course one time only in the course of his training.

The veteran may change colleges as many times as he wishes, but if he goes from a college that is accredited (City College of San Francisco) to one that isn't (Heald's Business College) it is counted as a change of training objective and he may not revert to the accredited college without loss of his benefits.

The limiting date for commencement of training is three years from the date of separation from the military service. If a veteran starts before this date, he may have several leaves of absence, but his last series of training must begin before the three years are completed.

Dunn brought up a point that is little known and of interest to most veterans. Under the California State GI Bill, a veteran may receive up to $1,000 in benefits after his federal bill has been exhausted.

This can be collected in installments from $40 to $50 a month until the $1,000 is used. This is a gratuitous move on the part of the State of California to assist students who seek post-graduate work.

Activity Posters Must Be Approved In S-304

Because the Publications Board is responsible for the protection of the college's name, and the checking of all posters and publications distributed in the college, Dick Moore, Guardsman editor and chairman of the board, must approve all publications and posters before they may be circulated.

Any group or person should bring the blueprint of the material to the Journalism Workshop, S-304, Moore said. It is better, he added, to bring the blueprint of the material to have it approved, before time and expense are used to make the final copy, so that in case the material is not approved, nothing would be wasted.

tween the Science Building and Cloud Hall. But this year the Student-Faculty Relations Committee chose to move the affair indoors.

Members of the committee, composed of faculty and administration members of the college, are Miriam G. Escher, Fawcett, Frederick W. Foulke, Mary Golding, Jean Gowen, Hillsman, Ruth P. Inskipp, Albert E. Peterson, Everett C. Silvia and Emmett E. Smith.

Sophs To Meet Soon

The Sophomore Class meeting, originally scheduled for last week, has been postponed until after Homecoming Week, November 4 to 8, Larry Vargo, Sophomore Class president, announced here today.

Important issues to be discussed at the meeting will be some of the coming events such as the Soph Ball, sophomore projects, sophomore week, and others concerning the Associated Students here.

Homecoming Grid Tilt Sees Rams Take On Tough Pirate Eleven In Crucial Contest

By John Henry

City College's footballers will be fighting for their lives when they meet a dangerous Modesto Pirate eleven in a crucial game this Friday afternoon at Kezar Stadium. Not only is this the Rams' Homecoming game, but the outcome could mean whether or not Grover Klemmer's gridders will gain at least a tie for the Big Eight title. Kickoff time is 2;30 p.m.

This is the same Modesto team that knocked off defending champion Stockton two weeks ago, 14 to 12, and it's a sure bet the Pirates will be gunning for another upset over the Rams.

Modesto has been hot and cold this season. They dropped a pre-season game to strong Long Beach City College, 20 to 7, and were edged out by El Camino, 20 to 19. In conference play they downed West Contra Costa, 31 to 12, and lost to Santa Rosa, 20 to 18.

Regardless of Modesto's losses this season, any squad that can beat mighty Stockton while holding them to just two TD's is capable of beating anybody, and the Rams will have their job cut out for them Friday afternoon.

Coach Stan Pavko's Modestans boast a strong running game and fair aerial attack.

Featured are freshman fullback Dave Maggard, who has been the top ground gainer, and quarterback veteran Emmett Lee, who is a good field general and an effective passer. His top pass receiver is end Mike McCutcheon, who boasts a sure pair of pigskin hooks.

Halfbacks Ray Chancellor and G. W. Wingo are also good runners who have the breakaway ability and could turn the tide with their explosive dashes.

Last season the Rams knocked off Modesto, 18 to 0, at Modesto, while outrushing the Pirates, 190 to 20, and outpassing them 98 yards to 53. This year Modesto will not only be out to avenge that loss but also has a stronger team. The Rams will be out to scuttle the Pirates, so it should be quite a Homecoming battle.

Next Monday, Veterans Day, College Holiday

Classes will not be held on Veterans Day, the second holiday of the college year, next Monday, November 11.

The college "lost" one holiday this year, when Columbus Day fell on a weekend, but students will get a breather when Veterans Day (formerly Armistice Day) rolls around Monday. Classes will resume on Tuesday, November 12.

Two weeks later, on Wednesday, November 27, the second mid-term period will come to a close, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar.

Miss Learnard added that dead week will begin Monday, January 20, and final exams will be given Friday, January 24, through Friday, January 31.

Faculty Calls Off Traditional Tilt

The college's semi-annual Soph-Prof basketball game has been cancelled at the request of the faculty here, Larry Vargo, Sophomore Class president, announced last week.

Vargo explained that the chief reason for the change is that "the majority of the instructors felt they could not compete with their 'younger opponents' and requested a 'less strenuous' game."

Scheduled to take its place will be another type of athletic contest on Friday, January 17, during college hour. The event will be a part of Soph Week, January 13 through 17. Suggestions for the contest are still being considered, Vargo declared, and the exact nature of the affair will be determined by the Sophomore Class.

In addition to seeking a substitute athletic contest for Soph Week, Vargo said, the class has the responsibility of selecting a Soph Project for the semester. Among the suggestions that have been offered are a scholarship fund and, in the interests of promoting college spirit, the introduction of what might become a college tradition.

Also on the agenda for Soph Week is a survey conducted to determine whether the dress for the Soph Ball should be semi-formal or formal, and

Big Bonfire Rally Tomorrow Night Kicks Off Homecoming Week Events

Queen To Reign At Friday Game, Fairmont Dance

A coronation, a bonfire rally, a football game and a dance will complete the most activity-filled week of the college year, Homecoming Week.

The social wheel will begin turning today as the last ballots are cast in the Homecoming Queen contest at Smith Hall. The queen is to be chosen by the votes of the men students from a group of 16 women selected by various organizations on campus.

According to Bob Rodriguez, Associated Men Student president and coordinator of the many social events and activities of the week, the pivotal event upon which the others hinge is the Homecoming Rally. This bonfire extravaganza will be held tomorrow night between 8 and 10 p.m. at the archery range.

At this rally, the queen who is elected will be crowned, and she will then reign for the next two days with her two princesses. The queen and her princesses will be given trophies to keep for themselves, and the queen's name will be inscribed on a perpetual trophy to be kept at the college.

A bill of entertainment is scheduled for this night. The show will be centered around the college band and the Men's Glee Club. A guest singing star will also be presented in the person of Ronnie Draper, younger brother of the well known vocalist, Rusty Draper.

Grover Klemmer, head football coach, will then introduce his talented football team so the students will know just who will be carrying the ball for them on the following day.

The next event on the full agenda will begin Friday, November 8, with a car cavalcade, headed by the Homecoming Queen in the first 1958 Pontiac to be seen in San Francisco. This parade of autos will take students to UNESCO to be held in San Francisco today through Saturday.

Under-Secretary of State, Christian A. Herter will head a number of speakers meeting at the St. Francis Hotel for the conference, whose main topic will circle around problems concerning Asia, its cultural values, Asian-American relations and the stimulation of world-wide support to the UNESCO (United Nations Economic, Social and Cultural Organization), and its program.

Cinderella Story Unfolds As Queen's Tiara Replaces Scarf

By Kevin Mullen

A cinderella story will unfold today as one lucky woman student of the college trades her pencil for a scepter and her bandana for the tiara of a queen.

There will be no fairy godmother for this present day Cinderella but, instead, the democratically compiled votes of the men students of the college.

As the spirited voting for Homecoming Queen draws to a close, all eyes and ears are tuned in expectation for the final results:

Will it be Renada Marston? Miss Marston is well known on the campus for her student activities as well as her pulchritude. In her fourth semester at the college and sponsored by Alpha Kappa Rho, she is a member of the Sophomore Council and Phi Beta Rho sorority.

Will it be Sonja Cohn? A member of Phi Beta Rho sorority, Miss Cohn, who is being sponsored by Beta Phi Beta fraternity, needs no introduction to all who know her as a smiling bundle of personality.

Will it be Fran McMurray? Miss McCurray is no novice to beauty contests. Last year, while attending Washington High School, she was chosen as Bell Queen and presided over the annual Lincoln vs. Washington football game.

Will it be Vicky Mason? Miss Mason comes from behind her microphone in the KCSF broadcasting booth to prove that the world of radio is not necessarily outclassed by TV in the beauty department. It's the unmistakably feminine voice of Vicky Mason that has been wafted over the airwaves for the last two semesters.

These examples are only a few of the qualified Misses in the contest. There are 12 other contestants equally qualified and personable. In her own right, each contestant has all the qualities to make a queen, but the most popularly accepted woman will receive the honor.

The queen's reign will last two days with a climax like that of Cinderella, a grand ball. The queen will preside over this ball but as in the dream of Cinderella, the dance must end.

When the clock strikes 12, she will be whisked off in her carriage to dream of her reign as queen. The next day, her scepter will revert to a pencil and her crown to a bandana, but she will retain her trophy and the memories of a truly glorious reign.

Tryouts On Now For Next 2 Plays

Two student productions have been scheduled for presentation by the Little Theater group, Michael Griffin, drama coach, said today.

Selected as directors are Marlene Grant and Jeanne Graham, both of whom participated in the recent production of The Merchant Of Venice. Miss Grant was in charge of makeup for the show, while Miss Graham was starring in the role of Portia.

A comedy, The Man Who Came To Dinner, by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman, was selected by Miss Grant for her first directing venture.

"Tryouts will be held for two weeks for the play, and anyone interested in dramatics is invited to come to the Little Theater at 2 p.m. to read for parts," Miss Grant said.

Selected for the leading male role of Sheridan Whiteside is Nick Rommel, who plays the part of the "man who came to dinner" and stayed and stayed and stayed.

A tragedy by Arthur Miller will be the first directing venture undertaken by Miss Graham. A View From The Bridge is the title of the play for which Miss Graham has already selected the male and female leads. Dawn Adams will play Catherine, and Bob Phalen will play the part of Eddie.

"This will be the first time this play has been produced here," Miss Graham said, "and it is a special challenge to me as it is my first time directing a play."

The production dates for both student productions have not yet been determined.

AWS To Present Fashion Show, Entertainment

By Esmeralda Aguilar

Plans are completed for the semi-annual Associated Women Student tea and fashion show scheduled for today at 3 p.m. in the library of Cloud Hall, Darlene Enfield, AWS president, announced yesterday.

Theme for the affair is My Fair Lady, and the entertainment will be provided by Audrey Bocek and Marilyn Milani, pantomimes; Yoshoyo Shintani, accordion, and a combo with Larry Vuekevich, Bevan Brooks and Michael Phillips.

The AWS tea and fashion show is given in honor of the high senior women of San Francisco's high schools to acquaint them with the college, Miss Enfield said.

Special invitations were sent to 30 high senior women at each of the seven public high schools, which include Balboa, Galileo, Lincoln, Lowell, Mission, Polytechnic and Washington and also to the Deans of Women of each of the schools and to the Presidents of the high senior classes.

All women students here are welcome to attend as well as women faculty members. Women students will be excused from their 3 o'clock classes, Miss Enfield added.

Frocks for the fashion show will include everything from sports to formals and will be provided by Livingston Brothers, both the downtown and the Stonestown stores.

Campus models to partiepate in the show will be Judy Bell, Marcella Jubitz, Sharon Hendon, Muriel Hibbons, Bertha Lew, Vicki Mason, Terry Pedersen, Penny Postel, Marilyn Schoolman, Carole Taylor, Erla Theobald, Carol Ann Thomas and Anna West.

Committee chairmen for the tea and fashion show are Marilou von Kliest, programs; Elileen Cleary, hospitality; Natalie Hoogasian, models; Eunice Hall and Shelly Osborne, decorations; Marlene Hennen, publicity; Jean White, food; Carol Olson, serving; Marjorie Earhart, entertainment; Ruby Broadway, invitations; Jane Wong, registration; Annette Hush, clean-up; Judy Rickets, set up, and check room, Gamma Sigma Sigma.

Jacobsen Named UNESCO Delegate

Joseph M. Jacobsen, the college's sponsor of the International Relations Club and foreign student adviser here, will represent the National Association of Foreign Students' Advisers as its delegate in the forthcoming sixth National Conference of the U. S. National Commission for UNESCO to be held in San Francisco today through Saturday.

Under-Secretary of State, Christian A. Herter will head a number of speakers meeting at the St. Francis Hotel for the conference, whose main topic will circle around problems concerning Asia, its cultural values, Asian-American relations and the stimulation of world-wide support to the UNESCO (United Nations Economic, Social and Cultural Organization), and its program.

College Blood Fund At Irwin Bank For Benefit Of Students, Faculty

A little known benefit available to students of the college was brought to general awareness recently by Ralph O. Hillsman, dean of Student Activities.

There is an account set up in the name of the college at the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank. This account or fund was initiated and contributed to by the faculty and students of the college last year.

Any student or faculty member may make one withdrawal from this account for himself or any member of his family should the need arise. To make this withdrawal, the interested student should inquire at the office of Dean Hillsman, S-148, for the necessary steps to take.

By the same token, since the students are the ones who benefit from this fund, it is their responsibility to keep the account active. To do this, any student may go to the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank and contribute blood in the name of the college for the account.

In the words of Dean Hillsman, it is a remarkable and worthwhile institution. "Some students who have never given blood before are a bit apprehensive at the first donation," Hillsman said, "but after their initial fears are overcome they do not hesitate to give again."

This benefit has been in effect in past semesters, but it was through the efforts of students Phil Malnick and Louise von Emster last spring that the Blood Drive was initiated at the college and the present fund was set up.

Little Theater Staff Stresses Polish, Practical Education

SINCE the fall semester of 1954 the college's booming Little Theater group has taken many strong and steady strides toward establishing itself as one of the area's most ambitious and polished drama organizations.

Each semester, and especially in the most recent semesters, the group has added to its impressive manpower potential and playhouse facilities. Presentations of the company seem to get bigger and better in every way every time the group offers a new production. Its strength in numbers of actors, actresses, stagehands, production people and business personnel has doubled since the Little Theater started on its upswing under Michael J. Griffin's direction in 1954.

A very powerful and plentiful source of excellent public relations for the college, the Little Theater people deserve a generous round of applause for their work in making their productions such exemplary specimens of student produced, designed, acted and directed drama.

Everything in the Little Theater's set-up is run by the student—from lighting, with its complex problems of electrical wiring and control, to set and costume design. Mr. Griffin's excellent talents have, except for classroom and technical acting direction, been reserved strictly to advisory areas.

Few, if any, college drama groups have the responsibility, freedom of control and hence practical educational benefits of our campus group. Many colleges, including most in the Bay Area, make use of faculty members to solve acting problems, publicity problems and production problems. It is doubtful if some of these groups could put on a completely student show without help from outside professionals and faculty.

Here it seems to be the feeling of Mr. Griffin and his people that faculty members and professionals don't need the experience of being in college productions, and that the students are the ones to be learning, and learning everything. And they are, too.

Shots At Random

By Tom Tatera

THAT magnificently costumed gentleman seen hanging around the cafeteria a few Fridays back had a hard time selling tickets for the Gals-and-Ghouls dance. It was all due to his unusual sales technique. One student was threatened with "either buying a ticket, or walking the plank." This is hardly what you call subtle persuasion.

Speaking of subtle persuasion, it would be interesting to learn just what means were used to chase away the two little boys who were having such a good time in the lot adjoining the women's gymnasium a short while back. The ladies would have had no objections, except that these lads had unusual taste in dress. They were wearing T-shirts a les T-shirts. That's all.

MANY talented pianists come and go who can stir up the ivories in a most satisfactory manner. But once in a while there comes along a man who can put a little more of himself into his music, and have it emerge with a little extra something, something undefinable, but which makes you sit up and take notice.

There is a man like that in San Francisco right now, playing at one of the local jazz night clubs. When watching him, one wonders just how he can keep so intent upon his work, putting so much feeling into the music, when the small talk and quiet uproar of people having fun surround him. This question is answered when he gets up from the piano and, smiling contentedly, allows himself to be led away by a seeing eye dog.

The man's name is Freddie. He can afford to feel contented. He's good!

WHY IS IT these kindly old women with sweet dispositions tend to turn into veritable demons when, arms loaded with shopping bags, they board a crowded bus and stalk the meek looking man most likely to give up his seat, then use the bags to jab him into submission.

A trained soldier with a bayonet is less dangerous than these little ladies when they move into action.

IF CELLARS and artists are considered inseparable in this Bohemian world of ours, then the creative writing class of the college should turn out a few darn good artists. They have the nicest cellar in use as a classroom.

Biology Labs

Students Gain As Third Floor Gets New Look

The college's biology department is now sporting a new look, and is presently equipped to handle the steady flow of students who study the life sciences here.

New rooms have been built and some of the old ones remodeled. (This explains some of the equipment, desks, etc., that have been seen in the third floor corridors.) Students taking courses in the biology department next semester will receive the full benefits of studying in these modernly equipped rooms.

Room S-313 is now the showplace of the biology department. It houses the micro-technique laboratory which is not yet in use but, when opened next semester, the room will feature new advances, as yet not seen in other colleges.

Jules Fraden, head of the biology department, says that the room was planned by the faculty of the department with the idea that it offer convenience and be fully functional.

The micro-technique laboratory with its modern low black-topped work tables is a very unique room. Unlike the other science rooms, the instructor's desk is at an angle which is perpendicular to the work tables, allowing all the students to view the instructor without having to turn completely around.

Students will be taught to make slides in the lab, which features modern conveniences such as tables with spacious lockers, easy to reach built-in gas burners, and a new microtone which cuts tissues fine enough for slides.

Equally impressive is the room adjoining the micro-technique lab, the general education biology lab. Instructor Fraden says that he considers this room to be one of the finest labs in the state.

General biology 41A, 41B, and biology 40, nature's study, will be taught in this room. Life and physical science G11A will also be taught here.

A special room for student research is in the rear of the lab. This room is called the animal room, for it can be closed off and animals kept there for experimentation. A special box on rollers will hold worms and other food for the animals. The room is fully equipped with gas and electric fixtures, and will also house several aquaria.

New improvements are also seen in the bacteriology lab in S-323. A modern culture room, where the cultures are grown and kept at a constant temperature is one of the new additions.

Similar to an assembling operation, test tubes are brought into the wash room, washed, sterilized, then handed through a sliding glass window into the media room. There, the media is weighed and the test tubes are filled by the pipetting machine. The pipetting machine, a time saver, can be pre-set to pour the exact amount needed and operated by foot control.

whether the dance should be three or four hours long. The final decision on these matters will be left to the class, Vargo said.

To sophomores interested in offering suggestions and aid, he added, "It is extremely important that they attend the coming meetings because of the essential decisions to be made." He emphasized, "It is up to the class, not the officers, to make these decisions."

Newsmen, Blues Lovers Dig 'Em At Jazz 'Shop

By special invitation of owner Art Auerbach, a member of The Guardsman staff found himself attending a "get-acquainted" affair at Jazz Workshop last week, along with approximately 50 other men and women of San Francisco's journalism and radio world.

As a host, Auerbach did not leave much to be desired. Entertainment, supplied by Chris Ibanez and his progressive jazz trio, was smooth, easy on the ears, and accentuated by the standing offer of free refreshments, which issued throughout the evening.

Featured with Ibanez, himself a pianist, were Max Leavitt on the drums and Chuck Peterson on bass and tenor sax, two highly qualified progressive jazz players.

But one group should not get the idea that Auerbach's generosity was without rhyme nor reason. Publicity forthcoming from the guests he invited will exceed, many times over, the actual cost of the party. Auerbach was following a basic tenet of advertising, which is to "let the public know you are alive."

As things worked out, Auerbach's program of public relations proved quite successful. The guests, as far as could be seen, were painlessly brainwashed and everyone had a pleasant evening.

According to a fact sheet given out at the club, Jazz Workshop's policy is to develop the talent of the musical groups which it books. These bands, according to Auerbach, are never told [illegible] what they feel; consequently, what they feel the night club audience feels.

The place itself has all the earmarks of being a high-spot of entertainment — with low lights, subdued decorations, and comfortable seating arrangement for 100 persons. The stage, small in size, is set up at the end of the club, backdropped by a huge free-hand pantomime drawing of a jazz pianist. All in all, Jazz Workshop seems to be designed with the complete pleasure of the patron in mind.

Located at 473 Broadway, the club is open seven nights a week and features a headliner trio each night.

Puppets Star In New Math Series On KPIX

By Carol Harris

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The section of this column dealing with the new Mathematics Series was written by Don Serotti. Serotti attended a press conference extended to The Guardsman by invitation of television station KPIX.)

ONE OF THE greatest problems of modern education—making mathematics more appealing to students—will soon be dealt with in a series of nine half-hour television shows in which the featured stars are puppets.

The series, entitled Adventures In Number And Space, will make its debut on KPIX, Thursday, November 14, at 6:30 p.m. The remaining eight shows will appear on successive Thursdays following the series opener.

At a KPIX press conference called last week for Bay Area high school and college reporters, this novel approach to education was explained by Richard Pack, producer of the series.

The reporters also viewed the first show of the series, How Man Learned To Count.

On the nine programs, designed primarily for junior high school students but also applicable for adults, Bill Baird and his marionettes will, in their zany way, entertain their viewers with such topics as arithmetic, algebra, geometry and arrangements and combinations. They will explain the basic principles of these subjects by using examples familiar to everyone, in the same sequence in which the subjects are taught in school.

As the series progresses, the puppets will be seen as cavemen learning to count. Egyptians using geometry to measure their Nile-flooded farms, Newton applying algebra to reduce gravitation to a formula after being hit by a falling apple, and early mariners plotting their course by the stars and trigonometry. Baird will then relate each branch to contemporary life, showing practical applications in today's world.

Titles of the nine shows are How Man Learned To Count (arithmetic), Quicker Than You Think (electric computer), The Mysterious X (algebra), What's The Angle? (geometry), It's All Arranged (arrangements and combinations), How's Chances? (probability and statistics), Sine Language (trigonometry), Stretching The Imagination (Topology), and Careers In Mathematics.

In view of the growing need for scientists and engineers in America, Pack said, the Westinghouse Broadcasting Company, which produces the show, decided to produce a program series that would give the mathematics field a greater appeal to young people. Thus, the Adventures series was born.

"These programs are not intended to teach," Pack commented, "but to create a climate of acceptability in mathematics by demonstrating that it can be entertaining, exciting and practical."

CHILDREN and surgery were the subjects when House Call presented Baby Goes To The Hospital on KPIX.

Host Bob Dunn and Virginia Peterson, pediatric supervisor, showed how small children are prepared for their hospital experience. Cameras following an actual patient as she was taken to surgery for a tonsillectomy gave added impact to the presentation.

This Saturday's production will probe the problem of muscular dystrophy—how it affects not only the victim but also his family.

Advertising

Madison Avenue Mecca Of Tricky Fight For Minds

Madison Avenue, accepted synonym for advertising agencies, is now, in its battle for the public mind, attempting to switch to subtle brain-washing. It is an attempt to remove the stigma of distrust from the chosen occupation. Notice it's never cheap but always inexpensive, not commercial but message, not sponsor but friend, these are part of the terminology which the Brooks Brothers' suit boys have adopted and accepted among themselves. "Togetherness" and all that.

This new switch from the obvious to the subtle seems to the sudden realization of Madison Avenue that the public is tired of its intelligence being insulted. This must be realized as a great victory for the public that Madison Avenue recognizes its intelligence.

Advertisers have run across opposition to their slogans because they not only insult the public's intelligence but offend it. As a general changes his tactics when losing a battle, so did the advertiser, and the result of this is subtle advertising.

A comparatively new method in this battle for the public's mind, which proves some people will steal anything regardless of its worth, is the flash method. This is done by flashing inspired messages on a motion picture screen during the movie. The message may state such vital information as "Eat Popcorn"—it is flashed for a few seconds.

Then some poor intellectual idiot turns to his date and joyfully states, "How about some popcorn?" About the same time a Madison Avenue man is sticking a pin in a map, mission accomplished.

Advertising is becoming more and more subtle because the advertisers have realized that the public, like most husbands, likes to believe it's making all the decisions. Advertising has boiled down to a science which is played like a chess game. If the public is played as a chess master would move his men, so is the public moved according to the whim of Madison Avenue. The difference between the chess master and the advertiser is the number of players manipulated.

Advertisers face a new problem, the problem of reaching those who seem to do nothing but observe a Russian-made basketball which goes BEE, BEep, beep. But it's only a temporary problem which Madison Avenue with its Brooks Brothers' suits will soon conquer.

Bookstore Line Of Study Aids Helps Relieve A Weary Scholar's Mind

Seven years of service to students characterize the campus bookstore, located in Smith Hall. During those years, the store has always operated in the black and [illegible] per cent of profits have been turned over to the Associated Student fund.

Although the store is under the supervision of the Board of Education, it is owned by the Associated Students. It strives to maintain all the materials students are likely to need. The store sells the official textbooks for all classes. In order to do this, more than 600 titles are maintained and, during the rush at registration, more than 35,000 volumes are in stock.

The store is managed by Richard Main and his wife Lois, who keep it open for eight and one-half hours a day from 7:30 in the morning until 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Main pointed out that the store does employ students during rush periods and that any student desiring to work there during the next semester registration period should inform him soon.

This year, a special gift has been a Study Guide Outline worth $1.25 to any student making a purchase.

In addition to textbooks and [illegible] service, the store carries the College Outline Series, various study aids, and a line of pocketbooks to relieve a scholar's mind after a rough midterm.

Engineering and artists' supplies are also on sale, along with athletic equipment, required athletic suits, and a line of novelties including such items as rings, pins, college stationery, jewelry, notebooks, and briefcases.

One of the money-saving offers is the sale of a publisher's remnants; that is, books that will not be reprinted or reissued. This sale will last through Friday, and books worth up to $15.00 are on sale for prices ranging from a dollar to $2.98.

Fullback Bill Rathbun Returns As Leading Rusher, Potential Choice For Conference Honors

By Dave Smith

Mainstay of the Ram football team is hard-running sophomore Bill Rathbun, who is one of the top fullbacks in the Big Eight Conference.

Rathbun was graduated from Balboa High School in the Fall of 1955 where he received All-City honors at fullback.

This year, in only five games, Rathbun has racked up 363 yards on the ground in 79 carries to pace the Rams. Last year his season total was 296 yards in 35 carries. These statistics show that Rathbun is certainly improving. At the rate he is going this season, he should easily double his last year's mark.

The 5'11", 185-pound fullback defines himself as a power runner rather than a speed runner. He said, "I'd rather run over a defensive back than around him." A great aid to his power is Rathbun's control of the ball. He has only fumbled twice in his football career, once in high school and once in a college game.

One of the main reasons Rathbun is a top yardage getter is, like all great athletes, he knows his faults. He realizes that he is not strong on defense so he works on this weak point.

The hard-running fullback believes "a back is as good as his line," and that the interior of the Ram line is great. "The men aren't big, but quick," he added, but when asked about his own speed he said, "Most of the line can beat me."

Majoring in criminology, Rathbun plans to attend College of the Pacific after graduation from the college. In the near future he plans marriage, possibly in June. After college he hopes to be a State narcotics investigator.

Cagers Sought By Phelan; Team Opens Shop Here

Despite the fact that basketball practice started last Friday night, in which some 40 hopeful cage candidates participated, Coach Sid Phelan urged yesterday that all who are interested in the sport turn out immediately.

On Friday, ballplayers were sent through a series of game type scrimmages mainly for the benefit of the Northern California Basketball Officials Association, which was breaking in rookie officials.

Phelan will be conducting tryouts all of this week and has extended an invitation to anybody who would like to become a member of this year's Ram varsity to participate.

All interested ballplayers will be given a "good look" by Phelan, who has stated that all positions are wide open and up for grabs.

The likeable mentor has not stuck his neck out as far as predicting the outlook for this year's squad in the always rugged Big Eight conference, but pointed out to the players at a meeting last week that with a lot of hard work and personal effort this year's team is capable of bringing home the crown.

Missing from action so far has been Doug North, who as yet has not received the O.K. to play from the medics.

Also awaiting the green light from the doctor is Mal McCormick, a starter on last season's Ram quintet. Big Mal has been sidelined by high blood pressure, but is sure he will be ready to go in a short time.

Harriers Defeat East Contra Costa, Oakland

Making it two straight wins, the college's cross country team finished its three-mile grind victorious over Oakland and East Contra Costa, thus chalking up its second win in two-year college competition, October 29, at East Contra Costa.

Led by Paul Patton, a freshman, who won the race in 17 minutes, 23 seconds, the team defeated Oakland 23 to 35 and East Contra Costa 23 to 64. Two other men, Blake Westman and Ray Batz placed third and fourth, respectively, among the top five placers.

Block SF Starts Recruiting Drive As Group Honors 'Triple Threat' Coach

Block SF Society members honored Roy Diederichsen, who coaches soccer, tennis and boxing here, on October 18. Diederichsen showed movie films of the 1952 USF-Stanford soccer game and also an international game between Germany and Belgium, which differed in several ways from the style played in the United States.

Block SF President Larry Beldon addressed the members present and spoke of the drive currently in progress to have all letter-winners on the campus become active members of the society.

In order to be an active member and take part in all of the organization's functions, a letter winner must pay only 50 cents for an active member card. A Block SF winner on each college varsity team will soon be appointed as a representative of the society and his respective team.

Early preparations for social activity this semester are being discussed by society officers. Included on the calendar of events will be a possible weekend snow trip, which should prove to be an enjoyable time, that is if no broken bones are included.

Stockton's Loss Good Omen For Big Eight

RAMBLINGS

By Nick Peters

Conner, Owens Bring Out Tittle's Ability

AFTER four weeks of Big Eight Conference grid play, a very healthy situation was evident. Three of the league's eight squads were deadlocked for the loop leadership with identical 3-1 records. A league in which so many teams are somewhat equal in talent often provides good exciting football, where one particular play could win or lose a championship.

Fan support is the ultimate a team can receive as a reward for being on top; therefore, that extra backing just might be the uplift the Rams need in their quest for the crown.

In one of our earlier columns we stated that Stockton was far superior to any other team in the conference. (After it humiliated the college outfit 24-6.) At this time we take back our blind statement, since the Mustangs were upended by Modesto two weeks ago.)

If the college eleven can come up with a victory against the "dark horse" Modestans in its homecoming contest there's a good chance that it'll go all the way. If team spirit means anything in winning ball games, the Rams will do great, since the support of the suited personnel has increased considerably with every encounter.

• • •

Despite the fact that the San Francisco 49'ers are only fielding a $750,000 backfield, (with John Henry Johnson traded to Detroit), the local pros have been faring quite well in the play for pay circuit.

Defensive halfback Bill Stits, obtained in the Lion barter, has proved to be a more than adequate replacement for the retired Rex Berry, giving the 49'ers the edge in the deal. Another newcomer, linebacker Marv Matuszac, obtained from the Philadelphia Eagles, shows no signs of brotherly love, consistently knocking down opposing ball carriers.

We have always regarded Y. A. Tittle as one of the professional football's greatest field generals, contrary to the opinions of many fans, who termed him "inadequate."

Prior to 1957 he had only three reliable receivers in Billy Wilson, Gordy Soltau and Hugh McElhenny, (with Soltau not a threat on the long pass and Mac out in several instances with injuries), whereas now he has added glue-fingered Clyde Conner and R. C. Owens to this capable trio.

With McElhenny in as halfback, Owens at flanker back, and Conner and Wilson at ends, the 49'ers possess the best four-man pass catching aggregation in pro ball.

In the past two seasons, considered off years for the locals, Mr. Tittle was receiving little or no pass protection from his "star" linemen, (i.e., linemen who were receiving the high wages of "stars," but were not putting out the performance that their high salary demanded).

This season, however, Messrs. Nomellini, Toneff, Henke, Powell, et al, are all living up to their prestige, earning their pay, and are "stars" in every sense of the word.

• • •

Even though the pro grid season is still young, we'll stick our neck out and pick the 49'ers to cop the Western Division title in the tough NFL. After all, it's their turn, isn't it?

We're not REALLY thinking that pro grid might be fixed, but we still can't believe that a team can lose by 58-27 to a team one week, then bounce back to whip that particular outfit 23-20 in their next engagement.

By the way, the two teams are playing in Los Angeles Sunday.

Beldon Proposes Award Plans For College Athletes

Larry Beldon, Men's Athletic Commissioner here, last week proposed three changes in the present athletic award system here.

1. Recognition of all the college's athletes at future athletic awards banquets.

2. The awarding of jackets to letter-winning athletes here.

3. A new system of coordinating campus activities and athletic events.

Beldon deplored the fact that under the Associated Student constitution, athletes who are not due to receive awards are not permitted to attend athletic awards banquets here.

To win an award, an athlete must play a certain amount of time in actual competition during the season.

"Under this ruling," Beldon commented, "many players who remain with a team all season, seeing a sizeable share of action but not meeting the required playing time, do not quite qualify for awards and therefore are not invited to the post-season awards banquets."

"The men who play on a team all season but happen to be relegated to a second-string position deserve much more than to be barred from attending the banquets. Since these members represent only a small portion of each team, it would not be difficult, but very practical, to invite all team members."

Beldon advocates an amendment to the constitution to serve this purpose.

Pointing to the fact that this college is the only one in the Big Eight Conference that does not award athletic jackets to letter-winners, Beldon proposed another constitutional change—one that would provide for the awarding of blocks in the athlete's first year of competition and jackets in the second year.

He feels that a jacket, in addition to the block, is a most appropriate reward for a man who has represented the college in two years of intercollegiate sports competition.

The commissioner's third recommendation concerned the discovery of weaknesses in the coordination of campus activities and athletic events.

Babe Ruth recorded a 3-0 pitching slate in World Series play.

Soccer Team To Meet Cal Aggies

The Cal Aggies, this year's new addition to the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference, and the Ram eleven will clash Saturday at 10 a.m. in the Balboa Soccer Stadium.

Ex-Ram Toni Quiteno, who made All-American while playing for the college last year, will lead an Aggie team called by the experts "a tough opponent." They beat the Rams 5-2 in a practice game held during the 1956 season, "but things will be different this year," Coach Roy Diederichsen said. "We are in second place in the league with a 3-1-1 won-lost record," he added.

On October 26, the Rams' hopes for a shot at the championship took further steps as they defeated the Stanford Indians, 3-1, on their own field. All of the college's goals were scored in the first half, while the Cardinals placed their lone tally in the final frame.

Ten minutes after the game started, Bryan Saasta, the Ram right wing, opened the scoring with a terrific header on a pass from center half Al Morales.

Moments later, center forward Richard Prydz broke away from Stanford's fullbacks to place the second marker in favor of the Rams. The third score also came from the boot of Prydz, when he blasted the Indians' net on a penalty kick, as the second quarter finished.

Never in trouble, the college played under heat rather than under pressure. The weather was hot, a Ram kicker commented, and that probably caused weak spots in some of the Rams' generally brilliant combinations.

Sacramento's Panthers Topple Rams From League Lead With Impressive 16 To 7 Triumph

By Bryant Cohn

The highly-ranked Rams of City College romped onto the gridiron last Friday night expecting a comparatively easy triumph over the Panthers of Sacramento; however, an eager and skillful Panther ballclub, led by halfbacks Ralph Burford and Franklin Robison, proved to be too much for the Rams as they went down to defeat 16-7.

The loss dropped the Rams into second place in Big Eight standings with a 2-2 record, one game off the pace of Stockton, Santa Rosa, and Modesto, who are tied for the league lead.

Sacramento, dominating the ball game from the kickoff to the final echo of the pistol shot, was fast in scoring the first tally. The college, losing the toss of the coin, kicked off to Sacramento. It then took the Panthers only three plays to place the ball on the Rams' 5-yard line. On the very next play, 155-lb. halfback Burford plunged over the goal line, hitting pay dirt for 6.

The Rams, who were plagued by four fumbles during the evening, failed at whatever they attempted. Failing to cover much ground, Larry Beldon, the Ram quarterback, attempted a 35-yard field goal that fell short by about 15 yards. At the end of the first quarter, the scoreboard read 7-0 in favor of Sacramento.

With the second quarter two minutes, 59 seconds old, the Panthers once again tallied. They drove all the way to the City 3, where Robison smashed over for the TD.

Larry Beldon, throwing a rash of passes, saw each one fall to the turf incomplete. The Rams' running attack was equally as ineffective, as the Panthers stopped them cold. So for the second straight quarter, the Rams remained scoreless. Halftime score—Sacramento 14, Rams 0.

A safety on the second half kick-off gave the Panthers an additional two points. Beldon played deep safety man. He received the kick-off in the end zone, stepping over the goal. He then stepped back into the end zone and touched the ball down, as a host of Sacramento tacklers hit him. Result—safety.

Dave Tyree, right half, and Roger Grimes, left half, started compiling yardage that set up the lone Ram td.

With 4½ minutes remaining in the third quarter, the Rams' td came when on the Panthers' 15, Beldon faded back, spotted W[illegible] in the end zone, passed and connected for the score. A bad pass back from center forced Beldon to pass for the extra point, again to Lawrence.

Credit must be given to the entire defensive team, regardless of the score, because they played a terrifically hard-fought game. Guards Dick Erler and Carl Mitchell played especially well. Line score:

CCSF	0	0	7	0	—	7
Sacramento	7	7	2	0	—	16

Scoring: City College of San Francisco—Touchdowns: Lawrence (15-yard pass from Beldon); Conversion: Lawrence (pass from Beldon). Sacramento Junior College—Touchdowns: Burford (5-yard run), Robison (3-yard plunge); Conversions: Zuneza 2 (placements). Safety: Rams' Beldon tackled in end zone by host of tacklers.

Zany Activities To Highlight Hell Week For Pledges

By Jerry Redford

Pledge Week is again upon the campus. The zany activities of the many fraternity pledges and the loud, incoherent songs of the pledges trying to outdo each other, have once more enveloped the campus.

At 7:30 a.m. Monday morning it all began. Brothers and pledges of the 19 fraternities and sororities that participate in Pledge Week began the first day of a five-day initiation program. Assembled will be more than 200 pledges, dressed in the traditional outfit of that group. Outfits are designed so that the group's colors are displayed, and individual groups can be recognized.

Apparel of some of the fraternities include dark suits, yellow ties, and black berets for Alpha Kappa Rho; dark suits and green ties for Gamma Phi Ypsilon; dark suits, red ties and red and white caps for Beta Tau; suits, ties, and red and yellow caps for Beta Phi Beta, and blue and grey sport suits with blue ties, with the pledge captain wearing a blue helmet for Alpha Sigma Delta.

Apparel for sorority pledges include black skirts, white blouses with matching caps for Gamma Kappa Beta; red skirts, white blouses and red and white caps for Theta Tau; navy blue skirts and middy blouses, with big red bows in their hair for Phi Beta Rho, and yellow skirts, white blouses, and yellow and white caps for the Zeta Chi's.

Main activities for the sororities for this week of weeks is the singing of songs, bringing of food for the future sisters, carrying of books, proposing to fraternity brothers, and generally doing whatsoever the sisters desire.

Fraternities follow much the same program, except a little more strenuously. They will carry banners, sing songs, march around the campus, run races, propose to sorority sisters, gather data (for the little black books of brothers, and future reference), along with varied evening projects.

The finale of the fraternity activities will be Friday during college hour, when the semi-annual competitive games will resume. They will be held on the lawn next to Smith Hall, spectators being requested to sit on the lawn north of the Redwood Ram.

Games will include a pie eating contest, where one pledge from each group will have to finish a pie without the use of his hands, a balloon blowing contest, the largest balloon that doesn't burst winning the contest and a footrace around the campus.

Pistol Teams To Wear Emblems

For the first time members of the Campus Police pistol team will wear emblems representative of the college next month. Emblems are awards of qualification and consist of the letters CCSF in red and white above crossed pistols. Emblems will arrive sometime in the middle of November, Geraldine Rush, criminology recording secretary, said.

Next pistol match is scheduled for Sunday, December 1, at the Oakland Pistol Club, according to Fred Fitzgerald, criminology instructor here.

Members of the first team are Captain Marion Timm, Tom Severson, Lou Paglierani and Jim Keane. They are coached by Fitzgerald. Members of the second team are: captain, Ralph Brown, Miss Rush, Ed Nelson and Joe Karp. They are coached by Barry Wysling.

Revised Club Charters Effective Until 1960

New editions of the college clubs and organizations charters, which will be in effect from the present time to 1960, were posted on the bulletin board outside of the Registrar's office last week.

In accordance with the rules of the Club Activities Board, these charters were signed by ex-CAB President Bob Wendt and active President Jim Foster.

Currently on the CAB agenda is the plan for renovation of the paper-backed plaques now adorning the cafeteria. Foster last week urged clubs having titles to these plaques to replace any paper-backs with wooden frames, thereby adding to the life and appearance of the trophies.

Student Council Votes To Uphold 100% AS Rule; Agreement Permits Band To Continue Participation

By Lois Cosden

Student Council members voted to uphold the "100 per cent Associated Student membership ruling" for the college band last Thursday, as recommended by the special committee appointed October 22. No settlement was made, however, to accommodate non-college member musicians to attend the games.

The campus budget was released by Linda McArdle, finance commissioner, when it was learned that the six abstaining members of the band agreed to earn their cards.

Jim Woods, special committee chairman, voiced his feeling that the resolution submitted by the committee did not reflect his own ideas.

"The band has not received its deserved recognition," he proclaimed. "Professional musicians from off-campus give their time playing for our games and sacrifice well-paid jobs to do it."

The general opinion was expressed that such members of the band should be considered guests when performing for the college. The answer was left to be realized at the next meeting of council.

On the agenda of the previous meeting was an introduction to guests Dolorence, a driver and Vivian Cornelius, class representatives of Student Government for Balboa High School. (AS President John Kelly and council members became hosts for the afternoon, showing the visitors the campus after the meeting.)

Returning to the orders of the day, committee chairmen were asked to contribute reports.

In this phase, Election Commissioner Ken Leland stated that the election kits were completed and invited questions.

"What is an election kit?" was asked by a cabinet member. Leland defined them as sets of rules, regulations and petitions for nominees. Their purpose is to furnish a more accurate method of checking a candidate's qualifications.

Inter-Fraternity Council President Bill Robison submitted a resolution asking the suspension of any fraternity lacking 15 active members in IFC, but left the door unlatched, adding that reinstatement could be secured the following semester.

An appropriate question arose. "How can they continue after having been dropped?" Robison replied that there would be no limitations up to Hell Week.

Woods then probed the administrative policy of sponsorship withdrawal from IFC. Inter-Sorority Council and Club Activities Board if any group lacked 15 members.

Dean Ralph Hillsman clarified the status of qualifications, stating that a sufficient student attendance in a class must justify teaching time. This is applicable only to organizations whose instructors collect teaching credits for the time allotted to the group. If an instructor is willing to devote time without credits, it is permissible to have a campus organization function.

CAB's right to take money classified for setting up booths on CAB Day was challenged. IFC and CAB will contribute facts stating the jurisdiction of each at the next meeting.

Students, Faculty To Get Free X-Rays

A mobile unit from the San Francisco Tuberculosis Association is at the college this week to take chest X-rays of students and faculty members.

These X-rays are required of all new students registered for this semester, according to Gloria Anderson, college nurse. Others may also take advantage of the opportunity of a free X-ray.

The unit will be parked between the gymnasiums through Thursday. Monday and yesterday were for men students and today and tomorrow for women students. On Friday the truck will be located in the driveway at the south end of Smith Hall to accommodate faculty members and all new students not participating in physical education classes. The hours are from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily.

Yell Contest For Ram Team Opens

Students are invited this week by the Publicity Committee to participate in the newly launched "Let's Have a Cheer" contest and submit an original yell for the Ram football team to the office of Ralph O. Hillsman, dean of Student Activities by 12 noon next Wednesday, November 13.

A winning cheer will be chosen by judges Flossita Badger and Robert Morton of the music department; Sherman Elworthy of the English department; Larry Beldon, Men's Athletic Commissioner; Diana Porter, Women Association president, and Don Baikie, Rally Commissioner.

This prize yell will be chanted for the first time by the college Rally Committee during college hour, Friday, November 15, preparatory to the Ram-San Mateo game. Location for presentation of the yell will be the courtyard adjoining Conol Hall.

Following this premiere, the yell will be chanted over the KCSF radio station.

The winner of the contest will also receive a cash prize of $25, donated from the Publicity Committee fund.

Purpose of this contest is to instill interest among the students in an effort to get them into the stands at home games.

Publicity Committee leaders emphasized that there will be only one week to get all entries into Dean Hillsman's office, in order that the winning cheer can be announced in time for the Ram-San Mateo football game.

Nine College Officers To Take Part In CJCSGA Conference To Be Held At Sheraton-Palace Hotel On Nov. 14-16

By Don Seratti

Nine students from the college will be among the more than 400 two-year college officers participating in the California Junior College Student Government Association conference scheduled for November 14-16 at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel in San Francisco.

The conference, a once-a-semester event, will offer representatives from 61 California junior colleges the opportunity to exchange ideas, coordinate activities, and solve mutual problems, according to Bob Varni, CJCSGA president. Serving as hosts for the affair are College of San Mateo, Menlo College, San Jose Junior College, West Contra Costa Junior College, East Contra Costa Junior College, Oakland Junior College and this college.

Theme of the conference will be "The Seven C's," representing the following seven objectives of the participants: cooperation, construction, combination, contribution, coordination, conduct, and creation.

Varni is one of four students from the college acting as state officers for the forthcoming conference. Joining Varni as conference officers are Walt Schultz, parliamentarian; Eugenia Lary, secretary, and Jim Woods, information service chairman. Of the 11 conference officers chosen from the 61 participating two-year colleges, this college has four.

Serving as conference delegates from the college are John Kelly, Bev Schroth, Bob Rodriguez, Brower Dimond and Larry Vargo. These delegates will represent the college in various workshops dealing with student government, campus activities, publications, finance and athletics, respectively.

On Thursday afternoon, November 14, the representatives will be welcomed to the conference by Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, on behalf of the seven Bay Area two-year colleges which are hosting the conference.

Dr. Glen Seeborg of the University of California, a winner of the Nobel Prize for chemistry, will be the guest speaker. He will deliver the keynote address.

Friday morning, November 15, will mark the convening of the various workshops, or committees, comprised of one representative from each college. The workshops, each containing about 60 members, will weigh information received from the representatives, exchange pertinent ideas and finally submit a report of their findings to the general assembly.

The general assembly, which convenes on Friday afternoon following the conclusion of all workshops, is a meeting of all representatives to the conference, and is presided over by Varni, the CJCSGA president. This huge body will hear proposals of the various workshops, engage in discussions and act on the proposals. The proposals, if passed by the general assembly, will be forwarded through proper channels to appropriate authorities for consideration, Varni said.

Present at the conference will be presidents of the attending colleges and public school superintendents from all districts in California. Harold Spears, San Francisco Superintendent of Public Schools, will represent this region.

Among the entertainment to be provided at the conference's talent show on Friday night is an unusual marching act by Alpha Phi Epsilon fraternity here.

Air Stewardess Jobs Open To Women Here

All women students interested in airline stewardess positions are requested to report to Joseph Amori, director of placement here, in S-188 this week.

A United Airline recruitment team, consisting of an airline stewardess and a personnel specialist, will be on the campus Friday, November 15, during college hour, to discuss the stewardess training program and conduct personal interviews.

Each applicant is required to file an application at the College Placement Office before she will be considered and scheduled for a personal interview with the official stewardess representative.

Last year 53 women graduates of the college obtained employment as airline stewardesses with these major airlines: United, American, Pan-American, California Eastern, Trans-World and National.

Steambaths in America as a means of curing disease were advocated in 1796 by Samuel Thomson.

Pledging Antics Dominate Hell Week Activities

By Jerry Redford

DOMINATING this week's fraternity and sorority scene is Hell Week. Pledges are running around with little boxes of goodies, dressed in their group's respective outfit, and singing their repertoire of zany songs.

Newman Club members are currently making plans for their annual dance, which will be held Friday, November 15, in Smith Hall, entitled this year Harvest Hop. Dress for the affair will be cotton dresses for the women and levi's and a plaid shirt for the men.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity held its second affair last Saturday night for prospective pledges and held final interrogation for pledges the following night. Both affairs were termed successful by President Larry Vargo. Pledging activities are now in full swing.

Beta Phi Beta fraternity held its interrogation at the home of Frank Rogers last week, at which time final plans for Pledge Week were completed, as well as the swearing in of pledges. Plans are also being made by the group for their dance to be held soon.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority held its pledge instruction meeting last Sunday afternoon at the home of Susanna Crim. Monday night a general meeting of pledges was held at the home of Marilyn Schoolman.

Kappa Phi sorority held its traditional Chinese dinner last Sunday at the Forest Lodge. The pledge mistress of the sorority is Brenda Schwarz, who is presently making plans for the remaining few days of Pledge Week.

Theta Tau sorority sisters had a very successful coffee preference hour last Tuesday night. Pledges are dressed in red and white and are busy serving the Theta sisters in every possible way.

Members of the Flying Club are currently learning the process of flying a plane. It is expected that many of the group will be receiving their own private plane licenses soon. Faculty sponsor of the club is John Lippett, who is a member of the Air Force Reserve and has his own plane.

Flower Students To Stage Exhibit

A display in the arrangement of flowers and plants will be exhibited in the Science Building this week by members of the floriculture classes of the college.

The bulk of the arrangement will be accomplished by Edward Schuster, president of the Horticultural Society of the college, and John Isaacs, vice-president. This display will be created entirely by the students, with no direct supervision.

Raymond Peterson, floriculture instructor, praised his students, explaining that many return after graduation and in one way or another help the aspiring horticulturist and floriculturist.

An example of this is Donald J. McMichael, a former graduate and present owner and operator of Don's Garden Service. McMichael is close to the college and is in a position to help, which he does by giving horticulture students a chance for practical experience and a salary.

These former graduates will be meeting soon at the home of Harry E. Nelson, floriculture instructor, in an effort to form an organization so they can help the present students as well as exchange ideas among themselves.

CJCSGA Conference Opens At Palace

Band Presents College Hour Pops Concert

A pops concert by the college band will be featured during college hour, from 10:40 to 11:20 a.m. this Friday in the library, according to Meyer M. Cahn, band instructor here.

First selection of the 40-minute program will be Don Gillis' Abe Lincoln, featuring Carl Mayo as narrator of the Gettysburg Address. Mayo played Shylock in the Drama Club's recent production of The Merchant Of Venice. The band will provide accompaniment for this reading.

Following the narration will be a classical Latin American number by Frank Erickson. Deanna Thomas will then present a piano solo of Charles Williams' Dream Of Olwein. The band's playing of Dvorak's Fifth Symphony, Bach's Prelude And Fugue in D Minor, and the overture to Guys and Dolls will conclude the day's program.

"All students and instructors are welcome to attend this performance," Cahn stated. "There will be music to suit all tastes."

Class Drops Hit All-Time Record

Total number of courses dropped up to the September 30 deadline this semester is probably the largest in the history of the college, the office of the registrar reported yesterday.

Some 2,229 courses have been dropped and 2,228 have been added, according to Mary Jane Learnard, registrar; thus the breakdown reveals that only one more course has been dropped than added. The total changes during the first two weeks of this semester were 4,257, she added.

The tabulation shows that some students have filed as many as six petitions for change of course.

On the current situation, Miss Learnard commented, "What were students thinking of when they registered?" adding that they should think before registering.

Since no fee is charged for dropping a course or changing a program, Miss Learnard urged that students cooperate in the future by carefully considering just what courses they want and don't want. This saves a great deal of time and "juggling" of schedules, she said.

Four Major Problems To Be Studied At Bi-Annual Meet Slated To Start Tomorrow

By Don Seratti

Honor systems, scholarships, fraternities and the two-party system of student government are but a few of the numerous topics to be discussed when the bi-annual California Junior College Student Government Association conference opens tomorrow at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel in San Francisco.

The college will serve as host for the affair, in conjunction with six other northern California junior colleges—College of San Mateo, Menlo College, San Jose Junior College, West Contra Costa Junior College, East Contra Costa Junior College, and Oakland Junior College.

The college will be amply represented at the conference as it furnishes four officers and five delegates. Officers are Bob Varni, CJCSGA president; Walt Schultz, parliamentarian; Eugenia Lary, secretary; and Jim Woods, information service chairman.

Acting as delegates to the various workshops are John Kelly, Bev Schroth, Bob Rodriguez, Brower Dimond and Larry Vargo.

Should an honor system be established in junior colleges, and if so, who would take disciplinary action against violators? Would a two-party system arouse interest in elections and student activities? Should national fraternities and sororities be established on two-year college campuses?

These questions and many others, all of considerable importance to students in two-year colleges throughout the state, will be given thorough treatment by separate workshop committees dealing specifically with student government, campus activities, publications, finance, and athletics.

"The conference, particularly the workshop sessions, gives us the opportunity to compare our student government program with those of other two-year colleges," said Varni, who has served as delegate and delegation chairman at the last two conferences, held in Sacramento and Los Angeles.

Following the welcoming address tomorrow afternoon by Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, and the keynote address by Dr. Glen Seeborg of the University of California, the various workshops will get down to business as they discuss matters of mutual concern to all colleges represented, and submit reports of their findings to the general assembly.

The general assembly, comprising all officers and delegates, will hear proposals of the workshops, engage in discussions, and act on the proposals.

Five To Represent AWS At Stanford

One adviser and four students will represent the college at the Inter-Collegiate Associated Women Student convention at Stanford University this Saturday.

The adviser will be Mary Golding, dean of women here. She will be accompanied to the convention by Darlene Enfield, AWS president; Margo Erhart, Marlene Hannon and Carol Olson, who will serve as delegates.

This college was the only two-year institution in northern California to receive an invitation to the convention, Miss Enfield said.

AWS members will also act as hostesses and assist with registration during the California Junior College Student Government Association conference to be held at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel in San Francisco beginning tomorrow.

WALT SCHULTZ will be one of the three regional State Parliamentarians during the November 14-16 CJCSGA meeting to which the college is playing host.

Newman Club To Present Harvest Hop Dance Friday

Harvest Hop, presented by the Newman Club, will be held this Friday evening from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight in Smith Hall, Bill Tristant, club president, announced last week.

The dance will comply with its theme, Tristant said, by country style dress, and decorations will also comply with the November theme, with autumn leaves and gay colors. Music for the dance will be supplied by Charlie Price and his band.

Admission is 75 cents stag and $1.25 drag. Tickets may be bought from club officers or at the door Friday night. Officers of the club are Carol Devine, vice-president; Donald Nuti, treasurer; Jacqueline Ruggeri, recording secretary; Lucie Ellis, corresponding secretary, and Tristant.

While the band takes a break, two dance acts will be performed, Tristant said, an authentic Spanish dance and a solo by La Vone Silver.

The Newman Club, with branches in colleges all over California, is a club for Catholic students, although anyone is welcome to join, Tristant declared. The club recently sponsored a skating party and has many future activities planned. The club meets every Friday during college hours in S-204.

AGS's Scholastic Coaches Announced

Alpha Gamma Sigma scholastic honor society members, who have volunteered their coaching services this semester during college hours in room S-113, are Frances Edmonston, for Latin 1, Mathematics D1, D2 and Chemistry IA, IB; Marilyn Hoedt, for English grammar; Ray Joe for Mathematics for Electric Laboratory; Patricia Maxwell for Business 63, English and Beginners' Math; Patricia Owens for Math I and Physics 2A; Bob Rhomberg for Math 3A, 3B and Physics 4A, and Jick Yee for Math.

AGS is known by another title to its membership. It is called Arete Gnosis Sophrosyne. Translating Greek into English, arete means good character, gnosis denotes knowledge, and sophrosyne, sound judgment.

These synonyms were explained by AGS adviser, William Richardson, for release to students for the first time last week.

Freedom Highway To Be Friday's Feature

Freedom Highway, in color and sound, will be featured in the college hour film series this Friday in S-136, Madison W. Devlin, audio visual aids instructor here, announced recently.

Viewers are taken aboard a bus for a tour through the historic spots in the United States.

"This is the first showing at the college," Devlin said, "and it should be a very interesting adventure."

Council Considers Transcript Plans

By Lois Cosden

Credit for participation in student government to be applied to official transcripts occupied the attention of the Student Council last week.

Achievement of the transcript credit entry for service in the college ruling body is proposed to be based on a point system. The initial decision of how these points are to be determined is the task at hand. The second question under examination is the one of naming the minimum number of counts to be required for transcript recording.

"Judging the quality of service to the college is our first consideration," Associated Student President John Kelly stated. "Our purpose is to better the college first; ourselves, second. Judgment will be meted equally to council members enrolled for credit and those who are not."

Kelly added that he hoped the point system would inspire the council and cabinet to top their past performances in the government.

Two categories were passed. Class A, equal to five points, include the President of AS, President of the Northern Regional Conference and President of the State Junior College Student Government Associations and Vice-president of AS. Class B includes the Presidents of AMS and AWS, and Sophomore and Freshman Class Presidents. The latter group is entitled to four points.

Larry Beldon was appointed the new chairman of the special committee on 100 per cent ruling, replacing Jim Woods, who resigned on the grounds that the group was "too large, unwieldly and stalemated."

Beldon chose a new committee, naming Don Baikie, Roy Buckman, Lois Cosden, Jerry Redford, Stan Rosenberg and Bev Schroth.

A revised resolution was studied after the meeting, which Beldon will submit to a later council meeting. It pertains to allowing the band to invite guest musicians to play the college games, a question not settled following discussion of band problems two weeks ago.

Jack Patterson, chairman of the special committee on air conditioning, announced that a petition is being circulated to aim for the procurement of a cooling plant for the Smith Hall cafeteria. Eight per cent of student body signatures are required for the list. Patterson has obtained 450 to date.

Upon the recommendation of Linda McArdle, Finance chairman, the Publications Board was allocated $29.46 from the campus budget undistributed fund for the purpose of seven All-American and Key earned by last year's Guardsman Editorial Staff for its All-American rating.

A transfer of the now off-campus Phi Rho Pi, debate society, funds was suggested. Since the money is frozen in the college bank, Dean Ralph Hillsman advised that an inquiry be directed to Henry Leff, coach for the former team.

Darlene Enfield, AWS president, reported the attendance of 700 at the fashion show and tea November 6 in the Cloud Hall library.

The council invites all members of the AS to its sessions, which convene every Tuesday and Thursday at 12 o'clock in B-2.

To discover how it feels to be in movies, ask five City College students.

Working as extras for a short sprint on Columbia's forthcoming motion picture of Lineup were Paul Graves, Garyth Jones, Jack Kletzman, Philip Rupprecht and Bob Seeberger.

The reason for the flashing five being picked for Lineup's ice skating sequence is understandable. They are all advanced course students at the Legg School of Ice Skating, and it was through this school that they received the opportunity to strut their stuff.

The actual shooting took place at Sutro's Ice Skating Rink; and in a few other places, among them Pier 47 and Bayshore Highway.

Work began for the students one October day at 8 a.m. and ended at 5 p.m. The following morning they reported for work again and that evening film careers ended for four of the skaters. Graves, however, was not to be stopped there and managed to put in two more days, after which Graves hung up his skates, at least as far as the picture was concerned.

The student gain in this are easily seen—an officially excused holiday from college, experience, more skating practice and, as Graves put it, "The easiest money I ever earned."

Poet Rhymes With 'Trouble' In Nicaragua

By Pastor Valle-Garay

"Managua Nicaragua is a beautiful town. You buy an hacienda for a few pesos down . . ." So went the popular song of some years ago about the little Central American republic where people loved to siesta and write.

Accordingly, there are other doings going on in the soil known as the "land of lakes and volcanoes." Poet is a word which rarely rhymes with "trouble" but there, where anything can happen, poets prove the exception-to-the-rule.

More than a year ago the country's president was assassinated. Last month the nation commemorated (celebrated, some cynics say) the anniversary of his death. There were Masses to the man's memory; no work, a national holiday, and big talks about how good he had been while he was alive, while the rumors spread that the 20-years-in-power dictator was much better where he was at the time. Wherever he could be!

If this was true, no one dared shout it, for the gentleman's son had been "elected" to replace his father in the nation's top chair, with his other son commanding the army of Nicaragua —both of whom are very thoughtful about their father's progressive work, and not too lenient toward free-thinking critics.

To climax the commemoration (or is it celebration?) the government's newspaper, Novedades, owned by the Somozas, the presidential family, promoted a contest among poets with the intention of exalting its late boss' virtues (?).

An award of 1000 cordobas (U.S. $125) was offered to the best poem, and a few days later the winner's work appeared on the newspaper's first page, with a build-up of a "masterpiece" and the name of its composer, Jose Santos Reyes, printed proudly in 36-point type.

Nevertheless, Reyes didn't show to pick up his money. Novedades and the judges, among them Nicaragua's Secretary of Education, begged publicly for him to be seen and known to pick up his prize. Still nothing. The public began to wonder, and suddenly the back copies of the newspapers were being bought at two and three hundred times its original cost.

Here the word poet rhymed beautifully with trouble. Every one of them denied being one or having ever written a word of poetry as, by truck loads and by orders of the armed forces' chief, the bohemians were forcedly jailed for questioning in a desperate attempt to get hold of Reyes, name which by now appears to be fictitious.

Under the circumstances it had better be, Reyes' composition, a literary filigree—some say, is nothing but an acrostic in praise of Rigoberto Lopez, the man who had killed Somoza, and an exaltation of this act.

Discovery of the prank by the sons of Somoza, Novedades' editor sang no more songs about Nicaragua's haciendas, or money down, for that matter. He apparently didn't have time to sell his, and fled, or was fired, from the newspaper. Destination, San Francisco, where editors don't make these mistakes—for poets and trouble don't rhyme here.

Conlan To Speak At California Student Government Conference

TOMORROW EVENING at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel, Dr. Louis G. Conlan, speaking in behalf of this college as principal host of the November 14-16 California Junior College Student Government Association, as well as the six other Bay Area two-year colleges who are co-hosts of this conference, will welcome 400 delegates from 61 colleges to this semester's meeting.

As the main host of the conference and a noted leader in guiding and engineering progressive projects within the CJCSGA framework, this college may be expected to spark important moves again in the various workshop discussions of the present meet.

Subjects which will be considered by the delegates range from recreation and inter-college athletics to the question of having national fraternities and sororities on two-year college campuses.

This last topic should be of general interest to all students at the college, as the establishment of national Greek letter organizations on the campus would mean a very different campus life for all. The debatable points of the idea are to be brought out in the discussions, as campus leaders from the whole state speak for and against the question.

Such important topics as these are generally resolved as a result of the fair and mature hearing each is given by the college student government representatives.

At this meeting City College is represented by nine students, four of whom are serving as state officers for the meet.

These students will be contributing in behalf of City College considerably more help, information and experience than will the representatives of most others of the participating colleges.

While the representatives from this college can be proud of their institution's accomplishments, they still have many pointers and much "know-how" to be accepted from delegates of other colleges.

Shots At Ramdom — Misogrammarianism What The "+$¢!" Is It?

By Tom Tatera

TRYING desperately to revive his bashful 1 p.m. class, a highly capable political science instructor at the college has been prodding them on with questions like "Who discovered America?" and "Where do soybeans come from?" His only reward is a unison of "Who-am-I? What am-I-doing here?" stares. The instructor's feelings towards this mass movement of misgrammarianism were expressed in a pre-midterm remark.

"You have two days to finish 244 pages from the textbook," he smiled at the empty faces. "I think now is the time to starting reading."

BEANIE CAPS and balloons! This was last week, Hell Week, at Smith Hall proving grounds. And the joint was jumping. Well, at least the poor pledges were kept moving, because of the subtle persuasion of innocent-eyed fraternity bosses, who held whips in one hand and stopwatches in the other. All good clean college fun, though, and someday the pledges will be glad they dared initiation. Those who are still living will, anyway.

SPARKLING RED soda and cookies, the way mother tried to make them but just couldn't, were the keynotes of the November 1 Student-Faculty social hour. And woe to the rooms which lacked a sufficient supply of refreshments. Even their hosts and hostesses became deserters, fleeing to those classrooms where the punch and cookies flowed more abundantly. Let's face it; you can't be social on an empty stomach.

Experimental Techniques

WHEN ONE IS HAPPY, the sun seems to shine a little brighter. On an unhappy day the clouds seem even more depressing. "Despair" is a typical example of the type of photograph being displayed at the current exhibit in Cloud Hall. This photograph depicts the world of this young man disintegrating about him as he falls deeper into despair. It subordinates the bare subject to the idea which the photographer is trying to put over. —Exhibit photo by Bob Jacobs.

Bohemianism Drives First Wedge In Conservative Faculty Row Here With Off Beat Photographic Works

By Kevin Mullen

Off-beat art forms now bedeck the otherwise sedate walls of Cloud Hall's faculty row. Bohemianism has driven its first wedge into these conservative walls in the form of the latest photography exhibit. "The experimental and unusual techniques of photography."

"Some will dislike it and others will appreciate and enjoy it, but everyone will have some opinion," Emmett Smith, photography instructor, says of his current exhibit.

The exhibit is designed to show that the photographer can go beyond the straight forward approach and delve into the realm of heightened expression in art.

When doing straight photography, the photographer is limited in that his camera indiscriminately tells the story of what it sees. By means of these special techniques, however, the photographer can achieve a particular effect by concentrating on or highlighting the most important aspect of the subject.

In addition to the experimental value of this type of photography, the results have a decorative and timeless value. If the picture shown above were presented in its untouched form, an observer 20 years from now would be impressed first of all by the fact that the subject's clothes were 20 years out of date. Now that it has been treated, however, the most impressive aspect of the picture at this or any other time is that the world of this young man is falling down around him.

In any event, the results of these experiments present a weird picture to the untrained eye. Some of the unusual pictures are accidental and others are by design, but each one tells a story or portrays a different device that is employed by photographers to achieve these meaningful effects.

For the curious, half the enjoyment of viewing the exhibit will be an attempt to solve how the special effects of the pictures were achieved.

Lost Articles Fill Closet 3

Room S-149 is familiar to many students as the room where they receive their re-admit slip to class after a Monday "cold" or a Friday "sore throat."

This room is more; when one of the closets (closet number 3) is to be opened, it makes Fibber McGee's closet mild in comparison. Inside are three earrings, none of which match, one left handed glove, one black shoe, sweaters, a red belt, various scarves, an expensive compass placed carefully in a red box, a man's charcoal straw hat, a man's grey raincoat and enough textbooks to rival the Ramporium—well almost enough.

None of those who occupy S-149 suffer from kleptomania; it's just that S-149 serves as the "lost and found." Death and taxes may be certain, but so are the chances of losing something which occurs more often. Losing things has been going on quite a while, ever since Adam and Eve lost a certain garden. The only ones to lose things before Adam and Eve were the Russians.

But unlike Adam and Eve, all a student is required to do is come to S-149 and claim the lost article and continue on his merry way. Some students, of course, can be expected to get lost while attempting to find S-149.

Foresight

By Carol Harris

ONE of the most controversial and bitterly opposed issues concerning television today is Pay TV. Should there, or should there not be subscription television?

Exactly what is Pay TV? Pay TV is a system through which those who subscribe will buy programs. These programs, such as first-run movies, would not be available on Free TV.

For those who wonder how this can be accomplished, the solution is simple. The sight and sound TV signals will be broadcast in scrambled form to make them unintelligible to non-subscribers. This is the crux of the situation; you pay to have the signals unscrambled.

According to TV Guide, this system is already in operation in Bartlesville, Oklahoma. Subscribers receive 13 first-run major movies each month for a fee of $9.50 per family. These TV signals travel on wires, not through the air, so no Federal Communications permit is required.

Proponents of this system include the vested interests—those who stand to gain such as sports promoters. Opponents include the movie theaters, networks and stations. So bitter is their opposition most of the major networks now include in their identification signals words like "THIS IS TELEVISION ELK, FREE TV."

One of the reasons networks are opposed to Pay TV is because it would probably cause Free TV shows' ratings to drop. As a result, the sponsors would withdraw their sponsorship, resulting in program elimination.

Another major factor involved is the decrease in free programs the pay system would evoke. Since the existing channels will be the ones to carry over the air the Pay TV programs, it is obvious some of the free programs would have to be dropped. A station cannot carry two programs simultaneously. This makes absurd the claim that Pay TV will not replace Free TV; it will merely supplement it.

The most potent argument against Pay TV is that it would limit the use of television to those persons who could afford to pay for it. Consequently, the man who works in the factory and has six children could not afford this type of entertainment. He had to purchase the set on the installment plan and is still paying for it. Therefore, he cannot afford the extra payment each month Pay TV would carry subscription programs.

General David Sarnoff summed it up by stating, "Our American principle of freedom to listen and freedom to look is chiefly responsible for the growth of the most dynamic industry in the world. It has made the American people the best informed in the world and it has done so without discriminating between the poor and the rich."

Networks have labeled as phony the statement people will see programs not now offered. New motion pictures, Broadway plays, grand operas, concerts and sports events would be televised. The networks claim, aside from the first-run movies, these programs are now being shown on Free TV. Pay TV would only accomplish stealing shows which are now being produced on Free TV.

The proponents' biggest claim is that since people will be paying for TV, there would be no need for commercials. This, too, is a half truth. If a special program is to be telecast, and an advertiser offers to pay half the expenses if his commercials are shown and so lower the cost to the viewing public, it is quite certain the public would insist on the commercials.

There are many pros and cons surrounding this situation. Despite the loud shouting being done by the opposing forces, there is only one person who will make the final decision. That person is you, the television viewer.

Ray Batz, Blake Westman Top Performers On Cross Country Team, Vie For Track Records

Ray Batz and Blake Westman, two of the college's top long distance runners, are now setting the pace for the young, Ram cross country team.

Batz, a 20-year-old, blond, rangy, distance machine, is a product of Balboa High School. While at Balboa, he ran the mile and scored a best time of 4:38. He also set that high school's record for its one and nine-tenths mile cross country course. He covered the distance in 9:45.

Since entering college the 6', 150-pound runner has become one of the team's top performers. He cut his prep time by four seconds and turned in a 4:34 mile, and then went on to run a 10:19 two-mile. When track season rolls around again this spring, he will have as a target the two-mile record, which was set last year at 9:45.

Batz is a physical education major planning to transfer to San Francisco State. At present, he is a member of Gamma Phi Ypsilon.

Westman last year earned himself a reputation as the traveling companion of the college's two-mile record holder, Eddie Chavez. Westman was the second half of this feared two-mile one-two punch which proved invaluable to the Ram thinclads.

Westman, who did his prep running for Washington High School, ran the mile there in 4:54. Today, as a college runner, the stocky 5'11, 165-pound track ace has lowered his mile time to 4:35.7, and has turned in a strong 10:02 in the two-mile.

When spring rolls around again, Westman will have his heart set on breaking the mile record, which stands at 4:27.

Westman is 19, and is majoring in building and contracting.

Harriers Boast 3-0 Record In Loop Play

As the climax of the season draws near and the Ram cross country team conditioning has reached its peak, the prospects of winning the next three meets look good.

Thus far in their quest for an undefeated season, the men have been successful, presently holding a 3-0 record in two-year college competition.

A well-rounded schedule of out-of-town meets has been completed. Their last regularly scheduled meet was held last Friday, against Modesto College at Modesto.

Tom Fears, ex-LA Ram end, caught 18 passes against Green Bay on December 3, 1950.

Soccermen Hold USF To Deadlock In Major Upset

Closing what looked like the season against USF November 2, the college booters could have brought home a championship had the game not ended in a tie. Instead, the Rams will travel to Santa Clara this Saturday to face the last place Broncos on their field.

The Santa Clarans haven't been able to defeat the college eleven in about ten years. During their last meet in 1956, the Rams won 6-1.

Back into this year's action, the college kickers lost hopes of getting the 1957 title when they tied defending champion USF, 2-2, at the Balboa Soccer Stadium.

Nevertheless, the college's men played brilliant ball all the way through, dominating and constantly bottling up the Don defensive as center half Al Morales, candidate for All-Star honors, paced the Ram attack with precision passes, perfect defensive play and a 30-yard shot in the final frame which eventually saved the home squad from losing.

After the first quarter of the game went blank for both teams, Al Guerrero, the college's star forward, passed and dribbled past USF's fullbacks in one of the day's best actions to put the Rams ahead, 1-0.

Twenty minutes later Peter Wolf's header and Serge Brennan's penalty in the fourth and last quarter of the game gave USF the lead, with the score of 2-1, until Morales' dynamite-loaded kick blasted their net to produce the 2-2 tie, held through the over-time.

Oscar Gutierrez, a newcomer from Nicaragua, and Richard and Roland Prydz, in the offensive, with Ed Zelaya, fullback, were with Morales singled out by coach Roy Diederichsen for their outstanding performances.

Klemmer Expresses Views On Advantages Of Two-Year College Football Over Frosh Grid

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

High school football players face a problem of choice between entering a two-year college to gain grid experience or to enter a four-year college immediately and play freshman football before furthering their football careers as members of the big-time college varsity.

Which, then, is the best way for a standout high school performer with his eyes on the stars to turn, in order to prepare himself for the rigid competition with which he must tangle if he is to be of any value to the college of his choice? Should he move right into the big-time college of his dreams to compete as a freshman, or turn to the two-year college circuit for that experience, without which nearly every competitor in any sport is worthless?

Ram Coach Grover Klemmer, former stalwart halfback with the University of California's Golden Bears, as well as with Paul Brown's Great Lakes All-Star assemblage of football greats during the war years, was an honest with his answer to this question as anyone could ever be, despite the fact that his connection with two-year college ball over the last 12 years might tend to bias his opinion toward the cause of this particular institution.

First of all, he believes a man must have two things: guts and ability. Without those, no matter where he goes, he's a dead duck, and even the Lord Himself won't be able to make a ballplayer out of him.

Assuming that the player in question is possessed with these two essential requirements, the problem then arises, Klemmer declared, as to which is the best way to go about developing him into the final mold of a standout performer.

"What the whole thing seems to add up to is this," he said, "the player has only one of two reasonable possibilities. It's either enter the major college of his choice with the intention of playing freshman ball, or else enroll at a two-year college and build his talents to the point of noteworthiness through that institution."

There are many good arguments, both pro and con, on the part of each of these categories, Klemmer added, saying, "Many authorities on the subject advocate freshman ball at a university because, through this experience, the athlete in question is being constantly observed by the men for whom he will later perform, providing he eventually measures up to the athletic standards of the university.

"These coaches can correct his shortcoming, while at the same time developing his finer points, so that when the time for his appearance on the varsity roster arrives, he will find little or no difficulty in adapting himself to the type of game stressed."

The two-year college competitor, Klemmer believes, is at somewhat of a disadvantage in this department, as he "comes in cold," so to speak. In Klemmer's eyes, however, this means absolutely nothing, as the caliber of the two-year college ball a player has battled his way through, is so far above of the college freshman game, that one needs only to witness the two different fields once to realize this.

"There is nothing in the world that can take the place of real, honest ability to play the game well," Klemmer emphasized, "and a transfer who qualifies under this category, even though it may take a little more time, will certainly develop to the fullest extent of his potentialities at any university a lot faster than the freshman veteran who has been 'mothered' through." Ex-Rams Ollie Matson and Burl Toler, besides Joe Perry (who went right into the pro ranks from two-year Compton JC) serve as examples of the truth of this opinion.

George Blanda of the Chicago Bears had booted 156 consecutive PAT's prior to missing a conversion in the second game of the 1956 season.

RAMBLINGS

By Nick Peters

SOCCER is THE international game. After all, it's played in more than 80 nations, being the national pastime in most Asian, European, African and South American countries. We cannot overly emphasize the impact that soccer has on most of the world, noting that it's quite common to witness crowds of over 150,000 at foreign soccer games, while in the United States a crowd of 50,000 at an athletic event is considered big.

Next to USF, the Yankees of college soccer, there isn't a better team than the Ram soccer eleven. A good explanation for the fact that the college constantly maintains a top caliber squad is that the team is composed of a large number of foreign students who have played the sport as toddlers in their home country.

Americans have been raised to play baseball, basketball and football and, after becoming accustomed to these sports for several years, it naturally is hard for them to become interested in a game like soccer. However, this nation's large immigrant population and foreign student traffic insures that the game will grow and not decline in popularity.

A couple of Saturdays back the Ram squad performed the impossible. It stopped the unstoppable, tying USF 2-2. This was no fluke, since the boys really outplayed the mighty Dons, but were held to a tie because of a few mental miscues.

Regardless, the loss didn't knock the USF'ers from the loop lead, and apparently they're well on their way toward their tenth consecutive league title. Since Gus Donoghue took over the job as head mentor at the Hilltop in 1946, the Dons have "brought home the bacon" nine times.

From '49 to '53 his forces went undefeated. In 1954 a fine Ram aggregation upended the Dons 5-4, the champs' first loss in 56 games! Donoghue's boys again went undefeated in 1955, were tied once last season, and were on their way toward an unblemished '56 sked until they met the spirited Roy Diederichsen-coached Rams.

Rams Win Homecoming Over Modesto, 33-6; Roper, Tyree Run Ragged; Erler Line Star

By Nick Peters

Grover Klemmer's Rams, displaying an overpowering ground attack, featuring backs Dave Tyree, Bob Roper, and Bill Rathbun, overwhelmed an injury-riddled Modesto Pirate eleven 33 to 6 in the college's annual Homecoming tilt last Saturday at Kezar.

The visitors, playing without first-string quarterback Emmett Lee, sensational fullback Dave Maggard, and several key linemen, were never in the ball game and were in arrears 20-0 prior to scoring their lone six-pointer midway in the third period.

The win moved the Rams into a second place tie with the Pirates, Stockton, and West Contra Costa, each maintaining an identical 3-2 slate. Santa Rosa acquired the loop leadership with a 13-12 victory over Sacramento, giving them a 4-1 record.

The college scored early in the first period as tackle Ernie Ibarra recovered an enemy fumble on the Pirate 22. Tyree carried to the 20, from where Roper scored on the next play.

End Hank Gibson's interception of a Buccaneer aerial on the Modesto 40 set up the Rams' second first quarter touchdown. Gibson ran 16 yards to the 24 with the theft, from where it took Beldon six plays to score on a neat 14-yard skirt around left end.

The college's third td was the direct result of a beautiful intereception-run by Roper, playing his best game by far. The short speedy back intercepted a Dwight Davenport pass on his own 25 and ran 61 yards down the right sidelines to the Pirate 14.

Rathbun carried twice to the 10 and Roper skirted for 7 and a first down on the 3. Rathbun ran through right guard for the score.

Taking the Ram kickoff on his own 16, Modestan G. W. Wingo raced for 31 yards to his own 47. Two plays brought the Pirates to their own 49, whence Davenport hit end Frank Bernadotti with a pin-pointed pass on the 20. The end "alley-ooped" over two college defenders and ran unmolested into the end zone for the td.

A 39-yard ramble from punt formation set up the Rams' fourth tally. Beldon, on his own 41 with a fourth-and-four situation, saw daylight and ran to the Pirate 20. On the next play Rathbun scored his second td on a brilliant run through the middle.

The game's last score was accounted for by Tyree on a dazzling 44-yard sprint behind a key block by 300-lb. lineman Jim Williams.

Beldon kicked two conversions and Ibarra one. The play of guard Diek Erler and Ibarra was particularly significant. Tyree tore off 126 yards in 16 carries for 8.5 per. Roper retired with 68 yards in 10 attempts for a 6.8 total. Rathbun and Grimes pitched in with 72 and 53 yards, respectively. The college netted a total of 366 turf yards for their day's work.

College Eleven Meets Mateans At 1:30 Saturday

Although the college's rival from the Peninsula has looked far from impressive this season, San Mateo's Blue Bulldogs will be up and barking for a win over the Rams this Saturday afternoon at San Mateo.

The Bulldogs will also be trying to recapture the "Tom-Tom" trophy, given to the winning team each year. (The Rams won 34-0 in 1956.)

Coach Jesse Freitas' eleven has been plagued by injuries all season but hopes to be able to put a strong and healthy squad together by kick-off time, 1:30 p.m.

The Bulldogs have featured an offense which moves the ball on the ground with a few passes thrown in for variety. San Mateo has had trouble with its defensive line. Most opponents have penetrated the Bulldog forward wall for a lot of yardage.

San Mateo won their conference opener against Sacramento, 14 to 13, but since that time have given up losses to West Contra Costa 32 to 12, Santa Rosa 16 to 0, and Stockton 54 to 7.

Doc Riggs Cops Archery Honors At Sports Day

Arlen "Doc" Riggs topped individual archers as the college won team honors at the Oakland College Sports Day, Saturday, October 26.

The first tournament of the semester drew about 15 archers, many of whom had not entered competition previously. The college held a narrow three-point team average margin over Monterey, 489 to 486, as Oakland trailed with a 420 average.

Riggs shot a 536, followed by Jan Valter of Monterey with a 532 score. City College won the next three places with John Kelly, Ed Lee, and Andy Kirk, team manager, winning the honors. Carol Greenblat, shooting in her first tournament, finished ninth.

The next tournament for the team will be at the Sports Day this Saturday, with the college as hosts.

Bobby Scanlon Unanimously Beats Bud Smith In First Major Battle

By John Henry

It's apparent to all of the Bobby Scanlon fans at the college that the local scrapper easily disposed of Wallace "Bud" Smith the week before last at the Civic Auditorium for his first win over a "name" fighter.

Scanlon handled the former light-weight king with so much ease that it looked as though Scanlon was the ex-champ and Smith playing the role of the inexperienced young fighter.

Smith was completely ineffective against the hard-hitting Irishman and landed only a few blows on Scanlon during the tiff that ended with Scanlon winning by a TKO in 1 minute and 48 seconds of the 10th round.

Scanlon was cautious the whole evening and didn't give Smith the chance to do any damage. He used combinations of lefts and rights which kept Smith off balance and defenseless. Scanlon's own defense caused Smith to throw wild punches that either missed him or glanced harmlessly off his arms.

We can't really measure Scanlon's progress by the Smith affair because of the poor showing by the latter, but Scanlon did impress us with his overall ring know-how which doesn't always appear in a young pro fighter with just 26 fights under his belt. Art Benjamin, Scanlon's manager, did not mention any future opponents for his charge but seemed anxious for Scanlon to resume training right away.

Referee Frankie Carter stated after the fight that Scanlon looked "real good" and had a promising future ahead of him. "He (Scanlon) looked kind of scared the first several rounds but after that he was on his way."

BOBBY SCANLON, lightweight boxing contender, who st[illegible] the college's

Scanlon felt in good condition after the fight and was anxious to start back to work for his next bout. He also refused to name any logical opponents and said he would agree to face anybody whom his manager would line up.

With a few more bouts with some tough opponents Scanlon will be ready to face some of the ranked lightweights where he will find out about how far he can go. The popular slugging local is really a promising boxer, and may very well go all the way.

Social Plans For Semester Begun By Organizations

By Jerry Redford

WITH Hell Week drawn to a close, fraternities and sororities of the campus have quieted down to enjoy the many social events of the semester and to make plans for the pinning of their pledges at annual dinners.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity ended Hell Week with the addition of 13 new pledges to the brotherhood. The men are Dick Berger, Rich Brandt, Ron Funke, George Gradow, Dennis Kalos, Dave Moyles, Roger Nyberg, Dick Quinlan, Rich Sarouhan, Bob Terry, Kip Wixson and Don Gifford. The brothers are looking forward to the social activities of the semester, and to the pledge dinner to be held in January.

Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity went on a weekend "hunting trip," returning with their new brothers and many trophies.

The Chinese Student Club announces that their annual Queen of the Sweetheart Ball contest is now open. Any woman student interested may file an application with Dean Mary Golding in her office, S-150. Deadline for entrants is set at Friday, November 29.

B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation officers include Dick Gershenson, president; Carol Plansky, vice-president; Helen Opetsky, secretary, and Bob Castle, treasurer. Future events of the group include a pot luck dinner to be held at Sigmund Stern Grove, joint services with the Hillel chapter at San Francisco State and meetings and dances at the Jewish Community Center. At a meeting tomorrow at the latter site, a guest speaker will be featured.

Gamma Sigma Sigma pledges have completed Hell Week and are working on their pledge project for the semester. It will be the placing of plants in the offices of all women instructors.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority took in its first pledge class this semester. Sisters of the new sorority received their pins last week. The new pin is an eight-pointed star, each point representing one of the eight charter members of the sorority.

Members of both the Inter-Fraternity Council and Inter-Sorority Council seem to agree that Hell Week was the most successful to have been held in several semesters.

Any information for Club Cavalcade must be turned in to S-304, or to Jerry Redford on or before Wednesday at 2:30 p.m.

Award Given To H&R Officer Here

The National Association of the Hotel and Restaurant Meat Purveyors of Chicago last week selected John Murphy, a student at the college, for the Luther E. Davis Memorial Scholarship Award, according to Lawrence B. Wong, Hotel and Restaurant department instructor.

The $250 award will be presented in the memory of Davis, who passed away August, 1954.

The bases on which Murphy qualified were scholastic record, leadership, contribution to the Hotel and Restaurant department and personal interest. Murphy was selected by the college authorities, Wong added.

Murphy is President of the Hotel and Restaurant Society this semester.

Plans Made For January Election Of AS Officials

Preliminary plans have been initiated for the coming elections of Associated Student officials, which will tentatively be held Wednesday and Thursday, January 15 and 16, 1958, according to Ken Leland, election commissioner.

Any member of the Associated Students is eligible to run for any of the offices if he meets the scholastic requirements and takes the necessary steps in submitting his name for election. The facilities for accepting and processing the applications of candidates will be set up by December, Leland said.

The first move that the prospective candidate has to make is to secure a set of the election rules and a petition from the Associated Student office any time after the above mentioned date but no later than January 1.

The rules and regulations of this election will tell each candidate just what is expected of him and what requirements he must meet to enter the election. First, the aspiring candidate must obtain 15 signatures on his petition of fellow members of the Associated Students to show that he has the backing of a number of students.

The candidate will then take the petition to his counselor who will decide whether the student can afford to take on the extra burden of public office in relation to his grades.

Next, the petition must be taken to the office of the Registrar where the grades of the candidate will be checked to see if the grade-point average is high enough to warrant participation in the election.

Lastly, the candidate will take his petition to the Dean of Men, S-148, or to the Dean of Women, S-150, if the candidate is a woman student, for the final approving signature. After these steps have been taken, Leland declared, the candidates may continue with their respective campaigns.

Importance Of Technical Education Emphasized In California Two-Year College Administrators' Conference

A realization of the responsibility of two-year colleges in meeting the growing demand for technical education emerged as the salient development of the recent conference of the California Junior College Administrators.

The conference, held at the Ahwahnee Hotel in Yosemite National Park from October 29-31, was attended by presidents and representatives from more than 60 two-year colleges in northern California. Representing this college at the conference were Louis G. Conlan, president of the college; Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction; Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator, Division of Educational Management; and John J. Brady, coordinator, Division of Student Welfare.

The conference, an annual event, commemorated the 50th anniversary of California's two-year colleges, which began in 1907 with the establishment of Fresno Junior College. During the three-day meeting the administrators reviewed the contribution of the two-year college system of the past 50 years.

Highlighting the conference were a general discussion and an exchange of ideas aimed at the overall improvement of junior colleges in the state, according to President Conlan. Primary attention was given to the development of new techniques affecting academic progress, with an emphasis on technical and vocational training, and various experts in this field were called in to present the problems.

"Our emphasis in the future will have to be on technical education," President Conlan said. "Many colleges which have not offered a program in that field will have to do so. Technical development is going to affect the curriculum of all colleges."

The conference was not confined to discussion in the academic field, for several proposals dealing with athletics were presented during the three-day confab.

A motion to impose a one-year athletic ineligibility on all out-of-state athletes attending California two-year colleges was defeated, President Conlan added, and the same rules concerning eligibility will apply to out-of-staters and local residents.

Also voted down by the administrators was a proposal for a post-season interlocutional football playoff between the top ranked two-year college teams in northern and southern California.

HEC Represented This Saturday At Mark Luncheon

With Preview On Pastime as theme, the Bay District Home Economics Association plans a program this Saturday at 11:45 a.m., including three Home Economics Club representatives from the college, at the Peacock Court of the Mark Hopkins Hotel, according to Priscilla Watts, president of the HEC here.

Purpose of the affair is to present information and ways to decorate luncheon tables and also interesting pastime pursuits. Highlight of the affair will be a special preview of the decorated luncheon tables before the luncheon for the assistants. Admission will be $3.50 per person, Miss Watts added.

Delegates of the college's HEC will be Miss Watts, Denise Durkin and Darlene Oakley.

Last October 24 the HEC attended the 13th Annual Convention and Workshop of the College Home Economics Clubs of Northern California and Nevada at the University of California, Davis. This convention was attended by Miss Watts, Edith Lee and Frances Lloyd, club adviser.

Officers of the HEC for this semester are Miss Watts, president; Pat Wehner, vice-president; Miss Durkin, secretary, and Joyce Bode, treasurer.

Bitter Faculty: 'Bring On The Sophs'

Instructors Deny Statement Made For Cancellation Of Traditional

By Robert Liu

Members of the faculty basketball squad were bitter last week over a statement attributed to them for calling off the traditional semi-annual Soph-Prof basketball tilt "because of their age."

"Why, as far as I can recall," Dean of Student Activities Ralph O. Hillsman said, "we've won every match, except one, against them. And even that one ended in a tie.

"The way it appears, there either was a mistake in the issuance of the statement, or the sophs are shying away from the game."

Angered Prof basketball coach, Sid Phelan, used hotter words.

"Whoever issued that statement was wrong. It definitely didn't come from the red-blooded members of the faculty.

"We are ready and willing to participate in all the games popular with the young!"

A third irritated member of the team, Alex W. Schwarz, added his bit.

"The only conceivable reason for the statement's issuance (if it was issued), was to preserve the health of the students. In every game we've played against them, one of their players has been hurt."

The excitement arose following a charge by Soph President Larry Vargo that the semi-annual basketball tussle, slated January 17 during college hour, had been cancelled at the request of the faculty on grounds that "the majority of the instructors felt they could not compete with the youngsters" and requested a "less strenuous game." The average age of the faculty team is estimated to be in the mid-30's.

The tilt was to have been part of the Soph Week celebrations, January 13 through 17. Vargo could not be immediately reached for comment.

Rally Cancelled By Friday's Concert

Because of the band concert to be held in the library during college hour this Friday, the rally previously scheduled has been cancelled, according to Don Baikie, Rally Committee chairman here.

An exchange rally with the College of San Mateo is tentatively scheduled for the "Big Game" that day, Baikie said. The time of the rally had not been determined at press time.

The rally scheduled for this Friday will be held instead on Friday, November 22, and will honor the soccer team. One of the highlights of the rally will be the introduction of the team's coach, Roy Diederichsen.

At the present time the Rally Committee is trying to secure a combo for the rally which will be held in front of Smith Hall, if the weather permits.

It's a wise man who profits by his own experience, but it's a good deal wiser one who lets the rattlesnake bite the other fellow.—(Josh Billings, quoted in Today's Health.)

IRC Students Receive Two Scholarships

A highlight of the November 1 International Fair was the presentation of two International Relations Club's scholarships. The awards were given to Dilna Campos and Andrew Yang. Each received a scholarship of $50.

Also awarded a scholarship was Ruby Broadway, winner of the Florence Louis Scholarship. The $25 award has been offered annually by an alumna of the college in appreciation of her experiences here, Dean Mary Golding said.

Miss Appointments? Risk: No Counseling!

Students failing to keep appointments with their counselors for next semester's programming are not only endangering their registration number but also risk losing all pre-registration programming, according to Waddington Blair, counselor here.

Counselors have appointments now to see students through the last week of January, and counseling is available only through appointments.

Veterans Club's Operation Toylift Begins Here Today

Launching "Operation Toylift," a drive to collect toys for needy children, members of the Veterans Club of the college are back in uniform—the uniform of Santa's helpers.

Veterans are sponsoring this drive to collect used toys so Christmas morning will be a little brighter for needy children who otherwise might be forgotten.

Calls from donors will be accepted at JU 7-7272, Extension 4, the Guardsman office. The paper has cooperated with this movement by donating the use of its telephone to receive calls from prospective donors. Any one wishing to donate to the drive is instructed to call this number and give his address as well as the most advisable time for the collectors to pick up the toys.

Donors may call the above number on any college day from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. starting today until Friday, December 13, the last day of classes before Christmas. Members of the club will respond to these calls by trucking around the city on weekends and after college to pick up the donated toys.

A collection point will also be set up at the main entrance to the Science Building so that students of the college can contribute their share. All the toys collected will then be turned over to various charitable organizations for distribution to the needy children. Cooperation on the part of the students and faculty is sought by the Veterans Club so that this drive, which they feel is in a worthwhile cause, will be a success.

CAB To Form New Campus Party For January Elections

A new campus political party is currently being planned to represent the Club Activities Board at the January, 1958 elections, Jim Foster, CAB president, announced last week.

Final dates of the elections for student officials have been set as Wednesday and Thursday, January 15 and 16, according to Ken Leland, election commissioner.

Plans and rules of the election are taking form with the printing of the petitions now under way. Leland urged aspiring candidates to give urged their qualifications and the organization of their campaigns.

Deadline for filing petitions to run for office is early in January, Leland said.

In preparation for the elections, those CAB members belonging to organizations which meet in college hours are being urged by Foster to look for a strong, potential candidate among the residing heads of their groups.

A general convention, to discuss candidates and platforms for the new CAB party, will also be held in the nearby future.

Potential committee members thus far are Dave Tipton, head of the broadcasting club; Lonnie Earnshaw, football player; Don Gifford, vice-president of the Veterans Club, and Don Nuti, treasurer of the Newman Club.

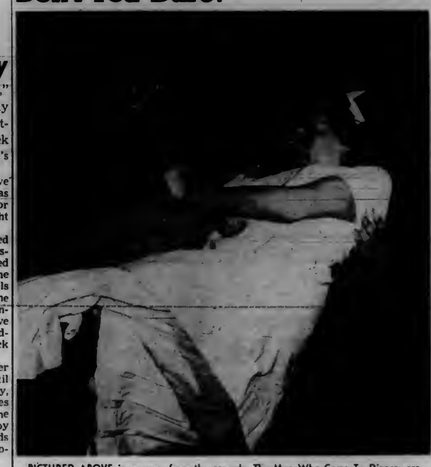
One reason for a CAB backed political party would be to give the CAB a stronger voice in student government, Foster commented.

New X-Ray Course To Be Introduced Here Next Spring

Introduction of X-ray technology, the first of a series of courses on X-ray, will be offered to students of the college for the first time next semester, according to William E. Hoskins, science instructor and organizer of these courses.

Recent developments on the world scene have given rise to a popular interest in scientific ideas and concepts. There has long been a shortage of experienced personnel in the field of X-ray technology, and these courses will do much to fill that gap, Hoskins said, adding that because of the increased general interest and specific need, for scientists as life gets progressively more technical, a definite need for suitable trained X-ray personnel is making itself more pronounced.

To enroll in this course, a student must first have taken courses in physics and anatomy on a college level. This first course will be followed in later semesters by more advanced courses in the principles of X-ray and by courses in practical application to be held at local hospitals.



After this series of courses is in effect, the college will be one of the leading contributors of this type of trained personnel in Northern California, Hoskins declared.

At present, for all practical purposes, there is no full scale training program of this type set up in this area.

The only way for a person to gain experience in this field now is to enroll in one of the on-the-job training programs set up by hospitals.

Interested students are invited by Hoskins to visit him for further information in his office, S-237.

Nick Rommel Plays Lead In Man Who Came To Dinner

Casting has been completed for The Man Who Came To Dinner, Marlene Grant, student director, announced today, adding that rehearsals are being scheduled to produce the show twice in the college Little Theater. Tentative production dates are Friday and Saturday nights, December 6 and 7.

Cast in the leading role of Sheridan Whiteside is Nicholas Rommel, who brings a long history of experience to the stage to the part. Son of a European actress and a father who owns a syndicate which releases and produces European productions, Rommel has been on the stage since the age of 6.

Starring in two productions at Lincoln High School and acting in several others, Rommel brought a varied background to the college which was further enhanced by the roles he has had here. Theater-goers may recall that he was in last year's productions of Death Takes A Holiday and The Madwoman of Chaillot.

However, acting is not the only field in which Rommel is interested. He has done solo work as an operatic baritone and radio and television appearances. Further, he is a make-up artist and has worked professionally with the Peninsula Opera Company, besides working as an assistant make-up artist with Paramount in the summer of 1954.

Other leading roles cast opposite Rommel are Mr. and Mrs. Stanley who will be played by Joan Carr and Dennis Polack; Maggie Cutler, played by Leah Turk; Dr. Bradley, played by Saul Bar; Bert Jefferson, by Mel Mazzanti; Lorraine Sheldon, by Helen Maskarich; Beverly Carlton, by Fred Fisher; Miss Preen, by Beverly Tiger and Banjo, by George Cooney.

Several of the cast have appeared in the recent production of The Merchant Of Venice and some are carrying a dual responsibility as members of the cast of The Lincoln, which is scheduled for presentation under the direction of Michael Griffin, Little Theater director here.

Beta Phi Beta To Hold Dance Friday

Golden Slippers will be the theme for the dance to be presented by Beta Phi Beta fraternity at the California Club this Friday night from 9 p.m. until 12 midnight, according to Frank Rogers, dance committee chairman.

High point of the occasion will be the selection of a "Golden Slipper Girl." The girl at the dance whose foot size corresponds exactly with the size of the fraternity's golden slipper will win the contest. Her name will be inscribed on a perpetual trophy kept by the fraternity and she will receive a miniature trophy and merchandise orders for herself.

Tickets costing $2.00 per couple can be secured from members of Beta Phi Beta, at the student bank or at the entrance to the dance.

Jimmy Price and his orchestra will supply the music featuring George Cerniti at the piano and Brew Moore on the saxophone.

Immediately preceding the dance will be the pledge dinner, Rogers said, where the recently initiated pledges of Beta Phi Beta will receive their pins and be formally accepted into the fraternity.

Dress will be semi-formal at this dance, which is one of the few recognized off-campus dances presented by any of the social groups of the college. The California Club is located on Clay Street between Van Ness and Polk.

Dates Announced For 23rd Christmas Concert

Combining the performances of the A Cappella Choir, the band, the Men's Glee Club, and the Treble Clef, the music department will give two performances of its twenty-third annual Christmas Concert in the college's library on Thursday and Friday, December 12 and 13.

In announcing the dates, Robert Morton, choir director, pointed out that the show on December 12 will be at 8 p.m., while the one on December 13 will take place during college hour.

Morton said the choir numbers will include such favorites as Schubert's Ave Maria, sung by soloist Sue Bellinger, and Scenes From The Holy Nativity, with the tenor solo by Howard Clark, in addition to several carols and two Bach chorales.

"The program will have a broader scope this year," Morton said, "since it will include music representing various religious expressions of the Christian spirit." The numbers from the Greek Orthodox Church will be sung in Greek, he added. A special number will be Alleluia, composed by Armen K. Boyd, last June's Scholastic Cup winner here.

The band will also play carols and present a special arrangement of Panis Angelicus.

CJCSGA Conference Resolves Recommending Of Separate Junior College Ruling Board

By Don Seratti

Students representing California's 62 junior colleges at the biannual conference of the California Junior College Student Government Association at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel last week, passed 13 resolutions that could have a profound effect on the state's two-year college program.

Representing this college at the three-day conference were Bob Varni, Eugenia Lary, Jim Woods, John Kelly, Bev Sehroth, Bob Rodriguez, Brower Dimond and Larry Vargo.

In what emerged as the conference's most signifieant development, the delegates passed unanimously a resolution calling for changes in the State Education Code that would set California's junior colleges on a higher level than the secondary school system of which they are now a part. The delegates held that separate administration for two-year colleges is necessitated by the rapid expansion of the state's junior college program, which now serves 104,000 students.

Approval of this resolution by the California Junior College Association would bring about the establishment of a separate state board of education to govern the junior colleges.

Another resolution called for the establishment of committees, to be composed of administrators and student officers, on all state junior college campuses. The delegates felt that this proposal, providing for periodic meetings, would permit a greater element of understanding between administrators and students.

A motion to urge the CJCA to allow for "complete recognition of local, non-secret, selective fraternities and sororities on junior college campuses" was passed by a 30-16-10 vote. Supporters of this resolution argued that since junior colleges are on a different level from high schools and junior high schools, they should be able to function similarly to four-year colleges in this respect.

Other resolutions passed at the conference dealt with such matters as: the adoption of a code of conduct for two-year college students; a modification of the current CJCA athletic regulation limiting colleges to a nine-game football season; student association card sales; increased state financial support for junior colleges, and utilization of alumni support.

Reports of all the workshop findings were forwarded to the general assembly, comprised of all student officers and delegates, for final action.

Bob Varni, CJCSGA president, termed the conference "highly successful," and attributed its success to "the combined efforts of the 400 delegates to elevate the status of the state's junior colleges."

Sophs Say Yes... Profs Say Yes... Still No Game?

Dissension over the controversial basketball game and plans to be made for the coming Sophomore Ball will be discussed at a meeting of the Sophomore Class sometime in the next two weeks, aecording to Larry Vargo, Sophomore Class president.

First reports were that the annual basketball game was to be called off because of "the age" of the faculty members. Supplementary information indicates that the "red-blooded" members of the faculty are more than willing to play the students.

The question posed by these developments now is that if both the faculty members and the sophomores are willing to play, why has the game been cancelled?

Vargo says, "At the beginning of the semester I was instructed by a prominent faculty member to find another sport, less strenuous on the faculty than basketball. Members of the Sophomore Class are willing to play. In fact, because of the recent rash of publicity I already have a volunteer team eager to play the faculty." This subject will be discussed at the Sophomore class meeting.

The Profs lead in the semi-annual athletic series with 14 wins against one loss and a tie. The Sophs' last victory was in 1951 and the 19-19 engee deadlock last January bent a nine-game Prof win streak. The "greybeards," however, continued on their winning ways with a 16-1 softball walloping of the "peach-fusses" last May 31.

At the present, the Sophomore Ball is scheduled for January 18, 1958, at the Surf Club. Also to be discussed at this Sophomore Class meeting is whether the dress will be formal or semi-formal. Additional plans will be made concerning the election of the Soph King and Queen. Vargo urged any entertainment groups as well as an individual piano player who might be interested in performing at the ball to consult him.

Sorority Pledges Scheduled For Formal Presents On December 7

The traditional formal Presents of Pledges of eight sororities to the fraternities will be held Saturday, December 7, in Smith Hall from 8 to 11 p.m., according to Carol Olson, Inter-Sorority Council president.

Attendance at the Presents will be by invitation only, and only sorority women and fraternity men will attend. Escorts for the women pledges will be formed by the fraternities.

At the affair, the pledges will be wearing formal and corsages presented by the active sorority members. Pledges and their escorts will be introduced by sorority presidents.

Smith Hall will be decorated in a winter scene for the Presents, Miss Olson added.

Committees for the affair include Miss Olson, general chairman; Debbie Asmussen, refreshments; Audrey Bell and Nadine Wilson, decorations; Marilyn Galligani, music; Elise Laubscher, flowers; Marilyn Milanesio, favors, and Joycelyn Perkins, invitations.

The eight sororities presented at the event are Delta Psi, Delta Sigma Tau, Gamma Kappa Beta, Gamma Sigma Sigma, Kappa Phi, Phi Beta Rho, Theta Tau, and Zeta Chi.

College Might Gain Fostering Outside Cultural Events Here

FOR quite some time this college may have been losing ground to other educational institutions in the area in the important matter—especially for a college—of fostering outside cultural events and bringing these events to the college and to the attention of students and public alike.

Indeed, certain of the other schools in the immediate locality have been so outstanding in the business of creating on-campus interest in the arts, by way of concert series, lectures, art center programs and festivals, that City College has been suffering, and suffering too long, by comparison.

Not only is the college in danger of losing public relations prestige and desirable repute as a community serving, culturally aware institution, but also the students and faculty who look to the college to provide these events are being deprived of a large part of the benefits the college could be offering.

As the situation stands now a student or faculty member interested in gaining new and stimulating experiences, thoughts or bits of information usually only to be obtained from lively and timely presentation of the various arts on a regular periodic basis, have no alternative but to seek these some place else.

Fortunately for these interested individuals there is another institution not far from this campus which provides plenty of opportunity to observe and benefit from the activities in artistic fields which are abundant there. Poetry readings, chamber music, lyric theater and lectures in the sciences and arts are plentiful there and open to the community.

Almost any given day a story appears in one of the local or national publications describing some cultural activity at this other school.

Lately the only offering by this college has been due to the efforts of a few departments, notably the Little Theater, and a few instructors who have brought outside career men to lecture at the college.

Perhaps the Student Council would be interested enough in the situation to appoint a committee on campus cultural events to look into the subject. Their action is sure to be applauded by the whole college.

Van Johnson To Play Pied Piper In 'Spec'

A BELOVED children's tale will become a spectacular when NBC presents The Pied Piper Of Hamlin, Tuesday, November 26.

Starring in this color tale are Van Johnson and Claude Rains. NBC must be given credit for having the intestinal fortitude to undertake some odd type casting.

• • •

The next night, also on NBC, Mary Martin will bring her incomparable charm to the TV screen when she plays Annie in the musical comedy, Annie Get Your Gun. John Raitt, who appeared with Miss Martin in the San Francisco presentation, will be featured as Frank Butler.

If the TV version is half as excellent as the road tour was, this could be the outstanding spectacular of the season. Consult your newspaper for the time of these programs.

Some of the color and magnificence of Scotland's past and present came to life recently when the Pipes and Drums and Regimental Band of the Black Watch came to San Francisco's Civic Auditorium.

The precision of the Black Watch is something which has to be seen to be appreciated. There were over 200 in the combined bands, and yet throughout the entire performance, there was not a missed musical cue or a mis-step.

Versatility was the keynote of the evening. Selections ranged from battle calls and stirring marches to popular music. The music, as well as the marching, was precise and clear.

For those who are not familiar with the Black Watch, it is the Royal Highland Regiment of the British Army. It's Colonel-in-Chief is Queen Elizabeth, the present Queen Mother.

The Black Watch, given its official name by Queen Victoria, was formed in 1739 in Perthshire to police or "watch" the Highlands of Scotland. Since that time, the regiment has valiantly participated in all of the wars involving Britain, including the American Revolutionary War. (This was the army which drove Washington from Brooklyn.)

The bagpipes themselves are a fascinating story. Bagpipes are among the oldest musical instruments known to men; so old, in fact, that their true age and origin are unknown.

Besides being one of the oldest forms of music, they are also one of the most controversial. A Scotsman argues there is no sound as magnificent as the skirl (shrill sound) of the bagpipe. Others find the same sound as ear-splitting and horrible as the bagpipes. The seventeenth century diarist Samuel Pepys once said the bagpipe was, ". . . at its best, a mighty and barbarous music."

An interesting sidelight is the fact that it was not until the Napoleonic wars that drummers joined the pipers to form the Pipes and Drums of the Black Watch. Many persons harbor the mistaken idea the pipes and drums have always been together.

Students Face Exams With Misty Minds

Blue books, blue days, and blue students indicate that it is "that time" again as the second series of midterm examinations gets under way.

Midnight oil is burning, and red-eyed students gather in groups to ponder the problems of the world and debate the possible questions soon to be asked in varied forms all over the college.

The biggest question remains unanswered. That is, how can a student enjoy all the social activities, go to the fraternity parties, see the latest movies, keep up with television, and still manage to pass his examinations.

Attempts to answer this question take many forms. Some party guys and girls save the night before a midterm for a concentrated attack upon their unused books and the notes they have borrowed from more studious classmates, who are busy sleeping the sleep of the righteous.

Through the wee hours of the dawn, they study — bleary-eyed, yawning, with the dregs from endless cups of coffee, empty boxes of No-Doz tablets, and the butts of pack after pack of cigarettes strewn about them. Staggering off to the college, they enter the classroom with sleepy trepidation and proceed to snore their way from question to question.

Other students(?) memorize a certain portion of the textbooks they have been assigned to read, and on any question, regardless of the subject, they pour out the part of the book they know. Naturally this is done to make the instructor think they have absorbed the book and are in the process of digesting it. Unfortunately, few instructors fall for this.

Other methods include a convenient attack of Asiatic (midterm) flu which gives the sick and now sober student the precious few days needed to telephone the rest of the class and find out what the questions were. A couple of days spent in memorizing the answers to those questions and he is ready to face the music.

Wearing the martyred smile of one who has suffered long and bravely, he appears in class and announces that he is willing to take his test. He's the one who calls it a dirty trick when the instructor ask questions different from those he is prepared to answer.

The real solution to test taking with ease and a relaxed mind was given to The Guardsman by Ralph Granneberg, psychology instructor here, who said, "The best way to stay relaxed in a midterm is, (A) to have a long history of successful tests and/or (B) to have the material down cold."

Unfortunately, this precludes many of the amusements mentioned before so we may expect the same old attempts to baffle shooting his wits and the tests to take place during the next week.

There is only one consolation this year, and that is the fact that Thanksgiving will follow the midterms with a four-day week-end where the shattered minds of the last-minute warriors can readjust themselves back to the normal run of parties, games, television and coeducational delights.

A frenzied rush to the library to draw out all those reference books he didn't know the instructor really expected him to read also proves unavailing. Ponies are seldom available at any price and even if they were he can't afford them since he spent his money staying social.

Small wonder then that he glares as he passes that smug, anti-fraternal rat, the bookworm, with his condescending smile of superiority, and runs home to find those books he hasn't cracked all semester.

It is not good manners to add cream and sugar to your coffee . . . after you've poured it in the saucer.

Coed Discovers Interest While In Okinawa With Army Corps, Continues Education After Service

By Rich Pels

From the relative seclusion of a Kansas ranch to the exotic throngs of Tokyo, Geraldine Rush, a 24-year-old coed here, through the filter of experience, saw her future change.

While a student in a Kansas high school, Miss Rush received two scholarships, one in physical education, and one in music. She played the clarinet, trumpet, saxophone, bass horn and the baritone.

After graduation from high school, Miss Rush joined the Women's Army Corps and took her basic training at Fort Lee, Virginia.

Shortly after basic training she was transferred to the Pentagon in Washington, D. C., where she served for eight months. Her next assignment was as first sergeant at the finance center in St. Louis, Mo.

In dealing with certain individual cases in her supervisory capacity, Miss Rush realized ability and willingness to help other people; it was this need to know what caused certain behavior in people that made her want to go into social work.

In April, 1953, she volunteered for overseas duty and was sent to Tokyo, Japan. There she became chief clerk in charge of personal records. She was the youngest person, and the only woman in the Tokyo service unit, to hold that position.

After nine months, Miss Rush was transferred to the orderly room duty as first sergeant. There she carried on routine administrative duties, and was also the liaison between the American and Japanese workers in the detachment.

She was fondly labeled by the Japanese workers as Rush-san. She did an important job in promoting better Japanese-American relations. In her spare time, she taught a class in English conversation to a group of Japanese administrative officers at the Nisei Chemical Corporation in Tokyo.

From Tokyo Miss Rush was transferred to Okinawa, where she served with the 98th Military Police Battalion.

It was here that she realized her interest was greatest in working with the criminal element. After six months on Okinawa, Miss Rush was rotated back to the States where she was stationed at the Presidio in San Francisco. There she served the 14 final months of her enlistment.

After six years of honorable service, Miss Rush entered City College in February of 1957. She is now enrolled in the criminology class and is the recording secretary to Fred Fitzgerald, head of the department.

Miss Rush is also a member of the Campus Police pistol team, and after only 2½ months of shooting has won a first place trophy in the marksman class. After graduation from the college she plans to finish her education at Sacramento State College. She would like to be a Parole Officer afterwards.

Shots At Ramdom

By Tom Tatera

MR. RAM, once proud red and white statue which adorned the campus, is looking a bit bleak these days. Maybe Modesto college marauders snuck over and gave him a bleaker-than-black coat of paint. This was not at all nice, if it was the case. At least someone could have done a less sloppy job of painting.

WELL, there's no more doubt about it. The space age is here to stay! Two taxi drivers, while discussing the coming conquest of the universe, agreed on one idea. The first man to reach the moon will be the Internal Revenue Collector. He'll be waiting for us!

A PERENNIAL enemy of the college is the coffee machine in the basement of the Science Building. It never works! All a person can expect for a dime is one half-hearted gurgle, and the sneering refrain, "take tea and see." Once in a while, someone is lucky enough to strike coffee. But even then it tastes like something squeezed out of a dishrag.

THOSE "JOHN AND MARSHA" routines which emit from the KCSF Campus Carrier daily are enough to put Madison Avenue to shame. They are prime examples of the type of advertising which goes on today. Subtle, in a sardonic sort of a way. Any day now, they'll probably be coming out with something like, "She's young, she's charming, she has an AS card," or, "Why be half-safe on your final examinations. Use the new blue-book forms with the answers in the back. They satisfy!"

THREE CHEERS for the college's International Relations Club. From all reports, their show of November 1, honoring International Relations Week, was a smashing success. Especially appealing and original was their Around The World In 80 Days stunt. Two men, parodying the heroes from the multi-million dollar movie, hovered overhead in a makeshift balloon while announcing the acts.

Man-In-Tux Soccer Player

It could only happen here (and it's doubtful it will ever happen again). At 9 a.m., half an hour before the Ram-Cal Aggie soccer encounter began November 9 at the Balboa Stadium, a college student, neatly dressed in a tuxedo, walked out of a car directing himself to the stadium's main gate.

Someone, looking startled at him, said, "Wrong party, Buddy. Here we have only soccer games, you know."

"The name's not Buddy, Buddy," answered Man-In-Tux, "it is Pastor Valle-Garay and I'm here to play." At which point soccer coach Roy Diederichsen cut into the conversation, exclaiming in a loud and rather startled voice, "Pastor, where were you last night? What are you doing here in that monkey suit? Can you play,"

"I was home and in bed, Coach," answers Valle-Garay. "Only thing is that I had to be best man at this wedding just now, but left it before it finished to get here and play.

"Of course, I'm ready," the college's goalkeeper concluded, while taking off the "monkey suit" in front of everybody's wide-opened eyes, displaying under it, to everybody's relief, the team's uniform.

He had worn everything but the boots all the way through the 7:30 a.m. ceremony in order to make the game on time.

Coach Diederichsen Calls Soccer Eleven 'Best In Years;' Squad Finishes 2nd In Loop

By Pastor Valle-Garay

One of the most brilliant seasons for the college's soccer team was over Saturday, November 9, when the Rams defeated University of Santa Clara at the losers' field, thus taking second place in the final standings of the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference.

Showing an impressive 5-1-1 win, lost, tied record, the squad fell early in the league, during a last-minute play, to a strong University of California eleven with a score of 2-1, breaking even three weeks later against the mighty USF Dons in a 2-2 deadlock.

Beaten by the Rams were San Francisco State 4-1, San Jose State 5-1, Stanford University 2-1, Cal Aggies 8-0, and the University of Santa Clara.

Superb ball control and passing, synchronized shooting and perfect defensive play characterized the soccermen's action throughout the conference, all of which were observed November 8 as they produced the stunning 8-0 victory over a helplessly nominated Cal Aggies squad.

Celebrating Homecoming Week with high class scoring, the highest in any of this year's performances, the Red and White uniforms exploded against the Aggies within seconds after the first quarter had begun and, in ten minutes of play, Richard Prydz, the Rams' star center forward, turned loose fast from the visitors' defenses to place three consecutive goals favoring the Rams' account. Prydz, later in the contest, also booted home the eighth goal.

Two more successful shots ripped the Aggies' net before the second quarter ended, giving the college a 5-0 lead which made Coach Roy Diederichsen pull out his first stringers and field all of his reserves. Freezing the Aggies' goalie twice was the terrific boot of right wing Roberto Guerrero.

In spite of its second place finish, the Ram eleven, named by Coach Diederichsen as the college's "best-in-ten-years" squad, is still considered by other coaches and players as the NCISC's top team in this year's competition.

Four of its men, the Prydz brothers, center half Alberto Morales, and left fullback Eddie Zelaya, have been selected for All-Conference honors and will wear at 8 tonight in the San Francisco State soccer field the college colors for the North vs. South All-Star soccer game. (The Rams are the only team in the league competing against four-year college varsity squads.)

"Incidentally," Coach Diederichsen added, "I want to give my personal thanks to every man on the team for making City College a most feared name in the league. Their spirit and loyalty have made this one of the most successful soccer seasons in my ten years here. All I wish now is to have all of them back next year."

Morales Looms All-Conference For 2nd Time

Al Morales is a husky, five-foot ten-inch athlete who is in love with the word "action."

"Action" was his god at Commerce High, here in San Francisco, where he developed into an all-star booter with the Bulldog soccer eleven, as well as making background appearances with the incomparable "K. C." Jones and Carl Walker as a prep eager. "Action" follows him wherever he goes.

This statement can be well witnessed by a good number of soccer contenders in the Bay Area, for the name Al Morales has been one to make them sit up and take notice; it is one that has made the college a proverbial "powerhouse" for the past two seasons.

The phenomenal talents Morales' agile limbs seem to have carried him to All-Conference honors last season, a feat which, Head Coach Roy Diederichsen says, he is assured of repeating this year. Aside from this, Diederichsen added, Morales has a slim possibility of climbing aboard the NCAA All-American roster.

According to Coach Diederichsen, Morales, now in his third term at the college, is planning on furthering his academic strides at San Jose State, although he is as yet undecided as to the certainty of this. In conclusion, however, the Ram skipper had this to say on behalf of his standout halfback:

"Al is one of the toughest little competitors I've run across in my ten years as coach at the college. He plays his heart out constantly, and is one of the big reasons why City College has commanded such great respect from the rest of the league.

"Although we all wish him every success, should he decide upon furthering his studies at San Jose, or anywhere else for that matter, needless to say we would not be disappointed should he decide to remain with us through his last season of NCAA eligibility. He's tops."

Swift, Jones Place In Amateur Fence Tourney

Two women from the college competed in the Northern California division of the Amateur Fencers' League of America matches at the Halberstadt School of Fencing, November 8.

Carrie Jones, third semester student, reached the finals of the elimination competition. She won two out of seven of her final bouts after defeating participants from Stanford, University of California, Napa, San Francisco State and Lettermen Army Hospital.

Irma Swift, entering competition for the first time, won two preliminary bouts before being eliminated.

"They were a pleasure to watch because of their clean and sure performance," spectators commented.

Thanksgiving Has American Family Flavor

Downtown stores are now dressed in red and green decor, Christmas cards have been on sale since October, not a single reindeer has been left unturned to make people aware that Christmas is coming.

But before Christmas there is another holiday and perhaps in one respect it is to some Americans a greater day than Christmas. The holiday of course is Thanksgiving, and it is greater in the respect that its meaning is never overshadowed by superficial aspects of the day, while the real Christmas with its truly Christian significance is fast, if it isn't already, being overshadowed by the [illegible] of it. Nobody Thanksgiving is the day when millions of Americans forget such things as sputnik and muttnik. It's a day of inventory, when each individual takes some time out to count his own particular blessings and give his own special thanks for them.

It is also family reunion time; the family gets together at home to a dinner of turkey, stuffing, cranberries and all the traditional trimmings.

It's a day which reflects the spirit of Americans; they are being thankful as were the first who celebrated this day.

Christmas is flashed all over the downtown stores, but Thanksgiving is deep in the hearts of Americans.

Big Eight Grid Play Tabbed Unpredictable

By Nick Peters

SPICING our work with a seasonal flavor, we can't help but realize that Thanksgiving blessings must be had by certain individuals.

Frankie Albert must give thanks for his 49ers' success. Grover Klemmer must appreciate the fact that he squeezed the most potential out of an injury-riddled Ram eleven. Y. A. Tittle should be thankful that he's having his best season in years. West Coast fans should be thankful that they may enjoy professional baseball come '58, and last but certainly not least, students here should be proud of the fact (but aren't) that our football, soccer, and cross country squads all finished on top, or very close to it, in their respective leagues.

• • •

Unpredictable is the one word that describes Big Eight Conference grid play at the present time. League standings to date (with but one encounter remaining for each team) show our Rams, Stockton, Santa Rosa, Modesto and WCC, all tied for first with identical 4-2 slates.

After the college defeats West Contra Costa this weekend it'll show a 5-2 mark. Santa Rosa should easily win over Oakland, and the Mustangs of Stockton should upend Saeramento while Modesto is downing San Mateo.

Therefore, it's conceivable that the powerful Big Eight will end in a four-way tie for the crown come the termination of the season.

Since Stockton defeated both the Rams and Santa Rosa, many observers will opine that the Mustangs logically deserve the title. Sorry, we don't go that route. The college eleven whipped Modesto decisively and will triumph over West Contra Costa, two outfits which dumped the Stocktons. The Rams also came through with a victory over Santa Rosa to further strengthen their claim as the best team of the quartet.

No bowl bid here. Despite the fact that the Big Eight is considered the strongest two-year college grid loop in California, it won't have a representative at the Junior Rose Bowl. Why? Simply because no team with two setbacks is deserving of a bowl berth.

Most likely candidate to sniff the roses from this area is San Jose Junior College from the Coast Conference. The San Joseans have won all their games by big scores and have but one loss to Hartnell to blemish their mark.

Old boxers never die, they just play pro football. Well, a couple do anyway. Cite, for instance, the case of 49er Charley Powell, who impressed the TV viewers with his ability as an end during the Ram game. Oie Cholly snared a pass, stopped a would-be tackler with a left hook, and danced for 20 yards before being trounced by a Ram.

Another example is a certain Ram footballer, who is also quite handy with the dukes. Seems he was sprung from jail last year just in time to play for the Southland pros. A little run-in with his mother-in-law. You know, normal stuff. Mother-in-law got on his nerves, only way out was pulverizing her cabeza with a flurry of lefts and rights. Six months, assault and battery. That's all.

Harriers Whip Modestans 24-33

The college's cross country team defeated Modesto Junior College 24-33, November 8, at the Golden Gate Course to end their dual-meet season.

With two or three more meets to go, the undefeated team thus far might end the season in one of the top positions in Big Eight standings, according to Coach Lou Vasquez.

All that lies ahead as an obstacle to be met and crossed is a series of invitational meets in which a number of schools participate. The team as a whole has still to hit its peak in performance. Peak conditioning is what it's striving for now, in order to improve its work.

Paul Patton turned in the best individual time by winning the race in 15 minutes, 26 seconds, to lead his team to victory. Blake Westman, a consistent placer among the top five, was unable to finish the race because of a fall in which he suffered a cut hand and knee. Despite this handicap the team was able to gain an easy win. Results: 1st, Patton, CCSF; 2nd, Matravers, M.; 3rd, Batz, CCSF; 4th, Dimberg, M.; 5th, Dawdy, CCSF; 6th, Melson, M.; 7th, Zimmerman, CCSF; 8th, Buckman, CCSF; 9th, Giddings, M.; 10th, Souza, M.; 11th, Mooney, M.; 12th, Thomas, CCSF; 13th, Cooper, CCSF; 14th, Loveladay, M.; 15th, Nyberg, CCSF, and 16th, Black, CCSF.

College Gridders Win, 25-7, Tie For League Lead

By Bryant Cohn

A power-packed college eleven, led by Quarterback Don Baike, put a muzzle on the biting Bulldogs from San Mateo last Saturday afternoon by handing them a 25-7 setback.

The win, coupled with Stockton's victory over Santa Rosa, elevated Grover Klemmer's forces to a first place tie in the unpredictable Big Eight Conference grid race. The Rams, Modesto, West Contra Costa, Stockton, and Santa Rosa, share the lead with 4-2 marks.

A college win over WCC's Comets this Friday afternoon will assure the Rams of at least a tie for the crown, since league play terminates this weekend. Kickoff is 2:00 at the Comets' Richmond campus.

On seven plays, after the opening kickoff, the Rams drove to the Bulldog 41-yard line, from where QB Don Baike raced all the way for the college's first td.

The Rams held on to their slim lead until midway into the second quarter when lanky Miekey Lax plunged over from the 1-yard line to even the score. The conversion was good, thus putting the Mateans in front by a lone point.

However, a fighting-mad Ram ball club raced on to the field with revenge in its eyes. Dave Tyree got a hold of the pigskin and romped 20 yards to the Bulldogs' 30-yard line. Big Bill Rathbun took over and broke the goal line stripe from 5 yards out, to once again regain the lead for the Rams.

San Mateo, not fully recovered from the Rams' onward slaught, fumbled the ball in their own end zone, where center Bill Barrington fell on the pigskin to score another college td.

The Bulldogs never again crossed the goal line because of a strong and determined defensive line, led by Carl Mitchel, which proved too sturdy for San Mateo.

The college, still not satisfied with the scoreboard reading, added the final straw to the already broken back of the bulldog. Baike led his followers to San Mateo's 12-yard line where he snuek over for the game's last score.

Talented Ram Cagers Have Potential To Repeat As Big Eight Champions

By John Henry

Ram cage coach Sid Phelan has not yet named a starting five, but he is sure he has two equally talented clubs that could be put on the hardwoods.

Phelan has the two units designated as the Blues and Golds and so far in practice both of these squads have matched up pretty evenly. The Blues are comprised of forwards Mal McCormick and Vic Corl, guards Al Holder and Don Castain, and pivot John Henry.

The Gold quintet is made up of forwards Freddie Williams and Gary Merritt, guards Stan Rosenberg and Aub Tendell and postman Doug North.

Out of all this material Phelan is looking for the right combination which clicks best together and will help defend the Big Eight title brought home last season.

One of Phelan's big troubles will be to find enough scoring punch to ease the loss of last season's top three scorers who have departed. Phelan pointed out, "Bob Tealer, Al Mock, and Rich Russell were all good scorers last year, and it'll be a problem replacing them."

Rebounding could also be bothersome to the Ram eagers. If big men North, Henry, McCormick and Merritt come through on the boards, they should liek the problem.

Newcomers who should bolster the squad inelude Dave Campbell, Bill Fowler, Al Bryant, Bob Wiseman and Al Davidson.

So far Phelan has been pleased with the team's progress at this stage of the practice sessions, and although he is playing it eagey as to who his big guns may be, he is sure there is enough material around to make the Rams a definite threat to retain the conference crown.

One possibility may be that Phelan will follow in the footsteps of California grid coach Pete Elliott and keep both his first and second units active by alternating them throughout the game. If successful, this system could wear down the resistance of any opponent who keeps the same five players on the floor.

This season, about 11 junior varsity games have been scheduled to give the jv's more experience.

It will be worked out on a ladder basis, with the winning person eventually ending up on top of the ladder.

A match to determine the winner may be one set out of two, or two out of three, whatever is naturally agreed upon. It is up to the winner to change his name on the ladder if he beats someone who is ahead of him on the ladder.

Accepted Pledges Receive Pins At Future Meetings

By Jerry Redford

WITH sorority and fraternity rushing now completed, these groups are once again mingling with each other in weekly joints. Plans are being made by most of the groups for the pinning of the pledges who were accepted during Hell Week.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity brothers were surprised last weekend by a party given by the pledges in honor of the brothers. Plans for the pinning of the pledges are now being formulated, tentatively being scheduled for the early part of January.

Beta Phi Beta fraternity completed another successful Hell Week; the organization first originating in 1935. Nine pledges were taken in by the brotherhood, including Den Allen, pledge captain, Ed Carrera, Phil Tanner, Lou Ferrari, Mike Bird, Rich Ernst, Ed King, Tom Barfield and Joe Fitzpatrick. Final plans were made recently for the fraternity's dance to be held Friday. Tickets are being sold by brothers, or will be available at the door.

The California State Teachers Association will hold a meeting Friday during college hour in C-269. A panel discussion, concerning problems in teaching will take place, with Mark Crickson, California Teachers Association field representative; Louis Alcarta, science instructor at Galileo High School, and Marian McGinnis, Argonne Elementary School instructor, as guest panelists.

Delta Psi sorority pledges are now planning for the dinner that they will be giving the sisters during Christmas vacation. Past sister of the sorority, Louise von Emster, won a scholarship to the University of California recently.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority held a very successful joint last Wednesday night with Beta Phi Beta fraternity. They are now working on plans for the pledge dinner, to be held later this semester. The pledges are working on a Mother-and-Daughter coffee social to be held in the near future.

Phi Beta Delta fraternity concluded Hell Week activities by attending the Homecoming Dance. The men who were accepted as pledges are Ron Gardner, pledge captain, Don Anti, Rus James, Cliff Silverstein, Rich Soward and Ray Zelaya. Scheduled for next week is a bowling joint with Delta Psi sorority.

Ram Cam, photography club, took pictures at the Homecoming Dance last week, and announce that the pictures will be ready on November 25. A representative of the club will be in B-1 Monday and Wednesday from 10 to 11 a.m. and 1 to 1:30 p.m. Tuesday a representative will be there from 10 to 11 a.m. and 1:30 to 2 p.m.

Theta Tau sorority is holding a meeting tonight to discuss plans for the sorority's coming activities. The new pledges are Joni Weiser, Pat Arden, Barbara Allen, Kay Anderson, Katie Ahern, Gail Berti, Joanne Balestriere, Zeta Ballard, Irene Chulkoff, Yolanda Duran, Diana DalBon, Jackie Lawless, Rose Lima, Linda Lauro, Carol Martin, Ann Pastore, Helen Quinn and June White.

Kappa Phi sorority and Gamma Phi Ypsilon fraternity both announce the pinning of Audrey Bell by Jack Patterson.

Any information for Club Cavalcade should be turned in to Jerry Redford or S-304 before 2:30 p.m. on Wednesday afternoons, if it is to appear the following week in The Guardsman.

IRC Party Honors Best Acts At Fair

Plans are now under way for the International Relations Club get-together party to be held on Wednesday, November 27, from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight in Smith Hall, Joseph M. Jacobsen, club adviser, announced today.

Purpose of the affair is to honor the best performance group of the International Fair, held on November 1, and to get together the past and present members of the club.

Admission will be free for members and the entire cast that participated in the International Fair, and 50 cents for guests. Refreshments will be served, Jacobsen stated.

Five Clubs Change Site Of Meeting For College Hour

Regular club meetings will be held this Friday during college hour, 10:40 to 11:20 a.m., but with a few additions and changes, Ralph O. Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, announced today.

The Chess Club will meet in C-114; the Chinese Students Club in C-266; Delta Sigma Tau in S-133; Zeta Chi in C-224 and the Flying Club in S-315, he added.

Featured during the college hour film series will be a safe-driving movie, And Then There Were Four, starring Jimmy Stewart, to be shown in S-136.

"This film is very effective in pointing out the usefulness of careless driving," Madison W. Devlin, audio visual aids instructor, declared. "It presents the dramatic story of five families who start on trips with only four of them returning home safely."

"A fine production," Devlin added, "the film promises to be very interesting."

Activities other than the already scheduled club meetings for the December 6 college hour have not yet been set. Dean Hillsman, however, plans to announce the various events in the near future.

Eight Copies Of 'Bestseller' In Library Display

A best seller for years and years is now and will be on display in the library's lobby through November 27. The name? The Bible, of course. According to Irene E. Mensing, librarian here, the Bible has outsold every book published in the 20th century.

The actual Bibles on display number eight and are in languages that include French, German, Italian, Spanish and Russian. There will be, however, a total of 33 works, some of them reference works dealing with phases and interpretations of the Bible, Miss Mensing said. The majority of these works has been presented to the college by the San Francisco Bible Class.

Two posters that have served as the inspiration for the display are also shown. Presented by the American Bible Society, one of the posters depicts many kinds of peoples reading the Bible and is entitled the Book Of All Nations, while the other poster shows a Bible open to a page entitled The Bible Speaks.

"All students are invited to view the display," Miss Mensing said, "and we would like to have it known that we are in possession of the Bible in difference languages, and that students wishing to use one of these Bibles need only to ask."

1264 Cited For Illegal Parking

A total of 1,264 traffic citations were issued by the Campus Police for the period of September 6 to November 1, according to Marion Timm, Campus Police chief here.

Campus citations fall under Vehicle Code section 603-A. This section gives the Campus Police the authority to regulate its own parking rules. Citations have been issued for parking in student areas without a permit, parking in the faculty area, parking in yellow, red and white zones, and parking on lawns and in front of fire hydrants.

"More than 1,500 parking permits have been issued so far this fall, 300 more than last semester," Timm stated.

"Limited parking space continues to be a big problem," he added, "and those who feel they are denied of parking close to their daily classes must realize this difficulty, for with parking nearly all over San Francisco quite limited, City College is not unique in this problem."

Next Guardsman Dec. 11

Because of the Thanksgiving Holidays, there will be no edition of The Guardsman until Wednesday, December 11, Dick Moore, Guardsman Editor-in-Chief, announced today.

The cut in publication is for the students' benefit, Moore said, as the lack of a paper preceding the holidays allows for a greater number of papers to be distributed during the rest of the year.

Engineers Here Get Newest Labs On West Coast

City College's department of engineering boasts of having not only the newest air-conditioning and refrigeration laboratory of its type on the west coast, but also one best equipped for the training of professional and semiprofessional engineers.

Students taking courses held in this laboratory do the kind of work which requires a combination of some of the theoretical knowledge of a graduate engineer and some knowledge of industrial practices and applications.

The laboratory was installed in 1953, at an investment of about $75,000, and new features are still being added, according to Donald C. Bryant, department head.

This year the department is adding a hydraulic system, a low pressure air system, and a high pressure air system.

Because of their training and laboratory experience in these systems students are qualified to work in several areas, and chances for employment in these fields are many. Typical jobs include work as an air conditioning engineer, refrigeration engineer, heating and ventilating technician, and operating engineer.

With the rapid development of air conditioning equipment and the extensive application of air conditioning systems in conditioning air for human comfort and for industrial manufacturing processes, there is an increasing demand for students trained in this area, Bryant declared.

In the air conditioning laboratory at the college, students set controls on the equipment to simulate substandard air condition. Then they reset the controls and produce the recommended air condition. In this way, Bryant explained, students not only learn what psychrometric properties produce substandard conditions, but also what psychrometric properties must be changed in order to produce the correct air condition.

Students also learn to determine capacities and select equipment used in air conditioning systems. This work includes calculations of cooling loads, air flow requirements, and humidification and dehumidification loads.

Who Dunnit?

Sometime over the Veterans Day weekend the red and white Redwood Ram in front of Smith Hall was repainted black by a person or persons unknown.

Why and who did the painting is a question which to date is unanswerable. Nobody, but nobody, seems to know anything about it. There are, of course, many theories being carried by the grapevine to explain it.

One is that it was done by a rival college because of a football game. The more cynical believe it had to do with Hell Week, which had just ended before the infamous deed was perpetrated.

Board Members Attend AWS Tea

HONORING the college with their attendance at the Associated Women Students' My Fair Lady Tea and Fashion Show November 6 were Mrs. Edward Mattger, left, and Mrs. Lawrence Draper, Jr., right, both members of the San Francisco Board of Education. Seated between them is Darlene Enfield, AWS president. The tea, held in honor of graduating public high school women, presented an opportunity for Mrs. Mattger and Mrs. Draper to become acquainted with one of California's largest two-year colleges. Mrs. Mattger's appointment to the Board of Education by Mayor George Christopher was confirmed by voters in the November 5 election, the day before the tea. Mrs. Draper has been a member of the board for one year.

Both women sat among the college's faculty sipping tea and enjoying fashions shown by Livingston Brothers. Mrs. Mattger and Mrs. Draper were intrigued with outfits worn by sorority pledges and showed signs of approval for the fashions being modeled by the students.

The college was complimented by both for its fine organization and the interest shown by faculty and students.

Program Sheets To Save Time In Pre-Registration

Students can lay the groundwork for their next semester's program by filling out a proposed program semester sheet, Waddington Blair of the counseling office here, announced last week.

This sheet consists of blanks for the student's name and major. It also has room for requests for names and numbers of proposed courses, the number of units and a list of prerequisites completed or being carried. Blair explained that the counselors do not expect every student to be sure enough of his future courses to be able to fill out the form completely; however, if the facts they are sure of are entered on this form before they report to their counselors, time can be saved.

Engineering majors, for example, Blair pointed out, would be reasonably sure of the courses they are required to carry and in being so informed, should be able to fill out the form without too much difficulty. He advised that the forms themselves should already be in the possession of students, but for those who do not have such forms, they are available at the counseling office, S-160.

Any student unable to keep an appointment with his counselor should inform him as soon as possible, Blair added.

Students may see their counselors by appointment only, but most of the counselors' times are filled through the end of January.

The only unassisted triple play in World Series history was recorded by the Cleveland Indians' second baseman, Bill Wambsganss, in the '20 classic.

Band Offers Prize For Photographs

Shutterbugs were offered the opportunity to win $10.00 today as Meyer M. Cahn, band director, announced a "band publicity photo contest."

"Prizes will consist of $10.00 for first, $5.00 for second and $2.00 for third. The best pictures will be used for band publicity and be reprinted for display purposes," Cahn added. "The pictures must be taken of the band in action."

Judges for the contest will be members of the photography department and the band director. All entries will be compared on the basis of sharpness, contrast, quality, human interest and publicity value.

Pictures submitted must be eight by ten inches in size and glossy. Winners will be required to turn over the negatives to the band, and all entries will become the property of the band, Cahn said.

"The Christmas concert and the football games will provide fine opportunities for the camera addicts to snap their entries," he added, "and everyone is invited to try for the pot of gold."

$100 Scholarship Open To Students

Mrs. Helen K. Anderson, president of the San Francisco Chapter of the Women's Council Real Estate Board, presented a $100 check to Mary Goiding, dean of women here, at a luncheon last Wednesday afternoon, which was held at Simpson's banquet hall.

The money, Dean Golding said, is to be used as a scholarship for a woman student of the college interested in real estate.

Revision In Photographic Department Curriculum To Meet New Requirements Of Modern Photo Techniques

Keeping pace with new demands in the photographic field, the college's photography department has announced a marked revision in its curriculum beginning in the fall 1958 semester.

The vast reorganization, according to Beverly Pasqueletti, photographic instructor here, will involve the addition of courses in motion picture production and basic color photography, plus the combining of black and white photography with the present intermediate class to make a single course which will be entitled Fundamentals of Photography.

The motion picture production course, which has been offered here at night for the past three years, will be added to the photography department's daytime curriculum as a required course for photography majors. This change stems from the recent National Press Photographer's Association conference in San Francisco, where it was concluded that news photographers of the future will have to know the techniques of motion picture production because of the added emphasis on television news reporting.

In regard to color photography, Pasqueletti said that in view of the decisions of many of America's newspapers to adopt full-color illustrations in the near future, the college's photo department will meet this demand by adding a new course dealing with basic color fundamentals. This course will also be required for all photography majors.

Students of criminology will be affected by the advent of a course in criminal photography, which will be mandatory for all majors in this field. Pasqueletti explained that students majoring in criminology will have to be familiar with photographic techniques because of the increasing use of photography by today's police departments.

A new studio for the photo department has been completed here this semester, providing eight large shooting areas and ample electricity for the students. The studio, located in C-249, includes a dressing room for models and a film loading room for photographers.

Concerning job placement of the college's photography students, Pasqueletti remarked, "There are more jobs available than there are qualified students at present." He said there are numerous openings for students in portrait studios, photographic sales, and research laboratories. Plans to inaugurate a work experience program for fourth semester students here that will entail employment in local photographic stores are also being formulated.

In summing up the extensive reorganization of the photography department here to conform to ever-changing needs in this field, Pasqueletti said he feels the department will be better equipped to give students a more definite program toward their goal of photographic employment.

Pasqueletti and Charles L. Lamp and Emmett E. Smith, photography instructors here, have been conferring recently with Louis F. Batmale, dean of Semiprofessional Courses, in an effort to achieve the most satisfactory future program for the college's photo department.

"Under our revised program, the courses will be more concentrated," Pasqueletti added, "and the students will have to work harder."

Veterans' Toy Drive Moves Toward Close

Moving into the final stages of "Operation Toylift," the Veterans Club of the college is making a concentrated effort to bring it to a successful close.

Calls from donors are being accepted at JU 7-7272, extension 4, The Guardsman office, until this Friday, the last day of college before Christmas. Members of the Veterans Club will answer the calls after college hours and on weekends up to December 20 to pick up the donated toys.

In the words of Don Smith, club president, and Vern Huth, 'Toylift committee chairman, "Response so far has been greater than was originally expected but a definite need for more toys still exists. The contacts that have been made to distribute the toys to needy children will easily absorb the amount of toys already collected."

The Veterans have selected several orphanages in the city where the toys will be left on Christmas Eve. These places have been selected from among the ones where the children would have less chances of receiving toys from other sources.

Cooperation from groups and individuals both off and on campus is responsible for the success that this drive is having, Smith added.

The United States Navy recruiting service has donated the use of the truck and trailer in which the toys are being stored. The major newspapers as well as radio and television stations have given space and time to publicize the drive.

The Guardsman has donated the use of its telephone to receive calls from donors and Zeta Chi has volunteered time to wrap the gifts before they are distributed.

"An individual commendation must be given to Ben Northrup, a member of the Toylift committee," Smith said, "for it was he who secured the truck from the Navy and arranged that the drive be publicized locally on both radio and television. The bulk of thanks, though, must go to the donors who physically contributed the toys themselves."

Mayo Fills CAB Office As Foster Takes Leave

Carl Mayo, an active participant in the Drama and Broadcasters Clubs, has been named new president of the Club Activities Board, succeeding Jim Foster, who has taken a leave of absence from the college.

Mayo, interviewed on his first day of office, remarked, "I am so busy trying to get organized on this new job, and trying to get the papers straight on the January election, that I hardly have time to really get the feeling of the presidency. However, I am quite pleased."

Choir Gives Christmas Concert

Soloists, Band, Glee Club To Join In Program Of Yuletide Music Scheduled Here Tomorrow, Friday

A solo by R. H. Hillis will be one of the highlights of the 23rd Annual Christmas Concert tomorrow and Friday, Robert Morton, choir director, said today. Other soloists will include Sue Bellinger and Howard Clark, while William House of the band will play a trumpet solo in the band's special arrangement of Panis Angelicus.

The annual presentation will include performances by the band, the A Cappella Choir, the Men's Glee Club and the Treble Clef which is the women's glee club. Morton will conduct the three vocal groups while Meyer Cahn will direct the band.

The program will offer a wide variety of Christmas music from classic to modern, and will feature several expressions of the Christian spirit, Morton stated, and gave such examples as Schubert's Ave Maria, two Bach Chorales, many carols and a special piece, Alleluia, composed by last year's Scholastic Cup winner, Armen K. Boyd.

Scheduled for presentation twice so that all who wish may attend, the show will be presented first in the cafeteria at 8 p.m. tomorrow. This performance will be preceded by the annual Faculty Association Christmas party in the faculty dining room.

The second presentation will take place in Cloud Hall library during college hour Friday.

"This show will present a fine opportunity for photographers interested in entering the band's photo contest," Cahn said, "as well as affording the music lover the chance to hear much of his favorite Christmas season music."

Prizes in the photo contest will consist of $10 for first, $5 for second and $2 for third. The best photographs will then be used as publicity for the band.

Members of the photography department and Cahn will act as judges of the contest. All entries will be compared on the basis of sharpness, contrast, quality, human interest and publicity value.

Entries must be glossies of eight by ten inches in size. Winners will be required to submit their negatives to the band. All entries become property of the band, Cahn said.

Beta Tau Presents Annual Christmas Dance This Friday

Christmas will again be the theme for this year's Mistletoe Mingle, the annual Beta Tau dance scheduled for presentation this Friday night from 9 p.m. to midnight at the California Club, according to George Victorine, president of the fraternity.

A unique setting for the Charley Stern band has been arranged, with the stage of the California Club decorated like a mammoth fireplace, and the band playing from inside it. "It's an excellent band that will provide top-notch entertainment," Victorine stated.

Additional decorations in a red and green color scheme will be a Christmas tree and lots of mistletoe.

Appropriate dress for the occasion will be cocktail dresses for the women and suits for the men, while the price of admission will be $2.25 per couple.

Committee chairmen for the dance are as follows: advertising, Terry Chavez; refreshments and decorations, Charles Pritchard; tickets, John Rasmussen; coat check, Chuck Young.

Carol Harris New Guardsman Editor

Associate Editor Carol Harris became Editor - In - Chief of The Guardsman and Chairman of the Publications Board November 20, succeeding Dick Moore, who took a leave of absence.

Miss Harris thus becomes the fifth woman to hold the post of editor. Florence Murphy won the editorship in Spring 1937, Pamela Sampson in Fall 1945 and Spring 1946, Carmel Gannon in Spring 1947 and Lounee Morford in Spring 1953.

Tom Tatera was named Feature Editor November 13, while other staff positions remain the same.

Rommel Disqualified; Student Production Off

Student production of The Man Who Came To Dinner has been postponed because of the disqualification of Nicholas Rommel, Michael Griffin, drama director, said today. "Rommel was disqualified because of too many absences, and no replacement was available in the short time before the scheduled performances," Griffin said.

Kits Now Available For January AS Elections

Election kits are now available to students interested in running in the January Associated Student elections, according to Ken Leland, commissioner.

An election kit is the packet containing the three essentials that a candidate must have before he can [illegible] the petition form and the official rules and regulations. These kits may be secured by interested students from the Associated Student office or from the office of the Dean of Men or Dean of Women.

The election schedule contains the dates of the election, the date of the election rally and the inclusive dates for the filing of petitions. Election dates are Wednesday and Thursday, January 15 and 16. An election rally will be held on Friday, January 10, to introduce the candidates to the Associated Students.

Filing of petitions has already started and will continue until Tuesday, December 31. "This is a tentative date because of the intervention of the Christmas vacation," Leland said, "and they will be accepted for some time after the return to college after Christmas."

The petition is the official form on which the candidate states that his qualifications come up to the prescribed standards. There are also spaces for [illegible] of student constituents as well as the signatures of the necessary faculty members.

The election kit also includes the detailed rules and regulations of the election. In general, the candidate must be a member of the Associated Students with a qualifying grade point average who has the backing of at least 15 other members of the Associated Students.

After the candidate secures the signatures of his 15 backers on the petition, he will get a signature from the student bank verifying that he has paid the $1.00 fee to cover costs of cleanup after the election. Next he will take the petition to his counselor who will sign it after discussing with him the potential effect that public office will have on his grades.

After this he will go to the registrar who checks his grade point average against the requirements before signing the petition. Finally, he takes it to the Dean of Men or the Dean of Women, whichever applies, and leaves it [illegible] is turned over to the Election Commissioner.

Additional regulations limit the expenditures on campaigns. An executive candidate is limited to $25.00 and other candidates shall not spend over $20.00. The rules also control publicity stunts during campaigns and forbid any activity around the polls on election day other than that of the voters and the poll workers.

"In addition to the election of student officials," Leland said, "there might be a constitutional amendment election at the same time, if suitable changes in the constitution are decided upon in council before election time."

IFC Names Woods, Thrush Top Candidates In AS Elections

By Kevin Mullen

Unity of purpose and singularity of action characterized the inter-Fraternity Council nomination convention last Thursday when Jim Woods and Liz Thrush secured unopposed the nominations of Associated Student president and vice-president respectively.

The theme of the convention was set by the keynote address of Wayne McFadden, former AS president. He said the delegates should band together in a common effort to attain a common goal.

The first official act of the convention was the installation of Larry Vargo as permanent chairman and Bey Schroth and Audrey Bell as parliamentarian and secretary, in that order.

After Woods and Miss Thrush, the candidates for the remaining executive offices were nominated and voted in. They are Jack Patterson, Associated Men Student president; Audrey Bell, Associated Women Student president; Jim Davis, Sophomore Class president, and Kate Ahern, Freshman Class president.

Seven candidates were nominated for the seven Sophomore seats on council and were approved for candidacy. They are Natalie Hoogasian, Charlie Lewis, Bev Morris, Shelly Osborne, Brenda Schwarz, Jim Thomas and Jackie Wyner.

The first real competition among prospective candidates appeared in the nominations for freshman seats on council. Fifteen were nominated and after two ballots the following seven were decided upon: Pat Arden, [illegible] Bill [illegible], Ken Arnold, Billie Needham, Jim Rigney and Dave Smith.

In an impromptu closing address, Sal D'Angelo, delegate from Zeta Phi Sigma, outlined a plan of action that the candidates should follow by means of an analogy. He said, "Each candidate has a torch in one hand and a branding iron in the other. It is up to the candidates to bring their torches together in a giant bonfire into which they place the branding irons. When the irons are white hot, the candidates should carry them through the Associated Students branding them with the necessity of voting for proper student government."

Shuttle Service For Donors To Blood Bank Starts Today

A "shuttle service" to the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank will be available to students who wish to give to the college blood fund starting today, Ralph O. Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, announced.

The shuttle service will be sponsored by Tau Chi Sigma fraternity and operated by Hiram Kaakua, one of the fraternity members. Each Wednesday at 12 noon, until the end of the semester, Kaakua will meet students wishing to donate blood outside of Dean Hillsman's office. He will then drive them to the blood bank.

Students under 18 will be required to have their parents' consent before giving blood. Forms for this purpose are available in Dean Hillsman's office.

At the present time there are 117 pints of blood credited to the college [illegible] the blood [illegible]. Any student or faculty member of the college is eligible to make one withdrawal from this fund without replacement. Information regarding blood withdrawal can be gained from Dean Hillsman.

Any student who wants to donate blood, but isn't free to do so at 12 noon on Wednesdays, can still use the shuttle service by leaving his name with Dean Hillsman and stating time that he will be able to give blood. The student will then be contacted by Kaakua.

During March of next semester, the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank will bring its mobile unit here for the college's annual blood drive, Kaakua added.

'Operation Toylift' Brings Christmas Magic To Tiny Tots

CHRISTMAS is in the air—that indefinable feeling of excitement and good will toward men.

The Christmas magic can be seen in the bustling crowds rushing home with their treasures, children peering starry-eyed into the window of the toy shop, Christmas carols being sung on the side-walk and the mailmen, their pouches heavy-laden with Christmas greetings being sent and received.

For most children, Christmas is a happy and joyous holiday. But the words Merry Christmas could be devoid of any meaning for the many needy children in homes and orphanages throughout the city. Their Christmas morning will be just an empty stocking without the aid of the Veterans Club of the college.

The Veterans Club is conducting a drive for toys to distribute to these underprivileged children for Christmas. This drive, "Operation Toylift," can be successful only with the support and contributions of the students.

It will not take much time to sort out a few usable toys and to ask family and friends to do the same. Call The Guardsman office to arrange for the toys to be picked up; the Veterans Club will do the rest.

Now is the time to remember the true meaning of Christmas. Christmas is more than brightly-lit trees, packages, out-of-town relatives and plum pudding. Christmas celebrates the birth of a Child, God's gift to the world. It is the spirit of giving. Here is an opportunity to put that spirit to practical use by giving a bit of happiness to a child.

The Veterans Club should be commended for the time, effort and plain hard work they are putting into this drive. We, The Guardsman, strongly urge you, the students, to support "Operation Toylift" and make this Yuletide season a happy one reflecting the spirit of Christmas.

CHAMPAGNE music or shivering sax work! It makes no difference to trombonist college student Dick Morse and his three-groups, dance, Dixieland and contemporary jazz quartets. RADIO and television students here under the direction of Henry Leff, R&T Instructor, assisted in the preparation for the college's engineering department presented on KPIX-Channel 5 this morning.

KPIX shot special motion picture coverage of students, instructors, shops and labs in action last week. The show was approximately five minutes long and centered on the technical engineering curriculum here.

Title of the show is School News. Time was, of all things, 7:55—A.M.!

HOLDING HANDS on the campus is a fine, romantic business. It's symbolic of what makes the world go 'round. (No reference to centrifugal force, either). But this kind of stuff should be reserved for misty, moonlight nights, not casual, 30-second strolls from classroom to classroom.

CHRISTMAS BELLS are starting to jingle all over town again. This must mean that Santa's preparing to make his annual appearance, white beard, red nose and all. He'll have tough sledding this year, though, with that Muttnik running around up there. One solution might be to equip his reindeer with radar.

* * *

RUMOR ALSO has it that Santa's planning to present President Eisenhower with a brand new, ready-to-go moon rocket. Most appropriate. Maybe it could be equipped with a hi-fi system, so on the way up it could stop over in Siberia and play "White Christmas"—United States' brand of brainwashing.

Letters To The Editor

RAM'S HORN

•There IS Spirit

Editor, The Guardsman:

Did I once hear someone say that the spirit at C.C.S.F. "drops" when it comes to supplying a rooting section at sports events?

The Recreation Association showed that the Ram spirit is still lurking around the campus. It was the RA's effort and time which brought 200 interested participating students from seven different colleges, along with 17 faculty sponsors, to participate in their annual sport day on November 16.

Both the men's and women's gymnasiums, as well as the archery field and bowling alley, were filled with the echoes of sport enthusiasts for more than four hours. Hard effort was put in for each individual team to win.

The college archery team placed second as a team and fourth on individual scores. The women's basketball team won two out of three games. Captain Willie Tollefson said, "It was a team any captain, coach, or school would be proud of. Each girl played her best." The RA lost its final basketball game to San Jose 16-14, by which time all had congregated in the men's gymnasium to cheer for either the Blue and White of City or the Blue and White of San Jose.

Volleyball and bowling proved very popular sports as each college was represented by one or more co-ed teams.

The day was finaled with goodbyes after each college enjoyed a picnic lunch on the lawn adjoining both gymnasiums. We supplied the dessert and beverage.

The coaches participating were Santa Rosa, Marin, San Mateo, Oakland, Hartnell, Monterey and San Jose.

I know we at City College are eagerly looking forward to our next college sport day, for the spirit was high, and all showed their appreciation by the well satisfied look on their faces as once again all departed in various directions.

The RA has its faculty sponsor, Ann Casey, and the women's physical education faculty, as well as the RA officers and all those who helped, to thank for a most successful day—one in which we who participated won't forget for some time to come.

'This Day They Must Not Be Forgotten'

Veterans Assure Each Child His 'Good Old Days'

The sound of tiny feet on Christmas morn
The tiny figures clad in gowns of cotton
Upon whose tiny hearts such burdens borne
That on this day they must not be forgotten.

—Rich Pels.

By Kevin Mullen

Adult concern about defense spending, the shoe bill, world conditions and next month's rent can find no room in the world of a child.

As a grown-up looks back on his own childhood, he remembers laughingly and longingly the terror of the first day at a new school, the day he received his first two-wheel bicycle and the last day of school that heralded in three gloriously lazy summer months.

He laughs when he thinks of the rainy days when he came home from school by way of the rushing gutters and pouring rainspouts, and the spring days when he was forced to remain in class while the world outside was bursting with life.

He remembers also with nostalgia the holiday seasons when the chill wind outside only served to accent the warmth and cheerfulness inside the home as the entire family assembled and had a wonderful time without the benefit of television. Everyone has his own personal "good old days."

The world of a child centers around ideas of fantasy. He concerns himself with the Easter Bunny who brings him colored eggs, the Sandman who puts him to sleep and the fairy who puts a quarter under his pillow for his tooth that has fallen out. But most of all, he thinks of Santa Claus, that rosy-cheeked red-suited old man with the flowing white beard who comes down from the North Pole each Christmas Eve with a bag containing gifts for every girl and boy in the world.

The child doesn't question the possibility of such a feat. The toys are there on Christmas morning and his blind loving faith in Santa Claus and mankind is sustained.

Sometimes, though, a stocking remains empty on Christmas morning—a child has been forgotten. There is a sudden burst of tears but childish tears dry quickly. On the surface there are apparently no lasting effects, because within a few years this child realizes Santa Claus is just a fantasy after all. Still, who can measure the inner hurt that this child has suffered. He believed in something without questioning it and his belief was smashed.

The Veterans Club of the college has decided to do their part to see that this does not come about. In "Operation Toylift" they are offering a vehicle by which those who have an abundance of toys can redistribute them to those in need.

A relatively new member of the college family, the Veterans Club, is using this drive to introduce itself officially as an organization interested in making the lives of others a little happier. As adults, the members of the club have their own memories of childhood, and they are doing their bit to see that every child has an equal chance to build his own "good old days."

LITTLE MELODY HAMILTON, age 2, and her sister Marilyn, age 3, show no objections as they contribute their doll and toy cat to Bob Tychinin, member of the Veterans Club and participant in "Operation Toylift."

History Unknown To Many

AS Constitution—How It Grew—1937 To 1957

By Bill Forshay

Unknown to many of the present students here is the history of student government in practice. When the college was founded in 1935, it was the plan and desire of the administration that all students should participate in and have a share of the responsibilities of as well as benefits by self-government.

In order to fulfill this obligation to themselves and to those who would come after them, this first group formulated and adopted a constitution which has served as a basis for student government down through the years. Revised in 1945, 1956, and early 1957, the constitution reached its present form.

As it now stands, the constitution provides for the legislative and the executive branches of government. That is, an elected president, vice-president and secretary, and a cabinet appointed by the president. It also provides for such things as the standing committees, the method of representation in Student Council of sophomores and freshmen, and the voting privilege.

The Associated Student president is only allowed to vote in the event of a tied vote. The cabinet does not vote but is expected to express opinions and give information and advice on the basis of its experience.

The council passes on such questions as AS card privileges, the financial status of student affairs, and related questions. They also pass on the budget which is presented to them by the Finance Committee, this semester headed by Linda McArdle.

"Lack of awareness exists in many students' mind concerning the expenditure and allotment of funds by the Student Council," Miss McArdle said. (Although the by-laws are written in the college handbook which is given to all new students, few of those who receive this book read the constitution and many fail to take advantage of the privileges given to them by their AS membership. An important part of this membership is the right to vote for the elective offices and sit in on council meetings.)

Miss McArdle pointed out that as Finance Chairman, it is her job to help trim budgets prior to their presentation to council. The money for the semester is spent before it comes in, under the present system of government, and the amount to be spent is based upon the estimated income from such varied enterprises as the student bookstore, athletic events, vending machines, drama productions and AS card sales. It is of interest to note that the AS card sales produced an estimated $12,000 this semester, while the bookstore should produce approximately $10,000 and the vending machines an additional $2,000.

When the estimated budget exceeds the estimated income for a semester or when such a budget seems excessive in the light of past requirements, the Finance Committee has the unhappy task of consulting with the counselor of the group in question and asking his help in trimming the budget.

After the budget has been trimmed, the newly estimated budget is presented in itemized form to the council for approval. Lively debate usually

Mary Martin has proved once again she can do no wrong. The recent telecast of Annie Get Your Gun will go down in TV history along with Peter Pan as another Martin triumph.

Although Miss Martin dominated the scene, as usual, a bouquet should be thrown in the direction of John Raitt. His portrayal of Frank Butler was comparable in quality to Miss Martin's Annie. Raitt's role was made doubly difficult by the fact that he was appearing opposite Miss Martin. It is never easy to co-star with a performer who is considered "sacred." He should be given credit for even attempting such a feat.

The TV version of Annie was not, however, in the same class as the stage production. This is not the fault of the performers or production staff. The reason is simply TV is limited. The TV screen is not as spacious as the stage, consequently, the same scope cannot be achieved.

One advantage TV presentations have are close-ups. The viewer can see expressions and emotions which are hidden when watching from the balcony of a theater. This makes him more closely identified with the performer.

When comparing Annie with other TV productions, it should be pointed out that this show had several months "rehearsal." After appearing here in San Franeisco, the show played several months in Los Angeles. Not only could technical problems be ironed out, but audience reaction could be utilized. The script to which the audience did not react favorably could be changed or eliminated.

This is an advantage not held by TV programs. They have no opportunity to know audience reaction until the production is completed. The ratings either climb or drop. There is no second chance.

The entire east never faltered, including the horse. Even the commercials were attractive and cleverly presented. They proved commercials do not have to be offensive.

Annie Get Your Gun provided the entire family with an evening of laughter, music, romance, and clean wholesome fun.

Rams Win Cage Openers

Comeback Effort Beats Donlets In Lidlifter, 42-40

By Anthony Papidas

Winning their initial 1957-58 season basketball contest in sterling come-from-behind fashion, Coach Sid Phelan's Ram cagers upended the USF Frosh quintet, 42-40, in a thrill packed encounter at Kezar Pavilion December 2.

During the first half the jump shot efficiency of Don Guards Ron Cox and Charlie Range, who both had eight points to their credit at the intermission, was counter-balanced by the play of Ram forward Freddie Williams, who chipped in with nine first half digits. Vic Corl's jump from ten feet earned the college five a 23-23 standoff at the half.

With but seven minutes left to play, the game was again deadlocked at 32-32. Don forward Tom McNamara sank two charities, Ram pivot Doug North narrowed the gap to one with a free throw, then Cox scored on a 15 foot jump for 36-33.

Phelan, seeking rebound support, inserted John Henry and Gary Merritt into the contest. Rosenberg sank a 20-foot push to bring the Rams within a point of the Dons, then three consecutive field goals, the first tallied by Corl and the latter two by Williams, brought the count to 41-36 with but two minutes left to play.

Range followed with a fielder, but North countered with a charity for 42-38. With just two seconds of play remaining, Cox sank another two-pointer as the buzzer sounded and the 42-40 verdict was in the books.

Williams, a freshman with service ball experience, took high point honors with 18, followed by Cox with 17.

Phelan, pleased with his team's performance, attributed the clutch triumph to the outstanding work of reserves Corl, Henry and Merritt and the impressive showing of Williams.

Cagers Cinch Win Over Tribe, 61-55, In Final Minutes

By Dave Smith

Action-packed is the only description for the Ram 61-55 basketball victory over the Chieftains from Napa College December 3, at the college gymnasium.

The college quintet broke into an early lead on the opening tip-off with a fast break by Mal McCormick and the sharpshooting of Stan Rosenberg. Al Holder and Doug North. The Rams led at the end of the first quarter 15-5.

Action broke loose in the second quarter when Ram coach, Sid Phelan, put a fresh five into the game. Captain Val Kobza, Rich Molindro and Dennis Cole of the Chieftains put on the pressure. Napa couldn't seem to miss. With a minute left in the first half, Napa pulled up to a 24-24 tie. Quick shots by Rams Vic Corl and Aubrey Tendell brought the score to 28-24. Napa's Cole hit for two and Kobza, a foul shot, which made it 28-27. Ram John Henry put up another foul shot ending the first half at 29-27.

At the beginning of the second half Cole drove in for two and tied the score at 29-29. Holder then made his foul shot and Corl hit a floor shot to boost the score to 32-29 for the Rams. Molindro and Cole hit a field goal apiece to put Napa in the lead, 33-32, but Corl and Rosenberg hit two quick shots to pull the Rams ahead 36-33.

The Chieftains tied the score at 49-49 with five minutes left in the game, but North sank six points to pull the score up to 57-53.

Corl led the college squad with 15 points. Napa's Molindro was the game's high point man with 22. North collected 14 rebounds.

Bakersfield Nips College, 43-42, To Win Tourney

By John Henry

Bakersfield's Renegades won their own tournament last Friday night by virtue of a short jump shot with just seven seconds left in the game, which gave them a 43-42 victory over Sid Phelan's Ram hoopsters.

With 15 seconds remaining in the game Bakersfield grabbed Al Holder's missed free throw attempt, wherein guard Jim Gramata drove under the Ram bucket from where, unable to get a clear shot, he whipped a pass to teammate Mac Ellis, who hit the clincher.

The college five called for a time out, which gave them the ball at the half court line. When the ball was put into play Holder passed to forward Freddie Williams, who took a jump from 25 feet. Everyone in the house thought that the ball would drop in; but it wasn't to be, as the casaba settled in the hoop for a moment then popped out as the final buzzer sounded.

Bakersfield led at the half, 25-23, and during the first 10 minutes of the second half increased its lead to 10 points, only to have the Rams make their almost successful comeback.

The college five will get a chance to meet Bakersfield again at the Modesto Tournament on January 2, 3 and 4. The two rivals are slated to meet in first round action.

In Thursday's semi-finals the Rams got off to a slow start, but finished fast in beating a small but stubborn Fresno quintet, 64-48, in the first round of the third annual Bakersfield Tournament. Williams sparked the college attack with some fancy jump shooting, accumulating 17 points for his day's work.

That night the Rams found enough scoring punch to knock off a good San Jose Jaguar five, 60-49, earning them the right to meet host Bakersfield for the tourney championship. Williams again led the college with a 19 point output.

Williams hit for 47 points in the three tournament games to head the Ram scorers. Forward Mal McCormick was next in line with 37. Center Doug North and McCormick were the main contributors to the college's rebounding prowess.

Ibarra, Shields Voted All-League

Tackles Ernie Ibarra and L. C. Shields (pictured at right) of the college eleven made the first team in the All-Big Eight Conference selections recently released by Dr. C. H. Taggard, Commissioner of Athletics.

Also on the first club were ends Ardell Hamilton (Sacramento), Bruce Byram (Santa Rosa); tackle John Ransome (Stockton) who tied Shields for the second tackle shot; guards Jerry Louderback (Santa Rosa), Larry Lacey (Stockton); center Charles Lassiter (Santa Rosa), and backs Earl Moreno (Stockton), Dave Maggard (Modesto), Art Blunt (Santa Rosa), and Marshall Dragomanovich (Stockton). The Rams' Hank Gibson earned a second team berth.

Fullback Bill Rathbun, halfback Dave Tyree and guard Dick Erier were handed All-Conference honors by the Examiner along with Ibarra, an All-Star in every sense of the word.

Three members of the college's varsity soccer squad have been selected to All-Conference honors in the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer League.

Chosen for berths on the league's first team were captain and center half Al Morales and high scoring center Richard Prydz. His brother, inside left Roland Prydz, earned a position on the second club.

The cross country squad, although not participating in an official league, had runners like Paul Patton, Blake Westman and Ray Batz, who were of All-Star caliber.

Gridders Tie Modesto, Santa Rosa, Stockton For Big Eight Crown With 5-2 League Slate

By Nick Peters

Grover Klemmer's Rams, living up to pre-season expectations, terminated their 1957 grid season in a tie for the Big Eight Conference championship with Stockton, Santa Rosa, and Modesto. The college eleven boasted a 5-2 record in league play with an overall mark of 6-3.

Starting their season with a high national rating, the Rams overpowered the Los Angeles Valley Monarchs, 31-13, in a contest played at Van Nuys. Despite the impressive victory, the college lost the services of talented halfback Gene Craft, who broke his ankle in that contest and, as a result, missed the entire season.

The college gridders suffered a 13-5 setback at the hands of the Los Angeles City College Bearcubs in their second practice tilt. The game, played at a muddy Gallieo field, was the worst for the Rams statistically and was the only contest in which the college couldn't score at least one touchdown.

Opening their league season against Santa Rosa at Kezar, the Rams won by a score of 20-12. The college rolled up a total of 364 rushing yards as compared to the Bearcubs' total yardage output of 85.

The strong Stockton Mustangs found the Rams easy prey as they defeated Klemmer's forces, 24-6, in the college's second league encounter at Kezar. The Rams' ground attack was at its lowest ebb, netting a meager 23 yards. A 42-yard pass-and-run play from reserve quarterback Bob Higgonbotham to end Bob Bleggi put the only sparkle into an unimpressive and helpless Ram effort.

Back on its winning ways the college eleven barely defeated a surprisingly strong Oakland Thunderbird aggregation, 18-12, at Bushrod. The flu-ridden Rams utilized the brilliant line play of Carl Mitchell, Ernie Ibarra, L. C. Shields, and Josh Williams to stop the persistent T-Birds.

The upset of the year, as far as the Rams were concerned, came at the paws of Sacramento's Panthers to the tune of 16 to 7 at the winners' field. It marked the first time in history that the Panthers upended the Rams in Big Eight play.

On the first plateau toward a three game win skein, the Rams walloped the Modesto Pirates 33 to 6 at Kezar in the college's Homecoming tilt. Playing without their All-Conference fullback Dave Maggard and ace quarterback Emmett Lee, the Modestans showed no offensive punch and an inadequate defense.

Making it two in a row, the college downed San Mateo, 25-7, at the losers' field. Quarterback Don Balkie, playing his most brilliant game, tallied twice on runs of 41 and 14 yards. Ibarra was the stronghold of the brilliant Ram line.

Venturing to Richmond for their last league encounter and with the knowledge that a victory would cinch a tie for the title, the Rams whipped the West Contra Costa Comets, 6-0. Quarterback Larry Beldon directed the win, sneaking over from the one-foot line for the game's lone tally.

Having ended their season in a deadlock for the Big Eight crown, the Rams actually performed a miraculous task when one considers the fact that injuries plagued key men throughout the year.

The college was dealt a severe blow when Craft was declared out, but with tremendous reserve performances from backs Sam Rios, Bob Roper and Roger Grimes the Rams ably filled the gap left by the versatile athlete's injury.

On paper the Rams were unparalleled, their supremacy evidenced by the fact that they gained 1,000 more rushing yards than their opponents and outdistanced them by 48 in first downs.

The brick-wall defense the Rams employed was by far the best in the league, holding its opponents to 101 yards per game on the turf and allowing them but 11.4 points per game.

Individually, Tyree and Rathbun waged a bitter struggle for the rushing leadership with the crafty Tyree winning out by 6 yards, 612 to 606. Halfback Roger Grimes averaged 5 yards per carry to head that department. Passing leader was Balkie, who completed 12 out of 34 for 208 yards for the predominantly running Ram attack.

Top receiver was Bleggi, who had built up a great reception margin over his closest competitor Hank Gibson prior to being laid up toward the end of the season. Rathbun took scoring laurels with his 9 touchdowns for 54 points.

RAMBLINGS

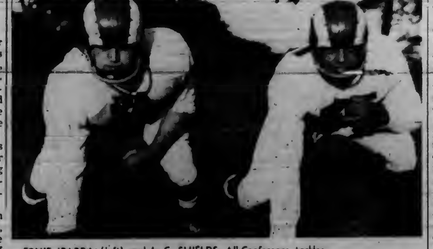
By Nick Peters

THE greatest theft in the American League, since Ty Cobb stole 96 bases in 1909, was the pilfering of Ted Williams' Most Valuable Player award by some unjust and ill-minded sports writers who certainly don't give their occupation any luster.

In the balloting for the MVP three writers from the eight league cities each select ten men whom they consider the most valuable to their team, placing the one whom they regard most valuable first, next valuable second, and so on down the line.

This year's balloting produced the New York Yankees' talented outfielder Mickey Mantle as the MVP simply because two definitely prejudiced reporters listed Williams as ninth and tenth "most valuable."

No doubt about it, Mantle is a great player for his age and will most likely go down in history as an exceptional player; BUT, he can't tie Williams' shoelaces when it comes to hitting artistry and team value. Cite for example New York's ability to win when Mantle was hampered by his bum knee, but Boston's definite sag when Number 9 wasn't present.



There's no doubt in anyone's mind that the insert of "The Splinter" in the ninth and tenth slot was accredited to a personal grievance between the writers and the player. The Boston press, with an apparent guilt conscience beeause of their known hostility toward Williams, broke the secrecy barrier and openly admitted that they put Williams first or second on their ballots.

In our opinion the guilty parties come from the New York trio. It is known that the Gotham press is by far the most influential in baseball, and in all sports for that matter. It also must be admitted that there's no doubt about the Yankees' AL supremacy and that one or two so called MVP's certainly aren't THAT valuable in Casey Stengel's star-studded line up.

This wasn't the first time that Williams suffered defeat for the MVP award at the hands of a New Yorker. In 1941, Williams' third year in the majors, he batted an unbelievable .406; but this superior accomplishment didn't warrant the coveted prize and Joe DiMaggio was selected.

The "Yankee Clipper" was again the villain in 1947. Williams walked off with the bat title (.343), led in homers (32), RBI's (114), and runs (125), but DiMaggio with a .315 mark, 20 circuits, and 97 runs and RBI's was again voted MVP. As a matter of fact Yankees have won the honor six times in the last eight years, a ridiculous monopoly.

The only solution we see is giving the balloting honors for the MVP to the managers and coaches, who know a valuable ballplayer when they see one; instead of allowing this present farce to continue, wherein personal bias is the main contributing factor in the selection of an MVP.

Christmas Season Brings Prospect Of Gay Get-Togethers

By Jerry Redford

WITH all thoughts turned away from the recent midterms, the college's fraternities and sororities attended the annual Inter-Sorority Council Presents last weekend, at which time the pledges of the eight sororities were formally presented.

Thoughts also turned to the long anticipated Christmas vacation, when get-togethers between the groups, along with many glorious parties will occur.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity held a meeting at the home of Jerry Redford last night at which time plans for the pinning of pledges and their dinner were worked out, along with the selection of the outstanding pledge of the semester. In a football game between the pledges and brothers, the latter came out victorious, scoring two touchdowns and a safety, for a score of 15-7.

Delta Psi sorority will have its pledge dinner Wednesday, December 22, pins to be presented earlier in the evening at the home of Shelly Osborne. Those to receive pins are Jean Arietta, Elsa Cameron, Carol Kovacic, Diane Ordway, Judy Fox, Nona Austain and Mary Riordan.

Gamma Sigma Sigma sorority held a meeting at the home of their sponsor, Dean Mary Golding, recently, in order to discuss the progress of their service projects.

Alpha Phi Omega fraternity held a meeting last week at which time plans for their formal pledge initiations and banquet were completed. The banquet will be held this Sunday evening. Plans were also discussed for the fraternity's Ugly Man Contest, one of the major projects of the group in the Spring semester.

Pledges of Gamma Kappa Beta sorority gave a very successful mother and daughter tea recently at the home of Wendy Tibbe. Last Monday night a business meeting was held in order to complete last minute details for the pledge pinning to be held Sunday at the El Portal Restaurant.

Phi Beta Delta fraternity has set next Saturday night for its formal introduction of pledges into the fraternity. Ken Piscitelli, new acting vice-president, is making the arrangements for the dinner, which will be held at Art's Restaurant in Oakland. Christmas plans include caroling by the brothers and their dates at various hospitals in the bay area.

Zeta Chi sorority held a meeting last week at the home of Marilyn Milanesio to discuss plans for the Christmas holidays and to make preparations for the semi-annual pledge dinner to be held soon.

Foreign students from San Francisco State College, University of San Francisco, San Francisco College for Women, Heald's College and City College of San Francisco have been invited to attend a civic reception and dance honoring foreign students in San Francisco.

The reception will be held this Friday at the Ferry building from 4 to 7 p.m.

Top Flight Training Brings Ex-Students Pro Experience

A strong tribute to the college's photography department is the large number of its former students who have recently made good in the field of news photography in the Bay Area.

The college is well represented in this field with former photography majors now working for the San Rafael Independent - Journal, International News Photo, the San Francisco Call-Bulletin, and the San Francisco Examiner.

Playing a major role in the full color photograph program initiated recently by the San Rafael Independent-Journal are Ken Molino and Dick Steinheimer, graduates of the college, and Richard Kulmann, an undergraduate here.

According to Beverly Pasqueletti, photography instructor here, Molino, a graduate, is now head photographer of that paper and has been instrumental in revising the paper's set-up to include full color photographs in addition to handling several writing and advertising assignments.

Another product of the photography department here, Bob Hax, was employed recently by the same paper and is now serving in the Army at Ft. Monmouth, N. J.

This college's loss was International News Photo's gain when Fred Matthes, Goodarz Bakhtiari and Frank Stork graduated. These three young men are currently engaged in laboratory production and preparing prints for wire photos at the San Francisco branch of the INP. Matthes often puts his skill to work by handling various assignments on the Pacific Coast as a news photographer for the INP.

Bob Gelnett, still studying at this college, is also in the employ of INP.

Graduates Fred Pardini and Kenneth Yim are now news photographers on the staff of The Call-Bulletin, while Raymond Morris has similar duties with the Examiner.

"The personnel manager of the INP stated that he will have no employee problems as long as this college's photography department continues to develop men of such high caliber," Pasqueletti said.

Molino, Steinheimer, Hax, Matthes, Kulmann, Bakhtiari and Gelnett gained their initial practical experience in press photography as Guardsman staff photographers.

Council Approves Revision Of 100% Ruling For Band

By Lois Cosden

The die was cast for the college band, when Student Council members approved the 100 per cent rule committee's revised resolution November 19.

"The band plays on" under the following conditions, as stated in the resolution:

"Whereas, Student Council realizes that the band is a unique organization and that college bands have a common problem in regard to technical requirements;

"Whereas, the band is often required to invite musicians to fill technical positions, so that the band may better represent the college;

"Be it hereby resolved;

"1. That the band shall consist of a nucleus of members being 100 per cent in Associated Student card purchases.

"2. This nucleus shall be defined as those who are taking band for units of credit.

"3. That the band director may invite such key personnel as he considers to improve the band.

"4. That these key personnel shall be guests of the college, the expense to be covered by the band budget."

Larry Beldon, chairman of the special committee set up to examine the band problems, submitted these resolutions before gaining final acceptance of the above declaration by the student governing body.

Four vacancies occurred in council and cabinet, when Parliamentarian Walt Schultz, Club Activities Board Chairman Jim Foster, Inter-Fraternity Council President Bill Robison and Publications Board Chairman Dick Moore resigned on leaves of absences.

Carol Harris was sworn into the cabinet replacing Moore and Ralph Prior took oath of office representing IFC.

The cabinet's right to make any motion, except a regular main motion introducing business, was passed at the November 26 meeting.

Undistributed funds now show a total of $301.91, Finance Chairman Linda McArdle reported. The disbanded Phi Rho Pi debating society refunded $105 and $200 was returned from the state conference president's budget.

Annual Recruitment Day Slated For January 15; 135 Prospective Engineers Here To Be Interviewed

Representatives from 30 of the leading business, industrial and government recruitment and procurement teams will meet on the campus at 8 a.m., Wednesday, January 15, to hold their Third Annual Engineering Recruitment Day program by interviewing 135 prospective engineering graduates.

Activities for the day will begin with a breakfast in Smith Hall, during which time the details of the program will be outlined by Joseph A. Amori, director of placement, and Dean Louis F. Batmale, dean of Semi-professional Courses.

Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, will welcome each recruitment and procurement team; and all of the instructors in the engineering department, led by William Mayo, department chairman, will attend the breakfast and be available throughout the day for assistance to the various teams.

The prospective engineering graduates from the ten training programs at the college will be interviewed commencing at 9 a.m. in Cloud Hall, where each recruitment team will be quartered in private offices.

One of the representatives at this Engineering Recruitment Day program will be Dudley Deane and Associates, consulting engineers, who recently sent a letter to the college commending the work of four engineering graduates who are now in their employ.

According to Deane, Gordon Griggs, Victor Henshaw, Roy Maffei and Robert Sharp have all shown remarkable aptitude, high intelligence, and excellent character. Though presently employed as mechanical or electrical designers, they are expected to advance rapidly.

Roberta Frederick Accepts New Job

Eight years of service at the college were acknowledged last week at a luncheon honoring Roberta Fredrick, finance office cashier here, who recently accepted the position of head clerk in the office of Mayor George Christopher.

During her eight years at the college, Mrs. Fredrick was in charge of the student finance office and student activities funds, paid all general debts of the Associated Students, and issued vouchers.

A gold lavalliere with a red stone setting and bearing the engraving "From City College of San Francisco" was presented to Mrs. Fredriek by the Associated Students.

Among those present at the luncheon were Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities; Mary Golding, dean of women; Oscar Anderson, coordinator, Educational Management; John Kelly, Associated Student president; Bev Schroth, AS vice-president; Linda Mcardle, Finance Chairman; Bob Rodriguez, Associated Men Student presidents; Carol Harris, editor-in-chief of The Guardsman, and John Rosso, Publicity Committee chairman.

Profs Dare Sophs Not To Show At Game January 17

The Soph-Prof basketball game, which previously had been on the verge of cancellation, will definitely be held Friday, January 17!

Both teams have guaranteed representation and, barring unforseen circumstances, will meet during a double college hour, 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. in the men's gymnasium.

"We will be there," Sidney Phelan, captain of the faculty squad, promised. "And the Sophs had better be present . . . otherwise we'll flunk them!"

Soph President Larry Vargo, in assuring that the Sophs will field a team, commented: "It is a shame that a few members of the faculty so disillusioned the students that they believed the annual Soph-Prof game was to be cancelled."

The Profs will be entering the court with an impressive 14-win, one-draw, one-loss record. The last Soph victory was in 1951. The tie occurred last January.

Controversy previously arose over an alleged faculty statement requesting the change from basketball to a "less strenuous" game because of "old age." Subsequent reports were that the enraged "red-blooded" members of the faculty were not only willing to meet the Sophs at basketball but also in "any game reserved for the students."

Final details for the scheduled game and other events leading to Soph Week, January 12-17, will be cleared at a meeting of the Soph class Friday in S-204.

Last Film Friday

Concluding the Fall college hour film series will be This Is Automation, to be shown Friday in S-136. Madison W. Devlin, audio visual aids instructor, announced recently.

This film was produced for the General Electric Company and explains the future of automation in industry.

"The film also shows how a complete process of manufacturing can be done without the help of human hands," Devlin added; "it is a new film which is in color and sound."

ensues as portions are approved, disapproved, tabled for investigation, or enlarged.

Then the group is notified of the result concerning its own budgetary request and may begin to draw on the amount approved. This is one of the principal policies of student self-government in the college and one of the most advanced in the United States.

Miss McArdle further stated that she is open to suggestions at any time from any student concerning the two meetings a week of the council. The meetings take place at noon on Tuesdays and Thursdays and last one hour. They are held in B-2.

Dean Hillsman, counselor of the organization, gave high praise to the present council when he said recently, "Students should know that the council this semester is making a conscientious effort to fulfill its responsibility."

An amusing note concerning the office of the AS president is the fact that the sign on his door is overshadowed by the sign atop his door. Labeled "Clinic," perhaps this indicates something?

Fate Of Rivera Fresco To Be Decided

By Don Seratti

The fate of the huge Diego Rivera fresco which has been tucked away in a remote corner of the campus for 16 years and which once figured prominently in the college's plans, may be decided next week at a meeting of the San Francisco Board of Education.

The fresco's days at the college are numbered, according to Dr. Lloyd D. Ludgin, [illegible] of instruction here. It is currently located behind the men's gymnasium in a tiny shack which has been its home since Rivera, the late Mexican artist, donated the fresco to the college in 1941. Present plans to enlarge the men's gymnasium indicate the shack —and therefore the fresco—will have to go.

Where the huge painting will go is a question to be pondered by the Board of Education next week. It's not that the college doesn't want the fresco; it's just that there's no place on the campus large enough to house it. The painting measures 75 feet by 22 feet.

The unusual tale of the fresco without a home can be traced back to 1939. At that time, Timothy Pflueger, the original architect of this college, became director of the "Art in Action" program for the second year of the Golden Gate International Exposition in San Francisco. An integral part of this exhibit was a section in which several prominent artists would be at work before audiences, and an invitation to participate in this program was extended to and accepted by Rivera. His undertaking was a large painting depicting Pan-American unity.

Circumstances leading to this college's acquisition of the painting then entered the picture. Dudley Carter, the sculptor who produced the wooden ram now located on the lawn near Smith Hall here, was among the numerous artists at work near Rivera during the Fair. Also present were Fred Olmsted and Herman Volz, who had been commissioned to do the mosaic murals and the heads of Leonardo da Vinci and Thomas Edison which now adorn the exterior of the Science Building here.

Rivera was so impressed by Carter and the ram he was carving that he included them both in his fresco.

When the Fair was concluded and the time came to dispose of the many exhibits that remained on the grounds, Rivera's association with Pflueger, Carter, Olmsted and Volz weighed heavily in his ultimate decision to present his gigantic mural to this college. The painting, which is divided into several sections for carrying purposes, was placed in the small shack adjacent to the men's gymnasium and has been there to this day.

Original plans had provided for a library to be constructed behind the Science Building in the area now occupied by Cloud Hall; the library was considered an ideal location for the fresco. When plans were modified to include classrooms in the building in addition to the library, thereby rendering the library much smaller, Rivera's fresco was consigned indefinitely to its present inconspicuous hiding place behind the gymnasium, unseen by the hundreds of students who pass it every day.

Pashoian Takes Leading Role In Miller's Drama

Substituting at short notice for Marlene Grant in the leading role of Abigail, Leah Pashoian starred in the Friday and Saturday night presentations of The Crucible.

The play, written by Arthur Miller, is the second major production of the drama group and will be presented again this Friday and Saturday after which it will carry into the spring semester when it resumes February 7 and 8 and February 14 and 15. Admission is by Associated Student card and general admission is $1.00. The play is presented in the Little Theater and curtain time is 8 p. m.

"The new play is an exciting drama about the Puritan purge of witchcraft in Salem," Michael Griffin, director of the group, said. Griffin added that the play is a timely parable about certain immediate parallel issue in contemporary society.

The story reveals how small lies, children's lies—build and build until a whole town is aroused, and 19 men and women go to the gallows for being possessed of the devil.

The story focuses upon a young farmer, his wife, and a young serving girl who maliciously causes the wife's arrest for witchcraft. The farmer brings the girl to court to admit she lied—and here in this trial scene, is the high moment.

It is a thrilling, blood-curdling, terrifying scene as it depicts the monstrous curse of bigotry and deceit. The farmer, instead of saving his wife, finds himself also accused, imprisoned, and condemned.

Other leading roles in the cast include Virginia Rae as Mary Warren, Dolores Duran as Elizabeth Proctor, Bob Phalen as Proctor, John Rose as Reverend Hale, Warren Henderson as Reverend Farris and Stanley Church as Danforth.

Also in the cast are Lottie Varnado, Tanya Soleimani, Virginia Evans, Marilyn Banchieri, George Cooney, Fred Fisher, Nick Massenkoff, Mel Mazzanti, William Forshay, Helen Oretski and John Comb.

Dental Students Capped

Fifteen dental assisting students here were capped last Thursday by Margaret Crave, past president of the Northern California Dental Assistants.

The graduated dental assistants include Louise Jeung, graduated with honors; Susanne Bellinger, Patricia Cayton, Sussanne Costa, Carol Devine, Barbara Giant, Marilyn Hoedt, Dorothy Lew, Anne Louis, Ann Mathewson, Grace Nofte, Karen Shute, Betty Thomas, Shirley Tom and Joan Tubbs.

Jim Woods

THIS SPRING, as in the past, the success of the Associated Students will depend on the planning and forethought of those who are in office. You may be interested in some of the plans that have been made for the coming semester.

First, consideration should be given to the possibility of regaining the "muni" rate card for City College students. (The five cent-a-ride used by the high schools). This would take time but with a concerted effort, we should be able to make good progress toward galuing this privilege.

Second, a survey of the discount privileges on your AS card shows that some discounts are no longer honored. A better range and more variety of discounts should be attained.

Very often it is difficult to ascertain how much money has been spent on certain activities — let alone what the money actually bought. When we spend $25,000 a semester we should be able to find out what we bought! A report should be made to all students on the progress of the various projects of the Associated Students. I would feel it a privilege to make such a report.

Jim Woods,
AS Presidential Candidate

KCSF Features Two Regular Broadcast Programs Weekly

The broadcasting department of the college has two regular programs which run Monday through Friday. Records At Reveille and the KCSF Musical Rumpus Room, according to John Wolff, program director here.

Records At Reveille can be heard Monday through Friday from 7:30 to 8:30 a.m. in the cafeteria, while the latter runs Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 12 noon to 1 p.m., the records courtesy of the Westportal Record Shop.

Other functions of the broadcasting department during the current semester is announcing the games, upcoming plays, and special announcements, Wolff stated.

A poll was recently taken to find out student opinion about the department. The questions and results were as follows: Could the programs be [illegible]; yes; 6, no. Is the music distracting? 17, yes; 120, no. What is your favorite type of music? Show tunes, jazz, semi-classical and classical in that order.

Wolff invited all students interested in the department to visit Monday, Wednesday, or Friday after 2 p.m.

—Next semester KCSF will probably cover the same activities, he said, but another poll will be taken in the near future.

Wolff added that because of the interest in the department shown by students, these and other activities will continue.

Number Of Candidates Still Indefinite; Independents To Bid For 20 Student Offices

Rallying around a common standard of independence "lebenty 'leben" candidates make their bid for 20 public offices at the Associated Student elections today and tomorrow.

The indefinite number of candidates can be attributed to the fact that the final date for filing petitions is one day after the deadline for this issue of The Guardsman.

More important is the fact that there are no distinct party affiliations in this election. The Inter-Fraternity Council has withdrawn its collective support from its previously nominated candidates. The reason for this, according to Ralph Prior, acting IFC president, is that both leading candidates are fraternity members and as such would effect a split in party support. As students go to the polls, then, they are faced with two Independent tickets.

Competing for AS President are Jack Patterson and Jim Woods with their running mates Darlene Enfield and Liz Thrush respectively as Vice-Presidential candidates. Running unopposed for the next top three executive offices are Freddie Hicks for Associated Men Student President, Linda McArdle for Associated Women Student President and Jerry Redford for Sophomore Class President. Kathy Ahern is running against Gary Torres for Freshman Class President to fill out the last of the executive positions.

Candidates for Sophomore members of Council include Audrey Bell, Gene Craft, Charlie Lewis, Bev Morris, Rich Sorauhan and Jackie Myner. Election of Freshman members of Council will necessitate more careful selection from among the 13 in the running.

They include Pat Arden, Mike Biro, Barbara Cahill, Carlene Chimenti, Judi Conner, Jamie Cook, Bill Forshay, Fran Kistler, Kevin Mullen, Bill McDonald, Billie Needham, Ben Northrup and Charlene Peterson.

Voting by AS card will commence at 8 a. m. today and be concluded at 3 p. m. tomorrow. Congestion at the polls will be eliminated since there are no constitutional amendments on the ballot.

Three voting machines will be set up, one in the cafeteria, one at the silver pole, and one at the entrance to Cloud Hall.

The election committee, headed by Jerry Hoffman, recently appointed Election Commissioner, will supervise the actual polling by conducting the operation of the voting machines according to the regulations set down in the election kit. Hoffman succeeded Ken Leland in this position upon Leland's entry into the army last week.

By running on a straight independent ticket in the spring elections of 1954, Bill Boldenweck ended a two

H&R Students Will Run St. Francis Hotel This Friday

Prospective Hotel and Restaurant department graduates have again been invited by the St. Francis Hotel management to participate in their seventh annual "Operation St. Francis" program this Friday, and gain an insight as to the workings of a large, metropolitan hotel, Lawrence B. Wong, head of the H & R placement department, announced last week.

These students, numbering approximately 20, will meet in the hotel at 8 a. m. Then, in accordance with the purpose of the program, they will be introduced to the section of the hotel which deals directly with their specific courses in H & R training.

Throughout the remainder of the afternoon, until 5 p. m., the students will work with the staff members of these sections thus gaining, Wong declared, invaluable information as to the practical side of their chosen careers.

Activities will be brought to a close by a social hour, at which time the students will be given an opportunity to ask questions of the staff members with whom they worked, and become further acquainted with their jobs at a hotel.

Credit for establishing the precedence of a program like this, which is widely described as one of the most unique in the nation, can be given to Daniel E. London, managing director of the St. Francis Hotel. In 1952 he formulated the idea of giving college students a chance to become familiar with the professional side of their careers, and see where their present training is leading them.

With the backing of London and David N. Plant, assistant general manager of the hotel, this program should continue to be a highlight of the coming years, Wong stated.

Students from other departments of the college, including Journalism, Engineering, Law Enforcement, Graphic Arts and Photography, will also be on hand at the invitation of the hotel.

Jack Patterson

I would like to offer you the moon, but this is beyond my powers. In the past, all types of promises have been made by presidential candidates: i.e., more parking, more double college hours, more social activities, and more of this and more of that. So far none of these promises has been carried out nor can they be. My only concern, and the only promise I wish to make is to say that I will, if I am so honored as to be elected, try to serve the whole student body to the best of my ability.

Jack Patterson,

Soph King, Queen Rule Saturday At Traditional Ball

"Out Of My Dreams will be the theme for the semi-annual Soph Ball to be held this Saturday from 9:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. at the Surf Club at 660 Great Highway, according to Larry Vargo, president of the Sophomore Class.

Highlighting the evening will be the coronation of the Sophomore King and Queen. Voting began last Monday and will continue through Friday. The King and Queen will be elected by a "penny-a-vote" method. Coin boxes bearing the pictures of the candidates will be set up in the cafeteria. By placing any number of pennies in the coin box of their favorite candidate, the King and Queen will be elected.

The Ray Hackett orchestra will provide the entertainment for the evening. "It is one of San Francisco's leading orchestras, and he has been successfully featured at the Fairmont, Mark Hopkins, St. Francis Hotels, and the world famous Cocoanut Grove in Los Angeles," Vargo stated.

During intermissions Dick Quinlan will entertain by playing the piano in one of the two cocktail lounges at the Surf Club.

Women will be dressed in formals, while tuxedos or dark suits will be the appropriate attire for men.

Admission to the dance is by Associated Student card. A charge of $2.50 per couple will be made to non-AS members, Vargo added.

Committees for the event are as follows: Audrey Bell, Callie; Sue Dellinger, decorations; Bev Castellacci, invitations; San Franzella, dance; John Rosso, publicity.

Dr. and Mrs. Louis Conlan, Dean Mary Golding, Dean and Mrs. Ralph Hillsman, Dr. and Mrs. Oscar Anderson, Dean and Mrs. Louis Batmale, Mr. and Mrs. John Brady, Dean and Mrs. Lloyd Luekmann, Mr. and Mrs. William Mayo, Mr. and Mrs. Beverly Pasqualetti, and Dean and Mrs. Edward Sandys will be the patrons for the dance.

Sponsors of the Sophomore Class are Mary Perry, counselor here; and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Rogers. Rogers is an instructor of physics here.

Right To Vote Sacred Duty; Think First—Then Cast Ballot

DURING an election year, whether it be national or local, the student is besieged by these words, "The right to vote is a sacred duty and privilege—exercise this right."

This slogan should pertain not only to national and city elections but to City College elections as well. Every Associated Student is given an opportunity to select those persons who will best represent him for the ensuing semester. It is his right to determine the type of leadership the college will have and the government which will guide and regulate its activities and functions. This is indeed a sacred duty and privilege.

Students can exercise the right to vote; few of them do. This statement can be justified by examining the last election. There are over 2,537 AS members; 316 cast votes. The record speaks for itself.

Yet those who do not take seriously the responsibility of voting are the ones who complain the loudest when leadership and government do not attain their expectations. Many times one hears the comment, "How did that jerk ever get into office?"

That "jerk" was elected. He was elected not only through those who did vote, but to a greater degree, through those who did not vote. Had the student taken the time to cast his ballot, the "jerk" might have been defeated. The right to complain belongs only to those who voted intelligently and who feel the leaders are not justifying the faith placed in them.

An atmosphere of non-cooperation and disinterest has pervaded elections during the last few years. Seldom do students take the time and effort to know their candidates, their qualifications, limitations and capabilities. All too often the blindfold technique of voting is employed. The voter casts his ballot for a friend who does not have high qualifications or for someone with a good Irish or Polish or German name.

Every opportunity is offered to voters to meet the candidates. An election rally is held at which time each candidate makes his campaign pledge. In the issue previous to election week, The Guardsman devotes a major portion of its space to the candidates and offices.

Unfortunately, many students turn immediately to the feature or sports page, neglecting and forgetting the major issue. These same "adults" will not have read this far; it is to them that this is dedicated.

It is our fervent hope that this semester's elections will not become the fiasco of the previous one. The chaotic conditions surrounding it were partly the result of the disinterest and lack of cooperation.

The right to vote is the sacred duty and privilege of every AS member. Exercise this right. It is your responsibility to maintain the high standards of leadership and government.

Think first—then vote.

House Burns; Jones Burns; Paper Stops

Employees of a local newspaper's circulation department are well-trained in the art of appeasing embittered subscribers, and settling their ruffled feathers.

Seated behind their steel-topped desks, and armed only with pencils and complaint pads, they calmly attend to the hundreds of frantic telephone calls which arrive nightly from unsatisfied customers.

And with this same equilibrium, they guarantee the solving of almost every problem from missing papers to mischievous carrier boys.

Recently, however, one of these smooth-voiced employees received a complaint from a Mr. Jones, which left him completely stymied and at a loss for words. The call in question went something like this:

"Boy delivered paper, but threw it in puddle. Paper got wet.

"Took paper into house, and put into oven to dry. Paper began burning, and set oven on fire.

"Oven began burning, and set kitchen and house on fire.

"Firemen came and put out flames. Oven destroyed. Kitchen destroyed. House barely saved.

"Wish to cancel subscription. Bad service."

Obviously, the customer was slightly shook and definitely not in the mood to be appeased. His subscription consequently was lost forever.

To take care of similar incidents in the future however, this circulation department is making an addition to "Guidebook of Rules for Answering Their Phones." It deals with customers whose houses burn down.

Plato And Freud Disagree Over Battle Of Sexes

Was Plato holding a cheek-full of tongue when he voiced to the world the philosophy that friendship could exist between man and woman?

This may occur—when elephants think tigers are adorable and monkeys take a shine to snakes.

Although ancient enemies, some dog and cat friends share a pitch of warmth before the fire in the hearth and dip into the same bowl for snacks, but one may be sure that they were indoctrinated into the relationship by a family member separating teeth from throat for a space of five days following the cat's arrival in the house where the dog lived. What ruffling must occur when the humans are out of the house!

Outside the sociological pattern of the home, the single mans and femmes like the suspicious lower animals, are alone and on guard, however defenseless and trusting they may wish to be.

Without the stoking of one another's ego with the fuel of flattery, the warmth of friendship of itself must stand the test. This rare composite of machinery involves parts of delicacy and ruggedness, compassion and patience—equipment difficult to share between man and woman without deeper feelings brimming up.

If Plato thought he saw true friendship somewhere in the battle of the sexes, it was because Dr. Freud was not around to separate the chickens from the eggs.

Point-Of-Triangulation Set Here By US

Surveying Class To Use Station To Map Studies

By Lester Marshall

On September 20 a practically unobserved event of great importance took place on campus. The United States Coast and Geodetic Survey established a point-of-triangulation just east of Cloud Hall.

After calculations are completed in Washington, D. C., this will become one of the triangulation stations forming a national network. The advanced surveying class here will use this new station in some very practical survey problems. The point will also be available for use by various government agencies as well as private surveyors, on local surveys.

Precise angular measurements were made at night, with the aid of light signals, from this point as well as points on Rincon Hill, San Bruno Mountain and Twin Peaks.

Surveying, one important phase of engineering, is far from being out of the category of science as it embodies the art of measurements.

Horizontal and vertical angles are measured with the transit, distances are measured with the steel tape, and elevations are obtained with the level and rod. The surveying student is well grounded in these fundamental operations. Computations in connection with these measurements involve the use of simple trigonometry.

To operate successfully in the modern practice of surveying and mapping, the student must become acquainted with modern equipment and methods. In the advanced surveying class he has at his disposal the most modern equipment including optical and other precision instruments. He also receives instruction in basic photogrammetry, where aerial photographs of this area are used, and state coordinates, which are used in some of the field problems.

In addition to these, such modern instruments as the geodometer, which uses light waves to measure distance, and the tellurometer, which uses electronic waves, are coming into use. It is no longer possible for one to compete in modern surveying without a good formal education.

The land surveyor, who establishes property lines, must be well versed in the usual measurements, computations and mapping in connection with surveying. He must also understand the legal aspects in which he becomes involved. This college is unique in offering instruction in this area as well as in the other phases of land surveying.

The accuracy and precision of survey work has increased to the degree where the most modern equipment and methods must be used on many jobs.

The enviable reputation of the college's two-year program in surveying and mapping extends far beyond the borders of California.

Because of the wide background of the graduates of this program, they have found success in a variety of operations in the field of surveying and mapping with various city and county engineering departments, with U. S. and state agencies such as the Division of Highways, with Public Utilities, and with private subdividers and land surveyors.

(For engineering recruitment day, see page 4.)

Foresight — New Shows Greet '58; Some Good, Some Bad

By Carol Harris

THE start of a new year is an excellent time to review the crop of new shows and pass judgment on them, though many will have dissenting opinions.

None of the three debuting situation comedies, Bachelor Father, Eve Arden Show and Sally, has presented anything new or exceptional. Bachelor Father has fared fairly well, occasionally displaying the sparks of warmth which made Make Room For Daddy and Father Knows Best standard favorites.

Sally has ridiculously involved plots plus the dubious talents of Joan Caulfield. The canned laughter does not add to the viewer's enjoyment. The show's only asset is Marion Lorne.

Eve Arden's new show is obviously just that—Eve Arden's show. The entire program and cast are sustained by her own brand of comedy.

Pat Boone, Patrice Munsel, Frank Sinatra, Guy Mitchell, Patti Page and Gisele MacKenzie made their musical debuts. The only continuously entertaining show is Miss Munsel's. She disproves the old adage that operatic singers cannot put across a pop song.

Pat Boone and Guy Mitchell have casual, a la Perry Como type programs. They are not spectacular nor scintillating but provide easy-going, pleasant entertainment.

Two of the most widely publicized stars, Sinatra and Miss Page, have been two of the season's biggest disappointments. Sinatra fails because of his lack of interest and his refusal to do live shows. Too many guest stars have proved to be Miss Page's downfall. The program is too diversified; it is deprived of continuity.

At times, Miss MacKenzie has a lively, fast-paced program. It unfortunately has spells of mediocrity.

Have Gun Will Travel, Sugarfoot and Wagon Train capture top honors in the western category. Each of them has realistic acting and unique basic plots.

Maverick has outstanding stories, but does not offer the viewer enough to keep him entranced for a full hour. Maverick, however, has topped Steve Allen and Ed Sullivan in recent ratings.

John Payne does a highly acceptable acting job in The Restless Gun, but the program is not in the higher classifications of westerns.

In the documentary field, The Twentieth Century consistently presents informative and interesting productions. The subjects have ranged from the current missile program to the love story of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

Some programs have succeeded; others are failing. The fate of these new shows will be determined during the next few months.

Shots At Ramdom — Curvaceous Contours Enjoyed By Tourists

By Tom Tatera

THE city is well-known for its curvaceous contours. This attribute (?) was best described by a local columnist recently. "The reason tourists like this town is simple," he wrote, "whenever they get tired of climbing it, they can always stop and lean against it." A bit exaggerated, maybe, but pretty close to the truth.

Hoopsters Open New Year By Winning 20th Annual Modesto Tourney With Outstanding Defense, Good Offense

By Nick Peters

Displaying an efficient offense, an unparalleled defense, and a consistent desire "to win it for Sid," the college cagers swept through four tough opponents to win the 20th annual Modesto Tournament on January 2, 3 and 4.

Victims Bakersfield, West Contra Costa, American River, and San Jose (in that order), saw their main offensive threats shackled by the defensive artistry of 6-8 center Doug North, 6-4 forward Mal McCormick, and 6-1 forward Freddie Williams; their defense peppered by the clutch shooting of McCormick, Williams, and guard Vic Corl; and their all-around play disrupted by the alert ball handling of guard Stan Rosenberg and the irreplaceable Williams.

As a first round opponent the Rams drew Bakersfield, which had upended the college early in December for the Bakersfield Tourney crown. Fulfilling their vendetta, the championship five, shooting with unbelievable accuracy, jumped to a 41-22 halftime edge. Substituting at will with an able bench, the Rams continued the onslaught, posting an 80-58 verdict. Williams captured high point honors for the Rams with a 17 digit output.

In the quarterfinals the college met its toughest opposition in the West Contra Costa Comets and their heralded center Cornell Green. North held Green to 12 points, (6 coming in the last two minutes of play), Williams sank the winning free throw with 18 seconds left, and Corl bucketed 10 of 12 field goal attempts to bring about an important, if not an impressive, 61-58 Ram triumph.

North grabbed 14 rebounds to pace the Ram defense. Corl made up for the rest of the team's sloppy shooting by tallying 22 points.

The Saracens from American River were the next threat, fall at the hands of the classy college players. With McCormick holding high scoring American River forward John Blackwell to 12 points and with Williams potting 22 markers, the Rams whipped the surprisingly difficult Saracens 73-58.

In the other semi-final encounter San Jose's Jaguars upset previously undefeated, and Tournament favorite, Allan Hancock of Santa Maria, 77-64, to give them the privilege of meeting the Rams for the crown.

Before a standing-room-only crowd of 2,250 the Rams, displaying an air-tight defense and a well-balanced offense, upended a terrific Jaguar club 64-48 to capture the well-earned Tournament first place trophy.

North and McCormick again excelled on defense. North held San Jose's tremendous pivot Nick Clock to a mere 11 points while "Mac" pulled down 17 rebounds. The entire starting five hit double figures with McCormick setting the pace at 16 and Williams and Corl closely behind, contributing 14 each.

For their outstanding work each member of the team was awarded a miniature gold basketball, while Corl and Williams were singled out as members of the All-Tourney team and received gold Bulova watches.

The person who was the happiest, however, was Coach Sid Phelan, who handled the reins of one of the most balanced teams in the Tournament's history, and a team which fulfilled one of his major coaching ambitions—that of winning a Tournament. After all, the squad played "to win it for Sid."

Cagers Nominated As Team To Beat In Big Eight Race

Sid Phelan's Rams have been nominated as the team to beat by the various Big Eight hardwood fans.

It's true that the talented five copped the Modesto tournament several weeks ago but this is no indication that Phelan's cagers can grab the Big Eight crown. The matter of the fact is that no Big Eight conference team which has ended on top of the pack at Modesto has done likewise in the conference.

The Rams' league opponents:

Oakland: The Thunderbirds have posted a good practice season mark and have a well-balanced attack. Oakland fans are of the opinion that this is their year. Humboldt State transfer Joe Johnson at center and guard Rufus Hawkins should pace the T-Birds.

West Contra Costa: Coach Rudy Hansen no longer has J. C. Banks, Tyler Wilbon and the rest of last year's five but has still found enough material to be regarded as a definite threat. Look for Cornell Green and John Carmelich, both 6-3, to do most of the scoring.

Sacramento: Coach Jerry Anderson's Panthers should be right in the thick of the title chase with a well-balanced ball club boasting capable veterans and several good newcomers. Terry Bennett, an All-Tourney selection at Modesto, is the man to watch.

San Mateo: Ray Balsley's Bulldogs have been hot and cold so far this season. San Mateo has been regarded as a second division ball club, but the peninsula quintet could be a sleeper. Two starters from last season's squad, guard Bobby Sherrard and forward Roger Locke, should lead the attack.

Modesto: The Pirates will definitely be weaker by the loss of last year's first seven men. The club, however, should improve with every game and will be gunning for the favorites. Guard Mike Triplett and center Mike McCutcheon should lead the attack.

Stockton: The Mustangs are under a new coach, Carl Peregoy, and have lost a lot of men from last year. The Tange haven't shown too much so far this season but will be no easy pushovers. Center Ed Davidson has been the top scorer and will be a hard man to stop.

Santa Rosa: Not too much is known about Santa Rosa, although they had a young team last year, which should be improved. The Bearcubs are at their toughest when they're underdogs and should prove themselves a good team by the season's end. Guard Dolph Camilli, Jr., returns along with forward Forrest Ammons.

Ram Sportsmen Get Due Honors In Hall Of Fame

Concrete establishment of the hall of fame, started last semester to honor the college's outstanding athletes, has been accomplished by the athletic department here, according to Larry Beldon, Men's Athletic Commissioner.

Designated for hall of fame recognition by a board of coaches last semester were Ralph Hillsman, basketball; Clint Redus, track and field; Burl Toler and Willie Hudson, football; and Helen Crlenkovich, diving. One athlete will be accorded this honor in each ensuing year.

A plaque bearing the athletes' names will be placed in a trophy case to be built in the student activities building which will be erected across from Smith Hall. In the meantime, the plaque will find a home in a temporary trophy case to be placed in cither Smith Hall or the college library.

Tourney's MVP Choice Frowned On By Many

Stressing the almost forgotten art of defense, Coach Sid Phelan's Ram cagers emerged victorious in the 20th Annual Modesto Tourney, which featured California's finest two-year college quintets.

The city of San Francisco, with its AAA prep league and the mighty USF Dons emphasizing defense, certainly wasn't let down by the superior Ram performance, which proceeded to harness the offensive prowess of its opponent's "big men."

Taking nothing away from Bakersfield's Mac Ellis, West Contra Costa's Cornell Green, American River's John Blackwell, and runnerup San Jose's Nick Clock; all excellent ballplayers in their own right, we instead want to heave laurels upon Rams Doug North and Mal McCormick, who proceeded to hold that talented quartet to just 45 points in the four contests.

In this era of racehorse basketball it was interesting and entertaining to watch countless opponent offensive plays baited by the brilliant shot-blocking and torrid rebounding of North and "Mac."

Offensively the college five utilized a balanced scoring attack featuring Freddie Williams, Vic Corl, and McCormick in the lead roles. The sensational Williams tallied 66 markers, Corl accumulated 63, and "Mac" had 57. North and playmaker Stan Rosenberg followed with 33 and 32.

Your reporter, along with the thousands of spectators, was amazed at the sparkling array of standout performers at the Modesto affair, many of whom easily could be playing first club on several college and university teams.

Among these were Hancock's 6-2 forward Paul Denham and dazzling 6-11 guard Paul Howard, who earned a berth on the '57 All-Tourney squad. American River featured 6-4 forward John Blackwell, who averaged over 20 points per for his four Tourney games, climaxed by his 31 digit effort against Cerritos in the opening round.

Bakersfield's top gun was 6-5 forward Dave Van Waganen, a transfer from the University of Utah, who combined with Mac Ellis and John Cannady to give the Renegades an able trio of front liners. Van Waganen had his field day against Fresno in the second round, tanking 28 points.

One of the Tourney's better teams, College of Sequoias, fielded an exciting ball club spearheaded by 24-year-old forward Ray McCarty and 6-3 guard Joe Rycraw. McCarty, a freshman, was, prior to his entrance at the Visalia college, player-coach of a good Edward Air Force Base quintet. To date he has been averaging well over 23 points per game. In the Tourney he scored 50 markers in two contests—27 against Stockton and 23 in the brilliant encounter against Hancock. Rycraw has been scoring close to 20 per this year, highlighting his efforts with a 27-point spree against Hancock.

Fresno's star performer was Polly Carver, a very clever ball handler who scored 40 points in two contests. Dick Markowitz, Long Beach's 6-4 center from Allentown, Pennsylvania, was an exceptionally effective scorer, bucketing 90 points in a trio of games.

The Los Angeles City College five featured the scoring of 6-3 forward-center Gene Freeman, who actually was a lot better than he appeared, accounting for 75 points in three hassles. He also had the top individual scoring performance with 36 marks against Cerritos.

Centers Terry Bennett, Sacramento; Nick Clock, San Jose; Eddie Davidson, Stockton; and Cornell Green, West Contra Costa, terminate our script on the outstanding players of the '58 Tourney.

Bennett averaged 30 points for three contests in leading his team to the consolation title. The fortunes of the Panthers in the rugged Big Eight rest largely on the shoulders of this very talented lad.

Clock is the main cog on a well-balanced San Jose club. He averages about 20 per, is a demon on the boards and is at his best in the clutch.

Davidson will give many a Big Eight coach a pain in the neck before the season's end with his high scoring performances. He scored 29 points against an excellent Sequoias outfit to prove his valuc to the Mustangs.

But then again, one or two man teams don't win ball games. Out college five boasts of five very good men with an extreme desire to win together, making them the best team at Modesto, and perhaps the best in the entire state.

• • •

The All-Tourney five, which was awarded gold Bulova watches, included the college's Williams and Corl, plus Hancock's Denham, Sacramento's Bennett, and San Jose's Clock.

Denham was also honored as the Most Valuable Player and in our book he didn't really deserve it. At the termination of a long season it's quite proper to award the MVP to a member of any team, be it a championship outfit or a last place club. But in a short Tourney such as this, the award should go to a member of the winning team, who guided his club to the top, instead of to a person who helped a top-seeded aggregation take third!

party political system that had existed at the college since 1947. By the fall elections of 1956, the last remaining party, the IFC, discontinued political affiliations. Since that time, the IFC has steadily built itself up as a contender to be reckoned with but in this election they have again left the political scene in favor of the independents.

Cagers Breeze Through League Lidlifters Against Mustangs, Pirates; Face Comets Friday

By Don Serattl

Moving into an early lead on the strength of Doug North's torrid first half shooting, an alert Ram five showed its heels to the Mustangs of Stockton College for a lopsided 72-43 victory last week in Stockton.

The game's outcome was in doubt only before the opening whistle, for the Rams rolled to a 22-9 margin midway through the first half to lead the Mustangs into a corral from which they could not escape.

While North and Mal McCormick were hitting field goals with deadly accuracy, the outclassed Mustangs were completely stifled by the college's heads-up defense, breaking up of scoring plays, and control of the backboards. Ed Davidson, Stockton's high-scoring center, managed only one shot from the floor and a mere five point total against Ram pivotmen North and John Henry.

The college's barrage continued into the second half, too. Leading 39-23 at halftime, the Rams at one point scored 12 successive points and once led by as many as 33.

Owning such an insurmountable lead, Ram Coach Sid Phelan cleared his bench in the second half, and the reserves, while gaining valuable experience continued to increase the already huge lead and keep their foes on the run.

North's 16 points—all scored in the first half—paced the Ram scorers. He sank seven field goals and two charity tosses. Mal McCormick followed with 14 markers by virtue of his seven shots from the floor. Next in line were Vic Corl with 11 Fred Williams with 9, and John Henry 8. North and McCormick led in rebounds with 10 each.

Ramblings — Top Caliber Talent Plentiful At Tourney

Diego Rivera's Fresco To Stay Here; Board Of Education Votes For It, 6-1

By Don Seratti

The tale of the late Diego Rivera's "fresco without a home" will have a happy ending after all. The huge painting, whose future was undecided until last month, is going to remain at the college, Dr. Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction here, announced last week.

Primary driving force behind this college's unexpected retention of the huge mural was Milton Pflueger, architect for the college. At a meeting last December 17, the San Francisco Board of Education, in whose hands the fate of the painting rested, accepted by a 6-1 vote Pflueger's proposal to keep the mural on the campus, thus ending years of doubt as to where the painting would be housed.

The same plans for expansion of the college's campus that necessitate removal of the shack in which the fresco is now situated, also call for construction of an arts and classroom building to include a little theater. Pflueger suggested that plans for the little theater be altered to permit placing the fresco in the lobby. New alteration plans adopted will involve extension of a wall between the lobby and theater.

Dr. Luckmann estimates that the arts and classroom building will be completed by Fall 1960.

An interesting controversy arose when Commissioner Adolfo de Urioste cast the meeting's lone dissenting vote. He contended that the ideological background of Rivera—who was a communist and a follower of Leon Trotsky—was inappropriate.

This was countered, however, by former Board of Education president Bert W. Levit. He said that if all art work was judged by the artist's political and moral standards, America's art galleries would be virtually empty.

The board's acceptance of Pflueger's dramatic proposal marked the end of a 16-year period of confinement for the 70-by-22 foot fresco, whose title is "Marriage of the Artistic Expression of the North and South on This Continent."

Rivera's association with Timothy Pflueger, original architect of this college, led to his donating his gigantic mural to the college following the 1939 World's Fair held on Treasure Island, where it was exhibited.

Plans to house the mural in a library to be built behind the Science Building went up in smoke when the library became only a part of Cloud Hall and lacked sufficient space for the painting. So for several more years the mural remained unnoticed in its hideaway, the little shack behind the men's gymnasium, until it was freed from obscurity last month by Pflueger's idea.

Pinning Dinners, Election Of Next Semester's Officers Fill Calendar

By Jerry Redford

SELECTION of officers for the coming semester, along with the pinning of pledges is consuming much of the time of the fraternities and sororities on the campus.

Theta Tau sorority sisters all spent a very happy holiday vacation. Activities in which they participated were caroling, a Christmas party with their brother fraternity, Beta Tau, pledge dinner at Bermuda Palms, and a snow trip to Squaw Valley.

Delta Psi sorority held an election meeting last week at the home of Nanci Borgstrom. Those elected to serve for next semester were Audrey Fones, president; Gloria Cloke, vice-president; Ilse Hellmann, second vice-president; Gretchen Brede, pledge mistress, and Nona Austin, treasurer.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority held its pinning ceremony at the home of Bev Castellacci recently, followed by a dinner at the El Portal Cafe. An election meeting was held last week at the home of Charlene Peterson. Elected were Miss Peterson, president; Mary Hanly, vice-president; Pat Piffero, pledge mistress, and Wendy Tibbe, historian and photographer.

Alpha Phi Omega fraternity officers for the spring semester are Brower V. Dimond, president; Bob Watson, pledge master; Ralph Gowan, vice-president, and Jerome Hoffman, treasurer. An installation banquet was held at Bermuda Palms Sunday night.

Zeta Chi sorority held an election meeting at the home of Sandy Lary recently. The following were elected: Judy Watson, president; Ellie Villanova, treasurer; Carol Spalding, corresponding secretary; Judy Greenwood, historian, and Betty Thomas, vice-president. Installation of officers will take place Sunday at the Fort Scott Officers Club in the Presidio.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity held its semi-annual pledge dinner last Saturday evening at Flor d'Italia Restaurant. Pledges who received their pins were Dick Berger, Rich Brandt, Ron Funke, Don Gifford, Dennis Kalos, Roger Nyberg, Dick Quinlan, Rich Sarouhan, Bob Terry, Kip Wixson and Dave Moylan. Members of the fraternity presented the outstanding pledge trophy to Dick Sarouhan during the dinner. At an election meeting held at the home of Jerry Redford on Sunday, Al Morales was elected president. Other officers include Dave Vargo, vice-president; Bob Langston, treasurer; Ron Vierra and Dick Sarouhan, secretaries; Ron Funke, custodian; John Rosso, historian; Marc Feibusch, sergeant-at-arms, and Jerry Redford, pledge master.

Question: "Why doesn't our club ever have anything printed in Club Cavalcade?"

Answer: Your organization must turn in information to The Guardsman office, S-304, each Wednesday before 2 p.m.

Operation Toylift To Become Annual Project For Vets

Because of the success of "Operation Toylift," the Veterans Club of the college plans to make the toy drive an annual project, according to Don Smith, club president.

"This was our first attempt at a drive of this sort," Smith stated, "but it still turned out better than we had originally expected. After our experience in this, our first drive, we have decided to continue it in following years."

The veterans divided the collected toys into three groups. The bulk of them went to the Youth Guidance Center for distribution to the younger children who are held there in transit to foster homes.

A few toys were selected and given to private homes where the need for help existed. All the toys which through disrepair were not ready for immediate use by the children were turned over to the Fire Department drive for repair and distribution.

Smith again extended his thanks to all who contributed their time and toys to make the drive the success that it was. "It's our first drive," he said, "but definitely not our last."

'Simply Dying' Profs, Sophs Say Ready For Game

By Robert Liu

Bitter faculty members last week re-echoed a challenge preliminary to the Soph-Prof tussle this Friday in a double college hour, 9:50 to 11:20 a.m. The 10 a.m. classes will be canceled, according to an administrative announcement.

The Profs are simply dying" to tangle with the Sophs in the controversial basketball tilt in the men's gymnasium.

"The faculty's boiling mad at all those recent insinuations that they're over the hill," Sid Phelan, Prof squad captain, said.

"We're going to settle this matter on Friday, but I sure hope the game doesn't prove to be too lopsided. The Sophs haven't really offered us much competition yet.

"As it stands, we're not even practicing . . . we simply don't need it and besides we're all in good shape."

The Profs will be entering the court with an impressive 14-win, one-draw, one-loss record. The last Soph victory was in 1951. The tie occurred last January.

Sophomore President Larry Vargo, unmoved by the faculty's outstanding record, reiterated his assurance that the Sophs will field a team.

"We're ready and just raring to go," Vargo said.

The basketball tilt, which is part of Soph Week celebrations, ending this Saturday, previously stirred a controversy when the faculty allegedly requested a change from basketball to a "less strenuous" game because of "old age." Subsequent reports were that the enraged "red-blooded" faculty members were not only willing to take the Sophs on at basketball but also in "all the games reserved for the students."

Vargo said that although no definite program has been set as yet, the double college hour will also furnish entertainment of some sort.

The probable starting lineups for Friday's game:

Faculty: Phelan (captain), Roy Diederichsen, John R. Gaddy, Ralph O. Hillsman, Grover Klemmer, and Alex Schwarz.

Sophs: Vargo (captain), Larry Beldon, Lonnie Earnshaw, Don French, Freddie Hicks, Al Morales, Art Paul and Bob Rodriguez.

Referee: Bill Fischer.

Council Dinner Set Tomorrow

Presentation of the Outstanding Service Award will be a main feature of the semi-annual Student Council dinner in Smith Hall tomorrow night. Bev Scroth, Associated Student vice-president and official hostess, announced yesterday.

This award is given to a student who did not hold an Associated Student office this semester, but whom the council feels has given the most service to students of the college.

Awards and keys will be presented to AS officers. Installation of the newly elected AS President will follow. He in turn will then install executive officers who will serve with him next semester.

A social hour will begin at 6 p.m. followed by dinner at 7 p.m. The dinner will be prepared and served by the Hotel and Restaurant Department under the supervision of Chef Pierre Coste.

Associated Women Students Present Semi-Annual Feminine Fling Awards Supper 6:30 Friday At Smith Hall

Let's Plan Our Hope Chest Theme To Be Featured At Dinner

Plans are now being completed for this semester's Associated Women Student Feminine Fling awards supper, Let's Plan Our Hope Chest, to be held this coming Friday in Smith Hall at 6:30 p.m., Darlene Enfield, AWS president, announced today.

Entertainment for the affair will be provided by the City of Paris through its bridal counselor, who will advise the women on the fittings for their new homes.

This event is sponsored jointly by the AWS, Inter-Sorority Council and the Recreation Association, and the purpose of it is to gather the women students in a really feminine setting for the installation of the new AWS, ISC and RA presidents. Present RA president is Bev Wilson.

As has been done in the past, the Dougherty trophy will be awarded to the sorority with the highest grade point average. The presentation will be made by Carol Olsen, president of the ISC, Miss Enfield added.

Appropriate dress for the occasion will be pedal pushers. Invitations were already mailed and all women students are expected to attend, Miss Enfield further added.

Committee chairmen were appointed by Miss Enfield as follows: Marilou von Kleist, publicity; Miss Olsen, entertainment; Marilyn Hannon, food; Ivonne Mar, decorations; Annette Hersh, set-up; Ruby Broadway, invitations, and Junice Hall, serving.

PUTTING the finishing touches on the final plans for the AWS Feminine Fling are committee members Joan White, vice-president of the AWS, and Bev Wilson, president of the RA.

First Place Won By Pistol Team

Against strong competition, the Campus Police pistol team won a first place trophy at the Oakland Pistol Club, December 1, their last time out.

Winning the match with a score of 1,046, the Campus Police team was followed by the second team with a score of 992, and the Alameda Sheriff's office with a score of 966.

Individual first team scores were for Tom Severson, 265; Jim Keane, 264; Fred Fitzgerald, 264, and Lou Paglierani, 253. Scores for the second team were Geraldine Rush, 253; Dave Gehringer, 253; Ralph Brown, 248, and Marion Timm, 238.

Severson won a first and third place medal in 38 caliber matches. Gehringer also won a first and a third place medal in 38 caliber matches.

Sixth Army Band Presents Concert

Music lovers of the college will have an opportunity to enjoy the playing of the Sixth Army Band in the Cloud Hall library during the double college hour Friday.

Starting at 10 o'clock, the band, which is stationed in the Presidio, will present a small concert which will include Guard of the Tzar, by Tschaikovsky; Grand Tetons, by Ogden, and Music For A Carnival, by Grundman.

Several other numbers will be presented by the 40 to 50 men comprising the band, and there will also be special solo numbers presented by the band's bagpipers and drummers.

Ken Leland Leaves Election Post To Join Uncle's Army

By Lois Cosden

A major shift took place last week in the Election Commission at the height of its "busy season," when Commissioner Ken Leland resigned to serve in Uncle Sam's army. His position was filled by Jerry Hoffman.

Hoffman's first action in office was to ask for an extension of the deadline to file petitions for the Associated Students elections to January 10. His request was granted by the Student Council.

Larry Vargo, sophomore president, reported that petitions are available to file for the Sophomore King and Queen contest. The winners will be feted at the class ball this Saturday at the Surf Club. Music is to be provided by the noted Ray Hackett and his band, Vargo added. The question of formal or semi-formal dress arose and died for lack of council's willingness to make such a decision for the entire Sophomore Class.

Finance Chairman Linda McArdle asked for and received $333.32 for Block SF trophies.

Stan Rosenberg, Awards commissioner, told the meeting of the winning of another first place trophy by the college for the basketball team's victory in the Modesto tournament.

Plans were approved by Dr. Louis Conlan, college president, for the installation of a Hall of Fame trophy case in Smith Hall, when renovation of the building occurs, Larry Beldon reported as co-chairman of the special committee set up to find quarters for the exhibit.

Associated Student President John Kelly informed council that the Campus Affairs Coordinator will take over the duties of the Transcript Chairman next semester.

A motion was passed to charge one cent a vote in the Soph King and Queen contest to raise funds for the AS scholarship.

Nominations for the Outstanding Service (to the college) Award will be submitted at the next meeting.

Third Annual Engineering Recruitment Day Today

Thirty Bay Area recruitment and procurement teams will visit the campus today to meet with and interview the 135 prospective engineering graduates in the Third Annual Engineering Recruitment Day.

Initiated in 1954 by the college placement service in conjunction with the engineering department, Engineering Recruitment Day brings together the leading business, industrial and government organizations of the San Francisco Bay Area who utilize engineering talent. Employers include a wide range of industrial activites extending from highway construction to electronics, TV and shipbuilding.

Registration will start at 8 a.m. in Smith Hall and will be followed with a breakfast in the faculty dining room. A brief program will be held during the breakfast, and will be presided over by Joseph A. Amori, placement director here. Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, will welcome the guests followed by Dr. Harold Spears superintendent of San Francisco Public Schools, who will extend to the group the official greeting of the San Francisco School Department.

Dudley Deane, president of Dudley Deane & Associates, will represent the assembled group of visiting dignitaries, and speak in behalf of business, industry and government leaders. Herbert Rogers, Jr., president of Rogers Engineering Company, who has recently returned from Thailand where his firm is engaged in extensive construction work, will speak on the subject, Engineering in Foreign Lands.

William Mayo, engineering department representative, will introduce the engineering faculty members, and Louis Batmale, dean of Semiprofessional Courses, will outline and explain the various branches of the college's vocational training programs. After group photographs the recruitment teams will move to Cloud Hall where private offices have been assigned to the individual interviewing staffs.

Prospective engineering graduates have been classified as to their major fields of concentration, and each graduate has selected employers with whom he desires interviews. The personal interviews will last 20 minutes. Employers have the use of a personnel folder, which includes a personal data sheet, five personal rating sheets, and other materials to assist the interviewers in appraising the job applicant for possible future employment.

The following firms, together with their official recruitment and procurement teams will participate in the program:

Appex Corp., Beckett Corp., Bethlehem Corp., Bethlehem Steel Corp., State of California Public Works and Highways, California State Personnel Board, Dudley Deane & Associates, Eithel-McCullough Inc., Electrical Communications Corp., International Business Machines Corp., Independent Iron Works Inc., Lenkurt Electric Co. Inc., Link Belt Co., Litton Industries, Pacific Gas & Electric Co., Pacific Pumping Co., Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co., Rogers Engineering Co., San Fran-Brewing Corp., Standard Oil Co. of California, Sylvania Micro Wave Lab., U. S. Forest Service, University of California Radiation Labs, Western Gear Corp., and Yuba Industries Inc.

Jack Patterson Wins Top Post Over Jim Woods By 19 Votes; Darlene Enfield Vice-President

Five hundred eighty-five voters, 23 per cent of the Associated Students (10 per cent of total enrollment) of the college, chose Jack Patterson (290) over Jim Woods (271) as their AS President for the coming semester by a margin of 19 votes, according to the officially tabulated election results released by Jerry Hoffman, Election Commissioner.

Patterson's ticket followed him in victory into four of the five remaining executive offices. Darlene Enfield (303) followed in the steps of her running mate by defeating Liz Thrush (247) for the office of AS Vice-President.

Unopposed, Freddie Hicks (445), Linda McArdle ($80), and Jerry Redford (404) moved into the offices of Associated Men Student President, Associated Women Student President, and Sophomore Class President, respectively, with a substantial vote of confidence.

The lone member of Wood's independent ticket to secure an executive post was Kathy Ahern (272), who defeated Gary Torres (249) for the Freshman Class Presidency.

Five students, Audrey Bell (406), Gene Craft (336), Charlie Lewis (315), Bev Morris (393) and Jackie Wyner (359) ran for and were accordingly elected to the sophomore seats in Student Council.

The two remaining seats in council will be filled by appointment during the semester, according to constitutional provision.

Candidates chosen to fill the freshmen seats on council were Pat Arden (311), Mike Biro (343), Judi Conner (270), Jamie Cook (289), Fran Kistler (292), Billie Needham (266) and Bill McDonald (316).

Losing contestants for freshman members of council were Carlene Chimenti (245), Kevin Mulien (224), Bill Forshay (197 and Ben Northrup (8).

Newly appointed Election Commissioner Hoffman stated that the elections ran smoothly and the results were tabulated accurately by checking the voters' AS card numbers against the college files. The few discrepancies were due to clerical errors.

Final Transcript Draft Passed By Student Council

Completion of the final draft of transcripts (student government service record of credit), was submitted by Gale Dobbs, transcript committee chairman, to Student Council and Cabinet last week.

The rules state Class A to be worth five points. Officeholders in this group are Associated Student President, AS Vice-President, California Junior College Student Government Association President and Northern CJCSGA President.

Class B earns four points and includes the Presidents of Associated Women Students and Associated Men Students.

Three points add up to Class C. Membership in council, the appointive cabinet, honorary appointed cabinet and other state officers fall in this category.

Class D, two points, embodies the Presidents of all other campus organizations.

One point goes to Class E for all other campus organization officers, song girls and yell leaders.

A Special Class is designated for the winner of the AS Outstanding Service Award and the two winners of the President's Plaque.

Eight persons were honored by being nominated for the AS Service Award. Those named were Miss

Eugenia Lary Winner Of Service Award

The semi-annual Student Council dinner in Smith Hall last Thursday was highlighted by presentation of this semester's Outstanding Service Award.

Recipient of the award was Eugenia Lary, for her general service to the students of the college and for her special service as secretary to Bob Varni, president of the California Junior College Student Government Association, at the conference here last November.

The newly elected Associated Student officers were installed preceding the social hour. A dinner prepared by the Hotel and Restaurant Department was served at 7 o'clock, and this semester's council and cabinet members were presented with award keys.

Dougherty Trophy Goes To Zeta Chi

Zeta Chi sorority is the winner of the Margaret Dougherty trophy for the fall 1957 semester.

The trophy was presented last Friday night at the semi-annual Feminine Fling, which is jointly sponsored by the Associated Women Students, the Inter-Sorority Council and the Recreation Association.

This award, in honor of Margaret Dougherty, former dean of women here, is given to the sorority with the highest scholastic record for the semester. Zeta Chi had nearly a B grade point average.

Runner-up for the award was Delta Psi. This is the ninth semester this award has been given and the first time Zeta Chi has won it.

Registration Set For Three Days Starting Feb. 10

Registration for the spring semester's returning students will start Monday, February 10, and continue through Tuesday, February 11, according to Waddington Blair, counselor here in charge of the pre-registration programming.

Because Lincoln's birthday is observed on Wednesday, February 12, as a national holiday, no registration will be held on that day, Blair further announced.

He said, (Blair, not Lincoln) that new students will register on the following day, Thursday, February 13, with classes beginning Friday, February 14.

Arranged in an alphabetical order basis, the pre-registration numbers this semester give an equal chance to students for low numbers and, consequently, early-day registration instead of the previous first-come, first-served basis.

The numbers in order of registering time for Monday, February 10, are 1-299 at 8 a.m.; 300-699 at 9 a.m.; 700-1309 at 10 a.m.; 1310-1969 at 11 a.m.; and 1970-2619 at 1 p.m. with no registration held at 12 noon on any day. On Tuesday, February 11, the numbers will be 2620-3289 at 8 a.m.; 3270-3889 at 9 a.m.; 3890-4489 at 10 a.m., and 5040 on up at 1 p.m.

Registration for the night courses will be held in the library on Thursday, February 6, between 6:30 and 9:30 p.m. with instruction beginning Monday, February 10. To qualify for the night division, students must either have a high school graduation diploma or be 18 years of age or older, Dean Edward E. Sandys announced.

Units for the evening classes are limited, Dean Sandys declared.

Pat Metsack Editor Of Next Guardsman Staff

New Guardsman editorial officers for the spring semester were elected at a recent Editorial Board meeting, according to Carol Harris, editor-in chief.

The new staff is headed by Pat Metsack, editor-in-chief, and Jerry Redford as managing editor.

Other editorial heads include Tom Tatera, feature editor; Nick Peters, sports editor; Don Seratti, news editor; Ames Swartsfager, staff editor. Kevin Mullen and William Forshay were appointed staff writers.

Miss Metsack is the sixth woman to become Editor-in-Chief of The Guardsman.

Chronicle Hires Ex-Editor Moss

Al Moss, former Guardsman editor-in-chief (1955) now in his senior year at the University of California, began work for The Chronicle last week as assigned to cover prep and two-year college sports.

Moss was successively news editor, sports editor, editor-in-chief and again sports editor during his career here. He is a life member of Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society.

Associated with the Daily Californian from the time he transferred there, Moss was appointed City Editor for the spring semester—which position he dropped after one day because The Chronicle hired him. He had been The Chronicle's UC campus correspondent since his enrollment there in Fall 1956.

Students To Attend Governor's Conference

Darlene Enfield, Carol Shiahenian, Jack Patterson and Freddie Hicks will represent the college at the fifth annual Governor's Conference in Sacramento February 11 and 12.

Purpose of the conference is to discuss Youth Participation in Community Affairs. Representation is by invitation of Governor Goodwin J. Knight.

Four More Performances Slated For Miller's Crucibile In Little Theater; Chronicle Critic Lauds Production Here

With four more shows scheduled for February, The Crucible is likely to topple attendance and financial records for the Little Theater group, Director Michael Griffin said last week.

The play was described as "gripping" by the San Francisco Chronicle and is a dramatization of the cause of the Salem witch trials. "In a vivid and compelling manner, Arthur Miller has depicted the evils of bigotry in a far-gone era but with applications in the present," Griffin commented.

An unusual feature of this production is the fact the scene shifts occur right under the eyes of the audience. The theater is darkened and luminous paint sheds an eerie glow as shadowy figures move in and out placing a fireplace, a bed, benches, tables, stools and other props on the assigned marks.

Under the leadership of John Rose, who also selected the music for the production, the crew, in a matter of seconds, quietly changes a bedroom to a living room and a courtroom to a cell.

First-nighter Dean Ralph Hillsman was enthusiastic about the opening performance of the play. "It was typical of the fine performance Mr. Griffin's group puts out," Hillsman said, "and I was quite impressed by the quality of the acting. I was particularly impressed by the lead role of Bob Phalen who gave a fine performance."

Several comments were received in a friendly fashion concerning the use of Brahms Lullaby which was written more than 150 years after the dates used in the play. Nick Massenkoff, band student director who also acts the part of John Willard, has written a new and original lullaby which will be used for future performances. The number is hummed by Dolores Duran at the start of the second scene.

Bouquets and brickbats included a rock thrown at the Guardsman reporter who failed to mention Madeline Mirow in the role of Susanna Walcoff, Karen Harms as Mercy Lewis, and James Carroll Jr., who handles lights for the show.

Marlene Grant, who was to play the role of Abigail, was injured in an auto accident in Nevada over the Christmas holidays, but she is reportedly recovering rapidly and may return to college for the spring semester.

"The accident was regrettable in view of Miss Grant's many capabilities." Griffin said, "but we were extremely fortunate in having Leah Pashoian available as a replacement."

CAB Makes Two Major Changes In Constitution

Two major changes are being made by the Club Activities Board in their constitution, Sherman Elworthy, CAB faculty adviser, reported recently.

These changes include requirements for representation and regulations for attendance.

"We are recommending some liberalization on representation for the smaller clubs which meet less frequently," Elworthy said.

One such case would be found in a club that starts out small, but increases its membership. This club could still be represented in CAB if it turns in a petition with 51 per cent of the members holding Associated Student cards. It then can, as the membership grows, make additions to this list.

Elworthy further pointed out that all clubs should elect or appoint representatives for CAB at the end of a semester to represent them in the following semester.

"The reason for this," he said, "is to provide a nucleus for the first meetings." Elworthy also added that most of the CAB activity takes place during the first three weeks of the semester.

"We are also trying to make more stringent regulations for officers," Elworthy commented, "in addition to strengthening the constitution to make it more workable."

This semester the CAB has been inhibited, with three of their members taking leaves of absence, one of them being the chairman, Jim Foster.

"Carl Mayo succeeded Foster and has done a fine job," Elworthy added; "I only hope that next semester's board will be as vigorous."

Now Proper Time To Hand Out Words Of Praise, Criticism

WITH the termination of the fall semester rapidly approaching, now is the proper time to hand out some words of praise to deserving groups along with a few condemnations.

Plaudits are in order for those persons who worked so diligently to make the California Junior College Student Government Association Conference the success which it was. Congratulations to Bob Varni, who presided over the conference at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel, for a job well done.

A large bouquet should be thrown in the direction of the Veterans Club for initiating the Christmas toy drive this semester. Many unfortunate children had a Merry Christmas, thanks to the Veterans Club. "Operation Toylift" will be an annual project of the college and the Veterans Club.

The Hotel and Restaurant Department was the subject in focus on a recent Success Story production. This program was made possible only with the time and effort of many persons, including the college's administrative staff and the members of the H&R Department itself. Through this program, the achievements of this deserving group were made known to hundreds of San Franciscans. A sincere thank you to those who made this program possible.

Once again the Drama Department has provided students and faculty with consistently outstanding plays and performances during the semester. Michael Griffin and the Little Theater group deserve a hearty round of applause for the many long hours of rehearsal and preparation which went into making the productions excellent entertainment. It is too bad more students do not take advantage of the opportunity to see and enjoy these provocative student productions.

Congratulations to the students who have cooperated to such a great degree to aid seating arrangements in the cafeteria. The student balancing a tray of food on one hand and a pile of books on the other is ALWAYS assured of a seat. NEVER does one see studying, card playing or grabbing at the tables while people are standing around with tray-loads of food. (See column 5.)

A heartfelt thank you goes to those who make the library such a quiet and restful place to study. Their loud talking, laughing and giggling with their neighbors facilitates the conditions for those who wish to—of all things—study. Everyone knows the library is the place to meet and converse with friends and share a few guffaws.

To those of you who did not have the time to vote in the last election goes a king-sized brickbat. You have succeeded in shirking your responsibility of maintaining high standards of leadership and government at the college.

Ruark And Morris Hit Stands

Deadline Every Minute And Old Man And The Boy Bring Reading Enjoyment For Season

By Ray Hackett

The Old Man And The Boy, by Robert Ruark, is an autobiographical novel of the author as a young boy in the coastal areas of North Carolina, and the relationship between him and his grandfather.

It's the story of his growing up and learning the lessons of life while the old man is reaching the end of life. The boy is aided by such thoughts as "You can't pour a gallon in a one-quart brain"; "You must never be lazy in front of anybody"; "Loafing is fine but energetic people get mad at you if you take it easy in front of them;" and other samples of homespun philosophy as expressed by the old man to the boy.

This is an excellent book and will be read by many with pleasure, a majority of whom will envy the author's boyhood. This novel, as its predecessor, Something Of Value, should hit the best seller list.

Deadline Every Minute, by Joe Alex Morris, is the story of the United Press. In 1907 the UP was founded by "the damn old crank," Edward Wyllis Scripps. This is the history of that wireservice.

The main reason Scripps started the UP was to prevent the monopoly of news by one wireservice. The rivalry between the Associated Press and the UP supplies much of the drama and, at times, the humor of this volume.

The UP is a news service of firsts; first to sell news to a Latin-America paper, La Prensa; first to transmit news from a ship by wireless, which occurred when Teddy Roosevelt sent the fleet around the world, and first to sell news to radio.

The chief reason the UP could accomplish these firsts before its competitor was because it was a comparatively new organization and had no traditions to hinder it.

Morris, an ex-UP reporter, traces the history of the service from its beginning to through the time of Russell Jones, the last reporter out of Hungary during the 1956 revolution, and a UP man who received the Pulitzer prize for his courage. This book should be enjoyed by all those who wish to know the story behind getting the news first.

Shots At Ramdom

By Tom Tatera

TOOK a walk down to the men's gymnasium the other day, and have vowed since never to make a return trip. The sight of well-proportioned physiques, bathed in sweat from calisthenics and athletic contests, can be downright discouraging to a person whose only exercise consists of breathing, all day! What the heck, who wants to be healthy anyway.

CONGRATULATIONS to the H&R students. Their recent visit to the St. Francis Hotel, where they worked hand in hand with some of the city's famous chefs, must have proved highly enlightening. Hope it doesn't go to their heads, though, and start them infecting the cafeteria with frog's feet a la flaming sword and other such exotic delicacies. Stick to your veal cutlets and spaghetti, boys. They're edible and inexpensive.

ONE THING forbidden in this column is any talk of the finals. There will be nothing written about the torturous two-hour tests, or the last minute cramming in the cafeteria and library. Nor will anything be said about the worrying and chewing of fingernails that will be done, or the forgetting of all material upon entering the classroom at zero hour. This is too morbid a subject to delve upon, and the "Shots at Ramdom" is a happy column. Happy, happy, happy! (Sob.)

CONCERNING the above unmentionable is a certain saying, "These things shall also pass away." This quote may not be accurate, but it certainly is appropriate. Good luck to all!

Lady Traveler Enters College

'World Citizen' Anne Watson Aided By Alpha Gamma Sigma Upon Returning From Far East

By Lois Cosden

A UNIQUE FIND was made recently among the students receiving coaching help from Alpha Gamma Sigma (scholastic honor society) volunteers in S-113 during college hours.

The find was a bright-eyed grandmother, San Francisco born and "citizen of the world," by the name of Anne Watson.

Fascinated with the Near East, Mrs. Watson plans to return there to study at the American University in Lebanon. After that, Roberts College in Istanbul, Turkey, is in her schedule. But first, she will complete her state-side study program at the University of California.

Commenting on her impressions of the Near East, Mrs. Watson recalled the warmth and affection found in family life there.

"Mothers seem to show more love to their children there than they do in America," she said. "They know nothing of the world outside. The home is the center of their lives."

One experience, that of seeing an Arab family first hand, occurred in Jordan two years ago, when she and the curator of the Alexandria Museum of Egypt missed the stop to one of the ancient burial places, a sightseer's item of interest.

Walking back to find the way, they encountered two native boys. "With great courtesy, the lads extended an invitation to the hot and weary travelers to accompany them to their home for some coffee and rest.

Ushered into a tile-floored house, Mrs. Watson saw comfortable furnishings. Chairs and couches were placed in from the walls, while the center area was clear, except for a low table on an ancient wool rug. In the cool darkness, she perceived an old man spinning at a wheel. He rose to receive his unexpected callers.

At the end of introductions and explanations, coffee was served. During conversational exchanges, the lady's alert eyes noted a pile of ground wheat in one corner of the room. Asking if this wheat were home grown, she learned from the proud host that it was, indeed. In an instant, the order was given for cakes to be made from it.

A small stand with a brass tray was then put in the midst of the gathering. A large copper bowl was added atop this tray, and the custom of washing the hands and teeth followed. After washing their fingers from the poured water, each person rubbed his wet index digit over his teeth.

What was served? The menu included layered pastry made from the aforementioned wheat, salty cheese, camel's-milk and bowls of honey with chopped dates.

There were no utensils, just hands. Good reason for the rinsing ritual to be repeated after eating.

Mrs. Watson was oblivious as to the absence of the ladies of the house, and expressed her desire to thank them personally for the refreshments. Pleased, the old patriarch led her to the kitchen to meet his wife, three daughters-in-law and assorted babies.

A description of the kitchen included a dirt floor, day oven, low separate tables set up at which each woman knelt to do her work, and other kitchen utensils used by an Arabian family. Mrs. Watson could not help comparing their standard of living to that of the modern American housekeeper.

Queried as to her impressions of Europe in relation to Eastern hospitality, she conceded that lighthearted Vienna was her most pleasant memory.

"Music is everywhere about you there. The people live in song." The lady journeyer cited an incident. While waiting for a trolley one late evening, she was joined in her vigil by a lone lad. To bide the time, he burst forth into song. Another youth appeared, and another and another. In a moment, a motley quartet was singing the old songs in full voice. The trolley's arrival furthered their spontaneous pleasure, as they carried the tunes on board with them into the night.

Mrs. Watson has three daughters, two of whom are married. One son-in-law is an Arab from Iraq. A graduate engineer of U. C. and Stanford, he is now attending Columbia University on a fellowship. His talented wife is at the Sorbonne in Paris on a Fulbright scholarship for her painting.

Their mother's present interest, aside from her own college course, is working with teenage Quakers in a project promoting social development for less fortunate young people.

ANNE WATSON, recently returned from the Far East, smiles over the results of her first semester at the college.

Malevolence

Cafe Dwellers Lead Lunchers To Eat Beside Ram

By Kevin Mullen

Some persons come to college to learn and others come to the cafeteria.

The cafeteria is an integral unit of existence in itself. From outward appearances, it seems that some persons could be born, live and die without leaving its confines. It is a home, a meeting place, a study hall, a lounge and last of all a place to eat your lunch.

Did you ever go down there during the noon hour? The first sight to greet your eyes is the steaming line of food-filled trays exuding smells of culinary invitation. Your taste buds activated by radar signals from your stomach, you select a tray and fill it with food that rivals the best that any hotel can offer. So far everything is great! You hurry through the cashier's line eyeing your tray in anticipation.

That is your last thought before you are drawn as by a magnet into the swirling, milling mass of humanity. After checking your tray to make sure it is intact, you look up to see who started the riot.

As you are swept along by the human tide, you look from side to side for a possible vacant seat. There! That fellow stacking his books must be ready to leave. No! He's just starting a term paper; he should be good for several more hours at his place.

Wait! What's that? It must be a mirage. No, it's really there. In the middle of all this confusion there is an entire empty table—except for a lone girl. This is your lucky day, boy! You elbow your way through the melee and just as you are preparing to sit down to enjoy your well-earned meal, the little girl turns up with a disarming, blonde, blue-eyed smile. "These seats are saved." Upon investigation, you find that her friends have a 12 o'clock class and will be a little late.

A bit farther on, you see a table full of arm swinging orators and three empty coffee cups. From snatches of their speeches, you hear that they are discussing the elections. Whatever happened to the good old outdoor political rallies? Oh, well!

By this time you decide to make a break for freedom. You walk out the nearby exit in disgust, and sit at the foot of the Ram flecking ashes out of the roast beef.

That night, you sit at the desk in your garret in the throes of indigestion to write an expose. When it is finished you curse your journalistic ineptitude for not being able to tell the story better. Then you stumble off to the kitchen to make your lunch for the following day so that you will be sure not to starve to death.

Same Ol' Story: Profs—15, Sophs—6

Rugged Faculty Five Flogs Anemic Students In Semi-Annual Contest

By John Henry

A rough and ready Faculty quintet paced by the staff of the men's P. E. department completely overwhelmed a smaller and seared Sophomore class squad 15 to 6, durthe double college hour last Friday.

The mean and muscular profs led by Alex "The Bull" Schwarz, Grover "Killer" Klemmer, "Rugged" Ralph Hillsman, and "Elephant Arm" Sid Phelan proved too much for the outclassed students as they jumped to an early 8 to 2 lead in the first ten minutes of play.

The bruised and battered Sophs managed only one bucket in the first half and that came after five minutes had elapsed. The Profs put up a defense that even a fullback couldn't break through. In fact, for a while the fans thought they were watching a grid game as Schwarz and Klemmer displayed a number of effective body blocks that discouraged Al Morales, Bob Dotson, Sal D'Angelo and crew from getting too close to the basket.

The faculty attack got under way as Schwarz cleared the ball off of the boards and threw downcourt to Hillsman and Phelan who, after several minutes of shooting, finally dropped a few in.

Several new rule changes were installed by the Profs and were of a definite advantage to them. Schwarz and Klemmer grabbed their opponents' jerseys and held the helpless students to a standstill while they easily grabbed the ball. Also, the hidden man trick proved effective as "Larrapin" Lou Vasquez and "Meany" Morry Grodsky exchanged places on the playing floor and sidelines, which although considered illegal, baffled the Soph hoopsters.

By winning the lopsided tilt the Profs posted a 15-1 edge in the eight-year semi-annual athletic series, which consists of a basketball brawl during the Fall semester and an attempt at softball in the Spring.

An estimated 200 fans sat through the contest and supported the Sophs while hissing the villains and their rugged brand of play. The general consensus was that if the Sophs plan on beating the Profs in the future they'll have to start eating their wheaties and/or spinach and wear more padding and/or armor.

Track, Baseball Signups Held Today

All men interested in participating in spring track are requested to meet with Coach Lou Vasquez in the men's gymnasium at 3 o'clock today.

Anyone, regardless of past experience, who is interested in track is urged to be present, Vasquez said, and if it is impossible to attend the meeting, track prospects are expected to see him as soon as possible.

The coach also announced that there will be no organized practice until next semester, because of the college's final exam schedule.

Ram diamond pilot, Lee Eisan, announced Friday that tryouts for the college baseball nine will start during the early part of next month. Signups for those interested in a berth aboard the varsity roster will be taken beginning today, in the men's gymnasium.

The season's outcome still appears somewhat dubious, as a number of veterans from last year's squad are no longer here to pack the load through what has always been a rugged Big Eight Conference. Once again, the job must be left to the unsung prodigies who have always been the backbone of the game.

New PAT Rule Could Eliminate Kicking

RAMBLINGS

By Nick Peters

AS OUR last attempt of the semester, we'll try to forecast the coming sports year, which promises to be an interesting one for fans throughout the country.

San Franciscans will swarm by the thousands to get a glimpse at major league baseball, despite the fact that their Giants will not finish in the first division.

Congress will bring a suit against the Yankees for maintaining a monopoly—in winning their ninth pennant in a decade. Those same "Damn Yankees" will again meet the Braves in the Series with the Tribe winning the affair in seven.

Willie Mays, with a flare for showmanship, will dazzle Bay Area fans with his spirited play, winning the NL bat title (.348) in a tight battle with Milwaukee's Hank Aaron and the ever-dangerous Card, Stan Musial. The Say-Hey kid will also set a modern record for stolen bases with 45 thefts and will be selected MVP.

National League slugging laurels will go to Brave Eddie Mathews, who'll have his best year with 50 round trippers and 130 RBI. Best pitcher in the league will be SF's Johnny Antonelli (23-12), Robin Roberts will make the comeback of the year again winning ... ector of tests, and Milwaukee's Bob Rush will be the surprise of the NL, winning 17 games for the champs.

Ted Williams will hint retirement after winning the AL bat prize, at the age of 40, with a solid .358, but he'll return in '59—the $100,000 helps pay his taxes. Mickey Mantle, providing his knee holds up, will walk off with the homer crown (40) and also take RBI laurels with 110, but Williams will be selected MVP, not allowing a repeat of last year's farce.

Much to the dismay of Clevelanders, Herb Score will not reach his 1956 pitching form and will find it rough going with impaired vision in one peeper. On the other hand, Ted Kluzewski will recover from his 1957 troubles to give the Pirates a torrid one-two slugging punch along with Frank Thomas.

Oklahoma and Notre Dame will reign as the nation's major football powers while Washington State's senior quarterback and 49'er draft choice Buddy Newman leads the colleges in offense.

Under new coach Jack Curtice, Stanford, as usual, will come up with another brilliant quarterback. The Farm's gridders will also be helped by the new two point (for pass or run) PAT rule, which should eliminate a great deal of kicked conversion attempts in the college ranks.

The 49'ers will cop the pro grid crown with Hugh McElhenny selected Player Of The Year. Y. A. Tittle will announce his retirement at the end of the season allowing the great John Brodie and Newman to handle the quarterback chores in '59. The locals will again paek 'em in at Kezar permitting the newly formed Scalpers Union to take advantage of crazed seat hunters.

USF's legendary Don basketballers will not fare as well next season, after taking the national title this year, because of weak frosh and JV teams. However, junior Freddie LaCour will be a good bet for All-American honors along with Seattle's Elgin Baylor and Kansas' W... Chamberlain.

The top West Coast quints will be Santa Clara and UCLA. Bronco forward Frank Sobrero, after a year's experience, will be the main cog on a good young club. Another surprise will be St. Mary's Gaels, with soph Tom Meschery moving in to make Doss & Co. a top threat.

Bill Russell will again make the Celtics the best in pro circles, subsequently being named the NBA's top performer. The NBA will also talk of expansion to the West with SF and LA likely candidates for '59 franchises.

Floyd Patterson will successfully defend his heavyweight boxing title by KO'ing challenger Eddie Machen in a summer fight, but the local gladiator will be crowned new heavy king in a rematch held late this year.

Carmel Basilio will reign as middleweight champ for quite a spell, but some youthful aspirant for the light-heavy crown will upend the tireless Archie Moore for the 175-lb. title.

On the college scene the Ram basketballers will make new coach Lee Elsan's first year a successful one by finishing in the first division. Grover Klemmer's gridders will find it tough sledding unless they can come up with an able field general to replace graduates Beldon, Baikie, and Higginbotham.

Returning serviemen should make the 1958-59 eagers a top ball club especially if Freddie Williams, All-Conference this year, and Vic Corl return as sophomores.

Frosh track and field star Mike Lewis will break the college's shot put and discus standards, while pole vaulter Will Gaspar sets a new Ram mark in that event. Jackie Tillman and Ed Costa will be waging a bitter struggle for the college's high jump mark, which both should break. The eindermen could easily win the Big Eight title.

With Roland Prydz making All-American for the second time as a sophomore, the college soccer team will replace USF as the Bay Area's soccer champs.

The college's woman track and field star Pam Kurrell will win the discus event for the United States in this year's Fan American Games. Highly rated pro lightweight Bobby Scanlon will move up in his weight division by going undefeated in 1958. He will be ready for a shot at the crown in 1959.

However, don't take these viewpoints too seriously. Forecasting always has to take into consideration the law of averages and the ever present upset. We'll be content in seeing just the items concerning the college personnel come out true. If they do we can all look forward to another banner year.

Morales, Prydz, Ibarra Grab All American Honors

By Pastor Valle-Garay

One member of the college's Big Eight champion football squad and two first stringers for the Ram soccer eleven were presented with All-American awards last January 13, during the semi-annual Block SF award dinner.

Ernie Ibarra, the college's outstanding tackle and a former All-City performer for the Balboa High School football team, obtained All-Conference honors for the second consecutive year.

A physical education major about to transfer to San Jose State with two years of eligibility left, Ibarra, who has been described by Coach Grover Klemmer as "one of the best tackles ever to play for the Rams," was chosen as the team's Most Valuable Player and was selected as an All-American Junior College gridder by the Williamson National Rating System.

Fullbacks Al Morales and Roland Prydz were the two soccer players selected for All-American honors by the National Soccer Coaches Association and the NCAA (National Collegiate Athletic Association).

Since the Ram soccer eleven is the only two-year college team competing against four-year colleges and universities in the soccer conference, the two All-American awardees present a unique situation here, since the NSCA's and the NCAA's selection of Morales and Prydz rates them equal to a major institution's All-American player.

Morales has also taken All-Conference awards for two years in a row here and was named by soccer coach Roy Diederichsen as the squad's Most Valuable Player.

He has two years of eligibility left and will enroll at San Jose State as a Graphic Arts major. He is "a player any team has to watch out for from the game's start," Diederichsen said.

WCC Comets Whip Sloppy Rams, 64-48

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

In undeniably one of the sloppiest hardwood performances in the college's history, Sid Phelan's prospective Big Eight champions looked more like a herd of tanked-up elephants rather than a piece of basketball machinery, as the hard-hitting Comets from Richmond threw everything but the kitchen sink at them in waltzing away with a 64-48 decision that was "no contest" from the word go, last Friday evening in the men's gymnasium.

A pair of 25 footers by Wayne Martin and a tip-in on the part of Cornell Green, whose deadly riddling of the meshing and astounding board play proved to be the complete nemesis of the Ram delegation, saw the Comet marksmen six miles out and away before Stan Rosenberg popped in the first marker to put the locals on the board.

To say that the contest was one-sided would be the understatement of all time—the East Bay dynamos led the college in every statistic but time outs. Their defense was superb, their floor game amazing, and their shooting ability speaks for itself (24 for 52).

The Rams, on the other hand, seemed to be able to do nothing but wrong. Aside from little Vic Corl's phenomenal floor game they looked like a bunch of helpless kids and their shooting capacity, (a freezing 26 per cent), was as wild as the March Hare.

It would be difficult to point the finger of accusation at any one particular bearer of the Red and White banner as being responsible for the complete ridiculousness of the fray—they were all in the same boat.

Rosenberg was as cold as an iceberg and threw away at least a half-dozen passes; Freddie Williams was hot-headed and sloppy; Doug North was of about as much use as kerosene in a fire hydrant; and Mal McCormick looked like a junior high competitor going against the Boston Celtics.

As a consolation it must be agreed that the Comets were a terrific outfit that should go far with tigers like Green, who looked like a real comer with his 23 point and 17 rebound performance.

Oakland T-Birds Tip Cagers Off Big 8 Perch Tie

By Nick Peters

Oakland Thunderbird center Joe Johnson's desperation jump shot with seven minutes remaining in the game knocked the college eagers from a first place tie in the Big Eight Conference by a score of 46-44 at the winner's court last week.

The loss, which also snapped an eight-game Ram victory skein, was an extremely tough one to lose, since the college five made a terrific comeback drive which gave them a four-point lead with two minutes to go.

In arrears 25-22 at halftime, largely attributed to the expert marksmanship of T-Bird guard Rufus Hawkins, who had 14 digits at the intermission, the college exchanged leads with the East Bayers eight times prior to pulling ahead 42-40 on the virtue of a clutch jumper by Vic Corl.

Mal McCormick added another fielder for 44-40 with two minutes left, and then it was just a matter of ball control to preserve the victory. As it turned out ball control was lost and, consequently, an ever important triumph went with it.

Oakland's clutch-shooting guard Wayne Olson proceeded to steal the ball from the Rams' Stan Rosenberg and scored on an easy layup for 44-42 with one minute left. Bringing the ball upcourt and apparently trying to stall, the college lost the ball on a bad pass by Corl.

With 30 seconds to go, Freddie Williams fouled Oakland's Russ Wiekwire, and the 6-4 lad sank both of his charities (his only points of the night) to deadlock the tilt at 44 all. The college five again lost the ball on a poor maneuver, and Oakland called a time out with 12 seconds left.

When the ball was in play, the T-Birds missed three erratic shots, then Johnson snared the rebound, turned around, and bagged a ten-footer amid the crowd's screams.

Rosenberg, apparently losing all judgment of time, shot hurriedly from half court. The ball arched toward the bucket, but was shy a foot and that is all she wrote—a terrific boost for the winners, but a disheartening state of affairs for the losers.

Arts, Classroom Building Heads List Of Campus Development

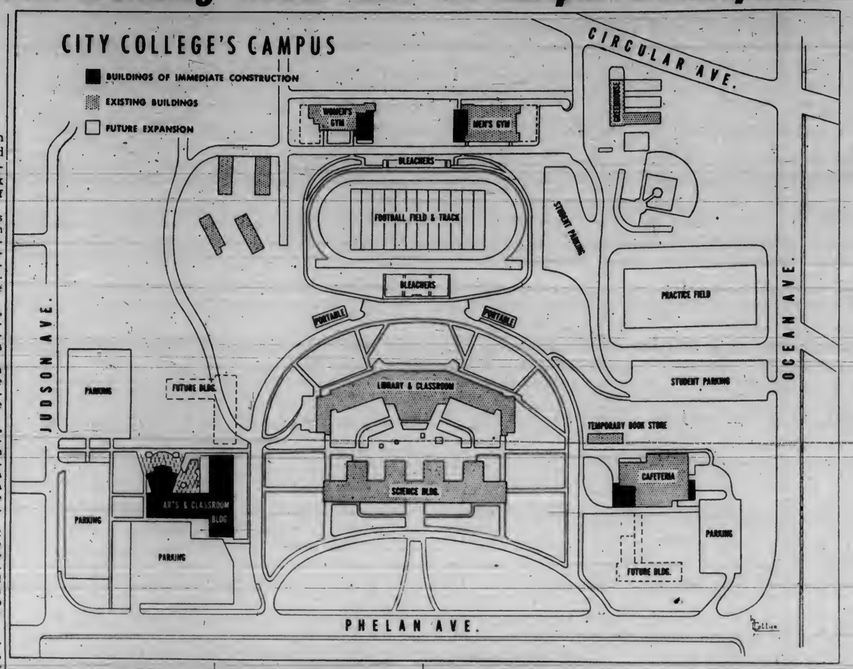
Athletic Field, Other Additions In Future Plans

By Don Seratti

Plans for construction of an arts and classrooms building and an athletic stadium on the campus were announced this week by Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college.

As outlined by Dr. Conlan, the plans call for the enlargement of Smith Hall and the men's and women's gymnasiums. The new buildings and additions, which will result in a considerable change in the campus' appearance, are due to be completed by the begnning of the fall 1960 semester.

Upon completion of this project, the college will be able to accommodate 7,200 daytime students, an increase of approximately 1,500 over the present day enrollment.



Dr. Conlan declared that when these changes take place, the college will have "probably the most complete two-year college program in the state."

The arts and classrooms building, which will be situated in Hurley Village, the area opposite Riordan High School on Phelan Avenue, will contain approximately 24 classrooms, a little theater designed to seat 350, a choral room and band room for the music department, several art laboratories and the Diego Rivera fresco.

The present archery field adjacent to the women's gymnasium will be the site of the new athletic stadium. The stadium, designed primarily for football and track and field events, will have a seating capacity of 5,000 upon completion and can be expanded to seat as many as 20,000. It will feature a full running track with a 220-yard straightaway.

Additions to Smith Hall will entail an enlaregment of the present coffee shop into a multi-purpose room that can be used for various activities. The faculty dining room will also be enlarged.

A special area and small gymnasium for dancing activities will be annexed to the women's gymnasium, while the addition to the men's gymnasium will be a two-story building—one floor for boxing and wrestling and the other for gymnastics.

COLLIER MAPS CAMPUS

Winfred "Bud" Collier, a third semester advertising art major here, drew the accompanying diagram under the direction of William Eckert, advertising art instructor.

The Craven

Once upon a midnight dreary, while I pondered weak and weary
O'er many a quaint and curious textbook often scorned before;
While I nodded, gently rocking, suddenly there came a knocking
As of someone shoulder blocking, pounding on my bedroom door.
"'Tis some visitor," I muttered, "playing football with my door;
Only this and nothing more."

Ah, distinctly I remember, it was after last December:
And each cigarette's dying ember wrought its ghost upon the floor.
Desperately I feared the morrow; vainly I had sought to borrow
From my books surcease of sorrow for the classes cut before
To spend with rare and radiant maidens like the coed called Lenore:
Coed here forevermore.

Now my endless fears were certain; tomorrow was the final curtain
And finals filled me with the terrors I never felt before.
So that now to still the beating of my heart, I stood repeating,
"Maybe it is just the landlord banging on my bedroom door,
Or some party-going genius tempting me to sin once more—
This it is and nothing more."

Presently my soul grew stronger, hesitating then no longer.
"Sir," said I, "or madam, truly your forgiveness I implore
But the truth is I was frowning as I pondered on old Browning.
So engrossed when you came knocking I did not see the door a-rocking
'Til the walls shook and the floor." Here I opened wide the door,
A little ram and nothing more.

In surprise I stood there fearing, at the red and white goat peering
Doubting, dreaming dreams no student ever dared to dream before.
Was this vision come to haunt me? Did it come perhaps to taunt me
Thinking to tomorrow daunt me with the next I failed of yore?
Or, perhaps some brighter thinking, he could save my hopes from sinking.
Sam the Ram would know the score.

"Prophet," said I, "think of warning, wrecker of my hopes a-borning,
Prophet still if goat or devil, till me in and on the level
Do you cast my hopes in mourning; all my good intentions scorning,
Or do you come my heart to lighten, with words of wisdom tomorrow brighten.
Tell me the answers or some way to get a passing score?"
Sam the Ram said "Study more."

AGS Student Aid Useful To Many

Because of growing demands for coaching aid, the Alpha Gamma Sigma Scholastic Honor Society volunteer student aid service has added Robert Lee (Political Science and Spanish) to its instructional staff.

Requests are also growing for outside-the-college tutoring, for which a nominal fee will be charged by the AGS coaching staff.

Persons interested in benefiting from the study-aid program, are invited to consult adviser William Richardson in S-147 for appointments.

Forum Magazine Welcomes Student Literary Efforts

Students interested in contributing short stories, poetry, plays, essays and art work to Forum, the college's yearly literary magazine, can submit material starting today to C-331A, according to Catherine Connolly, Forum faculty adviser.

The purpose of Forum is to give students a chance to express their literary ability in various forms of writing, the best of which will be chosen by an editorial committee composed of student members of Forum, she added.

The editorial, business and art staffs are organized each spring semester, and the magazine is usually distributed in June. Forum is a benefit to members of the Associated Students and sells for 50 cents to non-AS members.

Since contributions may be made at any time during the college year, Miss Connolly urged those interested not to miss a "golden opportunity" to have their material published.

Basketball Victory Gives Women Second Place In Sports Day

With a half-time bulge of 43-3, the Recreation Association women's basketball team coasted to a 59-13 triumph over Balboa High School January 14.

The victory gave the women a 3-1 record for the semester plus a second place in the sports day sponsored by the college.

Four players hit the double figures led by Pam Kurrell's 15 points; Sue Johnson had 13, and Barbara Baxter 11. Clydenia Harper hit for 10, all in the second half. The Balboa women handled the ball well but were unable to get their rebounds.

This was the final game of the semester for the RA team, but plans are for an even larger schedule next semester. Basketball manager is Bunny Tollefsen, who assumed that position when Diane Porter was forced to give up sports.

All Quiet On Fraternity, Sorority Front Before Dreaded Dead, Final Weeks; New Officers Ready To Go

By Jerry Redford

WITH most of the officers for next semester installed and ready to take the reins of the respective groups, activities have reached their low ebb of the semester in respect to dead week and final week.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity held its pledge dinner recently at Fior d'Italia Restaurant. Concluding the dinner was the pinning of pledges and the presentation of trophies. Receiving the "outstanding pledge" trophy was Dick Sarouhan. Brothers to receive trophies from the pledge class were the Vargo brothers (Larry and Dave), outstanding brother; Ron Vierra, Ass of Hell Week; and Sam Franzella "I Tried."

Tau Chi Sigma officers for the coming semester are Bob Shaw, president; Roland McNeil, vice-president; Mike Alexia, secretary; Jim Hecht, treasurer, and Norm Stuart, pledge master. The fraternity held its pledge dinner last Friday evening at Sabella's Restaurant.

Newly elected officers of the Hillel Foundation are Robert Castle, president; Grace Plotkin, vice-president; Helen Dretski, secretary, and Berry Mierbach, treasurer.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority held its installation of officers luncheon at the home of Joan Kirkivy last weekend. The newly installed officers include Charlene Peterson, president; Mary Hanley, vice-president; Pat Piffero, pledge mistress, and Wendy Tibbe, historian.

Kappa Phi sorority held its pinning of pledges last [illegible]. The Reverend Jackie Wyner. The sorority also elected new officers for the spring semester. Miss Wyner, president; Claudia Boyd, vice-president; Fran Kisler, pledge mistress, and Billie Needham, treasurer.

Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity held elections recently at the home of Bill Holloway-Cook. The new officers are Howard Klein, president; Dan Colin and Art Paul, vice-presidents; Joe Morehead, treasurer, and Hal Abdul and Lance Gramlich, co-pledge masters.

The Chinese Students Club schedule its Sweetheart Ball rally Friday, January 31, from 8 p.m. to midnight at the Chinese Recreation Center.

Glendora's Corpse No Trouble, Just Police Final Test

If you see what appears to be a corpse concealed in the bushes on the college grounds during final examination periods, don't go running for the campus police.

What you'll see will be "Glendora," a life-like mannequin, or "department store dummy," who is to be "murdered" and then found and photographed by all police photography students here as part of their final examination.

"We thought we'd better notify the students in advance of the placing of 'Glendora,'" said Beverly Pasqualetti, photographic instructor here. "In the past there have been many misunderstandings by persons who stumbled upon the mannequin."

Pasqualetti and Morris Grodsky, also photo instructors, will examine all photographs of "Glendora" and judge them on photographic technique and their ability to present evidence.

A work experience program will be initiated here next semester, according to Pasqualetti, in which all photography students will attend their classes at the college in the morning and receive on-the-job experience in the afternoon.

This program, representing part of the vast revision of the college's photography department, will enable students to acquire practical experience and make contacts before they complete their training here.

CAB Crocus Hop Friday

Campus Clubs To Present Displays During College Hour; Events Usher In Activities For Spring Semester

By Kevin Mullen

Social affairs and club activities for the spring semester will be formally ushered in this Friday, CAB Day, according to Adolph Hersvick, Club Activity Board president.

The CAB dance, with the theme Crocus Hop, will make up the social portion of the activities. It will be held at Smith Hall from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight. The dress at the dance will be sportswear and the music will be supplied by the "Four Hits and a Bass," a local group. Admission will be by Associated Student card or by registration card and 75 cents payable at the student finance office or the entrance to the dance.

Students wishing to bring guests not enrolled in the college can secure bids from the office of Mary Golding, dean of women. When presented at the entrance of the dance with $1, these bids will admit the guest.

During college hour on Friday, 10 to 10:40 a.m., each club and organization will have a display showing its special interests set up in the courtyard if the weather permits. In the case of inclement weather these displays will be moved to the corridors of Cloud Hall, Hersvick said.

The purpose of the exhibits is to acquaint the new students with the variety of organizations at the college and publicize the specialties of each in order to promote membership.

Hersvick reminded all clubs that yesterday was the cut-off date for filing petitions at the finance office for exhibition space. All groups are further reminded that their representatives must come to the CAB meeting tomorrow when these spaces will be alloted.

Chuck Pierce heads the dance committee and Jackie Ruggeri is in charge of the display committee. Hersvick also announced that any new clubs forming among the students should inform CAB if they wish to be sanctioned "on campus."

Change In Friday Schedule Shifts Col: Hour Time

A change in the Friday class schedule, with college hour inserted between the 9 and 10 o'clock classes during the Spring semester instead of between the 10 and 11 o'clock college hour of the Fall semester, went into effect February 21.

During Fridays, and possibly several other days as announced during the semester, this shortened class schedule is followed to allow time for organizational programs, meetings, rallies and assemblies, according to Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities here. (The class schedule for Friday is published at the top of this page.)

This semester will have programs, rallies and club meetings each Friday as follows: Friday, March 7, CAB Day; March 14, sports rally; March 21, open; March 28, Blood Drive; April 4, holiday; April 11, club meeting day; April 18, club meeting day; April 25, San Bernardino band concert; May 2, club meeting day; May 9, City College band concert; May 16, election rally; May 23, Soph-Prof game; May 30, holiday; June 6 and 13, final examinations.

Students Urged To Donate Blood In Annual Drive Set For March 27-28

This spring's annual Blood Drive, sponsored by Tau Chi Sigma fraternity, will be conducted at B-2, the Associated Student office, on Thursday and Friday, March 27 and 28, according to Linda McArdle, member of the college's Publicity Committee.

Technicians from the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank will come to the college during these days and accept the donations.

An account has been set up at the Blood Bank from which any student who donates a pint of blood during the drive can withdraw an unlimited supply of blood for his own personal use in one series. The donor may also make a withdrawal of up to eight pints in one series for any member of his immediate family.

Permanent regulations governing the distribution of blood from this account are now under the consideration of the Student Council.

To stimulate competition between the clubs and organizations of the college, a graph listing each group will be placed in front of the collection point, Miss McArdle said.

In this way, drive sponsors hope that a club lagging behind will be prompted to increase donations and thus swell the common total.

In the last blood drive, Spring 1957, the Veterans Association received the trophy for the greatest number of donations.

AWS Members To Hostess At NASA

Associated Women Students will act as official hostesses for a meeting of the National Association of School Administrators to be held here Saturday, March 15, Linda McArdle, AWS president, recently announced.

The AWS Intercollegiate Conference was held on March 1, co-hosted by Santa Rosa Junior College and this college.

Purpose of the conference was to discuss the advantages and disadvantages of forming an Intercollegiate AWS on the two-year college level. Discussion groups were formed and presiding over one of them was Darlene Enfield, vice-president of the Associated Students here.

Other delegates from the college included Margie Erhart, Ruby Broadway, Miss McArdle and Dean Mary Golding, adviser.

Phelan Reservoir May Solve Parking Problem

A possible use of one reservoir on Phelan Avenue, across from the campus, as a parking lot is being discussed by administrative heads here, according to Dr. Oscar F. Anderson, coordinator, Division of Educational Management.

Most of the details are still in the planning stage, Anderson said, pointing out that the reservoir, closest to Riordan High School, will be covered by hard top and will provide both the college and Riordan with additional parking space.

There is a chance that the college will benefit by acquiring approximately 800 parking spaces. The amount of space allowed to the schools involved will probably be determined by the contribution and needs of the schools.

This will be a temporary arrangement until such time as the college completes its own parking areas.

Engineering Receives Recognition Of ECPD

This college is the first public two-year college in California to be nationally recognized by the accreditation of its engineering courses by the Engineering Council for Professional Development, according to a recent press release by Louis F. Batmale, dean of Semiprofessional Courses.

Recognition by the ECPD is highly coveted because the council is composed of official representatives from the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, American Institute of Electrical Engineers and several other distinguished organizations, Batmale said.

Basketball Highlights, Games, Speakers To Be Featured At IFC Smoker In Gymnasium Tonight

The college's nine fraternities will display their wares tonight in their semi-annual bid to attract prospective pledges as they present the tenth consecutive Inter-Fraternity Council Smoker from 7:30 to 9 p.m. in the men's gymnasium.

All men students of the college are invited to attend, according to Frank Rogers, IFC president.

Fraternities will be represented at booths to which interested students may come to chat with fraternity representatives and ascertain the achievements and activities of each organization.

"There is no limit as to how many fraternities an interested person may sign up for at the smoker tonight," Rogers added, "and there is no cost or commitment of any kind for signing up for a fraternity.

"Those who express interest in certain organizations by signing up for them will be invited to the first pledging affairs held by the respective fraternities in the near future," Rogers said.

IFC PRESIDENT Frank Rogers and organization members plan for successful Smoker tonight.

The evening's program includes addresses by Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities here, and others. Entertainment and games will be provided by various fraternities, and films of local college basketball games will be shown.

Gene Craft, vice-president of the IFC, is in charge of coordinating and presenting tonight's program.

Fraternities represented at tonight's affair are Alpha Kappa Rho, Alpha Phi Epsilon, Alpha Sigma Delta, Beta Phi Beta, Beta Tau, Gamma Phi Epsilon, Phi Beta Delta, Tau Chi Sigma and Zeta Phi Sigma.

AMS Vies With AWS As Spur To Card Sales Week

Card Sales Week, dedicated to building membership in the Associated Student organization, will continue through this Friday, Ralph Prior, AS Card Sales chairman, announced today.

As of February 23, 1,672 cards had been sold, and a minimum total of 2,200 is expected to be reached. Last semester, a total of 2,407 cards was purchased throughout the college, Prior added.

Both the Associated Men and Associated Women Student organizations will be striving for a trophy that is presented to the group selling the most AS cards through this week. The trophy will be awarded at the Club Activities Board dance, taking place this Friday night.

There are many advantages to owning an AS card, Prior said. They entitle a person to park on campus, and attend Associated Student dances, athletic programs, the Spring Festival and theater productions without additional cost.

In addition to the aforementioned, AS members are entitled to discounts at service stations, jewelry stores, sporting goods stores, radio supply houses, florists, theaters, and photo shops. Other discounts are listed on the back of the AS cards.

"All organizations that are financed by the Associated Students must have their memberships subscribe 100 per cent in the Associated Students, and those who are able to sustain themselves from their own revenue must have at least 51 per cent of their membership belong to the AS to remain on campus," Prior stated.

Cards are available from AMS and AWS sales persons on campus who are competing for the "biggest sales" trophy, and at the finance office in Smith Hall.

Firesides Start Sorority Rushing

Firesides for interested sorority rushees are being held this week, according to Audrey Fones, Inter-Sorority Council president.

Signups ended last Friday with an orientation rally followed by a formal tea on Sunday. Two Firesides are held each night with each sorority sponsoring its own affair. Rushees may attend all of them or just those in which they are definitely interested, Miss Fones said.

Sororities accepting pledges and the dates of their Firesides are as follows: Delta Psi and Kappa Phi, March 4; Phi Beta Rho and Theta Tau, March 6; Gamma Sigma Sigma and Delta Sigma Tau, March 8; and Zeta Chi and Gamma Kappa Beta, March 11.

12 New Officers On Campus Force

Twelve new officers have been welcomed to the Campus Police Force by Marion Timm, reappointed Chief of the Campus Police, and Don Laufer, his deputy chief, Timm announced last week.

One of the problems still facing the Campus Police is that of parking, Timm stated. Students are to park in student parking areas not including Marston Avenue, and any cars found without student permits or seen illegally parked in undesignated areas will be tagged, he said.

The CCSF Pistol Team, winner of the marksman aggregate trophy, supervised and coached by Fred Fitzgerald, head of the Criminology Department here, will also compete in the national indoor pistol meets in Oakland.

Economic Recession Shows As Job Requirements Rise

Higher requirements for summer jobs since 1948 have gone into effect because of the economic recession which is plaguing business at the present time, Joe Amori, director of job placement here, said last week.

"Applicants are urged to sign up immediately at the placement center, S-188, for many of the jobs must be filled within the next few weeks," Amori said. "We have many jobs available both in San Francisco and outlying districts but because of the higher requirements only the best qualified will get the jobs.

"Experienced personnel will have first priority," he added, "especially those with resort training and experience. However, those applicants who have been trained in a specific line of work will be given the utmost consideration."

Resort owners will come to the campus April 9 and 10 to interview applicants for jobs such as hotel desk clerks, waitresses, storekeepers, truck drivers, stenographers, saleslerks, housekeepers, kitchen helpers, maids, food-servers, cashiers, pleasure boat operators, soda fountain dispensers, room clerks and bartenders.

Jobs are available in Oregon, Washington, Wyoming, Nevada, Texas and Montana.

Majors in engineering and forestry have excellent job opportunities at their disposal, Amori declared, adding that only those who can withstand the rigors of outdoor living and pass a complete physical examination should apply.

Tour leaders and escorts for all sections of the United States are also needed, he added, and applicants must be 21 years of age or older, veterans, tall, and good at human relations and public contact.

Also, applicants who desire employment as airline stewardesses or any type of airline work, or who are seeking airline employment for the future are requested to report to the placement center immediately for processing, according to Amori.

Ralph R. Arthur, employment representative, American Airlines, will be on the campus for interviews Wednesday, March 19, between the hours of 9 a.m. and 3 p.m.

All those interested are invited to apply; however, only those students who have personal data sheets and personal rating blanks on file will be scheduled for interviews, Amori warned.

Spring Semester Presents Dollar Challenge To Students

NOW that the all too short mid-semester vacation is over both students and faculty members face a variety of challenges for the Spring 1958 semester. These challenges are presented in many ways, the greatest now being in the form of dollars.

If this publication could predict the outcome of the semester it would like to say that the entire student body will become Associated Student members. However, according to past performances at this and other colleges this prediction is an ideal rather than a realization; 100 per cent AS membership will remain a dream of the council and the administration until students realize what a small price $5 is to pay for the activities that contribute to a well-rounded education that is demanded of the modern man and woman graduate.

With the recent attacks on education in the United States, colleges and universities are more than ever before striving for a balance of academic and social education. Through engineering societies, and astronomical groups, interests in the sciences occur. Through entertainment, provided by musical, dramatic and class organizations, students get an insight into the various arts. Through student publications, such as The Guardsman, members of the college are able to learn what the student government is doing, and what privileges are offered to them.

The academic section of education at this college is financed by the taxpayers of San Francisco; financing the social education is the job of the student. It seems the advantages of an AS card are so great against any possible objection that can be brought against the cost of the card, that no insistent salesmanship would be necessary. Discouragingly enough, this is not so, because students, unless impressed over and over again with the advantages to be gained by purchasing a card, and its necessity in maintaining college social functions, are reluctant to buy.

It is the profound hope of this paper and all that it represents that students will "see the light" and come through for the college, for their particular group, and mainly for themselves, and buy an AS card so that they can become in reality as well as in name members of the Associated Students of City College.

ECPD Gives National Recognition To Technical Engineering Courses Here

AS A TWO-YEAR institution, City College can well boast equality with any four-year university in California. Recently this college became the first two-year public college in the state to attain the distinction of national recognition by the Engineers Council for Professional Development for the technical engineering courses taught here.

Dean Louis Batmale perfectly explained the significance of the recognition given to the Engineering department by telling faculty members that much of the credit has been due to the work of William Mayo, head of the department. This recognition further expands the good reputation that the engineering department has earned throughout the Bay Area in technical employment fields, and in institutions of higher learning.

Trusting World Fond Of Romantic Gamblers, Looks On Check Cashers As Evil Children Of Mortal Sin

Cashing a check in today's trusting civilization is the same as trying to hit the jackpot on a quarter slot machine—only much less respectable. The world loves a romantic gambler, but frowns upon the would-be check casher.

Take, for example, Mr. John Q. Citizen, mild-mannered student whose only ambition in life is to live and let live. The kind of a chap who will go into three days of mourning if he steps upon an ant.

Like many other students, Mr. Q. might work part time. He might also have a tendency to buy fancy clothes when he can afford them. All very nice, however, if John were the type of person who wanted to buy his clothes by check, he would find himself entangled in a very embarrassing set of incidents. Here is what would happen:

Upon entering the clothes section of a store, our average student would immediately be ambushed by a smiling, somewhat toothy sales clerk who gently steers him over to a dusty rack in the corner. A rack which is certain to be overflowing with out-of-season sport coats.

Delighted with this find, he would grab one and pull the check from his wallet and pass it unconcernedly to the clerk.

The result of this highly irrational move would be a disapproving look on the clerk's face. His smile disappears. He slowly reaches for the check and begins to scrutinize it, letter by letter.

Mr. Q. would be feeling a bit uncomfortable by this time.

Naturally, the clerk cannot be satisfied with this nondescript piece of paper. He'd need identification. And John, only too happy to oblige and get the whole thing settled, would hand over the contents of his wallet—including everything from a birth certicate to the mortgage on his family's house.

Scooping these up, the clerk would hurry over to take up the matter with someone of influence. Probably a blue-suited man with slicked-back hair and a red carnation. They huddle together in a whisper, with the clerk pointing accusingly at John Q.

After a lengthy waiting period, deliberately planned by the store to shatter the customer's complacence, the clerk and Mr. Red Carnation would return to ask for more identification.

This would be the straw that broke the camel's back. Rueing the day he ever decided to wear clothes, John would stuff the documents into his pocket, mutter something about re-turning at a later date, and hurry red-faced out of the store, his self-respect completely shattered.

Schools Seeking Balance Between Arts, Sciences

By Bill Forshay

The problem of balance between scientific and liberal arts education is one that will increasingly absorb the attention of every college student. This is especially true in the case of the two-year college students who have not yet decided where to place the emphasis.

To help them in making their decision, The Guardsman will feature a short summary of two points of view as expressed by Dorothy Mercer of the English department and William K. Mayo of the engineering department here.

Miss Mercer, in discussing the problem, assured The Guardsman that "real scientists have never been opposed to the humanities" and cited the fact that Russia places 47 per cent of the emphasis on liberal studies.

In addition, Miss Mercer stated that "if too much emphasis is placed on technical studies instead of humanities, we are endangering democracy since liberal studies teach the abstracts of ideals, morals, and values."

Pointing out the recent decision of Congress to add one billion dollars to the educational program, Miss Mercer gave three counts against the idea that we could win over Russia by buying a billion dollars worth of mathematics and science.

"First, the individual is eliminated; second, value, on which democracy rests is not considered; and third, for a democracy the individual is the value."

Calling the present furor over education "hysterical fright," Miss Mercer pointed out that the humanities teach men "how to live by presenting the beautiful." Continuing with the assertion that the present critiesim of education is justified, she suggested that we must not sell our students short; "statistics can be so easily manipulated that I hesitate to give the figures presented by the president's Commission on Higher Education."

Disagreeing with the Office of Education, the commission "estimated that 49 per cent of the population has the mental ability to complete 14 years of schooling in general and vocational studies, and that at least 32 per cent has the ability to complete advanced liberal and specialized education."

"In other words," Miss Mercer said, "we have been selling ourselves short; we are no more stupid than other people; we only appear to be." (The Office of Education had estimated that 60 per cent of Americans were incapable of learning a trade or preparing for college.)

"It comes down to a question of half-way or good scientists," Miss Mercer continued, "and the point of balance is based upon the ability of man to dominate his machines by his use of them rather than subordinating himself to them."

According to Norbert Weiner, author of The Human Use Of Human Beings and a famous cybernetician, any usage of man which would make him subordinate to his machines or his technology would be an inhuman use of man.

In this respect, Russia has attempted for years to make semi-robots of her people but has had to revert to liberal arts since strictly scientific study leads to stultification of the arts and the ideals that make life a worthwhile experience. We must avoid the same extremes, according to the educators in favor of the liberal arts, and strive to strike a balance wherein students retain ideals with scientific capability and a love of beauty for its own sake as much as a love of machinery.

Next week, Science says . . .

(Editor's note: Students interested in this discussion are invited to submit letters expressing their opinions to The Guardsman for publication in the Ram's Horn. Letters should be brief and signed, but the name will be withheld upon request.)

ShotsAt Ramdom — Miss America Of '55 Performs On Dragnet

By Tom Tatera

ANYONE catch Lee Meriwether, ex-city collegiate and Miss America of 1955, on the Dragnet TV show a few weeks back? The doll showed real talent and acting ability. Bet the little theater group was kicking its heels in egotistical joy. Miss M. was once a member of their troupe, and it looks like she is showing the effects of the dramatic training they gave her way back when.

The Little Theater group, if anyone's interested, is combined of those budding young Shakespeareans located in the basement. They put on those very fine plays which few from the college ever bother to attend. People from all over the city, and outlying suburbs, pay their $2.50 to be present when the curtain rises. But where is the student, with his free admission Associated Student card? Probably down at the local movie house, paying to watch "I Was a Teen-Age Teen-ager," or some other such high quality film.

A WARNING to all Ivy-leagued textbook owners. Watch out for an indignant American public. Ever since Russia's sputnik sputtered its way into the skies, the man on the street has been wondering why this country hasn't been able to match Moscow in scientific know-how. The government couldn't take all the blame, so they looked around for a scapegoat. Guess who? If worse comes to worse, the only way you'll be able to graduate from college is to build a cyclotron, blindfolded. And this is not too easy, especially if you're an art major.

SOME TEEN-AGE dolls certainly expect a lot from the male group. They meet, and she immediately wants him to weave his world around her. He is supposed to open doors for her, carry her books, tell her how pretty-pretty she looks, and act the part of a lovesick imbecile. Ah, but these deluded debutantes will learn. Let them reach the age of 25 or 26, in an unmarried status, and they will be the ones who fawn over the guy. Stay single for a while, men. The girls will fall simpering at your feet.

The petite little lady smiled at the M.C. and blurted, "I was just as shook up as she." At a time like that, Mrs. Wong, no one can blame you for reverting to a bit of Elvis Presleyism.

Students Study Stars By Day Under Dome

Far reaching into the wonders of the universe is the telescope, but at the college the universe is brought to the students.

Is there really a telescope in the dome on top of the science building? This is a question that most new students ask the old, but some of the older students cannot answer correctly. Some say it contains a telescope, some say it houses a swimming pool, and a few just don't say anything.

These answers are all wrong. Although the dome was built for a 10 or 12-inch telescope, the college found that it could not afford to buy one, because of the advent of the war.

All astronomy classes would have had access to this instrument to observe the spectaculars of the stars and planets.

But what is under the dome? The college likes to do things the hard way, so instead of letting the students look to the stars, it brings the stars (in condensed form) to the students.

Under that dome the sky may be portrayed from any part of the world. This is done with the aid of a miniature planetarium, which projects points of lights which represent the stars on the circular dome.

Students in astronomy observe constellations, planets, and galaxies from chairs arranged in a circle under that mysterious dome, hence the infinite universe is brought to the college.

Lee Eisan Looking For Pennant On Return To Ram Diamond As Coach After 11 Year Absence

Lee Eisan, recently appointed to succeed "Bulldog" Bill Fischer as the brains behind the Ram baseball delegation, is undeniably one of the most versatile athletic enthusiasts in existence today, or at any other time, for that matter.

The hard-hitting Herculean has proved this time and time again since joining the original faculty at the time of the college's birth, 22 years ago.

Back in those days, two-year college ball was not the colossal extravaganza of polished machinery we know it to be today; it was, rather, the "rock 'em—sock 'em" affair that has ever since been attributed to none, save the incomparable men of the old school. It was through this "old school" type of action that "Lumpy" Lee Eisan came into his own, and through all the years, he still hasn't changed in the slightest.

In 1938, Eisan broke into football officiating, handling such classics as the old St. Mary's-Santa Clara brawls of yester-year, moving on to greater glory as intermediary for the Pacific Coast Conference in '51, with which he is still connected today. Perhaps one of the greatest highlights of his career came at the close of the '57 season, when he was selected to handle the star-studded East-West classic here in San Francisco.

RAMBLINGS

By Nick Peters

GOOD NEWS DEPARTMENT Scrappy Ram guard Al "Psych" Holder has been the big surprise in the college's late season cage successes. Holder, a stalwart cager for the Lowell Indians in 1952-53, moved up to a starting varsity berth after Freddie Williams dropped out because of scholastic difficulties. He not only has been a demon on defense, but has also been scoring big, setting his high mark of 17 against West Contra Costa a few weeks back.

A new college scoring mark was established in the record books when 6-5 forward Mal McCormick tanked 33 points against Santa Rosa last week. Rugged "Mac" tallied his points on a variety of sets, drives, and follow-ups in breaking the college's league record set by teammate Doug North with 29 digits against Oakland last year.

Coach Sid Phelan, not realizing McCormick's outburst was a new school league record until after the game, commented, "If I had known Mal was setting a new scoring standard I would have left him in longer."

Incidentally, Mal was not deliberately "fed" by his players as was Ram Bob Tealer, who tallied 46 points against San Diego in the State championships last year. Therefore, it can be said that "Mac" went out and worked for all his shots and really earned a scoring record—one that he deserved for his fine caliber of play throughout the season.

NY Dancer Presented By Recreation Association

A famed concert dancer and choreographer from New York presented a master lesson in Modern Dance to a Recreation Association sponsored audience February 22, in the men's gymnasium.

The event was divided into two sections. A total of 140 high school students participated in the morning, followed by 90 college students after lunch.

Another 125 persons watched the lessons during the day. Co-educational bowling and men's basketball have been added to the Recreational Association activities this semester. Other activities will continue as they have in the past. Group activities scheduled include a banquet, picnic, and several sport nights.

Two-year college sport days will be held at Santa Rosa, Monterey, and San Jose. Any interested students are requested to sign up in the women's gymnasium.

Hoopsters Whip San Mateo, Take Second In Big 8

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Not to be outdone by a torrid comeback effort in the final three minutes, Sid Phelan's "luckless Rams" weathered the storm and squeezed out a 66-62 victory over the Bulldogs of San Mateo to bring down the final curtain on the college's 23rd basketball season last Friday evening in the men's gymnasium.

The win pushed the locals into the runner-up spot behind the Thunderbirds of Oakland, who, led by Rufus Hawkins & Co., set a Big Eight precedent by becoming the first contingency in the loop's history to roll through a season undefeated.

Off to a binzing start with a five footer by Mal "Stick" McCormick and a pair of 15-foot jumps on the part of little Vic Corl, the Rams led the fray from start to finish, the closest Ray Baisley's boys ever coming to upsetting the apple cart being late in the final period at 57-55 and 60-58.

The Mateans were tough, and fought valiantly through the slambang affair that saw 29 fouls chalked up in the books, but the rugged board play of McCormick, Doug North, and little Al Holder (whose grabbling up of 11 rebounds was the surprise of the evening) proved too much to battle, and sent them back down the peninsula empty handed.

The phenomenal jump shooting of Corl, and ball hawking of Stan Rosenberg, who converted three beautiful pilfers into six digits on the scoreboard, had the Rams in complete control throughout the opening 20 minutes, which found them the masters by a 37-31 count at intermission.

The Bulldogs came roaring back in the second stanza with a beautiful floor game that enabled Don Gomes, Bobby Sherraid and Gene Locke (who joined together to rack up 52 markers for the losers) to riddle the can at will, but McCormick and his aides had too much control of the boards to be outdone, and the canines were forced to settle for a well deserved fourth place.

Gomes led the losers with a brilliant 20-point performance, backed up by Gene Locke, who put away 19, while four of the locals hit the double numbers bracket, Vic Corl leading the pack with 16, tailed closely by McCormick and North, who tallied 15 markers apiece, with Stan Rosenberg's 11-point performance bringing up the rear.

McCormick's 33 Paces Ram Win Over Santa Rosa

By John Henry

Ram forward Mal McCormick had the biggest night of his basketball career as he hit 33 points in leading his mates to a hard fought 65 to 58 win over a stubborn Santa Rosa Bearcub five last Tuesday night at Santa Rosa. The 6-5, 220-pound cager hit on a variety of shots, most of which were "muscles" underneath the bucket or 20 foot set shots from the floor.

McCormick was also the game's top rebounder as he picked off 13 missed shots from the backboards.

The Rams penetrated Santa Rosa's zone defense for quick baskets with McCormick and Vic Corl doing most of the damage, but only held a slim 17 to 15 advantage after the first 10 minutes of play. At the same time the Bearcubs were fighting back with Dan O'Muhundro and Len Greaney leading the way, McCormick went to work and scored 13 of the Rams' 17 points in the 10 minutes prior to the intermission, and boosted the Rams into a 34 to 26 lead.

Santa Rosa came back strong and pulled to within 2 points on some good outside shooting from guards Dick Salomon and Art Blunt, but it wasn't enough as McCormick and center Doug North found the range to lead the Rams to a 10-point margin with 8 minutes left to play in the game.

The Ram reserves finished out the game and the scrappy Bearcubs just couldn't catch up. McCormick's 33 digits were high for the game.

O'Muhundro paced Santa Rosa with 20 points coming on 10 field goals, and was the only Bearcub to hit double numbers. North chipped in with 11 points for the Rams, and the usually high scoring Vic Corl was hampered by an ankle injury which slowed him down quite a bit.

Thomas, Gasper Lead Track Team Into '58 Season; Prep Champions Strengthen Squad

By George Grasso

James Thomas and Will Gasper are two of the powerhouse veterans leading this year's much improved college track team into the 1958 season.

Slim, muscular Thomas was the winner of last year's Most Valuable Trackman trophy. The reason he's so valuable is that he can compete in any event from the 100-yard dash to the two-mile run. He specializes, however, in the high and low hurdles, and when he is called upon to do so, he can clear over six feet in the high jump. Also, his ability to run a quarter mile in under 50 seconds makes him a valuable candidate for the mile relay team.

Returning with Thomas is his phenomenal teammate, high jump record holder Will Gasper. During his freshman year, Gasper cleared 6 feet, 5½ inches to set the college's record in the high jump. He is also an excellent pole vaulter, making him a serious double threat man. Last season, the rangy ex-Washington star floated over the bar at 13'6" to miss the record by ½ inch.

The 1957 team, which placed third in Big Eight competition behind Modesto and Sacramento, was composed almost entirely of freshmen and operated with a shortage in the sprint and middle distance running departments. This year, that same squad is practically back en masse, and reinforced in the aforementioned weaker departments by the incoming freshmen.

One of the most notable is Mike Lewis from Lincoln High School. Last year, Lewis broke the National High School discus record with a heave of 158 feet. This college's record for the event, as set by Jack Egan, who is now having a successful season at USC, is 155'11".

Another event that the newcomers should make pretty one-sided is the broad jump. Much is expected from Mac Burton, ex-Washington High hero, who placed second in the State meet, and who posted an official jump of 24'8".

If that isn't enough, there's his Washington High buddy Gaynel Meiberson, who has done over 23 feet. The college's record is 22'7".

For now, only quick mention can be made of athletes such as Jerry Bell, who won the San Francisco high hurdle championship. Also there's Ed Costa, who has a 6'5" high jump to his credit, and Paul Patton, middle distance runner, who was clocked in a 1:57 half-mile.

Where will the stiffest competition be coming from? Look for a tough meet with Modesto. It is the college in the Big Eight which does the most to promote track, and they always come up with a good team. Track Coach Lou Vasquez sees Sacramento as the possible college to put out the stiffest competition. He believes he has one of the top teams, but states, "Sacramento is reportedly loaded after receiving much of its talent from powerful Berkeley High School."

Freddie Williams Stars In First College Ball Try

One of the main reasons for the success of Sid Phelan's Ram cagers this season has been the outstanding play of forward Freddie Williams, a 6-1, 168-pound cager who has the habit of putting the basketball into the hoop, which of course is the object of the game of basketball.

Williams' possesses a smooth functioning pair of wrists which seem to guide the ball perfectly toward the basket. His ability to constantly score from his corner position was of great concern to opposing teams and labeled Freddie as one of the most dangerous men in the two-year college circuit.

Williams was declared scholastically ineligible for the second half of conference play this year, and many Ram cage followers believe that if he had been around possibly the Rams would be on top rather than in second place.

With the departure of Bob Tealer, who led last year's Rams to the conference title, Coach Sid Phelan was looking for the right man to take Tealer's place. Williams, who is a friend of Tealer, was recommended by Tealer himself, and after the first few practice games this season, Williams reminded Phelan of his last year's ace.

Not only was Williams a top point producer but he established himself as a team player with his effective passing, hustle and all-around play on the hardwoods.

Williams was awarded a berth on the all-tournament team at the Modesto tournament in January for his fine performance in leading the college to the tourney title.

Williams was born in San Francisco on November 25, 1935, and attended Horace Mann Junior High and Washington and Mission High Schools.

He didn't play any ball in the high school league, as he only became interested in basketball in his senior year at Mission and limited his game to the playgrounds. In September, 1953, Williams joined the Air Force and started playing with the station teams. His biggest success came with the [illegible] team, with whom he played for three seasons.

In 1956 Westover AFB won the East Coast AAU championships. Williams' play caught the eye of several Eastern colleges, but he decided to return home upon his release from the Air Force and enrolled at the college in the fall of 1957. Williams is as yet undecided as to where he will be next season but is considering returning to the East Coast under a scholarship.

Other than playing basketball, Williams enjoys tennis and a pool game once in a while to keep his eye sharp. He likes the college very much and is a physical education major.

John Zastron Voted In As Sophomore Representative; Enfield Swears In Appointees To AS Executive Cabinet

By Lois Cosden

One Sophomore vacancy was filled in Student Council last week, when John Zastron was voted in by the group. One opening still remains and is expected to be filled this week to complete the 15 member Student Council.

Upper class members sworn in previously this semester are Audrey Bell, Gene Craft, Charlie Lewis, Bev Morris and Jackie Wyner.

JACK PATTERSON, AS president.

Freshman seats on council were filled by Pat Arden, Mike Biro, Judi Conner, Jamie Cook, Fran Kistler, Bill McDonald and Billie Needham.

Fifteen cabinet appointees took the oath of office and Bob Rodriguez was chosen Parliamentarian.

The cabinet consists of the following: Alumni Liaison Officer, Don Smith; Associated Student Card Sales Chairman, Ralph Prior; Campus Affairs Co-ordinator, Dave Tipton; Campus Police Commissioner, Marion Timm; Corresponding Secretary, Shelly Osborne; Election Commissioner, Steve Seitz; Finance Chairman, Liz Thrush, and Inter-Sorority Council President, Audrey Fones.

Junior Chamber of Commerce Representative, Larry Beldon; Publications Board Chairman, Pat Metsack; Publicity Committee Chairman, Tom Tatera; Rally Commissioner, Jim Hickey; Recording Secretary, Pat Jones; Recreation Association Chairman, Sandy Simonian, and delegated Publication Representative, Lois Cosden.

Freshman President Katie Ahern announced that the Frosh Ball will be held March 22 at the St. Francis Hotel.

Approval was granted the new officers of ISC, with Janice McClousky as vice-president, Jackie Wyner in the position of secretary-treasurer and Joycelyn Perkins, historian.

Jerry Redford, Sophomore president, made a similar request for the Sophomore Class. He named Wendy Tibbe vice-president, Sam Franzella secretary, and Bill Johnson treasurer. Council voted in their favor.

Still at loose ends is the final decision on the amended Athletic Code, brought to council's attention last semester by Larry Beldon, then Athletic Commissioner.

Beldon is now working on the Miss San Francisco contest with the Junior Chamber of Commerce. Entries begin next Monday, March 10, and close April 10. A candidate must submit her name, address, telephone number and grades. The queen will be chosen for beauty, talent and wholesomeness.

Kevin Mullen, State Information chairman, informed the assemblage of his project of mailing questionnaires to two-year colleges throughout California asking pertinent information about them for compiling and publication in booklet form.

The Club Activities Board's new chairman, Adolph Hersvick, was sworn into office by Darlene Enfield, acting chairman of council in the absence of AS President Jack Patterson.

Redford, reporting for the Publications Board, asked that all posters on campus be cleared through The Guardsman office or Dean Ralph Hillsman for approval.

Injured AS Chief Jack Patterson Resumes Duties

By Kevin Mullen

Jack Patterson, recently elected Associated Student President, who was injured in an automobile accident during the semester break, visited the college last week and expects to resume his studies this week.

Patterson suffered a concussion and multiple bruises when his car was struck at the intersection of Park Presidio Avenue and California Street by another auto.

In the accident, two former students of the college riding in Patterson's car were killed, Robert Kling, 24, past president of Gamma Phi Ypsion fraternity, and Lois Mantel, 22, past president of Phi Beta Rho sorority. The driver of the other car was cited.

According to Dean Ralph O. Hillsman, Patterson is presently enrolled in the college. "Student government has fallen on the shoulders of AS Vice-President Darlene Enfield, who is carrying on with a full degree of efficiency, but we don't want to overload her and we are awaiting Jack's return," Hillsman said.

In an interview at his home Patterson said, "At present, because of the headaches caused by the concussion, I can't read more than short stories. However, the headaches are becoming less frequent and the doctor is satisfied with my improvement. Aside from this, I am fine except for the bruises and I am anxious to get back to school."

Band Swings Into Spring Semester

Projects and prospects occupy the band for the spring semester as rehearsals are now in full swing under the baton of student director Nick Massenkoff, Meyer M. Cahn, director of the group, said today.

Meeting in B-5 Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays and also during college hours, the band has its sights set on such activities as the May Festival on May 9 at the Cow Palace, at which time it will be a [illegible] band, and on the commencement exercises.

In addition to Massenkoff, the band officers include John Warren, manager; Charlie Pierce, assistant manager; Deanna Thomas, secretary; Barbara Diggles, librarian, and Pierce, CAB representative.

"The band will act as hosts on April 25 when the San Bernardino Concert Band will perform during college hour," Cahn declared.

Pointing out that the function of the band is to instruct as well as entertain, Cahn invited students interested in joining during college hours or after 2 p.m. during the regular practices "to come down down, sit in, and see if you fit in."

Enrollment Here Hits All-Time High Figure

The highest daytime enrollment in the college's history—5,656, an increase of 86 over last semester—was announced this week by Mary Jane Learnard, registrar here.

Based on last semester's enrollment figures, however, about 800 students are expected to drop out or take leaves of absence before the end of the semester, Miss Learnard added.

This semester's total registration, including evening classes, exceeds that of the Fall 1957 semester by approximately 28 students.

Last semester's night classes held 1,330 students while this time there are 1,272.

College's Drama Group Affiliates With Fraternity

Renewing its affiliation with the little theater national drama fraternity, Delta Psi Omega, the college drama group will hold its initiation for 20 candidates this Friday in the college's little theater.

The fraternity exists in two-year colleges only, Michael J. Griffin, instructor in the Drama Department, said. It seeks persons especially interested in and devoted to good theater.

The college joined the national organization in 1950 and then fell into inactivity.

"With a new surge of interest, the Spring of '58 brings a breath of inspiration to achieve the ideals of Delta Psi Omega," Griffin declared.

"Our students here become eligible for membership as they attain certain standards of performance, attitudes and have participated in at least two productions as actors or technicians," he explained.

At present, Jeanne Graham, soon to star in the college's showing of The Admirable Crichton, by James M. Barrie, is the only member of the honor fraternity.

Griffin announced the names of the society's officers last week. They are Stan Church, president; John Rose (star of Crichton), vice-president, and Marilyn Banchieri, secretary.

Drama students cited for membership in Delta Psi Omega other than those mentioned are Dolores Duran, Virginia Evans, Marlene Grant, Leah Pasholan, Virginia Rae, Tanya Soleimani, John Comb, Jordy Cooney, Fred Fisher, Bill Forshay, Bob Lasley, Nick Massenkoff, Carl Mayo, Mel Mazzanti and Tom Wilson.

Chuck Huntley was named an honorary member.

Students no longer here but nominated to Alumni membership include Jim Brady, W. Warren Henderson, Wanda Koshkin and Bob Phalen.

Graduate Awarded Art Scholarship

James T. Brady, a graduating arts major here last semester, was recently awarded a special scholarship by the California College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland.

The scholarship, valued at $250 per semester, is renewable for two years.

Brady, a Korean veteran, enrolled in the college Spring, 1956, and undertook art courses with William J. Eckert in commercial art, Carl Beetz in figure drawing, and George Mullany in graphic arts.

Brady is presently enrolled at the College of Arts and Crafts and plans to use the scholarship to further his ambition to become an art teacher.

Last semester here, he assisted in designing both the program and sets for two plays, The Merchant Of Venice and The Crucible. He now works in the print shop of the Arts and Crafts college's paper, The Paint Bag.

The 26-year-old native of Columbus, Ohio, is also an honorary member of the National Drama Society.

College Broadcasters To Host Del Courtney

KCSF, the college's Broadcasters' Club, will host Del Courtney, local radio and television personality, during college hour this Friday in S-147, Ken Shimmon, publicity co-ordinator of the club, announced today.

Courtney is one of many personalities the club expects to host this semester, Shimmon added, inviting non-club members to attend the club's meeting if they wish.

April 2 Set As Forum Deadline

Students are encouraged to submit short stories, especially satirical or humorous, to be published in Forum, the college's annual literary magazine, Catherine Connolly, faculty adviser here, announced today.

She added that short stories, short one-act plays, essays not exceeding 1,500 words, critiques, articles of current interest, poetry and light verse may also be submitted.

Manuscripts should be on 8½" x 11" paper and should be typewritten with double spacing on one side of the paper, leaving a 1½" margin space.

Tentative deadline for material is scheduled for April 2, and should be given to Miss Connolly in C-331A.

Students interested in editorial writing and literary matters are invited to attend the meetings of the Forum Club held on Fridays during college hour in S-257, Miss Connolly said.

The Pacific Coast League home run record is held by Tony Lazzeri, ex-Yankee flash, who socked 60 circuit clouts for the Salt Lake City Bees in 1925.

Guardsman Sets Tentative Dates For Publication

Thirteen issues of The Guardsman are expected to be published this semester, Pat Metsack, chairman of the Publications Board and Guardsman editor-in-chief, announced this week.

As approved by the Publications Board, The Guardsman's tentative dates of publication are March 5, today; March 12, March 19, March 26, April 2, April 16, April 23, April 30, May 7, May 14, May 21, May 28 and June 4.

Members of the Publications Board in addition to Miss Metsack are Jack Patterson, Associated Student president; Darlene Enfield, AS vice-president; Liz Thrush, Finance Chairman; Jerry Redford, Guardsman managing editor, and Tom Tatera, feature editor of The Guardsman. Faculty sponsors are Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, and Joan Nourse, Guardsman adviser.

Regulations concerning distribution of unofficial printed matter on campus were announced this week by the Publications Board. All printed matter to be distributed on campus must be submitted to the board, according to Miss Metsack, in accordance with the following regulations:

Any organization or campus group intending to publish material for distribution to students of the college must have the master copy approved by the board chairman. A copy of the distributed copy must be sent to the chairman. If this rule is not followed, the publication will be cancelled by the chairman.

All posters to be displayed on campus must also be approved by the Publications Board chairman before being posted. Purpose of these regulations are to protect the name of the college, Miss Metsack explained.

H&R Prepares For Annual Meeting, Award Selections

The college's Hotel and Restaurant Foundation will hold its annual meeting here next Monday, March 10, according to Lawrence B. Wong, H&R faculty member.

The function of the luncheon is to select the winners of eight H&R scholarship awards, totaling approximately $2,000, and to officially accept Willard Abel, board executive of the Western Hotel chain, who will assume the position formerly held by the late President, A. J. Cloud.

Tremaine Loud, president of the foundation; Dr. Lloyd G. Conlan, president of the college, and Ralph O. Hillsman, dean of Student Activities here, among other notables are scheduled to attend, Wong said.

The winners will be announced April 30 at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel after a short dinner meeting. Also, a Sheraton trophy will be presented to an outstanding student with a corresponding one going to the college, he added, explaining that the purpose of the Sheraton trophy competition is to stimulate interest in the H&R business and to acquaint students with actual restaurant doings.

Wong also stated that the college cafeteria is open every college day with the time schedule as follows: breakfast from 7:30 to 10 a.m., and lunch from 10:45 a.m. to 1:15 p.m., at which time the large dining room will be closed for cleaning.

The fountain, Wong added, stays open a little later in the afternoon as it operates daily from 10 a.m. to 2:15 p.m. The faculty dining room is open from 11 a.m. to 12:45 p.m.

College's Coeds Eligible For Miss San Francisco Contest Sponsored By Junior Chamber Of Commerce Here

Registration for the Miss San Francisco contest is now open to eligible women and will continue until Thursday, April 10, according to Larry Beldon, college liaison officer with the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

The final contest, sponsored by the San Francisco Junior Chamber, will be held in May.

Women students interested in entering the contest can obtain petitions from Beldon at B-2 or from the office of Dean of Women, Mary Golding.

"The contest is not simply a beauty contest," Dean Golding stated. "It is also an effort to find the girl who is most personable and talented. Its purpose is to find the girl who most truly represents San Francisco's young womanhood."

In general, the rules state that a contestant must be a resident of San Francisco for at least six months, she must be single (never married) and her age on September 1, 1958, cannot be less than 18 nor more than 28.

Prizes for this year's winner will include a modeling course at John Powers and probably an all-expense paid trip to Mexico. The winner will also have her expenses paid to the State Contest at Santa Cruz.

A former student of the college, Lee Ann Meriwether, won the Miss San Francisco contest in 1955 and went on to win the State and National titles. "It took a great deal of coaxing before Mrs. Meriwether allowed Lee Ann to enter the contest but in the long run it paid off for her," Dean Golding said. "After winning the national title, she received a Nash automobile, a fabulous wardrobe and a personal appearance tour around the country."

Outdoor Rally To Kick Off Sports Activities Here

Officially opening the college's season for spring sports has been set as the first job in the agenda of the newly organized Rally Committee, Jim Hickey, Rally Commissioner here, announced today.

Send-off for the committee's activities will be the Spring Sports Rally, Hickey further disclosed. It will honor the Ram track, tennis, golf and baseball teams.

Tentatively set as an outdoor show, the rally will be held during college hour this Friday, 10 to 10:40 a.m., near the men's gymnasium, and will include various types of entertainment.

Coaches from each of the sports mentioned will give a short talk on their particular teams, introducing, afterward, some of the outstanding athletes who participate on them and will represent the college in intercollegiate events this semester. Presenting these players will be Coach Lou Vasquez, track; Roy Diederichsen, golf and tennis, and Lee Eisan, the Rams' new baseball pilot.

Other members assisting Hickey, a 21-year-old sophomore and history major here, in formulating the committee's plans for the current semester are Joan Comisa, secretary-treasurer, and Gene Craft, custodian and one of the college's football and baseball stars.

Future rallies, now in the fire, include the Blood Drive rally scheduled for Friday, March 28; the Spring Festival rally on Friday, April 25, and the election rally slated for Friday, May 16.

Graduation Petition Deadline This Friday

Last day to file petitions for graduation in June is this Friday, March 14, according to Olga Perkins of the registrar's office.

All students hoping to graduate are expected first to check the college catalog, pages 35 and 36, for the graduation requirements, Mrs. Perkins said, and she advised students in doubt as to whether they are eligible for graduation to consult their counselors.

Students who are sure they are meeting the necessary requirements are then to file their petitions with the registrar's office, now located in the reserve reading room of the library until renovation is completed in the regular office.

There have already been about 650 applications filed, and about 100 more are expected before the deadline Friday, Mrs. Perkins added.

AMS To Hold Gala Festival In April

Associated Men Students' Spring Festival will be held at the San Francisco Cow Palace Friday, April 25, AMS President Freddie Hicks announced this week.

A program for the festival, which will include athletic exhibitions and social events, will be announced later.

The AMS [illegible] announced. No [illegible] the Theme contest now in progress will close next Monday, March 17. All recognized college clubs and fraternities are urged to submit suggestions for the Spring Festival theme, and Hicks declared that the organization winning will receive a trophy.

In other action taken at a March 5 meeting, the AMS voted to organize two intramural basketball leagues and will petition campus clubs to sponsor league teams to compete for a basketball trophy in early April.

At the Wednesday noon meeting, Alan Browning was appointed vice-president of the AMS; Chuck Zanardi was appointed as secretary. The position of treasurer is vacant.

Committee Sets Dates For Blood Drive Operation

Plans for the college's annual Blood Drive, Thursday and Friday, March 27 and 28, are materializing under the supervision of Jim Hecht and his Blood Drive committee, Ronald McNeil and Dick Cotrell.

To date, the plans include a rally starring Turk Murphy on March 28, the last day of the drive. Because of the drawing power of Turk Murphy, the rally will be staged in front of the "Ram" where there will be plenty of room, Hecht stated. (This is also conveniently near the Blood collection point in B-2 for those who feel guilty about not paying admission.)

Additional plans provide for a graph which will show exactly how much blood each group on campus donates in proportion to its membership.

This will stimulate contributions by shaming any lax organizations into matching their peers.

Three trophies will be given to the three groups which lead in contributions, one to the top member of the Inter-Fraternity Council, one to the top member of the Inter-Sorority Council, and one to the leading independent organization.

Have An AS Card? Want To Dock? Parking Permits Still Available

By William Gibbons

It's not too late to pick up a student parking permit, according to Fred Fitzgerald of the criminology department here.

Each Friday during college hour members of the college's Campus Police will issue those treasured green and white stickers.

Students who haven't procured a parking permit and now have a Associated Student card along with their car registration and a driver's license, may get one simply by going into bungalow 2 and asking for it by name. A campus policeman will stick the permit on the lower corner of the car windshield after the student has driven it to the Cloud Hall Circle in front of the Red Ram.

Having the student policeman apply the sticker to the car this semester is a change brought on by those whom Fitzgerald labels as "sticker shifters." The latter are members of certain car pools, who last semester transferred one sticker on a piece of cardboard from car to car, depending on which was to be driven to college that particular day.

One of Fitzgerald's problems is the student who parks his car in the faculty parking area, either in Cloud Hall Circle or behind Smith Hall. He points out that there are only 225 parking spaces available for 250 instructors, not including the custodians and civil service employees.

The illegally parked student doesn't stand much of a chance in outfoxing the Campus Police, however, because of the two-man, hour-by-hour patrols making the rounds every class day starting at 8 a.m. Their main objective is to cite parking violations and the tickets they issue are "the real McCoys," payable only at City Hall Traffic Fines Bureau, room 164, City Hall, San Francisco.

Another difficulty Fitzgerald faces is that of motor scooters parked on the walk at the south end of the Science Building. He said, "The next thing you know they'll be parking outside of their classroom doors; we had to draw the line somewhere.

"Seriously," he added, "sometimes these scooters [illegible] and we can't afford to risk the possibility of someone slipping and injuring himself. The motor scooters should be parked so as not to be obstacles on paths or roads leading to or around the college."

Three areas have been set aside for student parking. The first area, designated as Area A, is bounded by Phelan Avenue and the Cloud Hall Circle, adjacent to Smith Hall. The second, Area B, has its entrance on Ocean Avenue and is bounded by the athletic field. The last, Area C, is bounded by the archery field and the men's gymnasium, located just below Cloud Hall. Parking is prohibited outside the marked stalls.

March 22 Set As Frosh Ball Date

A Cutest Couple Contest will be a highlight at the Frosh Ball, scheduled Saturday, March 22, in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel, Katie Ahern, president of the Freshman Class, announced last Friday.

The ball, sponsored by officers and members of the Freshman Class, will begin at 9 p.m. and continue until midnight, and Miss Ahern invited all students to attend this gala event and enjoy daneing to the music of the Ray Hackett Orchestra.

Attire for the evening will be semi-formal, cocktail dresses for the women, suits and ties for the men. Admission is by an Associated Student card or $2.50, Miss Ahern said.

Other officers of the Freshman Class helping to plan this big event are Secretary Bev Tollini and Vice-President Gary Torres. Torres will be in charge of directing the Cutest Couple Contest at the ball.

Associated Student Card Sales Week Comes To Close With 1,737 Sold; 463 To Go With Goal Still In Sight

More than three-fourths of the goal of 2,200 Associated Student paid membership cards has been reached to date, according to Ralph Prior, AS Card Sales chairman.

At last count, March 5, 1,737 cards had been sold, which leaves only 463 to reach the goal. If the goal is reached, a total of $11,000 will be turned in to the AS. This compares favorably with last semester when 2,407 cards were sold with $12,025 added to the AS budget.

Pointing out some of the benefits to AS members, Prior diseussed the "spouse" cards which enable married students and their wives to use the cards jointly. To obtain this service, the finance office will stamp the word "spouse" on the card.

"Another little-known benefit is for students graduating at the end of the semester," Prior said. "If they are AS members, they receive their caps and gowns with no charge. Non-card holders will pay a fee of five dollars for the cap and gown." In addition, Prior listed several other benefits including parking permits, sports events, plays and the many discounts received when the card is shown to the establishments listed on the back of the card.

Winners of the Associated Men Student - Associated Women Student competition for the highest number of cards sold were announced Friday and will be published next week. Since 1953, the AWS has won five contests to AMS with four. A prize is awarded each semester for the top salesperson, in recognition of his efforts toward the success of the drive.

With the contest ended, AS cards are now on sale in the finance office located in Smith Hall, which is open from 8:45 to 11 a.m. and 12 noon to 2:15 p.m.

Appointments For Program Planning Begin March 19

Appointments for next semester's program planning will begin next Wednesday, March 19, in S-160, Howard Schoon of the counseling department announced last week.

The alphabetical system of making appointments, which was initiated at the college last semester, will be continued, Schoon stated. Under this system the student makes an appointment on a certain day which is designated for him, thus avoiding a last minute rush, Schoon added.

Students whose names end in D to G will make appointments March 19; H to K, March 20; L to N, March 21; O to R, March 24; S to Z, March 25, and A to C, March 26, Schoon further explained.

Students who fail to make appointments on their designated day must wait until March 28 to make an appointment, he said. All members of Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society, will be given early appointments.

Vocal Groups To Attend Modesto Music Festival

Auditions have been completed for Men's Glee Club, Robert Morton, choir director, said today, but there are still openings for sopranos in the A Cappella Choir and the Treble Clef.

Officers have been elected in all three groups and plans are being made to attend the Northern California Junior College solo and small vocal ensemble festival at Modesto Friday, April 25. In addition, the Glee Club and choir will go to San Jose in May for a Choir Festival there.

The elections for officers in Men's Glee Club produced a surprise when Dave Vargo dropped out of college to be married. His brother Larry was elected to fill his post as student director. Other officers for the group include Jerry Boden, custodian, and John Vintonas, librarian.

Officers for the A Cappella Choir include Diek Alsterland as president; Anne Boddy, vice-president, and Dolores Stone, librarian. Miss Stone was elected to fill two posts when she also became President of the Treble Clef. Margaret Baxter was chosen librarian, and Cliff Cehand was elected CAB representative for all three groups.

Women wishing to audition for A Cappella Choir or Treble Clef may try out daily with these groups at 1 p.m. in B-6, Morton said.

IRC Events Open Tonight With Surprise Party

By Pastor Valle-Garay

A semester of activities, superior to any before, has been generally outlined for the International Relations Club by Joseph M. Jacobsen, foreign student adviser here and sponsor of the organization.

[illegible] the large scale of events will be this Friday's Surprise Party to be held from 9 p.m. to midnight in Smith Hall. Dedicated to the foreign students on campus, the affair is open to all, and tickets, on sale at Jacobsen's office, S-186, are $1 per couple and 75 cents stag.

Guests will be welcomed, Jacobsen noted, providing their hosts obtain guest bids at his office.

On May 2, and for the second consecutive year here, the Latin American Fiesta will take place with IRC members producing, directing and participating in the south of the border carnival of music and dances.

This presentation, which may turn out to be a regular affair, according to the IRC's publicity chairman, Alberto Salamanca, promises to "surpass the enormous success of last year's show."

Turning to sports, Salamanca stated that basketball and soccer teams are being organized within the club, to compete with other college's IRC teams.

A three-day conference is scheduled to be held at Asilomar, on the Monterey Peninsula, on April 18, 19 and 20. This will be the 12th Annual World Affairs Conference sponsored by the World Affairs Council of Northern California. Theme of the council meeting is The International Atom-Impact of Nuclear Energy on World Affairs.

Students here, selected on a scholarship basis, Jacobsen said, will represent the college and the IRC at the conference and, he added, "Those interested in the fields of international relations, journalism and science are especially desired," and urged to apply for the scholarships at his office.

The scholarship covers room, board, registration fee expenses for the three-day conference, plus a packet of student material and travel arrangements to and from Asilomar.

Also included in this semester's IRC calendar of "political events participation" will be a foreign students' delegation to the Model UN meeting, to be held at a later date at [illegible].

"Contrary to what some students think," Jacobsen asserted, "the club is open for membership to Americans as well as foreigners. Our meetings, held in C-258 during Friday college hours, should prove a most interesting experience to many."

Films of foreign countries, narrations, talks, picnics and more parties will be planned and presented at these meetings, he added.

Officers of the club for the current semester are Rene Motte from Peru, president; Alfredo Aubone from the Argentine, vice-president; Virginia Li from China, secretary; Paul Yee from China, treasurer, and Betty Deller from Ecuador, historian.

Thought, Moderation Needed In Organizational Activities

UNAVOIDABLY students who find themselves caught in the middle of classroom work and club and organizational activities will exasperatedly stop at some point during the semester and ask, "Is it all worth it?"

Throwing in the sponge is not the answer, but neither is neglecting the main goal of education. Classroom activities and club functions can work together if the student is smart enough to let them.

It seems that at the college level there are many students around but getting to know any number of them seems to be a chore beyond the comprehension of the average person. Clubs, sororities, fraternities and various organizations are the merging places of strangers and the meeting places of friends. These groups have many purposes, one of which is applying what's been learned in the classroom situation. Another of these purposes is to build up the courage and the "intestinal fortitude" required in meeting and dealing with new people.

It is to be remembered that these various activities are fun and available to all, but it is also to be remembered that they are only a part of the whole—the whole being education in all of its fields. If thought and moderation are used in participating in various social affairs then the term education can honestly be applied to these groups.

Think about joining an organization from two points of view. First, what good will it do for me, and secondly, what good can I do for it?

Opinions—Ask, Answer Questions!

THE SOLUTION to the "scientific" problems discussed on this page, and other problems of this same type are presently beyond the grasp of students, educators and scientists. It remains then for the individual student to ask and sometimes answer his own questions. Getting opinions and expressing ideas is one of the many functions of a college publication. These ideas should come from members of the Associated Students as well as from the staff writers.

This is, in effect, an invitation to students to submit letters containing their opinions to The Guardsman for publication. Letters received will be printed in the column called the Ram's Horn and answered by the paper if a question is presented. Interested students should address letters to The Guardsman office, S-304.

Survival Only By Science

SMILES KICK OFF GREAT DEBATE. Dorothy F. Marcer, English instructor here, points to her ideas For Writing book, symbolizing her belief in the importance of liberal arts education. But William K. Mayo of the engineering department has different ideas, as shown in his emphasis on the machine behind him.—Guardsman photo by Charles Smith.

Technological Training Necessary If Liberal Arts Are To Be Enjoyed; 'We Have No Choice,' States Mayo

By Bill Forshay

Questions about the relative importance of liberal arts and science brought on by the recent furor over Sputniks and Dudniks have caused The Guardsman to publish a series of two articles outlining the basic question to help students decide where they should place the emphasis.

The position of engineers and scientists is stated by William K. Mayo of the college's engineering department. Mayo, in addition to holding a Master of Science degree from California, is a member of the steering committee of the National Technical Institute Division and also a member of the Engineering Liaison Committee for the state.

Mayo believes that there is really no problem. "We have no choice," he said, "since the question is no longer of desire but necessity. The emphasis must be on science if we are going to survive."

Breaking down the scientific requirements into their separate fields, Mayo pointed out that the problem is not the lack of top scientists but one of freeing them to do the theoretical work by providing more of the engineering technicians who develop and do the detailed planning for the top scientists.

There is one big group that is rapidly disappearing, Mayo said, and this is the skilled worker group. This group includes repairmen, mechanics and carpenters. Automation is moving in and this group is moving out.

Statistics on Mayo's part include the information that the U. S. needs 300,000 supporting personnel per annum (i.e. engineers, chemists, etc.) and only 120,000 men are being turned out yearly. This discrepancy is made even larger by the fact that many of those turned out are not in the necessary fields but in allied fields such as medicine.

"Here is the whole answer," he believes; "if the time for training is limited, then that time must be used for education that will enable us to survive. When this training should be done is more important. Living, travel experience all give liberal arts experience. You don't STOP learning liberal arts, so the mechanical skills should be concentrated upon in the time allotted to schooling."

Pointing to the role of the college in this training, Mayo stated that "junior colleges are specifically assigned the first two years of four-year engineering courses as well as the whole task of two-year engineering technicians.

"Returning to the factual side of our educational defects," Mayo continued, "we are two years behind Russia. This means that what a student in Russia has absorbed in 10 years, a comparative U. S. student does not obtain until after 12 years. This loss is now making itself apparent, and we must overcome it in our schools. These are matters of survival to enjoy the living taught by the liberal arts."

One of the solutions suggested by Mayo was the "toughening up" of the lower school system.

Adding that what we're doing is all right if done more thoroughly, Mayo stated that there is not enough distinction between "good" and "bad" students and expressed the opinion that orientation toward future goals could be done more thoroughly.

Chessman Case Man's Fight Against Odds

By Don Seratti

WHEN a condemned man lives in the shadow of the gas chamber for ten years, never really certain of how long he will be able to forestall a long overdue execution, one can scarcely avoid feeling even mildly sympathetic to the man's struggle against the odds.

The man is Caryl Chessman, convicted in 1948 of kidnaping and other crimes under California's "Little Lindbergh Law" and sentenced to death the same year. In the decade that has since elapsed, he has pulled one legal trick after another out of his hat in a thus far fruitless effort to avert walking the "last mile" he has seen scores of other doomed men walk past his cell on San Quentin's Death Row. Earlier this month his latest bid for a new trial was frustrated by a Los Angeles court.

Legally, Chessman is still due to be executed—a Los Angeles trial jury said so in 1948 and nothing has changed the situation since then.

In his highly successful autobiography Cell 2455, Death Row, Chessman tells of being a member of the notrious "Boy Bandit Gang" and admits to having robbed as many as a dozen business establishments in one night. Released from a previous sentence to San Quentin, he again resumed his crime career until apprehended for the last time in 1948. His record shows one transgression after another, with no apparent effort or desire to "go straight."

That's the legal side of it. Perhaps even when his case is viewed from a moral standpoint he deserves to die.

But there are some extenuating circumstances that certainly warrant consideration before the reader passes judgment. Chessman claims that his criminal activities were born of constant cruel treatment at the hands of policemen, whereas careful rehabilitative efforts may have turned him away from crime.

He tells in his book of the resentment prevalent in the Los Angeles courtroom in 1948 when he refused legal assistance and chose to defend himself, and of the insufficient time he was given in which to prepare his case. He relates that since that time, certain influential people have been "out to get him" and for personal reasons have helped to block his legal attempts at execution.

The matter of his literary and legal achievements has arisen several times during his period of incarceration and has resulted in a great deal of pro-Cressman sentiment.

While on Death Row he has used his time—and he's had plenty of it—to good advantage. He has become proficient enough in legal procedure to thwart execution many times and under different circumstances might have become one of the country's most skilful lawyers.

He has written three books, all of which have been enthusiastically lauded by literary critics who brand him a genius. Some people have gone so far as to say that the state of Chessman's loss would be society's gain, if he should beat his rap and be allowed to continue writing.

It seems almost a pity to execute a brilliant mind, and yet his crimes cannot go unpunished.

Should Chessman pay with his life for the crimes he is charged with, or should he be allowed to continue his writing behind bars? Only time and the legal authorities will tell, but it's hard to keep from speculating.

Consideration

J. B. Schmoker Adjusts Time For Students

By Lee Anderson

The unusual combination of patience, consideration for others, and extreme importance in a specified field, is seldom found so predominately as it is in J. Benjamin Schmoker, General Secretary for the Committee on Friendly Relations Among Foreign Students.

Schmoker came to the Bay Area recently to set up sub-committees for the organization, and to meet with acting committees. After arriving here, he discovered that one of his associates was attending this college and would have to cut three classes in order to be at his meetings.

Schmoker's reaction to this problem was most unusual. Rather than have a student miss three of her classes, he rearranged the schedule of his meetings. The student then mentioned the incident to her instructor. George Mullany of the public relations class. Mullany immediately decided that here was a man whom his class should meet, and arrangements were made for Schmoker to speak to the class during college hour February 28.

The main topic of his talk had to do with the functioning of the committee, which has a most unusual history. The committee is a non-profit, private organization designed to aid foreign students coming into this country. From a spontaneous friendship of one man toward a group of incoming foreign students, the committee has mushroomed and is now established in all major cities.

Its foremost objective is to meet students at ports of entry, give them an immediate sense of security and help them adjust to the newness which surrounds them. The orientation of the public about the works of the committee is primarily Schmoker's job.

On the personal side, Schmoker is a graduate of the University of Minnesota. He taught school for several years and had much experience in student counseling. Although he had no formal training, he has worked in the position of secretary for the committee for the past 11 years. Seventy per cent of his time is spent traveling about the country setting up subcommittees and promotion of the organization.

Exceedingly busy as his life has been, Schmoker is a family man. He and his wife reside in New York, as do his daughter and two grandsons.

Those having heard Schmoker talk have no doubt about the need for such an organization.

Triskaidekophobia?? Don't Feel Lonely!!

By Tom Tatera

PHOBIAS are quite the rage today. It seems that anyone who really counts has some little psychological warp to call all his own, ranging from simple claustrophobia, the fear of closed spaces, to trick triskaidekophobia, or terror of the number 13. If you feel left out, see your nearest Man With Gray Flannel Couch. You, too, can be a fashionable neurotic—for a fee!

SIGNS OF SPRING are in the air. Birds are greeting the morning with song, sunlight is sweeping across perked-up greenery, and students are requesting "absent due to cold" chits from Dean Hillsman while wearing beautiful shades of sun tan. Nothing like going to the beach when you're sick. Those ultra-violet rays are really the ritz.

OUR ALMA MATER is getting on in years. She'll be a quarter of a century old come 1960. Perhaps a celebration could be planned in honor of her anniversary? Something simple, like an all-star stage show in the men's gymnasium, a 25-layered cake made up by the Hotel and Restaurant boys, and an all hands parade to top the whole thing off.

1960 is a long way off, but an affair like this should be considered well ahead of time.

Canned Salmon Having Their Week As Fish Swim Upstream To Spawn

What is to follow is a fish story; not about the one that got away, but rather about the one that didn't. If you are one of the uninformed, you of course don't realize this is National Canned Salmon Week.

National Canned Salmon Week arrives at an appropriate time—Lent. Lent for many people means fish, and the people who can salmon believe that Lent is a great time to push salmon. Sounds kind of messy.

Salmon are the fish that live in the ocean but travel upstream to spawn, and every year the National Geographic runs a color photo of them going up the Columbia River. They look like Elvis the Pelvis the way they wiggle.

Of course, those who get canned goofed somewhere along the way and didn't quite make it upstream—which is just as well, because if they all succeeded there wouldn't be any National Canned Salmon Week and this would make the canning people very unhappy.

Before we leave canned salmon, let us reflect on the most important job in the canned salmon factory, that of closing the eyes of the salmon before they are placed in the can. Doesn't sound very important but how would you like to open a can of salmon and find them staring at you? But now, it's time to leave the salmon. Remember, we warned it would be a fish story.

Phelanmen Culminate Season With 24-9 Mark; McCormick Captures Team Scoring Honors

By Nick Peters

Posting an impressive 24-9 season record and earning themselves a second place finish in the Big Eight Conference, Sid Phelan's luckless Ram cagers had what must be considered a successful year.

A general consensus of coaches and sportswriters was that the college five may have gone all the way had it not been burdened by such a heavy schedule, which saw the club playing 33 contests in 90 days, or nearly three tilts per week. The validity of the consensus cannot be measured, but the 33 games are considerably over the 25-game mark accumulated by most major college outfits.

Among the 24 victories 11 were registered in Big Eight play, good for a second place behind Oakland's undefeated Thunderbirds. Three important wins came at the Modesto Tournament, giving the college the championship and Coach Sid Phelan his first tourney win in over a decade of hoop mentoring.

Star forward Freddie Williams, who missed six conference games because of scholastic deficiencies, led the Rams through an impressive non-league schedule with a blistering 15.6 scoring average on 276 points in 18 contests.

As a climax to his very fine season Williams was named to the all-tourney five in Modesto along with his sharpshooting teammate Vic Corl.

The conference games were all 6-5 Mal McCormick's show. The huge forward had the complete year—leading the team in rebounds, top man for the Rams in league scoring (192) and season scoring (444), and setting a college single game league scoring record with 33 markers against Santa Rosa. "Mac's" consistency was quite evident as he hit for double figures in 27 of the 33 games.

Vic Corl paced the team in field goal percentage and was second in the scoring column. When Corl was "on," there wasn't a better performer in the league. Injuries slowed down pivotman Doug North, therefore, the 6-8 lad never lived up to his brilliant frosh season in which he made the All-Conference second team.

Fifth man Stan Rosenberg was the team's playmaker, and a good one at that. He made up for his lack of scoring with his sterling all-around hustle. Among the reserves, John Henry and Al Holder were the best performers, with Holder doing a superb job as Williams' late season sub.

As a team the Rams held their opponents to 53.6 points per game while scoring 60.4 per on offense. The season scoring stats:

Player—	G	FG	FT	PF	Tot.	Ave.
McCormick	33	178	88	83	444	13.5
Williams	26	163 - 65		49	379	14.6
Corl	33	161	69	89	391	11.9
North	29	88	43	71	215	7.4
Rosenberg	33	88	36	61	206	6.3
Holder	26	47	44	46	138	5.3
Henry	22	38	15	42	79	3.6
Johnson	7	7	3	3	17	2.9
Campbell	6	5	3	2	13	2.6
Charonis	6	4	4	4	11	2.3
Wiseman	15	6	11	16	23	1.5
Bryant	9	5	1	12	11	1.3

Ram JV Cagers Wind Up Successful Season

This season's junior varsity cage squad had a successful year winning 10 of 11 tilts. The squad was comprised of all freshmen who gained playing experience, which makes a brighter outlook for next season's varsity.

The Ram JV's defeated all local high school opposition and San Benito Junior College while losing only to a tough California Maritime Academy five. Coach Sid Phelan "lent" the JV's several varsity reserves during A few of the games both to strengthen the team and also give Dave Campbell, Bob Wiseman and Al Bryant game experience.

The JV players were Mike Mullarky, Bill Johnson, John Charonis, George Schnapp, Ed Baker and LeRoy Henry.

Golf Season Starts Friday

Although College of San Mateo, conference champion last year, is again top seeded this season, the college divoters have a good chance to cop the laurels, as they open their season this Friday at Modesto.

Leading the golf ladder to date is Bob Patterson, who is shooting in the mid-seventies. Second man is Eldon Davis with Tony Agliolo and John White a close third and fourth, respectively.

Gordon Gruber, Gene Krone, and Charles Pierce are fighting for fifth man spot on the squad. Everett Hintz and Wary Kimball are also on the team.

Record Breaking Marks Expected From Track Squad

Damp and windy weather has proved itself the biggest adversary of what promises to be a rugged and well-balanced Ram track squad.

The cindermen must get at least a fraction of the running weather given most of its competitors if they are to wind up at the top of the heap. Colleges like Modesto and Sacramento, unaffected by the grime and slime plaguing Bay Area schools, are at a big advantage in this department.

Fortunately, however, the dismal rains which hampered the college's early workouts are now giving way to clear skies, and the job of getting into shape now begins in earnest on the Riordan and San Francisco State tracks.

Broadjumping, an event that seems to draw a goodly number of interested spectators even in these practice sessions, has already developed into an all-star production, with stars like Mac Burton and Elving Bridges cracking off new college records with each leap.

Other standout competitors, who should make this one of the club's strongest events, are Gaynel McPherson and Claude Williams. It seems no longer a question of record breaking, but rather one of who will have the honor of being the first to break it.

Don Nasser, a sprinter, and one of the hardest workers on the squad, has been leading the dash men through various tuning up maneuvers. Usually taking an early lead, he moves out and sets the pace for the daily 220 and 330 scampers.

Will Gasper, one of the college's top point getters, seems to have lost little of his old spring in the high jump, clearing six-four last week in a practice game.

Marion Page and George Fields are also playing around with vaults of around 6-2.

Three Vets Back On Ram Nine For March 22 Start

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Ram diamond competitors, after nine months of inactivity, find themselves once again plagued with the necessity of pulling the old bones back into shape.

Like nearly every other American sport, baseball is strictly a team game, and head man Lee Eisan definitely has his hands full in this department, with veteran catcher Gene Craft, first baseman Bill Flanagan, and pitcher Fred Glossar being the only men in this year's crop who have played together before.

Although the Big Eight grind is not scheduled to get underway until March 22, Eisan has wasted no time in oiling his machinery.

On February 21, the Ram assemblage invaded the sunken diamond at Palo Alto to tangle with the Tribe, where the combination of icy winds, sore muscles, and powder puff bats sent them back up the peninsula on the short end of a 9-2 "slump-fest."

Throughout the following week bad weather plagued the Ram batsmen, forcing meager afternoon workouts in the men's gymnasium. Hence, upon arriving aboard the Santa Clara campus as the guests of Bill Leonard's Broncos, there was little improvement in the caliber of play, and four unearned tallies in the third proved the big factor in the 7-2 undoing of the Red and White contingency.

Eisan is still highly confident, however, asserting that the twin losses should be considered as "no more than a technicolor tryout."

The Rams are by no means heavy favorites to cake walk to the Big Eight title, as Ralph Johnson's Modestans must still be considered "the team to beat" in a loop that has always tormented its subscribers with the toughest of grinds.

Eisan's season may not be as dismal as the outcome of the aforementioned contests might tend to indicate, however, because of the impressive play-making of shortstop Roy Tripaldi and third sacker Dick DiMarco, combined with the spectacular performances of rookie backstop Johnny Mays, whose loud bat and whip-like arm are a cinch to keep veteran catcher Craft with his hands full if he expects to hold down the fort as top dog in that position.

Babe Ruth twice hit three homers in a single World Series contest, and boasts a total of 15 homers in 10 classics.

Ramblings

Top Talent Expected For 1958 Cage Squad

By Nick Peters

WITH this season's cage play already past news, the college may look to a great team come next year if prospective high caliber stars come through in top fashion.

Possible returnees include high scoring forwards Freddie Williams and Vic Corl from this year's squad; Bill "the Hill" McGill, highly rated prep phenom from L. A.'s Jefferson High; Ike McArthur, former Washington All-City star; Walt Morgan, All-City for Mission; Dean Prince, top athlete in the Peninsula Athletic League while performing for South City High in 1956; Clarence Grider, high scoring Lowell All-City ace; Polytechnic's '58 graduates George Shewl and John Iles; Balboa's John L. Thomas and Bob Cranshaw; Lincoln sharp-shooter John Steddin; and the 1957-58 Rams bench, including fabled Bob "Wolfman" Johnson, Al "Psycho II" Bryant, Bob "Hands" Wiseman, etc.

• • •

When the top-seeded college five failed to cop the Big Eight crown, it allowed history to repeat itself. In the past no league team which has ever won the Modesto Tournament has gone on to nab the loop title.

The college quintet impressively won the Modesto affair by whipping highly rated Bakersfield, West Contra Costa, and San Jose, but lost the loop crown to Oakland's Thunderbirds.

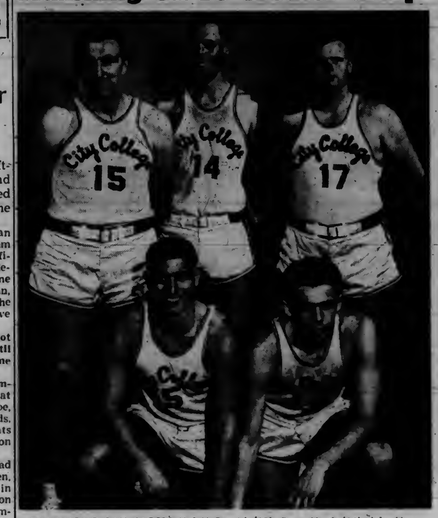
Not taking anything away from an excellent team, it must be admitted that the T-Birds were a very lucky crew. In four games, two each with the second place Rams and third place WCC, the champs won by a total of only eight points!

• • •

Judging players whom we have witnessed in action throughout the 1957-58 campaign, our All-Conference team would consist of Rams Mal McCormick and Vic Corl, Oakland's Rufus Hawkins and Joe Johnson, and WCC's Cornell Green.

A possible second team: Ram Freddie Williams, T-Bird Wayne Oison, Sacramento's Bill Alexander, WCC's John Carmelich and San Mateo's Bobby Sherrard.

• • •



Mike Lewis, college track star, played the hero's role a few weeks back when he swam a quarter mile to save two 12-year-old boys in the Santa Cruz surf.

Another college student, Gary Zeidler, was selected the "Outstanding Defensive Player" in the recent State DeMolay cage tourney. How 'bout that, Sid?

Third sacker Blair LeMire and keystoner Tom Roper, star players on the 1957 college nine, are both playing first club for a fine USF squad. Roper led the Rams in homers and RBI while LeMire was a .350 sticker.

Ted Williams holds the American League record for having belted the most homers in one's first season in the majors. The "Kid" knocked 31 out of the park in 1939.

Marching On To Greater Glory

GRADUATING RAM CAGERS Mal McCormick (15), Doug North (14), John Henry (17), Stan Rosenberg (5), and Al Holder (13).—Guardsman photo by Kenneth Way.

Cagers Terminate Successful Season; Graduating Members Guide Squad To Second Place

Despite the fact that the 1957-58 college basketball squad failed to cop the Big Eight crown, it must be admitted that Sid Phelan's men had a successful year..

This success can be largely attributed to the terrific play of five graduating members, Mal McCormick, Doug North, Al Holder, John Henry and Stan Rosenberg.

McCormick, the easy going, 6-5, 220 pounder, reached the height of his cage career during the latter part of this season. A man of many aliases, ranging from "Stiek" to "Tank," the rugged forward set a new college league scoring record by tanking 33 markers against Santa Rosa.

"Mac" attended Polytechnic, but played no ball there and didn't actually come into his own until 1956, his freshman year as a Ram. He also was a first club man on the cinderella Rossi Poultry contingent, which upset the mighty Olympic Club in the first round of the 1956 AAU Tourney. His future plans include San Jose State with Henry, Holder and Rosenberg.

North, the spindle-legged 6-8 giant appropriately labeled "Stork," was a first stringer for two seasons under Phelan. A product of Mission, where he saw lots of action in 1952 and 1953, North became a top-notch defensive man as a college performer.

The 1956-57 season must be considered his best as he set a new college league scoring record by hitting 29 points against Oakland (McCormick's 33 digits this year erased that mark) and was subsequently voted second team All-Conference. "Stork" missed several games this season because of illness which slackened his effectiveness. An engineering student, he'll try UC this fall.

"The Hunk," otherwise known as John Henry, climaxed a brilliant career of bench jockeying and general malicious conduct by committing four fouls in his last two-year college ball game. Polytechnic's contribution to Barnum and Bailey was a colorful performer for that school's cage squads in '50, '51 and '52.

In 1950 while a prep bench warmer, he picked up a loose ball and heaved it 80 feet through the basket—a record which still stands. The Navy claimed his talents from '52 to '56 wherein he played ball on two championship squads. "Henhouse" also holds a couple of military records—Most Elbows Caught In A Game (32) against the Molokai Marines; and for being AWOL when scheduled to engage the Tijuana A.C.

There's one in every crowd and Holder won out as the outstanding "psycho" on the basketball team. (Don't worry, Bryant, you'll get your turn next year.) A very nervous kid, Holder was an outstanding player as a Lowell Indian in '52 and '53.

He saw considerable action on former mentor Ralph Hillsman's 1954 Ram cage squad. Spending '55 and '56 in the service, he returned to the college this year and produced his usual good brand of ball.

Rosenberg, affectionately called "Nosie" by his admirers and fellow teammates, terminated two years of aggressive ballhawking as first string Ram guard when the 1957-58 season ended. The Washington graduate will never be forgotten in the eyes of the college. His nosegaurd will be enshrined forever in the college's athletic archives, and his old number 5 will be retired . . . until next season, when perhaps it will again be filled by another Vespa-riding crowd-pleaser.

Recreation Association Offers Wide Selection Of Co-Educational Sports

The Recreation Association offers a wide selection of activities to the sports-minded student. Any woman student who is a member of the Associated Students is entitled to join, Sandy Simonian, RA president, said last week.

Sports which are available throughout the week are as follows: Badminton on Mondays at 3 p.m., basketball on Tuesdays at 3 p.m., tennis and modern dance on Wednesdays at 3 p.m., volleyball on Thursdays at 3 p.m., and folk dance and fencing during college hour on Friday. Managers are elected at the third meeting of each group.

Golf and bowling will soon be available at an arranged time, Miss Simonian declared. Basketball is the only sports which is solely for women students; all others are co-educational.

Sports days have been arranged in neighboring cities during the semester. On Saturday, March 8, a Sports Day was held in Santa Rosa. Further Sports Days are planned on April 26 in Monterey (golf, tennis and volleyball) and on May 17 in San Jose (badminton, bowling and tennis).

A Recreation Association calendar on the bulletin board in the women's gymnasium indicates the forthcoming events.

Rushee-Active Firesides, Smokers Filling Calendars As Sororities, Fraternities Begin Pledge Events

By Jerry Redford

MOST of the fraternities and sororities are presently concerned with rushing events. The sororities are holding their firesides, which are informal meetings with the rushees at the home of one of the sisters, while the fraternities are holding smokers in order to become acquainted with the prospective pledges.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity has set March 23 and April 5 as the dates for its first and second pledging affairs. The first affair will be a stag smoker, while the second will be a dance with an Hawaiian theme. Plans for the affairs are now being completed by the brotherhood.

Theta Tau sorority held a business meeting recently at the home of its sponsor, Gertrude Norgard. Plans are being made for its fireside and Luau to be held soon. The officers for this semester are Janis McCloskey, president; Liz Thrush, vice-president; Marilyn Tanner, pledge mistress, and Ann Pastore, treasurer.

Gamma Sigma Sigma service sorority has been accepted as the Phi chapter of the national sorority. The initiation took place recently at the Women's City Club, at which time each member received a certificate of membership. Officers include Shelly Osborne, president; Erla Theobald, vice-president; Betty Cook, second vice-president; Diane Olson, secretary-treasurer, and Carol Soffer, historian.

Delta Psi sorority held a very successful fireside last night at the home of Else Cameron. Sisters are now planning for their second affair luncheon to be held March 23. At a recent meeting they elected Nanci Borgstrom as second pledge mistress.

Alpha Phi Omega fraternity held a reception in the faculty lounge preceding the CAB dance last Friday for students interested in rushing the fraternity, and its alumni. Plans for the Ugly Man On Campus contest and dance are under way now, which will include a rally March 21 during college hour, the contest during the week of March 24-28, and the dance March 28. The latter will be held in Smith Hall from 9 a.m. to midnight, with music by Steve Paul.

Zeta Chi sorority held a meeting at the home of Wynnelle McCarthy, to make plans for its coming fireside, and for its rushee dinner. Plans for the semester include several joints with campus fraternities, and pledge-active dinners.

Dave McElhatton To Be Featured At KCSF

Plans for another guest radio personality are now in action, with Dave McElhatton appearing Friday, March 21, in S-147 during college hour, Ken Shimmon, publicity co-ordinator of the KCSF Broadcasting Club, announced yesterday.

McElhatton, a graduate of San Francisco State not too many years ago, is the new star disc jockey of CBS. He received his radio fame when he was the DJ of Music 'till Dawn. Non-members are invited to the club's meeting.

Officers Of Sophomore Class

All class members are invited to bring their ideas for a class project to the sophomore class meeting during college hour this Friday, 10 to 10:40 a.m. in S-311, Redford announced.

"Committees have to be formed to iron out the details of the sophomore activities for the semester," he said, "and for the immediate action that must be taken for the Soph Ball." As of now there isn't a definite site or band for the ball, to be held May 24. Date set for the Soph-Prof softball game is May 23, during a double college hour.

Sponsors of the class are Mary Perry, counselor, and Edward Rogers, physics instructor.—Guardsman photo by Carol Schubert.

Patterson Resumes Post As Associated Student President

By Lois Cosden

Associated Student President Jack Patterson returned as presiding officer of Council last Thursday, the first time since his auto accident during the semester break, thus relieving AS Vice-President Darlene Enfield, who assumed that position in his absence.

The major business of the week's agenda dealt with budget requests. Finance Chairman Liz Thrush presented 14 of them. Of these, 11 received council's approval. A twelfth, AWS's partial budget of $100, was also affirmed.

The groups granted their funds are the following: Social Committee, $85; Forum, college literary publication issued in the spring semester, $500; Executive Council, $2,115.50. (A breakdown of expenditures was requested here and Miss Enfield explained each item. By name, they are State Conference, Regional Conference, Block SF, Election Commission, Card Sales Week, council keys, gavel, council dinner and Junior Chamber of Commerce liaison officer's expenses.)

The Guardsman, $3,608.24; Freshman Class, $637.50, and Sophomore Class, $710. Club Activities Board, $305; Student Administration, $150; Injury Fund, $500; Insurance, $585, and Campus Police, $1,310.

The original Sophomore Class bid for $725 was defeated but won approval at the next meeting. The Recreation Association budget of $497.57 met with 6-7 defeat.

Incoming resources, it was noted, stem from the sales of AS cards, the bookstore, and vending machines. Athletics and miscellaneous income help shoulder the load as well. Unspent money reverts to the reserve fund at the end of each semester.

Council acted on a motion to allow Alpha Phi Omega, service fraternity, to sponsor their Ugly Man On Campus contest and dance in order to raise money for two AS scholarships, valued at $125 each.

Linda McArdle, AWS president, announced plans for an Hawaiian party this Friday for Big and Little Sisters.

The regional conference of the Northern California Junior College Student Government Association will meet at Oakland Junior College Saturday, March 22. Students from government here are invited to sign up.

Library Offers Pleasant Atmosphere And View

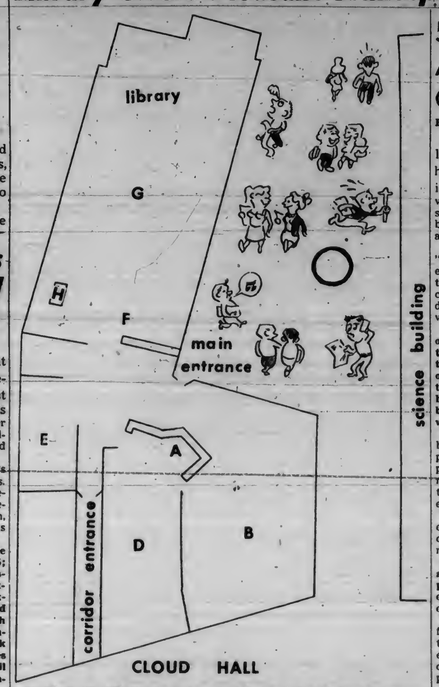

DIAGRAM OF LIBRARY, above, shows the following: (A) circulation desk, reserve books, and charging of magazines and two-week books; (B) reserve reading room, bound magazines, and temporary location of registrar's office; (D) open stacks; (E) periodical room and browsing room, unbound magazines; (F) card catalog; (G) reference reading room, case books, reference books, college catalogs, pamphlets; (H) reference desk. The entrance to the open stacks is to the right of the circulation desk.

50,000 Volumes At Disposal Of College Students

By Margaret Craton

Situated in Cloud Hall, the college library is open between the hours of 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Here, in a pleasant, airy atmosphere, with a unique outlook of the city, 700 students at one time may browse and borrow from the 50,000 books available.

Operated on the principle of the "Open Stack System," students are encouraged to seek for the books of their choice. Many new students are confused by the methods and procedure of the Dewey Decimal System, which is in use in the library.

From the card catalog (to the right of the main entrance) students find the appropriate book card under author, subject, or title, make notation of the reference number printed on the card, and proceed to the stacks behind the circulation desk; here books are numbered to correspond with the numbers of the catalog.

From the circulation desk, each book may be borrowed for a two-week period. Some books, however, are placed on reserve by instructors and may be borrowed only for a limit of two hours, overnight, or for the weekend (after 2 p.m. on Friday).

A fine of 25 cents per hour is charged on "reserve" books which are overdue, and 5 cents per day on fortnightly books.

Newspapers, periodicals, pamphlets and catalogs are to be found in the periodical room. Pamphlets may be charged out for overnight use at the circulation desk.

Helpful advice is readily available from the library staff and their volunteer assistants, who are students either enrolled in Business 85, a course in library training, or are pledges of Gamma Sigma Sigma, women's service sorority; Alpha Phi Omega, men's service fraternity, or pledges of Delta Psi sorority.

Big-Little Sister Event This Friday

Hawaiian entertainment will highlight the Big-Little Sister program sponsored by the Associated Women Students to be held this Friday during college hour in S-106, Linda McArdle, president of the AWS, announced yesterday.

The program will be presented by the University Study Tours of Hawaii and it will feature a short film, a contest and prizes. Invitations will be mailed to all the Big and Little Sisters.

AWS board members will act as hostesses for the Bay Area School Board Association meeting to be held in Smith Hall this Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., Miss McArdle added.

The AWS hostesses include Priscilla Watts, Eunice Hall, Gail Knox, Diane Christofferson and Margie Erhart. Nancy Leonard, Eleanor Hubin and Virginia Wong will aid in registration.

AWS officers for this semester include Ruby Broadway, vice-president, and Evonne Weiss, recording secretary. Miss McArdle added.

Educational Film Series To Start During College Hour With Hemo The Magnificent; Schedule Listed

The college film series will begin this Friday during college hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m., with the third showing of Hemo The Magnificent. A schedule of movies for the semester has been completed, according to Madison W. Devlin, audio visual aids instructor.

Films will be shown in S-136 on specified dates, and faculty members and students are invited at no charge.

Following Hemo The Magnificent, the famous film on blood produced by American Tel. & Tel., starring Dr. Frank Baxter, the schedule is as follows:

On March 21, California Mother Lode, about California's gold rush towns, and Artist of the Mother Lode, showing Charles Surendorf, artist of Colombia, at work.

New England Portrait, showing the color of the New England states through the four seasons, will be shown on March 28.

April 11, Republic of Guatemala and Inside Middle America, two films on the economy, scenic wonder and native villages of the "banana republics."

On April 18, Lifeline USA, story of the U. S. Merchant Marine and its importance to the United States is scheduled.

April 25, The Cardinal Tradition, a baseball story about the Cardinals and the big leagues will be shown.

Fabulous 500, about the annual Fourth of July classic at Indianapolis, and d'Monza Challenge, showing shots of the Italian road race car, their world-famous course, are slated.

Following on May 9 will be Alice In Washington, a story of a little girl and her visit to Washington, D. C.

The last picture, on May 16, will be Frontier Vacationland, a travel film showing Wyoming and the Far West vacation areas.

Plans Underway To Enlarge Smith Cafeteria In Fall

Plans to enlarge Smith Hall's cafeteria at the expense of the present book store are scheduled to be undertaken this Fall, Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator, Division of Educational Management, announced last week.

He said both bungalows one and two, located adjacent to the hall, will be remodeled to house the book store, which will possibly be operated on a self-service system.

The area of the present book store will, in turn, be partitioned off and occupied by the cafeteria staff, now located in the rear of the cafeteria, he said.

Remaining space will be divided for the enlargement of both the faculty and student dining rooms.

Anderson said no specific date has been set for the project but it will be undertaken sometime this Fall in the face of an expected rise in enrollment during future years.

"With the book store in the bungalows, Anderson said, the supply of books available would possibly be enlarged.

A usual practice of the book store is to re-purchase books from students dropping courses provided the book is in good condition. It is bought at half the cost of a new one and sold at three-quarters the original price, he said.

Marksmen Enter Pistol Matches

Campus Police marksmen here began a season of intramural competition last week with a pistol match at the Colma Police Range.

Split into four six-man teams, each team is composed of an equal number from the three shooting classifications. The matches will be held at the Colma Police Range every Monday afternoon for a period of ten weeks.

The team captains of the tournament, who have qualified as "masters" because of their shooting ability are Frank Fitzgerald, Ed Nelson, Lou Paglierani and Marion Timm.

When the contest concludes, the team having the highest accumulated score will be the victor. Members of the winning team will be presented with awards at the annual Campus Police dinner in May.

Although the results count toward the final grade, the main purpose of the match is to promote interest in individual competition among those participating.

College Sports Car Club

The College Sports Car Club this semester will sponsor a gymkhana, which is a test of various driving skills on a specified course, club coordinators Lee Sheldon and Jim Hyde announced recently.

Cute Couple Contest Highlights Frosh Ball Friday

The Frosh Ball will be held this Saturday night in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel from 9 p.m. until midnight, according to Katie Ahern, class president.

Theme of the ball will be Silhouette of Spring, and the music will be supplied by Ray Hackett and his orchestra, Miss Ahern added.

Dress will be semi-formal; suits and ties for the men and cocktail dresses for the women. Admission will be by Associated Student card or $2.50.

The Cutest Couple contest, which has been a standard highlight of past Frosh Balls, will again be the featured event of the evening. The prize for the cutest couple will go to two people among the dancers for their dancing ability, how they look together and their personality.

Prizes for the winners include a trophy donated by Beta Phi Beta fraternity and two dozen red roses for the lady, donated by Alpha Phi Epsilon fraternity. Those who wish to participate in the contest can sign up at the entrance to the dance.

When asked how she arrived at the theme for the ball, Miss Ahern said, "Whenever a group of people get together to decide upon the name for a dance, everyone suggests song titles. This time, we settled upon Silhouette of Spring because Saturday happens to be the first day of Spring."

Miss Ahern also invited all students to attend the ball. "People shouldn't be frightened away just because we call it Frosh Ball," Miss Ahern said. "This merely means that the ball is being conducted by the Freshman class. Anyone can come. In fact, we hope that everyone does."

Miss Ahern is being assisted in staging the ball by other officers of the Freshman class: Secretary Bev Tollini and Vice-President Gary Torres, who is in charge of the Cutest Couple contest.

Photo Project To Cover 23 Years Of College Life

By Pastor Valle-Garay

A monumental photo project, the 23-year-old history of the college as seen through pictures and documents, will be exhibited at the faculty gallery in Cloud Hall sometime during May.

With the title City College Serap Book, the project, first of its kind ever attempted here, is being worked out in conjunction with the photography department and the expected cooperation of faculty members and students in general. Emmett E. Smith, instructor in charge of photographic displays at Cloud Hall, is directing the presentation.

"This work has required a good deal of preparation and quite a bit of research," he said. "We'll appreciate contribution of material from faculty members and students. As a matter of fact, I'd like to take this opportunity to make a request to those who possess material pertaining to the history of the college to submit it to me."

Smith's office is located in C-249, and all material borrowed will be returned at the end of the show, he added. Captions, proper identification of people and places in the photographs and approximate time of "take" should be included, if possible.

The memento will be composed by portraits of college administrators, instructors, students and other personalities who have been outstanding here in the past 23 years of campus life.

Theatrical presentations, sports events, special social affairs, shots of the new buildings and some old "pixs" from the now gone West Campus as well as, photographs from faculty members in their yesteryears, will also be shown.

Currently engaged in a seasonal display, a small group of photographs of flowers in bloom, children at play and summer landscapes, bearing the appropriate theme of Ah, Spring, Smith has also in mind the presentation of another photographic project in the Cloud Hall panels slated for April and entitled History and Scope of Photography.

The three displays, all shown at the Cloud Hall gallery, will include pictures taken by students in the photography department here, by amateurs and professionals, and by Smith himself.

College Blood Drive To Be Held Next Week; Turk Murphy, Gateway Singers Will Entertain At Rally On Friday

Turk Murphy, the Gateway Singers and Ada Moore will star at a Blood Drive rally during college hour Friday, March 28, in the cafeteria, according to Jim Hecht, Blood Drive chairman.

The entertainers have donated their time and talents for this show to publicize and insure success to the Blood Drive, Hecht said. Murphy is appearing at his own showplace, Easy Street, on Powell Street, and the Gateway Singers and Ada Moore are now at the Hungry i.

The annual drive will be conducted on Thursday, March 27, and Friday, March 28, in B-2 under the supervision of the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank. Any student can donate and those who do will receive a two-week pass to American Health Studios or Silhouette International, and the three organizations which donate the most blood will receive trophies.

Students under 21 must have their parents' written consent before they can donate.

All the blood will be applied to the college's account at the Irwin Blood Bank, and donors are allowed to make unlimited withdrawals for their personal use or withdrawals of up to eight pints for any member of their immediate family.

"There must be some students during the course of a year who need blood transfusions," Hecht pointed out, "and it would be to his advantage to make use of this fund."

Of the 134 pints donated during the last Blood Drive, 20 pints have been transferred to the account of Jim Garner, a former student who is a

Drama Group Set To Present Farce On Manners Next

The college players inaugurate their Spring program with a presentation of James M. Barrie's The Admirable Crichton, Friday evening, March 28, and will repeat their performance March 29, April 5, 6, 19 and 20, Michael J. Griffin, drama director, announced recently.

In the play, Lord Loam, played by Jordy Cooney, practices democratic ideals at home, inviting the servants to tea each month. How the household personnel, particularly the majoro-domo butler, Crichton, react to the experiment is the thread sewn through the main seams of the plot.

Crichton, portrayed by John Rose, insists that orderly society must have its hierarchy to function. He gets to prove his point, when the family finds itself shipwrecked on a tropical island. Fortitude and ingenuity become the anointing oils of the aristocracy here.

The setup turns out so well, in fact, that after two years of being stranded, Crichton is tempted not to signal the ship looming into sight on the horizon. What happens in the last act is for the audience to contemplate.

Three Changes To Aid Top Students

Three fundamental changes which will aid "top" students in registration are now under consideration, according to information released last week by Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction.

First of these changes concerns students who seek to repeat a course because of low scholarship (D or F). They would be "wait-listed" for the courses which they seek to repeat.

Returning students would be required to file their program with provision to add the course they wish to repeat after the opening of classes. At that time, department chairmen would admit such students to these courses in the order in which their names appeared on the waiting list, Luckmann said.

Secondly, it was proposed that applicants, particularly those from San Francisco high schools who are classified as "honor students," will be issued priority numbers in the order of registration for new students.

Finally, the probation policy will be extended to incoming high school students on the basis of their previous academic records, Luckmann said.

Guardsman Staff Sets Distribution Centers

The Guardsman will be available to students of the college each Wednesday this semester except April 9, at the main entrance of the Science Building, in the card catalog section of the library, and at the east entrance of the cafeteria, according to Pat Metsack, Guardsman editor-in-chief.

Thirteen issues of The Guardsman will be published this semester, with the only interval being the week following Easter.

20 Associated Student Heads To Represent College During CJCSGA Meeting Saturday

By Don Seratti

Student government, campus activities and many other topics of interest to students here will be discussed at the semi-annual conference of the California Junior College Student Government Association (Northern Region) to be held at Oakland Junior College this Saturday.

A total of 18 Northern California two-year colleges will each send 20 delegates to the one-day affair, according to Jack Patterson, Associated Student president here. Representatives will be divided into various workshops.

Students representing this college at the conference and their respective workshop assignments are:

Student government and current problems, Freddie Hicks, Linda McArdle and Patterson; Northern Region constitution, Bill McDonald and Jerry Redford; campus activities, Darlene Enfield and Jim Hickey; campus organizations, Audrey Bell, Adolf Henrichs and John Zastrow; finance, Ralph Prior and Liz Thrush; publications, Pat Metsack and Kevin Mullen; athletics, Mike Reid and Steve Seitz, Associated Women Students, Ruby Broadway and Shelly Osborne; veterans' clubs, Don French and Don Smith.

All resolutions emanating from the workshop discussions will be placed before a general assembly for consideration, and the resolutions passed by that body will be placed on the agenda of the state-wide CJCSGA conference to be held in Pasadena later this semester.

A general assembly consisting of all delegates to the conference will open the day's activities on Saturday morning, followed by workshop sessions, lunch, and final workshop sessions. The conference will terminate in the afternoon with a general assembly during which time all workshop proposals will be acted upon.

Book Displays In Cloud Hall Honor First Library Week

In recognition of the first National Library Week, ending this Saturday, appropriate book displays have been arranged in the college library, according to Irene Mensing, reference librarian here.

Books have been featured which emphasize greater knowledge and better education through reading, she said. "Wake up and read" is a slogan most significant for this atomic age.

Volunteer library assistants from Gamma Sigma Sigma, members of Women's National Service Sorority, have recently completed a project of supplying the library with CCSF Call Slips, she added.

Members of Gamma Sigma Sigma who are continuing to give library assistance include Sheldine Osborne, president; Nora Chavez, Elizabeth Cook, Nancy Leonard, Jean Melick, Erla Theabold, Diane Olsen and Carol Soffer.

Delta Psi pledges for Fall 1957 who are completing their service this semester include Jean Arietta, Nona Austin, Elsa Cameron, Judy Fox and Diane Ordway.

Remember When?

Earthquake Of 1957 Relived As First Anniversary Approaches

By Tom Tatera

This Saturday will mark the first anniversary of the March 22 quake of last year, which shook the city's foundations and left considerable damage and fear-shaken citizens in its path.

Those who were attending the college at that time will remember a peaceful Friday morning, when they had nothing more on their minds than the coming week-end and Monday's homework.

The cafeteria was crowded with hungry people, it being near noontime, and the grassy knoll adjoining the Science Building was set with scores of drowsy students, catching a brief reprisal between classes.

Then, without warning, the earth began to tremble and a strange noise entered the air. Before anyone could conjecture over this break in the siesta, the rumbling grew to a crescendo, and the Science Building seemed to shiver in the spring sunshine.

Students on the knoll started to rise, then lay down again and waited; others, in their classrooms, made a break for the door; a few in the old Associated Student Hut, B-2, found a sturdy wall to lean against, and leaned—and hoped!

The cry "Earthquake" was on everybody's lips.

Seconds later, the shaking subsided. Students banded around the Science Building to inspect a broken cornice which was dripping cement mold. In back of the AS huts a water main had split and was spitting its contents.

But all was not over! "Did you hear? We're going to have another one!" was the whispered rumor which spread like wildfire.

There were mild shakes to follow, about three or four of them. But none could compare with that first one which had hit and run, faster than the blinking of an eyelash, and had left behind a broken cornice, a split water main, and hundreds of shattered windows throughout the city.

As March 22 rolls around again this year, many people may find themselves stopping short in their work, and waiting for the tremble that spells trouble!

When 'The Other Guy' Is You, Who Will Save Your Life?

FEW STUDENTS ever stop to consider the possibility that they may someday be seriously injured, or indefinitely hospitalized, or critically ill. These are the things that happen only to "the other guy." Somebody else, not me, is the typical student reaction.

The question that remains to be asked is what if it isn't the other guy? What if the figure on the hospital bed is . . . you or a loved one? Students are so busy in their every day routine of studying, club meeting, and participating in various activities that their over-all attitude appears to be one of apathy.

These apparently uninterested people are the ones who can help. These students can save the lives of others and maybe someday their own life. The cliche "the life you save may be your own" applies to blood donors as well as to safe drivers. The healthy students are the ones to whom doctors, blood banks, and medical services must turn.

One of the first steps students and other citizens of the city can take to aid the sick is the contribution of blood, without which none of them would be here. This life-giving fluid is not only precious, but expensive if it has to be purchased from a hospital.

Students at the college have the opportunity to put in reserve, (as one puts money in a bank) blood for future use for themselves and members of their immediate family. Through the college's blood reserve fund at the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank, students and their family, when in need, can draw blood from their account.

This takes care of the student if he should get sick. But what if the student does not need the blood? In this case at the end of a year the college can give the remaining blood in the bank to organizations of its choice. This blood year, ending March 31, the college is donating blood to a veterans' hospital, to the disaster fund, and to a musicians' group. In addition to this, 20 pints were given to a State College student.

One week from tomorrow, March 27 and 28, a mobile blood bank will be held at the college to receive the donations from the students. Men and women under 21 can bring signed notes from home stating that they can donate to the blood bank. Forms for parental signature are also available on campus. Other students can walk in and give. On Friday, March 28, the Rally Committee is sponsoring talent in order to encourage the donating of blood. (See story, page 1.)

Blood is precious . . . blood is easy to give . . . blood from the college's fund is easy to receive.

Remember—you have to give a little to get a lot.

Birdwatchers Might Watch You On Campus

Ornithologists across the nation might well be interested in some of the rare birds seen on the campus this semester. Many of these may never have been classified and interested birdwatchers might feel inclined to make up some unscientific names to help identify them.

For example, there is the Patsy Potterybird, which can be seen migrating from the cafeteria daily with its arms full of dishes and food. Perhaps this bird (mostly female) is building its nest, but don't interfere with her because birds don't realize the value of dishes and she doesn't know she's raising the prices in the cafeteria.

Spider the Spitterbird is that tough combination between a Coughing Hawk and a long-billed Sneezer. Rumor has it that he spreads some rare bird diseases which may effect humans such as sprig covid or Asiatic flewinza.

Stranger than both of these is the near-sighted litter-bird whose popular name on campus is Tom Throw-it-away. This strange creature can be seen passing within inches of trash receptacles and shedding each Spring and Fall with marvelous accuracy such waste material as paper, cigarette packs, apple cores and candy wrappers.

The principal habitat for the raucous squawker called Loud Larry is the third floor of the Science Building. Few instructors or students have ever seen this bird, for he sounds his love call only when classes are in session. Amateur birdwatchers have been unable to determine whether he has ever found his mate but are agreed that she must be hard of hearing.

The Frouzy Fan and Freddy birds appear to be in a constant state of moulting and have very dowdy pluming as well as a pronounced disaffection for soap and water.

Is a birdwatcher watching YOU?

Shots At Random

By Tom Tatera

THERE are some students who just refuse to be impressed, like the one who attended a biology film on blood last week, slept through the part where jolly little corpuscles did a jig on the screen, and awoke only to comment on the man in the movie's statement that a line-up of human capillaries would reach two-thirds of the way to the moon.

"Oh, well," he yawned, "that's farther than the government has gotten, anyway."

• • •

SOME INSTRUCTORS may hand out unorthodox homework from time to time, but the following bit tops them all. A student teacher of psychology, while introducing his class to the aspects of hunger, decided some practical knowledge would do good. He therefore assigned them to spend one whole day starving!

Could be this is the beginning of "Stanislavski Psychology"? If so, what happens when they get to chapter 4?

• • •

AND, while we're talking about instructors, we should include the one in humanities who received his first lesson in modern education last week. His query to the class as to the three most well-known B's in musical history got an unexpected response from student Diek Morse, who answered, "Bach, Beethoven and Brubeck."

Solid, man!

ROUND AND ROUND we go. Pat Metsack, head of the Publications Board, is responsible for initialing all posters before they can be hung on the premises. She appoints Ray Haekett to tear down all posters which she has not signed. Dean Hillsman gives verbal "O.K." to IFC signs. While he is telling this to Pat, Haekett is tearing down same signs because they are not signed by Pat.

As Yul Brynner, from the King and I, would say, "Is a puzzlement."

AND THEN there are the city garbage trucks, with their proud "This is your city, keep it clean" signs. How ironic when their cabs are full to the point of spilling, and they leave a trail of litter in the streets.

The wise man is not the one who asks questions but the one who remembers answers.—Forshayism.

TV Turns To Brainwashing

Subliminal Advertising Forcing 'Super Duper Pips' Upon Public; Try Some, Then Fall Down Dead

A new type of weapon, with an undefined super-atomic effect on the minds and pockets of the American people, has been announced by, of all the people, the American people, and it is being tested at this moment in some parts of the nation.

This is the subliminal method of advertising, a brainwashing invention which will tell a person in 1/3000 of a second and without his full knowledge of what is going on, to "buy Super-Duper Pip." (The advertising signal is flashed directly to the person's unaware subconscious which, in turn, catches and keeps the message.)

A citizen, after getting the message, is expected to rush to the nearest drug store, buy the product and fall flat on his back. Super-Duper Pip, the MD's autopsy found out, happened to be rat poison. A simple case of suicide.

Nevertheless, the geniuses in charge of this new invention say that if people are not inclined to Super-Duper Pip, they won't be impelled by the ad to buy it. Rats, non-TV or movie-watcher animals, won't bother, it's figured, with signing their own death warrants. So, there's no real harm about some products involved, for, according to the subliminal method's creators, a person's mind will be impressed only by those things one person uses, likes or feels like doing. Sometimes people feel like having a coke, a bull or just blasting the whole world apart.

Should the gadget fall in the wrong hands, perfected or imperfected, it might work wonders. Just imagine: A whole crowd of married male movie-goers could, innocently, beat their mothers-in-law the day after a prankster got hold of a subliminal machine and said at the movie house in 1/3000 of a second, "Let dear mom have it." Could society blame a man under the circumstances for this action, no matter how much he disliked dear mom?

The question remains in the air. But subliminal advertising appears to be on the air also, ready to make one drink Super-Duper Pip, if one feels like doing so.

Whether subliminal advertising is here to stay or not, we don't know. It won't be, we hope, radioed. You just sit tight, tune in the old radio, "acquire" a favorite disc jockey and relax.

Those Super-Duper Pips, through movies or TV, may prove mighty harmful. So harmful, in fact, that one doesn't realize it until, full of Super-Duper, one crosses the threshold of SA and Muttnik's orbit altogether. Way down the other side of life. Way out of this terrific world. So stick to radio, man. It's safer.

Broadcasters Interview Popular DJ's

The music which streams into the cafeteria each morning from 7:30 to 8:30 o'clock is only one of the activities of the KCSF Broadcasters, affiliate of the radio and television department. Another is keeping the students informed of events on campus through the campus carrier system.

The Broadcasters also provide entertainment through interviews of radio and television personalities. One such coming attraction is disc jockey Dave McElhatton, scheduled to entertain here March 21.

McElhatton won recognition as a popular disc jockey through his program Music 'Til Dawn, which claimed some 30,000 listeners. He now has his own show over CBS from 6 to 6:55 a.m., and from 12:15 to 12:30 p.m., called A Little More of McElhatton. In the afternoon from 2:30 until 3:30 o'clock he has an audience participation show.

Other radio and television personalities to be featured here in the future will be announced at a later date. The club invites students who have a preference among radio and television disc jockeys to stop by the department and offer their suggestions. With such information, the Broadcasters can try to get the most popular personalities to entertain here.

As majors in radio and television, the club members take classes in speech for radio-television theater, two courses in survey of radio and television industry, production, direction of radio-television drama and announcing. The club's staff adviser is Henry Leff.

Foresight

By Ray Hackett

EVER drive home from downtown in the afternoon and suddenly find yourself caught in a traffic jam? Then, upon looking at your watch, realize this delay is going to keep that particular coed waiting? Don't curse fate. It's your own fault.

If you had had your car radio tuned to KSFO, 560 on your dial, this situation could have been avoided. KSFO features Bob Colvig and the Commute Club from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. Mondays through Fridays.

Colvig is a DJ who reigns over the Commute Club, his brain child, which reports the traffic conditions in the Bay Area. The club is composed of, as Colvig would say, "nice people" who phone him and report the traffic conditions in their neighborhoods. Colvig then via radio transmits these reports to his listeners, thus aiding them to avoid traffic problems. These "nice people" include housewives, gas station attendants and even a bridge crew.

Colvig besides giving road conditions and alternate routes, assures the wives if hubby is late it's probably because of some traffic trouble.

As for Colvig, he has a pleasant air personality, a nice chain of chatter and spins enjoyable music when he isn't reporting the traffic conditions. The music is also a credit to KSFO, one of the few remaining local radio stations which hasn't been reduced to a rock 'n roll farce.

It's DJ's such as Colvig who deserve the bouquets, not the bricks that are so often thrown at their profession. Keep up the great work, Bob.

Can US Afford Reds' Summit Meet Terms

By Don Serafti

WILL a summit conference with Russia serve a genuinely useful purpose, or will it prove to be merely a meaningless spectacle as so many other talks with the Soviets have been?

Several factors concerning Russian motives must be considered when weighing the pros and cons of holding a summit conference with Nikita Khrushchev and Co.

Perhaps at one time, such terms as "promoting worldwide unity," "protecting the internal affairs of sovereign states," and "reaching a peaceful settlement" had meanings that could be interpreted only one way. But time and a handful of shrewd Russian diplomats have served to alter the real meaning of these phrases so that today one dares not take such expressions seriously without observing who uttered them.

DOUBLE TALK, DUPLICITY

The Soviet Union's proficiency in double talk and duplicity has reached a peak during the current negotiations with this country concerning a proposed summit conference of world leaders.

If the Soviets' real intentions coincided with the peaceful policy they advocate to the world, we could expect to sit down with them tomorrow and solve all the world's problems.

But their intentions and their outward actions are about as far apart as the North and South Poles. Their insistence that a preliminary conference be limited to mechanical details, i.e., time, place, length, rather than a thorough preparation of items to be discussed on the higher level, is proof of their insincerity to achieve substantial results, and of their desire to score a propaganda victory.

PROPAGANDA DANGERS

When the West balks at such an obviously absurd proposal, the Soviets make it appear as though they are striving for an agreement and the West is being uncooperative. The uncommitted countries of Asia and Africa are highly impressed by the Russian "efforts" and disappointed by American "stalling." Thus, the potential dangers of further undermining our standing in the world must be weighed.

At the highly publicized Geneva conference in 1955 the Russians agreed to stage free elections in Germany, allowing the people to choose between freedom and and communism, but since 1955 not the smallest effort has been made on their parf to hold the elections.

A graphic illustration of their evasiveness is their recent statement that as a condition for another top-level conference, all countries must accept the "status quo." This means the West must accept without argument a divided Germany, a divided Korea, and Russian occupation—against the will of the people—of the numerous satellite countries. If the Russians can keep these vital issues from being discussed, the conference becomes practically meaningless.

RED CONCESSIONS UNLIKELY

And it becomes completely meaningless when one considers that the Russians are not likely to make any significant concessions. They are adhering to a strict doctrine, the aim of which is to impose communism on the world, and they are not about to take a backward step such as the reunification of Germany would be. Any peaceful gesture such as calling for a summit conference is merely a tactical maneuver and the conference, if it becomes a reality, also becomes an instrument of Russian propaganda.

Then why even bother to hold a summit conference, many people ask. In spite of these discouraging facts, even the most remote possibility that some solutions can be reached compels this country to keep trying to arrange a conference. Even though the opposing camps are not likely to alter their basic outlooks, they will at least come to an understanding that just may keep peace in the world. Even if nothing more emerges from a conference than a ban on nuclear weapons or a lessening of the chances of immediate war, the conference will, to some extent, have succeeded.

On October 4, 1957, the Russians launched the first artificial satellite, which circled the globe at 18,000 miles per hour 560 miles above the earth.

Diamond Nine's Crackerjack Infield To Aid Coach Eisan's Quest For Big 8 Championship

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Smoothing over his diamond machinery with a light coat of oil in hope of overturning the apple cart on the pre-season Big Eight favorite Modesto Pirates, head man Lee Eisan has built himself an extremely young infield which might well surprise many Ram backers by developing into a polished little "pepper pot" by the time the regular season is underway.

Feeling the full effects of having never operated together before, the Ram batsmen ran into a pair of brick walls in their opening encounters of the season, dropping a pair of contests to Stanford and Santa Clara.

By the hour of the third fray, however, the local infield seemed to have thawed through the ice, displaying fairly impressive wares in sinking a highly touted St. Mary's Frosh contingency, 6-5.

Holding down the "hot corner" in Eisan's youthful infield, third sacker Rich DiMarco, an 18-year-old veteran from South San Francisco High, boasts a strong right arm, a fair stick at the plate, and, although leaving quite a bit to be desired in the departments of speed and spontaneous reaction, could well develop into a better than average performer.

Shortstop Roy Tripaldi, at 18, is probably one of the most promising performers in the entire infield. A graduate of Dick Murray's Sacred Heart nine, Tripaldi seems to pack the gear that could take him all the way. He has speed, a whip-like arm, dynamite in his bat, and in a clutch, could prove the difference between victory and defeat.

Second sacker Al LeMire, All-City competitor for Polytechnic's AAA champions of last year, is gifted with a hot glove, a loud bat, and a pair of nimble limbs on the base paths. Another in an entirely youthful infield, his talents are a long way from their culminating point, but he is still Elsan's fair-haired boy at the keystone spot, and it appears doubtless that anyone short of the standards set by Nellie Fox will edge him out.

Closing out an infield that has seen its moments of glory but still leaves plenty to be desired both in speed and alertness, first baseman Bill Flanagan from Galileo, who led the AAA All-City delegation in '56, doubtlessly possesses the loudest bat of them all.

Edged out in the slugging department solely by veterans Gene Craft and Joe Herbert, Flanagan's value to the club should assert itself continually before the season's windup, and the fact that he is a power to be reckoned with is one that cannot easily be denied.

College Netters Stomp Bearcubs 6-1 In First Tilt

Led by Jim Watson and Nick Scharf the college tennis team successfully began its league season by overwhelming Santa Rosa 6-1 last Friday.

Watson, the No. 1 man on the team, won easily, 6-3, 6-1, and Scharf, the No. 2 man, won 6-2, 7-5. Other singles winners were Vic Saschin, 6-3, 11-9; and Fred Watters, 1-6, 6-2, 6-2. In the doubles Watson-Scharf won 6-3, 6-3, while Watters-Saschin triumphed 6-1, 2-6, 8-6.

"We could win the league title if the bottom members of the ladder improve some," Coach Roy Diederichsen stated. The players are rated in the following order:

1. Watson; 2. Scharf; 3. Saschin; 4. Jim Howard; 5. Watters; 6. John Peters; 7. Bill Chin. The team is composed of four newcomers and three veterans. The veterans are Scharf, Saschin and Watters, while the newcomers are Watson, Howard, Peters and Chin.

This week the Rams play Sacramento on Friday in a league game. Next week they meet Cal Frosh on Wednesday and a strong San Mateo squad on Friday, March 21. The most important league match of the season is on April 18 against perennial champion, Modesto, at Modesto.

Golfers Edge San Jose

Top man Bob Patterson's 78 led the college golf team to a close 8-7 win over San Jose Junior College, March 6, at Sharp Park in a practice match.

The next match that the college will play is this Friday against West Contra Costa at Richmond. This will be the second Big Eight conference match for the college.

Horsehiders Face Oakland Friday At Balboa Park

Lee Eisan's barnstorming Ram diamond contingency continues its Big Eight campaign this Friday at Balboa Field, 200 yards east of the campus, tangling with Oakland's Thunderbirds at 3 p.m.

The T-Birds, with a host of returning lettermen on their roster, despite their 1-5 practice record, might well be considered a strong possibility to set Elsan's dreams of knocking over Raiph Johnson's Modesto Pirates off to a bleak start, but the locals have other ideas.

With Freddie Glosser, whose curve and slider have developed into a pair of formidable weapons since his return from military service, on the hill, and the dynamic sticks of veterans Gene Craft and Joe Herbert joining in with the dangerous bat of returning first sacker Bill Flanagan, the East Bayers should find themselves with their hands full.

Stocky Johnny Mays, who has taken over the catching duties held last season by Craft, has quite a distance to travel before completely coming into his own, but has a fair stick and could prove dangerous.

Rookies Roy Tripaldi and Al LeMire, shortstop and second baseman from Sacred Heart and Polytechnic, respectively, hit fairly well, with Tripaldi one of the most polished infielders the college has seen in many a season, and little LeMire probably the flashiest base-runner in the area.

Another returning veteran from last season's squad, Rich DeMarco, found himself off to a slow start holding down the hot corner at third, but appeared to have straightened out to some extent by the third inning of last week's 6-5 dumping of St. Mary's Frosh. He hits fairly well and could develop.

Bud Williams, Elsan's pre-season dark-horse to fill in the fourth spot of the local "murderer's row," has been giving his share of grief to opposing chuckers, and fielding impressively as well. His mighty muted slugging ability has not yet measured up to par, however, and whispers around the hot stove league circle have it that Williams might possibly find himself playing second trumpet to Don Arrighi, 22-year-old service veteran who played his prep ball under the tutorage of Seb Passinisi at San Francisco's Lincoln High.

Watson, Scharf Top Netmen

After a 15-year undisputed reign over the Big Eight tennis industry, it seems well apparent that Modesto College is riding for a fall. Torn to pieces by the racqueteers from San Mateo in their opening match of the season, should the Bulldogs not be the men, to dethrone them, the college has a pair of courtmen of their own ready to take over if and where the Mateans leave off.

Jim Watson (pictured at left, above), 18 year old gift to Ramdom from San Francisco's Lowell High, is rated by those in the know as the sixth seeded collegiate competitor in the entire state. In his second semester at the college, leading the Ram netmen in the number one slot, greater faith in Watson's ability than that voiced by Coach Roy Diederichsen (pictured in the center), could scarcely be found outside his immediate family: Diederichsen believes Watson unbeatable in the Big Eight loop.

—"He's the type of fellow who could stop Lew Hoad and still not impress you in the least," the Ram skipper said. "No 50 caliber serve or nuclear back-hand. You ram 'em down his throat and he'll just send 'em back—where you aren't," he added quietly.

Backing Watson up in the number two seat is "Slammin' " Niek Scharf (pictured at right), 19 year old sophomore, reputed as having the most power collegiate serve on the West Coast.

Diederichsen hesitantly admitted that "the slammer" did stand a slim chance of sneaking through the season unbeaten, but that if not, it would undeniably be that powerful serve of his that would be his undoing. "When he's hot, he's next to unbeatable," the net mentor opined. "But when he's off, he's the easiest thing on the court." — Guardsman photo by Ron Kaufmann.

Trio Of Local Cagers Among NBA's Finest

By Nick Peters

THREE local boys are among the top stars in the National Basketball Association and are good bets for all-league honors. George Yardley, former Stanford ace, wound up the 1957-58 season as the NBA's scoring leader, becoming the first player in history to score over 2,000 points in a single season.

Unparalleled defensive artist Bill Russell of the Boston Celtics has become established as the top rebounder in the pro circles, breaking the total rebounds record and setting a new mark for most rebounds in a single game while only in his sophomore year in the big time!

The [illegible] Gent, [illegible]'s contribution to the New York Knicks, Kenny Sears. The tall center has been a stalwart on defense and has been averaging close to 20 points per game.

• • •

Bay Area boys have also become prominent in baseball's spring training camps. San Francisco's own Gus Triandos and Frank Zupo are both vying for the catcher's job on the Baltimore Orioles, with Mission High's Triandos holding the inside track over Sacred Heart's $50,000 bonus baby.

In the Kansas City camp another local rivalry for a starting position is evident. Mission High's Mike Baxes, a .323 sticker for the Seals in 1955 and the Most Valuable Player in the International League in 1957, is making a serious bid for the Kaycee shortstop job over San Rafael's veteran major league Joe DeMaestri.

Oakland's Billy Martin (Detroit) and Jack Jensen (Boston) have already sewed up starting berths, while Oakland's J. W. Porter (Cleveland Indians) and El Cerrito's Ernie Broglio (our 'Jints) have an outside chance of making first club.

• • •

Oakland's Thunderbirds, champions of the Big Eight with a 14-0 league record, took second place at the State championships at Bakersfield, losing to Long Beach in the finals. The T-Bird's high finish, however, further [illegible] the [illegible] Big [illegible]'s status as one of the top cage loops in two-year college circles.

Competing in the P. A. Tournament under the banner of the Texdahl and Johnson sporting goods firm, the college cagers were toppled in the first round by the Salesian Boy's Club, 58-56. Vic Corl impressed observers with a 24-point performance.

We received criticism for stating in a recent issue that no Big Eight team which has ever won the Modesto Tournament has ever gone on to win the loop championship. Informed that Dean Ralph Hillsman's 1950 squad turned the trick, we'd like to introduce a technicality—in '50 it wasn't the Big Eight, but instead the Big Seven!

Mac Burton Breaks Broadjump Mark, Leroy Shields Throws Shot To New Record In Trials

By George Grasso

Mac Burton broadjumped 23 feet, 4 inches, and Leroy Shields shot-putted 46 feet, 3 inches, to unofficially break both Ram records during the time trials with Polytechnic High School at Kezar Stadium last Wednesday.

These trials set the stage for a non-league meet with San Jose State this Saturday.

Even though the broadjump and shot-put records were broken, the times and distances of the trials were fairly unimpressive, as might be expected this early in the season. Shields has done better and Burton has jumped over a foot farther then his unofficial record Wednesday.

If these early trials can be used to judge future performances, then it becomes clear where the college's strength lies. The hurdles are some of the strong events. James Thomas, crowded by Jerry Bell, loafed to an easy victory in the 120 high hurdles with a time of 15.8. Thomas also won the 180 low hurdles and ran in the half-mile relay.

The trials also pointed up a top 440 dash event. Don Nasser dueled Lionel Sims in a tight race to win the 440 in a highly unofficial time of 48.9. Myron Zimmerman, who has been out of action with a twisted ankle for the last few weeks, should put even more pressure on this event when he returns. Last year, Zimmerman ran a 49 second quarter.

Sprinting times were unimpressive, but are almost certain to improve before the meet with San Jose State. Broadjumper Burton took the century in 10.5.

Looking very good in the dashes was Fred Skinner, who won the 220 in 22.1 and who anchored the winning relay team to a time of 1:35.8.

The distance runners were hampered by windy weather at Kezar, but some of the times were good for this early in the season. Paul Patton proved to be the college's top man in the longer races. He won the mile in 4:46.8 and ran a 2:02.7 half mile.

The City College track schedule for 1958 is as follows:

Sat., March 29, 2 p.m., West Contra Costa at Cal Frosh
Sat., April 12, 10:30 a.m., Stockton at Oakland
Fri., April 18, 3 p.m., San Mateo at Modesto
Wed., April 23, 8 p.m., San Francisco State Relays at State
Fri., April 25, 3 p.m., Sacramento at Stanford Frosh
Sat., May 3, 2 p.m., Santa Rosa at Santa Rosa
Sat., May 10, 7 p.m., West Coast Relays at Fresno.

Mike Reid Named New College MAC

Mike Reid has been appointed to the position of Men's Athletic Commissioner, Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities here, announced yesterday.

Graduated from Balboa High School in the Fall of, 1956, he held the office of head yell leader and was All-City in the discus.

He attended the college last spring and was an outstanding track competitor. At the Stockton Relays last year, Reid threw the plate 157 feet to place second behind Parry O'Brien, the World record holder in the event.

Reid plans to further his education at University of Southern California. He hopes to fill a position on the USC track team and throw the discus.

Henry Block SF Head

John Henry, well known basketball letterman, was elected President of the Block SF Society for this semester. His plans for the society include a dance to raise funds for the most valuable player awards of this year. Henry urged all letter winners to become active members of the society in order to have a successful spring semester.

RA Lagers Triumphant

Basketball got underway in the Recreation Association this semester when a team journeyed to the Santa Rosa Junior College Sports Day, March 8.

Three two-quarter games were played by each team. The college won games from Santa Rosa and San Jose and lost to an Oakland team. No college won all its games.

Last Tuesday the RA team went to Menio Atherton High School where it won, 20-16.

Several games will be scheduled with high schools and colleges, according to Bev- Wilson, basketball manager.

Ugly Man Contest Sponsors Seek Unusual Physiognomies For Fund Raising Drive Here

Candidates are needed for the fourth annual Ugly Man Contest which starts here Monday and lasts for one week, Brower Dimond, president of Alpha Phi Omega, the sponsoring organization, said today.

A goal of $400 has been set by the fraternity, and Elmer Eckart has been appointed the contest chairman. Assisting Eckart are Ralph Gowan, dance chairman, and Gene Bunch, publicity.

BROWER DIMOND, president of Alpha Phi Omega.

"This contest is held each year by the 293 chapters of APO, which is one of the college's few national fraternities," Dimond said.

Candidates may be sponsored by any on-campus organization with the exception of the faculty. Each fraternity and club is invited to submit one name as a candidate to compete for the Ugly Man medal, which will be awarded at the dance Friday, March 28.

The climax of the contest will be announced in Smith Hall during the dance and a trophy will be awarded to the candidate's sponsoring organization. Steven Paul and his band will play for the dance while guest entertaining will add several highlights to the evening's festivities.

Prices for the dance are $1.50 a couple and $1 stag, Dimond added, and the dance will also serve as a combined active-pledge activity.

Money realized in the contest will be used to benefit the $125 Associated Student activities scholarship as well as campus project funds. Votes consist of pennies and may be deposited in the cafeteria in cans labeled with each candidate's name and sponsor. Each penny counts as one vote and anyone can vote as many times as he wishes.

In addition to the cafeteria, candidates will carry a can with them at all times on campus so that there will be ample voting opportunity for those wishing to save their energy for midterms.

"There is also the possibility of a rally being held," Dimond said. "Thanks to these contests, the members of APO have been able to contribute several hundred dollars to worthy projects in the name of the college and the fraternity."

Luncheons, Dinners Keep Sororities, Fraternities Busy

By Jerry Redford

MUCH of the sorority and fraternity life is centered around coming rushing events, as the sororities have concluded their firesides, and many of the fraternities finished with their first affairs. Plans now are on final dinners and luncheons, which will be the deciding factor on who will be invited to pledge the various groups.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity held a meeting at the home of Sam Franzella, at which time plans for their first affair were discussed. Plans for the spring festival were also brought up. A joint is being organized between the Kappa Rho brothers and Zeta Chi sorority.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority is planning a dinner which is to be held at the Wawona Club house March 30. Entertainment, based on a Buttons and Bows theme, will be presented by the sisters.

Officers of Phi Beta Rho sorority for this semester are Natalie Hoogasian, president; Sonya Cohn, vice-president; Renada Marston, recording secretary; Louana Pariani, corresponding secretary; Inez Blank, treasurer; Judy Wright, historian, and Jamie Cook, sergeant-at-arms and editor. The sorority had a very successful fireside and is now making final plans for its traditional Italian dinner to be held at the Forest Hill club house.

Alpha Phi Omega fraternity held a progressive dinner recently consisting of soup at Bob Ebert's home, salad at Rich Hulsmann's, main course at Jerry Hoffman's and dessert at the home of John Dunn. Some of the brothers then adjourned to Doc Sewell's home for a song fest. Plans are now being completed for the Ugly Man On Campus contest and dance to be held between March 24-28. The dance will be on the latter date.

Tau Chi Sigma held a very successful first affair last week at the Richmond Hall. The fraternity is now making final preparations for the Blood Drive, March 27, 28. Blood donated will be kept on reserve at the Irwin Memorial Blood Bank for one year following the drive for use of donors or their families.

Zeta Chi sorority held its fireside at Wynnelle McCarthy's home recently, to become more acquainted with rushees. A luncheon will be held next week by the sorority at Laurel Hall.

Gamma Phi Ypsilon fraternity held a meeting recently at the home of Karl Griepenburg in order to make plans for the coming rushing events. New officers for this semester include Griepenburg, president; Bob Venturi, vice-president; Vince Mutascio, secretary; Don Malvestiti, treasurer; Bob Potter, pledge master; Joe Mutascio, historian; Rudy Laporta, custodian; John Cahalan, sergeant-at-arms, and Chuck Lewis, brother at large.

Applications For $100 Scholarship Due On April 7

Students interested in applying for the Bank of America Scholarships must do so no later than Monday, April 7, Mary Golding, dean of women, announced last Friday. Two of these $100 awards are being offered to students majoring in banking, business administration, secretarial or clerical work.

To compete for these awards students must have a grade point average of no less than 2.0 based on a 3.0 scale; a minimum of 24 units must have been credited and the student's personality should be appropriate to his occupational choice, Dean Golding said.

Other scholarships being offered this semester, she added, are two Denman Scholarships of $125 each, available to two women students who are graduates of San Francisco public high schools. Application deadline is Saturday, March 29.

Also there is the Florence Louis Scholarship for $30, offered to a woman student of the college having a C average or better and carrying 15 units or more, with the deadline Wednesday, March 26.

Also to be awarded are a Square and Circle scholarship of $125 for an American-born Chinese man or woman student [illegible] scholarships of $50 apiece to be given to one Chinese man and one Chinese woman student.

To apply for a scholarship, Dean Golding said, students should send a letter of application to Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, S-148 or to her, S-150. The letter should include a description of the student's ambitions, needs and service to college or community. High school activities should also be listed.

The Chinese Students Club announced their scholarship winners at the Sweethearts Ball, held February 2. Deserving students were Joan Lee, Connie Toy and Joseph Lee. Funds for the awards were raised through the dance.

Film Series Presents '49er Gold Rush History

Two films will be shown this Friday during college hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m., in S-136 as part of the college film series, according to Madison W. Devlin, audio visual aids instructor.

"Artist Of The Mother Lode is a colored film of the historic gold mining town of Columbia, California. It is the setting against which Charles Surendorf demonstrates linoleum block printing and the creation of an oil painting. Actual scenes of the Sierra can be compared with the artist's interpretation of them.

California, Mother Lode deals particularly with the many famous gold mining towns. It recounts interesting bits of their history in presenting the saga of the '49 gold rush.

AMS Defeat AWS In Semi-Annual Card Sales Tilt

By John Wellington

Winners of the Associated Men Student-Associated Women Student card sales contest were announced at the Club Activities Board dance March 7.

The group trophy was presented to Freddie Hicks, president of the Associated Men Students, by Ralph Prior, Associated Student Card Sales chairman.

"The Associated Men Students came through in the final days of the card sales contest," Prior said.

"They defeated the AWS soundly by a ratio of four to one," Prior added. John Rosso is credited with pulling the AMS far ahead of the previous semester's winners. Linda McArdle, AWS president, led the AWS as the group's top saleswoman.

To date, the cards sold tally up to 1,830, with only 370 cards to go to reach the goal set by Prior.

He reminded students that "all organizations on campus must carry at least a 51 per cent membership in the Associated Students, and that organizations receiving funds from the Associated Students must have 100 per cent membership. This will be enforced," Prior added, and urged students to buy their cards as soon as possible for benefit of the many discounts, plus the many other advantages of owning an A/S card. Students can buy the cards at Smith Hall at the student finance office. Married students may get their cards stamped "Spouse" at the time of sale.

Study Trips Offered

Fifty-five summer study trips going to Europe, Near East, Mexico, South America and North America, all with academic credit upon completion of course requirements, are offered to students by the Council on Student Travel, Joseph M. Jacobsen, foreign student adviser here, announced today.

Student Council Gives Vote Of Confidence To Geear To Fill Final Sophomore Seat

By Lois Cosden

A single eligible candidate showed up to fill the remaining sophomore seat in Student Council last week—Lawrence Geear. He was sworn in on a vote of confidence, the first such action to be taken by the assembly, and officially appointed by chairman Jack Patterson.

Representatives to the Northern Regional Conference of California Junior College Student Government Association were named by Darlene Enfield, AS vice-president.

Unanimous approval was granted to Mike Reid as temporary Men's Athletic Commissioner on the recommendation of Larry Beldon.

Other organization officers receiving acceptance during the week were Freshman Class Vice-President Gary Torres and Secretary Bev Tollini; Associated Women Student Vice-President Ruby Broadway; Recording Secretary, Yvonne Weiss, and Treasurer, Priscilla Watts. Secretary Chuck Zanardi of Associated Men Students also won council's blessing.

Hopes of publishing a college year book printing this semester were dashed, when investigation on the part of Jerry Redford disclosed the estimated cost—$5,000 or more. It was agreed that such an expense could not be carried at this time.

In the budget department, one request was tabled and three were passed last Thursday. KCSF's bid was refused until a representative could be on hand to explain the costs. An accounting of the controller's expenditures won $770, the amount desired by that office. AMS received its submitted figure of $666.50 on the same test.

AWS had a bit more difficulty in gaining sanction for its desired $449. A motion was made to reduce the sum to $400. But Liz Thrush, Finance Chairman, stated the request had been pared down already by $50 from the original amount. The $449 was then passed by an 8 to 5 vote.

At Tuesday's meeting five budget allocations were made. They are as follows: Executive, $75 was allowed for the trophy and engraving for the Hall of Fame; Treble Clef, $55; Men's Glee Club, $258.99 (a $105.04 bus trip to Modesto accounted for this increase); A Cappella Choir, $308.75, and the Rally Committee, $340.

Kevin Mullen, State Information Service chairman, reported that a satisfactory response was coming in the mail from other two-year colleges for the collection of data concerning their current activities.

Mullen asked for volunteers to help type or proofread, depending upon which method, mimeographing or offset printing, will be used in compiling pamphlets in which state information is published.

Floriculture Dept. To Enter Oakland May Garden Show

By Dick Dyer

Students in the floriculture department and members of the Horticulture Society are preparing for the California Spring Home and Garden Show to be held at the Exposition Hall, 920 Fallon Street in Oakland, May 3-11, with Venice as the theme, according to Roosevelt Eatmon, club president.

The purpose of this annual affair is to promote college competition, give the department deserved recognition and enable the students to get further experience in flower arrangement and design, he said. Nurseries, Davis College, and interested businessmen, among others, are scheduled to enter. First prize is $270 and second is $160, he added.

"This will be the biggest show of its kind in Northern California with entries from Los Angeles and Southern California," Eatmon stated.

He announced that the various displays will feature garden fountains, 20 gondolas loaded with flowers, and an overall Venice atmosphere. "Our project is a Mediterranean landscape," he added.

The event is being sponsored and produced by the First District Agricultural Association.

Representing the college will be Harry E. Nelson, horticulture director; Mary Hope Cummings, flower shop instructor, and Eatmon's committee composed of Doug Ebert, vice-president; John Isaacs, Frank Salet and Ed Schuster, members.

The actual judging takes place on Saturday, May 3, but the show will run through Sunday, May 11, from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily. "I am confident," Eatmon said, "of our winning first prize this year. The students are very enthusiastic, even though this show is new to them." He added that their toughest competitor will be Davis College, known for its specialization in horticulture.

Tickets for the upcoming affair will be sold by the Horticulture Society in their building from March 24 to April 30, for 75 cents. Associated Student cards are not usable. After April 30, tickets will be $1.

"I want to thank Howard Gilkey, show designer, for his helpful supervision and assistance," Eatmon commented.

Tryouts Invited For Band, Choir

Rehearsals are in progress for the band and vocal groups in preparation for the coming programs, Robert Morton, choir director, said yesterday.

"There is still a need for a few sopranos to try out for the Treble Clef and the A Cappella Choir," Morton continued, "but on the whole we are organized and preparing for a busy semester."

Meyer Cahn, band director, pointed out that all persons interested in instrumental music are invited to drop in to hear and participate in the band practices daily at 2 p.m.

"We also have a practice session during college hours," Cahn stated, "and we would particularly like to have those who have played an instrument in their high school bands drop in and revive their interest."

The band practices in B-5 daily after 2 p.m. while the Men's Glee Club practices Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 1 noon. The Treble Clef (women's choral group) meets Monday at 1 p.m. and the A Cappella Choir of mixed voices meets the rest of the week at that time. All vocal groups meet in B-6.

Students Discuss Cafe Changes

By Robert Liu

With minor constructive projects scheduled in Smith Hall this Fall, a random poll among 12 students for opinions concerning the present cafeteria revealed some constructive suggestions, some complaints.

Eleven complaints were made of the constant inadequacy of seats.

Two additionally voiced mild disapproval of the food served, but a twelfth remained indifferent to all opinions.

For solutions, suggestions ranged from vastly enlarging the cafeteria to placing a time limit for the occupation of seats.

Dennet Reynolds voiced both the common complaint on the constant crowd in the cafeteria but praised the catering service as "excellent."

The root of the problem, Reynolds believes, lies with the students who purchase a cup of coffee and spend the next two hours exchanging gossip. As a solution he advocates the enforcement of a time limit.

Otherwise, he suggested a covered patio might be constructed in the paved space on the north face of the cafeteria. "If weather permits and the wind is not too strong, several beach umbrellas might be pitched on the grass behind the Ram."

Other suggestions included:

Oscar Perez: "I believe another table could be maneuvered into the area beside the soda fountain."

Marion Bachwitz: "Stools should be installed beside the fountain counter. It'll both give the place a more pleasant appearance and solve part of the problem."

Richard Millward on the other hand believes an enclosed "sitting room" should be built for "parkers."

("Parkers" he defined as those who go down to the cafeteria, park themselves on a chair and talk or read for several hours.)

"These students don't favor the outdoor cement benches between the Science Building and Cloud Hall because of the wind. The librarian on the other hand does not favor these students in the library because of their chatter.

"The college is growing and a limited cafeteria will certainly develop into a painful problem," he predicted.

Larry Lew and Thomas Harper centered their complaints on the food.

Lew believes that a larger variety of hot dishes should be available; Harper complains that too much sugar is being used for the desserts and cakes.

A twelfth member of the poll, requesting to remain anonymous, said: "I used to frequent the cafeteria before, but the constant crowd and the long waits for a seat has driven me to patronize the restaurants on Ocean Avenue."

hemophiliac. Only 14 pints have been withdrawn by students.

Because no other students have requested any blood, the remainder will be distributed at the end of March to the Holderman Veterans' Hospital (45 per cent), the disaster fund (40 percent), and the Theatrical Federation Blood Reserve Fund (15 per cent).

Eleven Students Vying For Title Of Ugliest Man

By Robert Liu

Eleven competitions, including a freshman council member and an ex-Sophomore Class president, are this week vying for Alpha Phi Omega's annual Ugly Man contest title.

Contest Chairman Elmer Eckart expressed deep regret that faculty entries, major attractions and vote-accumulators in previous contests, have been barred from competing.

"We would really have had a grand contest," he said, "we'll miss them."

Last year faculty member John Dunn, sponsored by Zeta Chi sorority, was elected winner.

This year's field and their sponsoring organizations, as announced by Eckart, are Alexander Bogdis (IRC), Jom Davis (Kappa Phi), Tom Feinzi (Theta Tau), William Forshay (Men's Glee Club), Kenneth Kahn (H&R Society), freshman council member Bill McDonald (Zeta Phi Sigma), Berry Mierbach (Hillel Foundation), Ralph Prior (Beta Phi Beta), ex-Sophomore President Larry Vargo (Zeta Chi), Don Gifford (Gamma Kappa Beta) and Don French (Veterans Club).

The contest, which started Monday, is scheduled to close with a dance in Smith Hall Friday when the Ugly Man-elect will be presented with an Ugly Man Mug and a medal. The winner's sponsoring organization will have its name engraved on the Ugly Man perpetual trophy. The two runners-up will also receive prizes, APO President Brower Dimond said.

The contest, an annual Spring affair among the 293 scattered APO chapters, is being held here to raise money for two Associated Student activities scholarships to be presented to a man and a woman.

Dimond has set $400 as a goal he hopes to be gained from the pennies cast as votes during the contest and the entrance fee to the dance ($1.50 a couple and $1 stag).

"No special privileges are being granted to Associated Student members because entry prices would be so much lowered that we would not be able to cover the estimated costs for the two scholarships and the dance," Dimond said.

"But," he added, "students must show their registration cards when purchasing tickets at Smith Hall."

Stephen Paul and his band will provide the music at the dance, scheduled to last from 9 p.m. to midnight, he said. Attire will be casual.

The contest, presented for the fourth annual time, is being run on a penny-a-vote basis. "Votes" may be deposited in the cafeteria in cans labeled with each contestant's name and sponsor. Each penny counts as one vote and anyone can vote as many times as he wishes.

In addition to the cafeteria, Dimond said, candidates will carry a voting-can with them at all times on the campus.

College's Annual Drive For Blood Starts Thursday

By Kevin Mullen

Plans are now completed for the annual spring Blood Drive to be conducted tomorrow and Friday in B-2, according to Jim Hecht, Blood Drive chairman.

Most interesting of the activities of the drive is the rally to be held in the cafeteria on Friday, Hecht stated.

"Turk Murphy is coming out from his Easy Street on Powell, and Ada Moore and the Gateway Singers are coming out from the hungry i," Hecht said. "These entertainers are donating their time to put on the show so we hope that everyone shows up at the cafeteria during college hour on Friday. If we have a good turnout for them this time, they won't hesitate to come out again. Oh, yes. We would also like everyone to show up at the blood collection point in B-2."

The donation area in B-2, under the supervision of technicians from Irwin Memorial Blood Bank, will operate from 8 a.m. until 3 p.m. both Thursday and Friday. Any and all students may donate, but those who are less than 21 must have a parent's consent. For this purpose, they may utilize the form printed below.

All the blood collected will be applied to the college's account at the Irwin Blood Bank. Any student who donates to the drive can then make an unlimited withdrawal for his personal use from the account or a withdrawal of up to eight pints for any member of his immediate family.

Every student who donates blood will be given a free two weeks' pass to either the American Health Studios or Silhouette International.

Delta Psi and Gamma Sigma Sigma will serve refreshments consisting of coffee, fruit juice or milk to the donors. These refreshments are donated by the Hotel and Restaurant department.

There are three trophies to be awarded to the three organizations who donate the most blood. One trophy will go to the top member of the Inter-Fraternity Council, one to the top member of the Inter-Sorority Council and one to the top Independent group.

Additional plans provide for a graph which will be placed outside B-2 listing every organization on campus. It will show the amounts of donations from each group, in proportion to its size. Hecht is assisted in his duties as blood drive chairman by Dick Cottrell and Roland McNeil.

Cirque De Paris Theme For AMS Spring Festival

Cirque de Paris (Parisian Circus) is the winning theme submitted by Alpha Phi Omega for the Associated Men Student festival this year.

The festival will be held in the Cow Palace on Friday, April 25. Among the highlights of this year's event will be the awarding of prizes to the couples with the most original and elaborate costumes at the dance.

Prizes will also go to the organization whose booth shows the best originality and quality. Booth location will be awarded on a first come first choice basis. Petitions for booths should be submitted before Saturday, April 5, AMS President Freddie Hicks said.

The Cirque de Paris poster contest started on Monday and will close Friday, April 11. Posters will be judged on originality and adaptability to the theme. The posters judged best, Hicks said, will be placed on display in the cafeteria on April 15 to help kick off festival activities.

Hicks urged all groups who plan on entering a decorated car for the parade to the Cow Palace, thus becoming eligible for a prize, to sign up by April 11.

Five Students Will Enter Collegiate Art Poster Competition; Slogans To Feature Space Age Safety For 1999

Five students of the college's advertising art class will enter posters in the Collegiate Advertising Art competition starting Tuesday, April 15, according to William Eckert, art instructor here.

The theme, Safety in 1999, will portray rules and slogans possibly usable in an age of space. Working into this theme, the students will use imagination and foresight in developing posters which would be used for future advertising.

Students submitting posters are Donald Potts, Jack Lai, Walter Peter, Ray Jones and George Hopkins. Their work will be on display in the main show case on the first floor of the Science Building before being entered.

The contest is open to all students and graduate students registered in art or advertising classes in universities, two-year colleges, and art schools in the western U. S., Hawaii and British Columbia.

Judging will take place sometime after April. Finalist posters picked by the judges will be put on display at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel during the annual Zellerbach Paper Company exhibit.

Entries will be judged on the effectiveness of the poster in promoting the idea of safety to the public for the year 1999.

The contest area is divided into 10 regions. A total of $2,250, made available by the Zellerbach Paper Company, will be divided as follows: 10 regional first prize winners will receive $100 each; 10 second prize winners, $50 each, and 10 third prize winners, $25 each. After the regional competition, the first place winner in each region will compete with the first place winner of the other nine regions for a grand prize of $500.

Programming For Fall Semester To Start

Programming for the Fall 1958 semester started last week, and students are expected to follow the posted instructions regarding appointments, Howard Schoon, appointment counselor, said yesterday.

"Applications for next semester's programs will be made according to the last initial of the student's name. Beginning Friday, March 28, anyone may make an appointment.

Penalties for making late appointments will result only in inconvenience to the applicant. "The appointments are on a first come, first serve basis," Schoon pointed out.

Secret Device, Shots Stop Two Thieves Here

By William Forshay

Gunshots reverberated in the basement of the Science Building last Thursday morning as the Ingleside police trapped and arrested two youths believed responsible for the repeated forcing of the vending machines located at the south end of the building.

"We appreciate the splendid cooperation of Captain Arthur Williams and his men from the Ingleside police department as well as several members of the burglary detail, including Inspector Mendiola and Inspector Dunwell. Our thanks also go to the juvenile detail, which has cooperated with us in this matter," Dr. Oscar Anderson, co-ordinator, Division of Educational Management, said.

The two pilferers, believed to be the same ones who did $1,000 worth of damage to the machines in another raid, broke into one of the laboratories about 1 a.m. last Thursday. Unaware of the special electronic device awaiting them, they went directly to the machines and an alarm was set off in the Ingleside station. (Due to the previous depredations, Captain Williams has a master key to the college, and he and his men are well acquainted with the hall lighting system.)

Before five minutes had elapsed, 11 patrolmen in three patrol cars had converged on the Science Building and silently taken pre-arranged positions. Two patrolmen, including George Bonanno of the college's criminology department, quietly approached the door to the basement at the south end of the Science Building.

Without warning, they burst in on the pair, who dropped their tools and the money they had taken and attempted to escape down the hall, despite the calls to halt. Two warning shots fired over their heads brought them to a rapid stop and they were arrested and booked on suspicion of burglary.

Later on, after interrogation, they were also booked for auto theft as it was discovered that they had approached the college in a car to which neither had a title.

Credit for the capture goes to the trio who worked out the initial plans and set up the device which signaled the approach of the thieves. These are Captain Williams, who operated the plan; Ed Banderob, college electrician, who set up the device, and Dr. Anderson, who coordinated the various groups involved.

The youths are not connected in any way with the college, but it is believed they are members of a juvenile gang guilty of similar burglaries all over the city, Dr. Anderson pointed out.

A bullet-scarred wastebasket stands in the Science Building's basement as mute evidence that crime does not pay.

CSTA Members Attend Conference At Fresno

Approximately 15 members of the California Student Teachers Association, including all the officers, will attend the Northern Professional Problems Conference at Fresno State College this Saturday, Larry Bertine, president of the college chapter, said today.

Professional problems facing teachers, including educational television, will be discussed at the conference, which includes as members all the two and four-year colleges that have CSTA chapters. Two-years colleges are termed associate chapters.

Abstention 'Evil' Disappears As Students Gain Understanding

A SUCCESSFUL student government requires two things; first, a strong student leader, and second, a cabinet and council that through their understanding of the government can assist and serve the president with his electorial duties. This college is fortunate in that it has this needed strong leader.

Jack Patterson, president of the Associated Students, possesses a knowledge of the function and procedure of student government so complete that his ability can be called a talent. His understanding of the business at hand, whatever it may be, is the greatest contribution to the accomplishments of the council meetings.

A strong government cannot succeed without this quality in a leader. It's this man's job to do more than just fulfill campaign promises; it is his job to strengthen and better the government of the college.

More than a single leader is needed, however. A group is needed to take the initial steps—a group is needed to carry them out. This marks the appearance of the second desirable quality needed in student government—a strong, dependable cabinet and council.

This quality is making itself more evident in our government. As students in other fields of study must learn and perfect their ways, so must the student of government. Until this time of perfection and understanding is reached, classes of all types must operate under so-called handicaps.

In the case of student government these handicaps are slowly disappearing. Especially the one "big evil" . . . that of abstention. The start of the semester showed many council members associating themselves with abstentions rather than with either negative or positive positions. This "evil" is truly a weakness.

Again we mention that this evil is slowly being remedied as these students become familiar with and gain an understanding of their jobs as student leaders. Voting is a right given to these leaders by the majority of students, and it is up to these chosen men and women to vote in the manner that will best serve the purposes of the college and of the Associated Students.

MADAME DEFARGE'S blood-red knitting will be repeated tomorrow night on the Dupont Show of the Month (KPIX) 9:30 p.m. Madame Defarge's idea of fun in the afternoon was to travel to the execution square in Paris, sit beneath the guillotine platform and knit during the executions. The outcome of this now famous knitting was the original colored "red blood" knitwear.

Dupont will also present such memorable characters as Sydney Carton, whose resemblance to Charles Darnay enables him to substitute himself on the guillotine for Darnay, the husband of the woman he loves. If you haven't guessed by now, and shame on you if you haven't, it means you watch TV too much and read too little. Dupont is doing an adaptation of Charles Dickens' A Tale Of Two Cities.

The setting is before and during the reign of terror in France, and the production stars Eric Portman, Agnes Moorehead, Rosemary Harris and special guest, Graeie Field.

Ex-Bomber Pilot Brunhilde Igloo To Name Dances

And then there's the guy who names the college dances. Only this semester, it's a girl instead of a guy.

Among the new students registering last semester there was one girl who stood head and shoulders above her companions (6'2"). Meet Brunhilde Igloo, girl student, who comes to the college on the Korean G.I. bill as chairman of the dance-naming committee.

"In naming the dances, I try to draw upon my past experience for novel ideas," said Miss Igloo in an interview at her office. (She was practicing her left hook on the photographer and we never did get a picture taken.)

Miss Igloo ran away from boarding school at Tehachapi, California, at the age of 16 "because they were fighting a war in Indo-China and I like wars." She joined the French Foreign Legion and was subsequently transferred to the air wing as a bomber pilot "because they didn't have any size 17 combat boots."

It was in Indo-China that Miss Igloo was first inspired to name dances. One of her first efforts was "Crocus Hop" (i.e. a small yellow flower).

"In the fields of Indo-China there is this little flower rumored to be related to the opium poppy—anyway, you should have seen that second lieutenant hop when I jammed it down his throat."

At the outbreak of the Korean conflict, Miss Igloo volunteered for duty on that front "because I have always loved children and they have the cutest little generals." In Korea she received the inspiration for her second great dance named "Gals and Ghouls." "One time at a New Year's Eve party in a North Korean officers club . . ."

Then came such triumphs as Feminine Fling (Judo for girls taught easily), Ugly Man Dance (what kind of guys do we have at City anyway?) and Spring Fever (Spring's answer to the Asian Flu).

Car Park Blues

Acquiring Career No Hazard, Just Parking Problem

Ranking among the big brother worries of Summit meetings, unemployment, inflation and how high the rockets go is the college's full grown bugaboo of where to park the car.

One's education may very well hang—on the whims of fortune, not in the problem of transportation.

The optimist steers for the student parking area off Phelan. If he arrives early enough for a 10 o'clock class (say at 9), he can afford to linger, hands clasped tautly on wheel, ears attuned for motor warm ups and/or exhaust spurts from the pipes, and eyes riveted at any scholar descending the hill in the direction of the parking lot.

With experience, he comes to know which pedestrians are taking a short cut to the Muni car terminal across the way—all of them.

How many times the pulse quickens and dies, alternately, with each approaching, then retreating footstep. Eyes worn, tongue dry, hands shaking and spasms of the smooth muscles over the diaphragm, the motoring student is barely able to think of making it to class, up that hill. He can't even recall what he studied for four hours the night before.

So he revs up. In desperation he heads out into Phelan and scouts to the south of Ocean Avenue. Nothing. He prospects north. No vacancies.

Oh, how he wishes he lived near a "K" or an "N" car line!

Of course, somewhere, some hour, he eventually finds a nestling place. He may miss the first class entirely, but he's ALWAYS made the second!

RA President

SANDY SIMONIAN,

RA's Theory: Stability Goes With Fitness

Physical fitness must go hand in hand with mental and moral stability. The Recreation Association is founded upon this theory, and gives to each Associated Student member the chance to participate in an athletic field of his choice whether it be as an individual or member of a group.

The RA is co-educational. It requires only that its members have an AS card, be in good health, maintain a "C" average, and have a complete gymnasium outfit of white. Members who wish to participate in intramural activities must belong to an organized group and attend the intramural meetings as often as possible in order to receive RA awards.

The different activities in which members may participate are volleyball, tennis, badminton, archery, fencing, bowling, basketball, golf, social and modern dance. Along with the chance to develop physical skills in these sports, the RA includes such special events as a modern dance festival, basketball payday, Monterey playday and picnics.

To aid the participation in sport and social events, the RA has made a new addition called the Secretariat. Members of this organization are responsible for making posters, typing lists, keeping an account of records, planning decorations, and serving refreshments at the various functions.

Students who are not members of RA but wish to be so, may obtain added information by consulting one of the Recreation Association Council members, Sandy Simonian, Linda Ryan, Barbara Baxter, Mike Sullivan, and Joe Saporita, or the RA's sponsor, Ann Casey.

No Story Today!

Violins Cry For Reporter With Alibis

(Editor's Note: Every school newspaper has its reporter who shows up at deadline without a story, but with an excuse worthy of a genius. Such an alibi came in to the Pocatello Junior College News recently, and The Guardsman editors found its quality worth of reprinting here.)

To the Editor:

I went down to a Student Council meeting as assigned but there simply weren't any new developments this week, according to Larry Avadrink, Associated Student president here.

He couldn't talk to me at the moment, anyway, because council was in a closed session, plotting the violent overthrow of the administration.

I realize that excuses are not accepted so I went from there to the college president in search of news. However, his secretary told me that he was not to be disturbed because he and his staff were in a special meeting, plotting the violent overthrow of student government. With all this plotting, there just isn't any news.

Next, I went to the college baseball diamond with the intent of doing a feature story on the baseball team. Things were in a terrible mess down there because the bat boy had just bludgeoned the coach. Nobody wanted to talk to me, and there was blood all over third base so I went away.

I hitched a ride back up the hill on a Red Cross ambulance—somebody had planted a bomb under Cloud Hall and there goes our Library story and everything.

On the way back up to the Journalism room, I stopped off at the biology department as a last resort for a possible story. It seems that one member of the latest shipment of cadavers had gone out for a drink of water and the biology instructor was speechless—I guess she didn't want to talk to reporters. Nobody will give me a story—

Extra Reading Basic Gateway To Knowledge

By Don Seratti

AT THIS STAGE of the semester, conscientious students often ask themselves, "How can I get the most out of the courses I'm taking?"

In the social sciences, even non-majors in this multifarious field find themselves taking history or political science courses which are required for various educational advancements. In this era of increasing political consciousness and international activity, a fuller understanding of government and history can prove indeed beneficial and rewarding. Aside from adhering closely to regular assignments, probably the best way to fully master a college course is by doing outside reading related to the respective course.

An excellent study of life in the Roman Empire which would enhance most students' knowledge of this topic is The Romans, by E. H. Barrow.

The Romans differs from most other books written about this era in that it is a penetrating study of the people, government, religion, philosophy, law and literature of ancient Rome. Compared to the commonplace fact-filled histories of the Empire in which the reader is fed countless dates, names and places to remember, this book can be likened to a contemporary "inside story" of some segment of today's society.

The book's theme is not what the Romans did, but what they were, and what were the habits of mind that made their civilization and culture what it was. Mr. Barrow uncovers the people's sense of dedication which he says distinguishes them from all other societies; their highly deferential policy toward conquered peoples; their form of civil government; their genius in planning and erecting towns, and many other fascinating aspects of this unique civilization.

• • •

Foreign relations being an integral part of the study of American government, such a book as George F. Kennan's American Diplomacy, 1900-1950, can be of immeasurable assistance to students of political science.

Mr. Kennan, a keen student of this increasingly vital field, renders a somewhat critical but impartial evaluation of America's foreign policy from the Spanish-American war to our present cold war with the U.S.S.R.

Periods of America's diplomatic history treated in this book are: The Spanish-American War of 1898; the "Open Door" policy toward China: World Wars I and II, and America's dealings with Russia since 1945.

America's indecision before entering World War I leads the author to compare it with "one of those prehistoric monsters who lies in his comfortable primeval mud and pays little attention to his environment, but once he realizes he is being bothered he lays about him with such blind determination that he not only destroys his adversary but largely wrecks his native habitat."

In spite of such remarks as this, Kennan's comments are largely laudatory and he says hope for the future if this nation "knows what it wants" in its conflict with Russia in the battle for men's minds.

Shots At Ramdom

By Tom Tatera

A LOCAL newspaper employee is still shaking his head over the slightly weird telephone call which came his way last week. It seems this woman subscriber had called to bemoan her missing paper, and was in the middle of her mournful tale when she heard a noise at the door. The conversation ensued as follows:

"Just a second, please. I think I hear the delivery boy now." Away from the receiver, "Pat, run and see if the paper has come yet."

(Silence.)

"Is it there?"

"Woof!"

Pat is a dog, in case anyone wondered!

A FOX on those textbooks which begin their complex paragraphs on one page and end it on the next. If it is late at night, and a student's concentration has flown out the window, he is liable to sit flipping the same page for hours upon end before making sense out of the paragraph as a whole. And this is just one of the things that makes the student's lot an unhappy one.

MID-TERMS are over. Time to lock the books up in the safe again, and enjoy the beautiful weather. There won't be any more tests for another whole month, so just sit back and relax. And if any reading assignments happen to come your way, just snuggle up inside a warm serape and sing "Manana."

But don't blame this column if you get poor grades. Its author is flunking in five courses himself.

JA PARTY . . . Student president, is thinking of sending letters to some 200 freshmen interested in student government. He would like to invite them to drop in at a council meeting for a look see. Commendable. This is a first step toward raising more interest in student government.

College's Broadjump Standard Slated To Tumble As Present 'Best Ever' Crop Starts Leaps

Many of the best broadjumpers in the college's history are on the 1958 track and field team right now. When these stars begin equaling past high school performances, that event will become one of the college's strongest.

Ex-George Washington High star, Mack Burton, statistically leads this group. And if past performances mean anything, he should go a long way. Last year, Burton was recognized as having the best prep jump in the United States.

The 6'2", 175-pound athlete competed in the All-City meet and at the Fresno Relays. He then went on to the State meet, where he took a second with a best jump of 24'8".

Burton also runs the century and was All-City in basketball, and a prep All-American in football. He received the Most Valuable Senior trophy at Washington, and is enrolled as a business major here.

Elvin Bridges, a 5'11", 170-pound freshman, formerly of Polytechnic, has also posted top performances in the past. Bridges, a science major with an A minus average, was All-City basketball, and competed in the All-City track meet.

Charles Tanner, a 6'2", 170-pound ex-Polytechnic star, has come up with the second best jump in the time trials, with 22' leap, (Burton was first with 23'4"). While at Poly, he also ran in the 220, played football, and competed in the Fresno and Modesto Relays.

Another man to watch closely is Gaynel McPherson, an athlete with great potential. Winner of the 1956 All-City broadjump event, the ex-Washington star then went on to take the High Point trophy in the Hollister Relays. He was active on the Washington football team, and was All-City in lightweight basketball. McPherson is an engineering major.

Polytechnic's third contribution to the broadjumpers is 5'6", 155-pound Emmett Cobb. He was a standout in A.A.A. track, running the 100, 220, and broadjumping to a place in the All-City meet.

And last, but certainly not least, is bouncing Claude McWilliams, an 18-year-old freshman participating at the track factory of San Francisco—George Washington High School. (McWilliams comes from a track family. His father still holds the A.A.A. record for the 100-yard dash at 9.7, and almost gained a berth on the 1948 Olympic team for the hop, skip, and jump.) The 6-foot, 175-pound P. E. major competed in the Fresno Relays, and has a best prep mark of 23'1½".

This array of talent could be a coach's dream if these men realize their full potential this year. No one expects them to pick up right where they left off in high school, but if they should equal or surpass their previous best marks, the broadjump will be a real power packed event.

Ram Tracksters Meet UC Frosh, Comets Saturday

Edwards Field on the Berkeley campus will be the setting for the college's track meet on Saturday with West Contra Costa and the UC Frosh squad. Lou Vasquez's thinclads have had a week of good weather and will be ready to go. Field events get underway at 1:30 p.m., with the runners slated to start at 2 p.m.

Although this is not one of UC's better frosh teams they should give the Ram tracksters enough good competition for an all out performance. The Rams will also compete against WCC's Comets in a Big Eight dual meet.

The Bear Frosh are paced by their outstanding hurdler and broadjumper Cebron Russ, former Berkeley High star who placed in the State meet last year. The Comets boast the likes of Rudy Jackson, who has hit 9.8 in the 100 and 21.2 in the furlong; Bill Clifton, a top hurdler, and Tyler Wilbon, former WCC cage standout who tied with Will Gaspar for first in the Big Eight high jump last season.

Vasquez's Rams have the makings of one of the best squads ever to appear for the college. With several outstanding performers in most of the events, and enough depth, the Rams will be a good bet to wind up as conference champs and leave their mark at the State meet.

Tom Skinner and Mack Burton will be tough in the sprints. Don Nasser and Myron Zimmerman, who will be back in action next week after injuring his ankles, will be top point getters in the quarter, while Ken Dawdy looks good in the half mile. Milers Paul Patton and Blake Westman give the Rams strength in the distance runs. Two good hurdlers are around in Jim Thomas and Jerry Bell.

The Rams will be strong in the field events with "Iron" Mike Lewis and Leroy Shields throwing the weights around. Highjumpers Gasper, Ed Costa and Marion Page will be aided by broadjumper Mac Burton. Two other broadjumpers who should help the Ram cause are Elvin Bridges and Gaynel McPherson.

College Golfers Bow To Modestans By Two

With rain a hindrance to both teams, the Modesto Junior College golf team beat the college squad 8½ to 6½, March 14, at Modesto.

Bob Patterson, first man on the college squad, was off his regular game and shot an 85 to give Modesto three of its points. Second man Elden Davis 2 the City member of the college team who was consistent, adding three points to the college's score. Third rated Tony Agliolo also lost, giving away another three points. The fourth man on the college squad, Charles Pierce, was not present, which could have made a difference in the outcome of the match.

Gene Krone was moved to fourth spot and took two out of three points. Fifth man Gordon Gruber split to receive one and a half points.

On March 17, the team won a close match by an 8½-6½ score over College of Marin at the Meadow Club in Fairfax. With more practice under its belt, the team should fare well against Santa Rosa this Friday at Sharp Park.

Baseballers Drop Opener

RAMBLINGS

By Nick Peters

BAY AREA basketball fans who were disappointed when USF "only" finished fourth in the AP and UP cage ratings, found out that ratings carried little weight when the chips were down and the stakes high.

Seattle's storybook Chieftains, who glided through the Western Regionals sans a complete effort by first string guard Francis Saunders, were rated but 18th at season's end.

It's a good omen that a team like Seattle represented the West in the NCAA finals in Louisville last weekend. Led by Elgin Baylor, who tanked 61 points against USF and UC at the Cow Palace, Seattle played a great brand of "desire" ball against two of the top defensive outfits in the country.

Baylor, incidentally, is one of the most polished hoopsters ever to come out of college. USF's Bill Russell was an excellent goal tender, LSU's Bob Petit couldn't be topped for shooting prowess, and Holy Cross' Bob Cousy was the greatest playmaker, but no one could match the Seattle All-America for all around ability.

In our opinion USF deserved to lose because it didn't give its all throughout the season. Highly rated Art Day and Mike Farmer could have been unparalleled performers, had it not been for their lazy attitude in several contests.

Nevertheless, a 24-2 record is nothing to be sneered at and Don followers can be content to know that Day, Dave Lillevand, and Freddie LaCour will all be back come '59 . . . but then again, so will a boy named Baylor!

Speaking of basketball (when will it go away?), the Zanzibar Varsity, composed of the college's '58 Ram cagers, made its Prinz League debut by humbling the Embers Bootleggers 70-44 last Wednesday. The Embers included two former college stalwarts, Al Vidal and George Campbell.

Switching to the diamond, we were informed that Coach Lee Eisan is no longer called "Lumpy," but instead "Limpy." Seems that the veteran mentor pulled a muscle while walking!

Scandal department. Talk is that two players with fictitious registration certificates were members of the baseball team during the practice season. Trouble is, one almost made first club!

Bill Flanagan, ace performer on the '57 diamond nine and counted on for heavy duty in this campaign, has dropped out of the college in favor of the military.

The new diet handed out to the track team by Coach Lou Vasquez has some interesting provisions. Appears that the spikers are forced to put four teaspoons of Carnation powdered milk into every glass of skim milk which they drink. Makes for contented Rams! Hmmmm.

Two Fraternities Tied For Mural Cage Lead

After the second round of the interfraternity basketball tournament, Alpha Phi Epsilon and Gamma Phi Ysilon are tied for first place with 2-0 records.

Alpha Phi Epsilon won its first tilt by downing Phi Beta Delta 24-16. Led by the speedy Gene Craft, Alpha Phi took its second game with a 40-19 score over Beta Phi Beta.

Gamma Phi Ysilon, the other first place team, started the season with a 34-20 win over Alpha Kappa Rho. The [illegible] sharp shooting Rich Leon, won their second tilt with a 29-10 victory over Beta Tau.

Zeta Phi Sigma is in third place with a forfeit win over Alpha Sigma Delta. Phi Beta Delta, Tau Chi Sigma and Beta Tau are tied for fourth place, all with 1-1 records. Alpha Kappa Rho is seventh with a 0-1, and Alpha Sigma Delta is tied with Beta Phi Beta for last place, both having an 0-2 record.

The Club Activities Board is presently forming a similar league.

Detroit's Hank Greenberg and Philadelphia's Jimmie Foxx came the closest to breaking Babe Ruth's homer record of 60. Hank and "Double X" both belted 58.

Costly Errors 'Give' Oakland T-Birds Comeback 9-5 Verdict In Big 8 Diamond Inaugural

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

A hard-hitting but equally sloppy Ram infield had no one to blame but themselves in dropping a 9-5 diamond verdict to the Thunderbirds from Oakland in their Big Eight opener Tuesday at Balboa Field.

Led by the booming sticks of shortstop Roy Tripaldi, catcher Johnny Mays, and veteran outfielder Gene Craft, the locals found themselves off to an unparalleled start, and had wrapped up a tidy 5-0 advantage over the East Bayers before the roof caved in in the seventh.

Taking full advantage of a pair of bingles and a bobbled ball on the part of third sacker Rich DiMarco, the T-Birds loaded the sacks, and with Tripaldi's fumbling of what should have been an inning killing double play ball to the slot, pushed across the first tally in what was to eventually prove "the beginning of the end" for the Ram delegation.

Another costly error, on the part of second sacker Al LeMire, and a solid base hit to center, accounted for three more digits on the scoreboard, and a pair of miscues by Tripaldi and pitcher Freddie Glosser set up a fifth tally before Glosser managed to put out the fire on a pop fly to the infield.

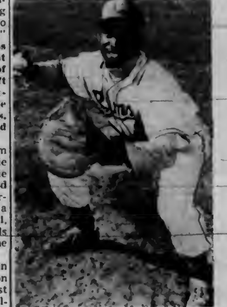
The Eisanites, though, had by no means heard the last from their East Bay rivals. Coming up in the top of the ninth with the score knotted at five apiece, the Thunderbirds fired up the fatal rally which was to spell the doom of the Red and White contingency. Three Ram errors, combined with a pair of singles and a booming double to left center, accounted for a quartet of T-Bird tallies, and the end of the line for Lee Eisan's scrappy Rams.

As unimpressive as their performance might tend to label them, however, the locals were not as dismal as it might seem. They played seven innings of terrific ball, and the deciding element in their undoing seemed to be that "when it rained—it poured."

Tripaldi, who played a dual role as both hero and goat, swung the loudest bat on either club, collecting a pair of singles and a booming double to left center in three trips to the plate. Little Al LeMire, giving exception to the disastrous seventh and ninth innings, fielded beautifully and also punched well at the plate.

Backstrop Mays, who, aside from the invincible chucking of Freddie Glosser, delivered the most enviable performance of them all, was solid behind the dish and swung a blustering club, while Glosser turned in a sparkling performance on the hill, and might well have borne the laurels were it not for poor support in the infield.

Another contributing element in the scuttling of the Ram delegation was the absence of hard-hitting first baseman Bill Flanagan, as Vic Williams, Flanagan's understudy at the hitching post, came up on three different occasions with the bags jammed and whiffed each time.



Lee Eisan Looks To Outfield For Power At Plate

Moving into the heat of what promises to be another torrid Big Eight campaign, the batsmen of Lee Eisan must once again look out in the gardens of the outfield for the majority of their hitting power.

Although the locals are by no means overloaded with talent in this department, Eisan has himself a trio of work-horses who could well develop into a formidable battery of deadly artillery.

Left fielder Joe Herbert was a stalwart competitor with Pop Illia's 1956 AAA champion Galileo Lions before dragging his spikes out to Ocean and Phelan a year and a half ago. Not a regular aboard Bill Fischer's nine of last year's season, the lanky scrapper saw but two official trips to the plate, one of which resulted in a well tapped two-bagger. Herbert has been hitting well thus far and could develop into something dangerous.

Versatile Gene Craft, who was one of the stand-out performers on last year's club as Fischer's number one backstop, finishing the season with a TRADING the "tools of ignorance" for an outfielder's glove, Gene Craft (pictured above), has become a top sticker for the '58 diamond corps.

.278 mark at the plate, has turned in his bird cage for employment in the outfield. Along with pitcher-first baseman Bill Flanagan, he was one of Herbert's teammates at Galileo in '56.

Since the opening of the season, pesky Gene has been the talk of the Ram camp, not only for his outstanding defensive play, but mainly because of that explosive bat of his. It was his pair of booming triples, both well over 375 feet into deep left-center, that accounted for four tallies in the Rams' 6-5 undoing of St. Mary's Frosh, two weeks ago.

Certainly to be considered, pitching ability of Freddie Glosser, the consistency of Mays, and the sparkling infield work of Roy Tripaldi into consideration, at this point Craft looks to be the best of them all and should find little trouble in hauling down the coveted M.V.P. award should he continue in his present stand-out caliber of performance.

Eighteen-year-old Mike Warnock is the sole rookie in Eisan's outfield. A utility man with last year's championship Parrot delegation from Polytechnic, Warnock first came into his own as a semi-pro outfielder with Capitol Glass over the summer months, finishing the loop with an enviable .325 clip at the plate.

Eisanmen Set For 2nd San Mateo Encounter

Coach Lee Eisan's Ram hardballers face San Mateo's Bulldogs Saturday afternoon for the second time this week. (Results of yesterday's game in the next issue of The Guardsman.) Coach Jess Freitas' nine always prove tough competition to the locals and the game Saturday at Fitzgerald Field in San Mateo should be no exception.

San Mateo has a veteran pitching staff made up of lefty [illegible] Zack Cocchi, and Howard Harrington to go along with returning infielder Greg Jimenez and outfielder Gene Miremon. A host of newcomers make up the rest of the squad and so far have proved a tough combination.

The Rams will throw a combined lineup of vets and rookies at the Bulldogs and are gunning for a victory over their peninsula rivals. Eisan will probably go along with Bud Williams at the initial sack, Al LeMire or Ray Navarro at second, Rich DeMarco at third, Roy Tripaldi at short, fly catchers Gene Craft, Joe Herbert and Mike Warnock, backstop Johnny Mays, and either Fred Glosser, Tripaldi or Ed Fauss to do the chucking.

New Constitution Adopted By Northern Section CJCSGA In Meeting Last Saturday

By Kevin Mullen

After heated debate and lengthy discussion, the first constitution of the Northern Section of the California Junior College Student Government Association was adopted last Saturday at Oakland Junior College bringing the semesterly conference to a close.

The constitution, prepared by San Jose City College, was accepted on a temporary basis until the time that the "wrinkles" can be ironed out.

Adoption of the constitution was only one of the many issues throughout the day which were discussed and decided upon by the delegates representing the 23 Northern California member colleges of the CJCSGA.

The conference came to order at 10 a.m., with the first General Assembly presided over by George Spowart, president of the Northern Section of the CJCSGA, from Oakland.

An invocation was offered by the Reverend Mr. Arnold Levenhagen from the Zion Lutheran Church of Piedmont. Dick Yaeger of the College of Marin was elected parliamentarian as the first order of business.

After the minutes and the agenda were accepted the delegates adjourned to their different workshops for a brief discussion before lunch.

There were nine workshops: Athletics, Associated Women Students, Campus Activities, Campus Organization, Finance, Northern Regional Constitution, Publications, Student Government and Veterans Affairs.

After a lunch in the Laney Campus Cafeteria, the delegates again met briefly in their workshops to draw up resolutions which were later presented at the second General Assembly. The consensus among many delegates tended toward the idea that the workshop sessions were not long enough to do justice to the scope of the items on the agenda.

The second General Assembly saw the various workshops come together with their different resolutions and recommendations to cope with the most common problems facing the colleges.

The veterans workshop passed a resolution whereby it would become a permanent part of the northern region conferences and the California Journalism Association of Junior Colleges was officially sanctioned by the conference. Also passed by the body were resolutions from the athletics and the campus activities workshops.

April Slated As Deadline For $125 Denman Awards

Judge William Denman and his sister, Mary Cheatham, are again offering two Denman Scholarships of $125 each to two women students with superior grades, who have graduated from a San Francisco public high school, Mary Golding, dean of women, said reecntly. Applications for these awards must be in by Monday, April 7.

The award, which is one of the highest honors a woman can receive here, was established in 1939 in memory of the late James Denman, once superintendent of San Francisco Public Schools.

Also to be awarded are two Square and Circle Scholarships of $125 each offered to two San Francisco born Chinese students, two Chinese Students' Scholarships of $50 each and the Alice Eastwood Floriculture Scholarship of $100 for a student enrolled in floriculture.

Two $50 Scholarships available are the Graduating Class of 1957 Scholarship and the Cloud Scholarship offered to one man and one woman student.

Deadline for applications for these Scholarships is also April 7, Miss Golding said, and women should send letters of application to her; men should send applications to Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities.

The Florence Louis Scholarship was recently awarded to Judy Davidson.

Job Interviews Begin Here Soon

Recruitment and procurement teams from six Western states will arrive on campus during March, April and May to interview prospective job applicants for summer and full time positions, Joe Amori, director of job placement here, announced last week.

Harry R. Smith, managing owner of Crater Lake National Park resort at Crater Lake, Oregon, will conduct personal interviews for summer jobs next Monday, March 31, at 4:30 p.m., he added.

"In addition," Amori said, "Tom Kelly, employment supervisor from the Bank of America will be here Thursday, April 16, to interview business administration majors who are interested in a work-study program beginning this summer in one of the bank's branches."

Students interested in this program should be enrolled in their second year of college and have the recommendation of their advisers, Amori pointed out. The job will be full time for the summer months and half-time during the college term.

"All students interested in these career or summer jobs should apply at the placement center, S-188, to fill out personal data sheets and find out additional information," Amori declared.

Doane Named Editor Of Forum

Alger Doane last week was elected Editor-in-Chief of Forum, the college's annual literary magazine. Ray Hackett was elected Managing Editor in the same election.

Students who wish to write material for Forum are expected to submit any short stories, short one-act plays, essays not over 1,500 words, critiques, articles of current interest, poetry, and light verse on or before Monday, April 7, Doane said.

He added that material should be turned in to the Forum office, in C-331A, or to any member of the Forum Club.

All material should be on 8½ by 11 inch paper, double spaced, and typed on one side only, Doane explained.

All students who are interested in joining the club, he said, should come to meetings scheduled Fridays during college hour in S-257.

Discussions, lectures and dramatic readings are held during the Forum meetings which enable members to better appreciate and understand literature.

College Beach Boys

By The Sea, By The Sea . . .

Places for studying can range from a library to a garage, but for certain students at the college, studying is done only at the beach.

These students, experts in the use of a bota bag, find they can relax better and concentrate longer in the warm sun. Attractive women in new style bathing suits add to the sharpness of their minds while reviewing for an exam.

Their favorite site is Phelan Beach, better known to the beachcombers as "China." Once in a while, to keep their reflexes sharp for instructors who expect fast answers, they rescue a drowning person, or help a child caught on the nearby cliffs.

Between chapters in English 1B they ease their surfboards into the water and paddle for a while. This is so they can think clearly, with only the sound of the surf splashing against their boards to disturb them about the material they have.

At the end of the day, after everyone has gone home, they collect their books; papers and bota bags, walk up the long, steep hill and lock a gate. These students, however, are the only scholars in existence who get paid for studying—they are lifeguards.

Tea 'n Crumpets Special Feature At Intermission

Featuring an unusual intermission at which tea and crumpets will be served, as well as a whimsical satire, called The Admirable Crichton, the little theater group opens its season Friday night.

The crumpets will be the result of a city-wide contest sponsored by Dick Cook, disc jockey on KSFO, for an authentic English recipe. The tea will be served by costumed hostesses from the college in the lobby during the intermission.

"Starring in the title role is John Rose, who is well-known to Little Theater goers," Michael Griffin, director of the production, said today. "Jeanne Graham, who is also well-known on our stage, is the co-star."

Rose was last seen as a Salem minister in The Crucible, while Miss Graham's last appearance was as Portia in The Merchant Of Venice.

"A question seems to have come up on the proper pronunciation of Crichton," Griffin said. "But the proper way is simply Cry-tun."

Included in the large cast of players is Jordy Cooney who plays the role of Lord Loam, Fred Fisher who plays Ernest, Marilyn Banchieri as Lady Catherine, Leah Pashoian as Lady Agatha, Virginia Rae as Tweeny, Josephine Wall as Lady Brocklehurst, Dave Tipton as Lord Brocklehurst, David Terry as Reverend Treherne, and Bruce Johnson who does double duty as a naval officer and as Tompsett.

The production will take place this Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. in the little theater. After a break for Easter, it will resume April 11, 12, 18 and 19. Admission is by Associated Student cards while the general admission is one dollar.

Student Council Approves 8 Budgets, Tables Prospective Handbook Bid; KCSF Broadcasters' Request Canceled

Budget analysis continued during the week in Student Council with eight passed, one rescinded and one tabled.

Those approved were track, $2,009.20; basketball, $454.60 (this was reduced $25 by Liz Thrush, finance chairman, in an effort to maintain a balanced budget); tennis, $417.40 ($100 was pared); baseball, $1,337.59 (this covered transportation, meets and equipment); golf team, $499.50 for approximately 10 members playing matches in the Spring seemster only; Recreation Association, $497.57, suceeeded in the second submission of its request following a thorough discussion of RA expenses ($450 was cut); and commencement caps and gowns, $450.

Rescinded was KCSF's $515, granted a 7-2 "go ahead" at Tuesday's meeting. A vote of 12-2 upheld the second action.

The college Handbook bid for $750 was tabled 11-3. Restyling, changing to a smaller edition, pocket size, printing and the addition of pages and pictures to make for easier handling and reading for students explained the need for this sum, according to Linda McArdle, publicity committee member.

Freddie Hicks, Associated Men Student president, announced the board's decision on a name for the May festival. It is Cinque de Faree and was submitted by Alpha Phi Omega, service fraternity.

Miss McArdle, as Associated Women Student president, asked for and received approval of Diane Christopherson as corresponding secretary for the organization.

Larry Beldon, Junior Chamber of Commerce representative, expressed disappointment over the lack of applicants for the Miss San Francisco contest. Only three have registered to date. The usual number of candidates, he stated, is 15 to 16 from the college.

Hurley Clearing Ready For Arts Building April 20

Hurley Village will be completely torn down and cleared by April 20 in order to make way for the construction of the new arts building which will be built in its place, Dr. Oscar Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management here, announced last week.

"Plans for the new building are complete except for small details such as placement of the hardware and trimmings," Dr. Anderson said.

"The new building will house 24 classrooms, orchestra and band practice rooms, art and ceramic laboratories, a radio and television production studio, and an auditorium with a large stage and permanent seating capacity for 350 persons," he added.

Constructed to provide low cost housing for married veteran students and their families after World War II, the village was composed of 217 prefab units which rented for $1.20 per day at one time. It bears the name of Major John J. Hurley, a former instructor at City College, who was killed in action in Italy in 1944.

His widow was present along with many other dignitaries including the Mayor of San Francisco, Roger D. Lapham, when the key to the village was presented to the first occupant on October 8, 1946.

Six years in the making, the village's completion was the result of considerable effort on the part of city, state and college officials. Federal and state governmental aid was necessary to provide adequate materials and finance.

Special legisiative laws were passed to set aside building regulations and create new ones in order to expedite the construction of the units.

The Associated Students took an active interest in the village and in 1948 contributed $500 for a playground for the village children so they would have a safe place to play.

'Deadeyes' Shot Into Early Lead On Police Range

Criminology majors of the second semester gunnery class, 71-B, competed in the first two of ten intramural pistol matches on March 10 and 17, at the Colma Police Range.

The teams are made up of one master shooter (the team captain), two experts, two sharpshooters and one marksman. Each week, aggregate scores will be taken and the team having the highest score at the end of the ten week period will win.

Trophies will be awarded to the top team of the matches and to the best individual shooter of the semester at the annual Campus Police dinner in May.

Fred Fitzgerald, supervisor of the Campus Police, said concerning the pistol matches, "Shooting in practice is one thing but in a match—that's when the pressure is on. These weekly matches will afford the opportunity of shooting under pressure, and we hope to develop more shooters in this manner for the college pistol teams of the future."

The four teams have taken names along romantic and adult western themes, as far as I can see. "The "Deadeyes," who have taken an early lead by winning the first two matches, have Fitzgerald as captain, and include Larry Plott, William Donohoe, Frances Lorimor, Al Sperne, and Richard Mohr.

Following close behind are the second place "Dreamers," captained by Marion Timm, and consisting of Frank Gau, Louis Bording, Don Laufer, Frank Mateo and John Cottle.

"The Abilene" under Captain Ed Nelson, are in third position and composed of Charles Terry, Geraldine Rush, Lionel Hess, Walter Mitchell, and David Notaro.

Captain Lew Paglierani of the fourth place "J. C. Six," has William Samnon, Frank Williams, Garth Wright and Robert Becker shooting for him.

A greater interest in competitive shooting is the aim of these matches and, according to Miss Rush, criminology department recording secretary, in the two opening contests the participating students have shown great enthusiasm.

These matches are another first for the department, and its members hope that this program may be continued through succeeding semesters.

New England Movies Feutured This Friday

New England Portrait is scheduled for the college film series this Friday during college hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m. in S-136.

The film, in color, shows New England in the four seasons. Especially beautiful are the Fall colors and Winter snow, Madison W. Devlin, audio visual aids instructor, added.

Boston, Bunker Hill and other historical spots are shown. The mountains of Vermont, picturesque fishing villages along the rocky coast, and Cape Cod also add to the New England beauty.

The first long playing records were issued by Columbia in 1948.

Administration, Faculty Act To Raise Educational Standards

Pol. Sci. 36 To Be Discontinued In Spring 1960

Designed to raise educational standards, revisions in the present Political Science graduation requirements were approved last week at a meeting of several faculty members with Dr. Lloyd D. Luckmann as chairman.

The new requirements will come into effect Spring 1960 when the present Political Science 36 courses will be completely discontinued, Luckmann said.

Students planning to transfer to universities and colleges will meet graduation requirements in American History and Institutions with a combination of Political Science 1 and either History 17A, History 17B, History 8B or Economics 10. Previously, requirements in this section had been met by Political Science 36 alone.

Political Science 56 will replace and be similar to the discontinued course, except that it deals with a slightly different phase of the American government, Luckmann explained. It will not carry transfer credit.

General college students, not likely to continue their education beyond the two-year college level, will be subject to previous graduation rules, namely a pass in any of the G11AB series in Political Science or History.

Semi-professional students, on the other hand, need only to complete the newly-proposed, three-unit Political Science 56, Luckmann said.

The present political science graduation requirements will be kept for the next two years, Luckmann said, so as not to interfere with programs already arranged by students.

Faculty members present at the meeting were John Gerstung, Robert C. Johnson, John M. Selig and Alfred J. Tapson.

Honor Students Given Priority In Registration

A measure to give preference to incoming high school honor students during registration went into effect last week following approval by President Louis G. Conlan.

The students, to be selected by their respective schools or upon the results of the entrance examinations here, will be granted priority both in registration and programming their courses, Dr. Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction, said.

This move, he explained, is being undertaken with hopes of aiding the brighter students who in previous semesters have had difficulty in obtaining admission to specific courses because of the "first come, first serve" enrollment policy.

But, he added, selection of the students by their schools and the college will be mutually independent.

"By that we mean that students whose entrance scores place them in the upper ten per cent will be so favored even if their names have not appeared on the high school honor student list," Luckmann said.

Two other factors involving enrollment here are still under consideration, he said.

They concern the student who plans to repeat a course because of low grades (D or F), and an extension of the probation period to incoming high school students on the basis of their previous academic records.

Inter-Faith Dance Here On April 12

April In Paris is to be the theme of a forthcoming dance sponsored by the Inter-Faith Council and will be held on Saturday, April 12, in Smith Hall.

Bob Castle, council chairman, stated that this is the group's first dance, as it has only been in existence since the beginning of last semester. Those members of the Inter-Faith Council participating in the organization of April In Paris are the Hillel Foundation, the Canterbury Club, Westminster Fellowship and the Newman Club.

Music will be provided by Peter Butti and his orchestra, Castle said, and the attire is dressy sport. The affair will be from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight. Bids are now on sale at $1.25 for couple's ticket and 75 cents stag. Those wishing to come stag can purchase tickets only at the door, Castle declared, and they must also present their registration card to be admitted.

Members of religious clubs from other colleges in the Bay Area will be allowed to attend.

Application For Scholarship Due By Next Monday

Applications for scholarships must be in no later than Monday, April 7, Mary Golding, dean of women, said yesterday.

Scholarships available to students are two Square and Circle scholarships of $125 each, offered to two students of Chinese ancestry born in San Francisco; two Denman scholarships of $125 offered to two women of the college, with superior grades and who are graduates of a San Francisco public high school, and the $100 Alice Eastwood Floriculture scholarship, available to a student enrolled in floriculture.

Also offered are two Chinese Students' Club scholarships of $50 each, the Graduating Class of 1957 scholarship available to one man and one woman student, and the Cloud scholarship of $50 offered to a student of the college.

To apply for these scholarships Miss Golding said applicants should send letters of application to the dean's office, stating in the letter ambitions, needs and services rendered by the student to college or community. Women should send letters to her in S-150, Miss Golding said; men should send letters to Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, S-147.

Major Photo Exhibition For Cloud Hall Gallery

Another major photo project, the second in a series of four to be presented this semester at the Cloud Hall gallery, has been slated to... Among here this month.

With the title History And Scope Of Photography, and under the direction of instructor Emmett E. Smith, it will exhibit genuine Daguerreotype pictures, the first photographic process, invented in France in 1839, as well as reproductions of the Calotype process, which was similarly and simultaneously developed with that of the French in 1839. They were also developed in England, with none of these countries realizing the other's discovery, Smith noted.

Reproductions of the famous Brady's Civil War photographs and a collection of portraits taken in California at the end of the 18th Century are also part of the Cloud Hall display.

The California photographs have been donated to the college by student Fran Edmonston's mother.

As highlight of the scope of photography, a collection of pictures coming from various sources, indicating the uses of this medium in the fields of the arts, science, journalism with specific mention of its value in research work, astronomy and other applications, will be included.

Smith, working in conjunction with students from the college's photography department, is engaged at the moment in a seasonal display which may be seen at the Cloud Hall gallery under the title, Ah, Spring!

The presentation features "shots" of pretty models, children at play, flowers in bloom, Golden Gate Park's Japanese tea garden, Fisherman's Wharf, animals in spring, street scenes and some other views of San Francisco.

Changing the pattern, and scheduled to take place during the month of May, Smith has planned the presentation of the college's 25-year-old history as seen through many photographs and a few documents in a project he has named City College Scrap Book.

"This last one is to be worked out with the cooperation of faculty members and students here," Smith said. He requested those who have material concerning the history of the college, and who want to let him use it for the presentation, to submit it to him in C-249. "All borrowed material will be returned at the end of the show," Smith said.

Fourth and final exhibition of the semester, he added, will be the year's collection of the photography students' best work in all photography classes. These displays will be on for a period of from one month to six weeks, and will all be held in the Cloud Hall gallery.

Easter Vacation To Start Tomorrow

Because of Easter vacation, tomorrow and Friday, there will be no issue of The Guardsman next Wednesday, April 9, Pat Metsack, Editor-in-Chief of The Guardsman, said today.

The next scheduled publication date is Wednesday, April 16, with no further interruptions until finals week in June.

Classes will be resumed as usual next Monday, April 7.

'Crichton' Debuts Admirably; Play Resumes April 11

Covered by radio, television, and newspapers all over the Bay Area, The Admirable Crichton made its initial bow here last Friday and Saturday nights.

The play resumes after a break for Easter and will be staged again on two weekends, April 11 and 12, and 18 and 19. There will be a special performance for an invited audience during Public Schools Week.

Major difficulties in set construction, the grouping of a large cast on a small stage, and the numerous last minute problems "that always come up' were overcome by the cooperation of all hands, Michael Griffin, director of the production, said.

Griffin pointed out that the stage settings require three separate sets, all completely different, and that the first act set had to be used again in the fourth act. "Coupled with the fact that we use no curtain, this made for some very interesting scene changes right in front of the audience," he commented.

The scenes shift from Lord Loam's manor house to a desert island in the tropics, to a rustic hut the castaways build, and finally back to the same house seen in the first act.

Griffin paid several compliments to his production staff. In particular, he congratulated Jeanne Graham for her costume designs and Tanya Soleimani for her work as wardrobe mistress in keeping costumes presentable; and Leah Pashoian and Marilyn Banchieri for their help in sewing and fitting them.

Griffin also praised the efforts of Chuck Huntley, who overcame many of the problems of set design, and John Rose, who set up the music for the production. "Rose did the music for the last production, also," Griffin said, "while Huntley is invaluable in the fine points of stagecraft."

The present production is a comical fantasy on the woes of an English hutler who has a firm belief in society's caste system. He deplores his master's democratic ideas that servants are equal to anyone else. He particularly dislikes the idea that they have tea once a month in the drawing room of the manor house with the lord and his daughters acting as hosts. A shipwreck on a desert island, many love affairs, a nosy old woman and a falsified book all contribute to the hilarity of the play.

During the intermission, tea and real English style crumpets were served by costumed hostesses from Delta Psi and Phi Beta Rho sororities.

Rose plays the title role of Crichton, while Jordy Cooney and Miss Graham are among those who assist him. Other important roles included Fred Fisher, Miss Pashoian, Miss Banchieri, Dave Tipton, David Terry, Virginia Rae and Josephine Wall.

Others in the large cast include Helen Gretzki, Ann Osorno, Madeleine Mirow, Virginia Evans, Dolores Duran, Jon Levinson, Bruce Johnson, Don Whistler, Miss Soleimani, Wendy Heintz, Karen Harms, John Baker, Faye Fountain and Bob Carpenter.

The curtain (imaginary) goes up at 8 p.m. sharp, and admission is by Associated Student card. General admission is $1.

Awards Received By H&R Members

Ten awards ranging from $100 to $250 were received by members of the Hotel and Restaurant department March 21, Larry Wong, secretary of the H&R Foundation, announced recently.

The winners included Ed Norris, International Minerals Corporation Scholarship; Al Matthews, Executive Stewards and Caterers Association Scholarship; Cari Castro, the Duncan Hines Award; Tom Hamill, Robert Nonini, Shoren Fenton, Donald McDonald, Hisao Yamano (2nd award), John Delman (3rd award), and Philipp Rauscher (4th award) for the Harvey Toy Hotel awards.

Overcrowded Schools Will Be Major Problem In 1960

(Editor's Note: Editorials are like spinach in that people who would most benefit from them are the ones who are least likely to read them. So goes the old story in regard to many things, i.e., education. This particular editorial will definitely affect most students of this college, yet few of them will pay much attention to it.

(This editorial attempts only to present a problem that has just become evident; this problem will soon become critical. It is the big problem of "overcrowdedness" in schools. It affects the future of their children and of their children's children.)

• • •

BECAUSE of overcrowdedness, subtle changes in college curriculum are becoming more and more evident each day. Universities and the non-state-supported colleges are in slow, not too obvious degrees, increasing entrance fees, requiring more specialization in entrance courses, and higher score in entrance exams. Why, asks Mr. Citizen. The answer is simple; colleges, both of the two-year and four-year variety are becoming overcrowded and something must be done. Average classrooms now seat from 30 to 45 students; lecture halls in the larger universities seat 800 students. This is 1958; what will happen in 1960-64 when a great number of World War II babies reach college age?

Overcrowded educational facilities are a problem. A problem that will get worse and not better. Because of encouragement from different sources, more and more high school graduates will be attending college. The immediate solution to this problem is only being hinted at. Of the many suggested solutions we will mention only two or three.

Increased fees seem to be a prime suggestion among private colleges and universities. This sounds like a reasonable answer but, what of the many intelligent students who would be unable to afford higher fees? For the time being, two-year colleges in California represent a guarantee of higher education; later they may not. The two-year program set up in California is outstanding and almost unique. As the law is stated, no one who has been graduated from high school, or who is over 21 can be refused admission to a junior college. There is nothing in the state code, however, that states that the grade point average now required for continued enrollment cannot be raised.

A raising of standards would weed out goof-offs, mate-hunters, and students who just "don't have it," but is this the answer that is being searched for?

More specialization in required entrance courses is another of the suggestions. With all the current discussion about Sputniks, ICBM's and Russian advancement, it is easy to guess just what courses will be intensified. Mathematics, languages and sciences will be among the first. This is again an excellent suggestion, but what of the talented student who is not interested in science but in the liberal arts —music, literature and painting? Not everyone has "what it takes" for math and the like.

Higher scores, grade point averages and the like present a third way of licking the problem, but here there seems to be too many loopholes. Again, there is the talented student who has a cold the day of the test and gets a C instead of a B. This student has all there is to get from the course, but he gets a C. The student next-to-him has memorized the book and receives an A. Who is to say which of the two students has the ability and intelligence to be the scientist or the workman?

Of course, this problem is not yet critical. However, in a few years it will be. Children of future generations may be deprived of college educations because the schools are overcrowded; because Mr. Jones can pay a higher tuition that Mr. Smith, Jones' kids can go to college; because Sally won the scholarship and Peg did not, Sally can go to college. This is the problem that faces everyone. The people of the United States and the students here at the college are aware of it; what will they do about it?

Shots At Random

By Tom Tatera

BASIN STREET, New Orleans. This is where it started. An off-beat sound, pitched sweet and sour, that writhed in the smoke and gentle roar of local night clubs. The combination of a slide trombone, a shrill trumpet, a smooth and mellow clarinet that reached to heaven and back, a set of drums and a tinkling piano.

They called this music the blues at one time. Since then it has been more specifically titled, and its fame has spread from New York to San Francisco. They now call it Dixieland, spelled with an "e." The Blood Drive Rally poster in the cafeteria last week called it D-i-x-i-l-a-n-d, without the "e." This is bordering on the sacrilegious.

• • •

WAFFLE, WAFFLE. Who's got the waffle? Anybody interested in participating in this confusing little game should drop in to the cafeteria some morning, preferably around 7:40 o'clock, and try ordering one of those indented hotcakes. But don't depend on making the 8 o'clock class, unless you want to eat the waffle on the way up hill. It takes them from 10 to 15 minutes to prepare the delicacy and serve it.

LAST WEEK'S middleweight championship bout proved two very good points. Basilio can take the rough going, and Robinson, the old man, can still bounce after 15 rounds. Congratulations, "old Fella."

SUGAR RAY ROBINSON met and defeated Carmen Basilio last week, and millions listened breathlessly via radio. But during this broadcast a great tragedy occurred; her name was Dr. Joyce Brothers of "64" fame.

She sat at ringside with the sports-caster and, before the pugilists began, spoke about both boys. After a very exciting round, the sportscaster handed the mike to her and asked her to comment about it.

Miss Brothers then proceeded to spout the life story of Carmen Basilio. We're willing to bet that she was all prepared before the contest and couldn't say anything except what she memorized prior to the fight. If we can't keep women in the home, at least let's keep them out of the boxing ring.

Donation, Talent Responsible For Forum Magazine

By Ray Hackett

Take an anonymous 20-dollar donation, a group of students and a faculty adviser; blend with intelligence, talent, resourcefulness and inspiration; let simmer for a while as nature takes its course, and the result is a recipe for Forum, the college's literary magazine.

San Francisco Junior College, as the college was known then, opened its portals in 1935. Almost immediately a discussion group grew up among the students.

The group, which discussed everything from absoluteness to nothingness, was known as Forum Club. Its discussions were often concerned with controversial matters and many meetings ended with tempers mighty warm.

Dorothy Mercer, the club's first sponsor, recalls one day when the officers of the club asked her if she would then put out a literary magazine; needless to say, she replied in the affirmative.

Dues were collected from members of the club, and with that "anonymous" donation (it was from the soon-to-be-editor) Forum was launched, and a tradition was established.

Since 1937, Forum has been published annually. Forum Club was still primarily a discussion group with Forum, the magazine, appearing at the end of the spring semester. The magazine was mimeographed and sold; in this way it could support itself.

In 1940, Forum editors were asked by the Associated Student President why it was mimeographed and not printed. He received a one word answer, "MONEY!" He then promised the AS would supply the money, and so in 1940 Forum had a "rebirth" in the sense that it was no longer mimeographed but printed.

It was now that Forum as a discussion group began to fade, and when it did Miss Mercer decided to "fade" with the discussion group. Catherine Connolly, instructor in the English department, became its sponsor.

Forum has begun its work this year and its editor, Alger Doane, is accepting literary works until next Monday. They can be left in C-331A, Miss Connolly's office.

It has been 21 years since the first Forum. These have been 21 long years of student thinking. By reading Forums through the years, one can trace the thinking of students.

Education Key To Neutrals' Future Stand

By Don Seratti

IF THEY'RE not with us, they're against us."

This statement has recently gained prominence through much too frequent usage in this country's relations with the neutral, uncommitted nations of the world.

With the United States and the USSR in virtually a class by themselves militarily and economically, the world is now, for all practical purposes, divided into three segments —the democratically inclined nations, the Communist bloc, and the neutral countries who represent a huge portion of the earth's population.

It is this third segment, comprising more than one billion people, that constitutes the key to world power in the struggle between the democratic and totalitarian nations. In other words, whichever side gains control over these people and their vast territories and natural resources, will have what amounts to a 2-1 lead over its adversary in the race for world control. As things stand now, this crucial area is being split three ways, with such countries as Libya and Iraq siding with the West, Egypt and Syria leaning Eastward, and India and Indonesia remaining neutral.

Because of their virtual ignorance of the subject and their subsequent indifference regarding the peoples of these nations and their problems, most Americans now find it difficult to understand why such nations choose to remain in the middle of the tug-of-war between democracy and communism.

They cannot comprehend why these peoples don't instantaneously realize the advantages of our way of life and declare themselves on our side. They often feel that the people who refuse to align themselves with the countries practicing democracy evince a predilection toward communism by virtue of their actions. Hence, the "If they're not with us, they're against us" idea.

No theory could be more erroneous. That these neutral countries not only ignore the West's admonitions against communism but openly establish relations with the Soviet bloc, does not necessarily mean they favor the Communistic Doctrine, way of life, or system of government. It means that they are merely exercising their right to investigate the rival systems and choose the one in which they find the most appeal.

It should be remembered that in certain areas of the world, where the popuiation has lived under absolute rulers through the centuries, many people have never experienced democracy and scarcely know what it is.

An aristocrat in India once said, "If our country adopts democratic principles, I will no longer be able to keep my servants against their will. In that case, I hope our country remains as it is today."

Also, in countries which have an alarmingly low literacy rate, the people must not be criticized for not knowing the dangers of making overtures to the Soviet bloc. To "the man on the street" in Indonesia, Afghanistan or Syria, the world ends at the boundaries of his homeland matters. His main concern is not a Russian massacre in faraway Hungary or an American loan to distant Britain; he is too busy thinking about the productivity of his farm or the welfare of his family.

We must not be so eager to foist democracy on these peoples that we upset traditions and cultures that have existed in Asia and Africa since the time this country was a barren wasteland.

People of the underdeveloped countries who are neither educated nor informed, have the prerogative of remaining neutral and of making their own choice of allegiance when they are good and ready. Instead of deploring their "anti-West" inclinations, it is our responsibility to initiate economic aid to these nations, coupled with a program attempting to prove to them the merits of democracy as opposed to totalitarianism.

If these people become sufficiently educated and still refuse to follow our example, it will be time to examine the principles of democracy and discover if we are giving these uncommitted peoples a good example, to follow.

Adopted American Earns His Vote

Present Day Buck Rogers, Von Braun, Hurls First US Missile Into Space

By George Grasso

On the third day of October, 1942, a group of dedicated German scientists fired an A-4 (later named V-2) 60 miles straight up and into the borders of outer space. That was 16 long years ago.

After the war, the United States acquired from Germany the finest rocket team in the world, headed by Werner Von Braun who had gone to work for the V-2 project at the age of 19.

American interest in rockets was next to nothing, and these valuable men were incorporated into the Army missile service and assigned to putter around with old V-2's.

When the United States finally decided to enter the race for the satellite with the geophysical year, two vehicles were considered. They were the Navy's Vanguard and Von Braun's Jupiter Redstone, which was a direct descendant of the V-2 which had terrorized England.

Von Braun was sure he could do the job, and he begged for the opportunity, but the project turned into a beauty contest and the sleeker, more beautiful Vanguard was chosen for the assignment.

When Russia launched her sputniks, American turned her eyes to the sleek, beautiful Vanguard for salvation of prestige. But instead of a satellite firing, the world cynically noted that a new-type submarine had been launched at Cape Canaveral.

When the Vanguard 2nd failed, after a few months later, America, in desperation, finally decided to give Von Braun the green light.

Although he had been working on a simpler, more primitive rocket than the Vanguard, he had been keeping himself prepared in the event that he got the call.

Within 80 days, the plain, stubby, Jupiter C, with some 25 years of German and American science behind it, shot the Explorer I into orbit.

The Vanguard is superior to the Jupiter! Even though the Redstone's satellite is 10 times heavier than the Vanguard's, the Vanguard is a superior, more advanced vehicle, and should soon start to out-perform its stubby counterpart.

Ignorant Promoters, Managers Hurt Ring

RAMBLINGS

By Nick Peters

Ram Track, Baseball Handicapped By Rains

AMERICA'S professional boxing picture, as it stands today, is one which no red-blooded glove fan can be proud of.

There have been too many instances of ill nature and ignorance on the part of many boxers, fighters, and referees, and if the setup isn't drastically reorganized the sport may very well be in for a great fall, both in fan interest and boxing talent.

The great rash of "fix" accusations that label many matches, including the recent championship qualification tiff between Virgil Akins and Isaac Logart, certainly don't hand any credit to the sport. Also prevalent on the boxing front are "hometown decisions" whereby a certain boy is given a definite edge because he's fighting in his locality.

When fight managers instead of a qualified committee (not the International Boxing Club) start to run the glove game it's a bad omen. Cus D'Amato, Floyd Patterson's publicity-seeking mentor, stated just recently that "Machen (Eddie) and Pastrano (Willie) will never be allowed to fight Floyd." Such a remark must be considered ignorant, since Machen and Pastrano are rated number one and two, respectively, behind the champ; but since the almighty D'Amato feels the boys aren't good enough for the champ, he apparently feels that they haven't earned the right. Could he be scared of the two top challengers.

At any rate, it isn't up to him to decide who will fight Patterson, but instead a fighter who is worthy of a title shot should automatically be allowed a chance for the crown.

It's a crime when a person like Pete Rademacher, with no prpfessional experience whatsoever is given a championship fight when a boxer like Machen, who has come up the hard way, is completely ignored. In Rademacher's case it was a matter of drawing a crowd, since crowds in the Washington area flocked by the thousands to see their "hometown" boy combat the champ for all the marbles.

For that matter, a promoter can sign-up a 7-3 giant (cite the case of South Africa's Larry Potgetier) and use him to draw the crowds, but he won't get far if he can't fight. It was a definite fallacy that allowed the first Rademacher - Patterson fight to come off, but now that Patterson's camp is thinking of giving the Olympic champ another try instead of either Machen or Pastrano, D'Amato and company should be overruled.

Let's give American fans the type of boxing they deserve, wherein challengers are accepted on a merit basis, important fights are kept away from hometown arenas, and the entire boxing picture is supervised by a competent committee of honest citizens.

An obvious abundance of precipitation which has enveloped the Bay Area these past few weeks has thrown the entire Big Eight Conference athletic schedule into a tizzy. What with local diamonds and ovals submerged in water there have been very few "dry" days in which baseball contests and track meets have been completed as scheduled.

It's a shame, particularly on the Ram front, since the breaking of many track records has been hampered because of lack of training and competition. On the diamond, effectiveness is sharpened through constant play; therefore wet conditions have resulted in rusty ballplayers, through no fault of their own.

With the coming of the Giants to our berg many new fans have suddenly become interested in our national pastime. To the new filberts who wants to get an appraisal of the different teams, several baseball publications are available giving team rosters and biographies of the outstanding performers.

Among the better are Street and Smith's Baseball Yearbook, The Dell Baseball Annual, and The True Baseball Yearbook. To the real red-hot the St. Louis Sporting News, a weekly newspaper, is a must. In it one will find a complete rundown on all professional baseball from the low minors to the pinnacle of diamond success—the major leagues.

College Faculty Members Klemmer, Fischer, Schwarz, Gaddy, Conlan Had Illustrious, Varied Athletic Careers

By Pat O'Shaughnessy

Since its birth in 1935, many are the conference banners of victory which have been gloriously carried aboard the campus by hard-hitting Ram athletes.

Such spectaculars as Ollie Matson, Burl Toler and Willie Hudson have permanently established the Red and White as contenders to be reckoned with from as far away as Timbuctu. But few and far between, it seems, are the citizens of Ramdom who are aware of the achievements of the "unsung heroes" of our athletic machinery — the coaches.

Head grid mentor, Grover Klemmer, was by no means a "silk stocking athlete" in his collegiate years at U.C. As a fleet-footed halfback aboard the rosters of "Pappy Waldorf's barnstorming Golden Bear eleven, he climbed aboard the all-PCC bandwagon at the conclusion of his final year at Berkeley in 1940. Aside from this, he was also one of the mainstays behind Paul Brown's star-studded Great Lakes delegation of football greats, throughout the war years.

Apparently pigskin glory was not enough to satisfy the U.C. great, though, for in the spring of '41, before graduating from the Berkeley campus, Klemmer literally "burned up" the cinders, tearing through the 440-yard dash in the incredible time of 46 seconds flat, setting a new world's records which he still shares with George Rhoden of Sioux Falls, Iowa, and Herb McKeneiy of Jamaica.

"Bulldog" Bill Fischer, former Ram diamond skipper, now a member of the college's counseling staff, is probably one of the roughest linemen ever turned loose on a gridiron from the Moraga hills of St. Mary's College. Heavily nominated for All-American honors on both A.P. and Grantland Rice polls, his collegiate "foot-brawling" drew to a somewhat infelicious close when he was forced to decline an invitation to appear in the East-West Shrine classic because of an injury received late in the season.

Fischer's love of the game has never left him, though, for he, as who is not, fervently to their easy chairs on New Year's afternoon, praying in vain that our Ducks would pull one of the greatest upsets in the history of the game, will remember that it was the same Bill Fischer, who was so highly honored as a Galloping Gael, who umpired this most unforgettable of all Rose Bowl classics.

As St. Mary's immortal Johnny "Slip" Madigan told this reporter, "Second only to Larry Bettencourt (All-American, 1927), Willie was the toughest Gael of 'em all." Then the now millionaire East Bay construction boss added with a laugh, "Didn't look so tough down Pasadena way for the Rose Bowl, though, did he? Seems like that old barrel chest has kind'a dropped about a foot and a half over the years!"

The University of San Francisco's footballing Dons hold claim to the pigskin abilities of Alex "Black Panther" Schwarz, one of the meanest tackles to come off "the hill top" in many a year, and Jack Gaddy, whose glue fingers proved completely invaluable in the West's 21-13 undoing of a rugged Eastern contingency in the Shrine classic of 1933.

When inquiring about the feats of Fischer, the added comment tossed in by the inimitable "Slip" Madigan was one that really set our eyebalis to popping: "If you're writing on Gael greats at the college, whatever you do, don't overlook my boy, Louie Conlan, your president out there. He was one of the finest all-around athletes ever to don the Red and Blue."

These are but a few of the talented athletes now holding positions of renown aboard the college faculty. A more extensive investigation would indubitably produce enough material for a publication outweighing the dictionary in both words and context. The few mentioned are no longer kids, but their deeds will live on forever. That only adds cogency to the words of George Bernard Shaw: "The only trouble with youth is that it is wasted on the young."

Ram Golfers To Meet Rival Oakland April 11

City College's varsity golf team has launched three matches, edging by with close scores while winning two and losing one. The linksmen will be meeting Oakland on Friday, April 11, at Hardin Park.

The Rams lost out in a close match to Modesto with an 8½ - 6½ final score. The college also defeated San Jose 8-7, and Marin 8-7 in practice tilts.

Rated as the top scorers are Bob Patterson, Elden Davis, Charles Pierce and Tony Aglioio, all who shoot in the low 80's. Shooting below 90 are Gordon Gruber, Gene Krome, John White, Everette Hintz and Wray Kimball.

Coach Grover Klemmer's golfers will meet Stockton April 25, San Mateo May 2, and on May 9 in Santa Rosa the Big Eight Conference championship will be held.

Last Friday's Santa Rosa match will be covered in the next issue.

Fraternity Loop Still Tied; CAB League Started

By Dave Smith

Scoring the most points in a single game this year, Gamma Phi - Ypsilon fraternity overwhelmed Beta Phi Beta 116-11 last Tuesday night in intramural basketball league play in the women's gymnasium.

This win upped the Gammas' record to 3-0, but they are still tied for first place with Alpha Phi Epsilon, which has the same record. The Alpha Phi's picked up their third win after a close 37-32 battle with a determined Alpha Kappa Rho team.

Zeta Phi Sigma took its second forfeit win when Tau Chi Sigma failed to show. The Zeta's are in third place with a 2-0 record. Phi Beta Delta broke the three-way tie for fourth place with Tau Chi Sigma and Beta Tau when they beat Alpha Sigma Delta, 70 to 18.

The Club Activities Board basketball league started last week, but scores were not available at press time.

Non-Prejudiced Giant Baseball Team Excellent Representative Of Cosmopolitan San Francisco

By Nick Peters

It has been proven that San Francisco is one of the most cosmopolitan cities in the world, therefore it's quite fitting that this great metropolis lay claim to the most cosmopolitan professional baseball team in existence—the Giants.

At the start of spring training the San Francisco Giants resembled the United Nations, claiming seven members who were born outside the United States proper. Their nearest rivals for this honor, Washington's Senators, have five foreign members on their roster.

Recently, however, the Giants traded Dominican Republic's Ossie Virgil to Detroit, bringing their foreign list to six. It is interesting to note, though, that Washington's quintet all hail from Cuba, whereas the Giant contingency comes from five different countries.

The most prominent Giant immigrant is outfielder Bobby Thomson, who was born in Glasgow, Scotland. A 12 year man in the National League, Thomson's greatest claim to fame was "the shot heard 'round the world," his ninth inning three-run homer giving the Giants the 1951 NL pennant in the playoff game against Brooklyn.

Another member of this troupe is an All-Star cricket player from Nassau, Bahamas, one Andre Rodgers. A Giant scout saw him pulverize the ball in a cricket match a few years back and decided that the lad should be given a tryout. At 23 he still has a long way to go, but if his hitting improves he may be first club shortstop this season.

South America takes credit for the talents of pitcher Ramon Monzant, who lists Maracaibo, Venezuela, as his birthplace. The fiery righthander has looked good all spring and should be one of Bill Rigney's starting flingers.

Catcher Vaimy Thomas, who is fighting for the first string backstop role, comes from Christiansted, St. Croix, in the Virgin Islands. To date the aggressive Thomas has been one of the most inspirational performers in the Phoenix camp, typifying the spirit of most foreign-born athletes in this country.

The Isle of Puerto Rico claims two starters on the Giants nine. Temperamental pitcher Ruben Gomez and rookie first sacker Orlando Cepeda are the two representatives from the land of sugar cane and moonlit Caribbean nights. The 30-year-old Gomez has been a steady Giant starter for the last couple of years, posting a 15-13 mark last semester.

Cepeda, the spring training sensation, has been clouting the pelota like he means business, accounting for eight round - trippers in 18 Cactus League contests. Unlike the yearly rookie flashes-in-the-pan it's a good bet that the Cuban has the mettle to become a top-notch star.

Take these six hopefuls, add them to the "American-born foreigners" like Antonelli (Italian), Jablonski (Polish), and O'Connell (Irish), mix them at the world's crossroads (San Francisco), and you'll have a ball club comprised of many different races, colors, and creeds joined together for a common goal—to please you and I, the cosmopolitan San Francisco fans.

RA Group Attends Asilomar Meet

The Recreation Association, which offers co-ed sports to interested Associated Students, has been moderately active this semester, according to Ann Marie Casey, RA adviser.

The association's more recent activities have included a fencing match with Lincoln High School, staged on March 20. The match resulted in a loss for the women, but the men came through on top.

Last Thursday a volleyball game was scheduled with Mission High School, and was played here at the college.

Miss Casey said that volleyball and fencing are not the only active groups in the RA. The modern dance class has also been busy and will probably stage a program at a later date. The folk dancing section meets every Friday during college hour.

One of the highlights in the RA calendar was a three-day conference held as Asilomar, March 21, 22 and 23. The conference was open to RA and Girls' Athletic Association groups from California, Arizona and Nevada. Women chosen to represent the college's RA were Beverly Wilson, Sandra Simonian, Linda Ryan, Juanita Miranda and Caroidean Tollefsen.

Scanlon Clashes With Easter In Lightweight Go

In what may well be the Bay Area's top lightweight clash of the year, Irish Bobby Scanlon, a student at the college last semester, will face rugged Luke Easter in a ten-round go at the Richmond Auditorium tomorrow night.

A fight between these two talented aspirants of Joey Brown's 132-lb. crown has been in the making for quite a spell and is termed in boxing jargon as a "natural," since both boys have built up impressive ring reputations while "playing for pay" out of local stables.

Since migrating to San Francisco from his native Buffalo, New York, the handsome Scanlon has compiled an incredible record of 28 victories without defeat, including a pair of wins over two former lightweight titleholders, Wallace "Bud" Smith and Lauro Salas.

Easter, who came out west from Pennsylvania, boasts a successful professional record, losing but two fights in what promises to be an illustrious glove career. He has won 10 battles.

Training commitments have forced Scanlon to evade the college this spring semester, but the aggressive gladiator hints registration in the fall. He is currently assisting intramural boxing coach Roy Diederichsen in teaching the college's amateur glovemen "a few tricks of the trade."

Netmen Play Vital Match Next Week

Next week's tennis match with San Mateo's Bulldogs looms as the most important net fray of the season for the college netters. It will be played next Wednesday at Balboa Park.

San Mateo is one of the strongest teams the Rams will have to face this season, and if the college team has any hope of winning the Big Eight title they will have to defeat their rivals from the peninsula. San Mateo's power lies mainly in their overall strength, while the Rams' big asset is their two' big men, Jim Watson and Nick Scharf.

The Roma next match is with Stockton on Friday, April 11, at Balboa Park. The following week the college team plays a below average Modesto team, at Modesto, while the college's netters close their league season against a surprisingly strong Oakland team on April 25.

On Tuesday, March 25, the Rams met Sacramento at Balboa Park and completely overpowered their foes, 7-0, for the Ram's second league win. Winners were Watson, 6-1, 6-0; Scharf, 6-0, 6-0; Vic Sasehin, 6-1, 6-2; Fred Watters, 6-1, 6-0; Jim Howard, 6-0, 6-3, in the single matches, while the doubles teams of Scharf-Sasehin and Watson-Watters won 6-0, 6-0, and 6-1, 7-5, respectively.

Pledging Preparations Drawing To Finale As IFC-ISC Members Anticipate Coming Hell Week

By Jerry Redford

WITH but ten days left before the beginning of Hell Week, the fraternity and sorority pledging programs are drawing to a close, and preparations are being made for the initiation of new members into their respective groups.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity held a meeting Monday in B-2 in order to complete plans for a luau to be held Saturday at Dick Saroukan's home. Ratification of a revised constitution also took place at that time. New officers of the fraternity since the Fall semester elections are Jerry Redford, elevated from pledge master to vice-president, Bill Johnson, treasurer, and Rich Brandt, pledge master.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority held its rushee dinner last Sunday to conclude the rushing program, except for the preferential social hour to be held next week. The dinner was held at the Wawona Club House, with the theme of Buttons and Bows. Entertainment was presented by Wendy Tibbe, with her guitar, and by the Kappa Rho trio, composed of Dave and Larry Vargo and Dick Quinlan.

Gamma Phi Ypsilon fraternity set March 24 and 29 as their first and second pledging affairs. The former was a stag get-together, while the latter was a date affair. Plans are now being completed for pledging activities.

Phi Beta Rho sorority held a joint meeting recently with Beta Tau fraternity which turned out very well. Plans are now being made for another joint between the two organizations. Pledge mistress Carole Taylor is now working with her committee on plans for Hell Week.

The Filipino Club held a special election last week in order to choose a new president. Elected president was Chamberlin Febre, former president of the International Relations Club. Other officers include Ester Los Banos, vice-president; Nati Amoroso, secretary; Sonia Sigson, treasurer; Panchin Santos, publicity chairman, and Benny Mendoza and Leo Pagkaliwagan, sergeant-at-arms. Plans for an acquaintance party are in progress now.

Delta Sigma Tau sorority held its rush dinner last Sunday at the home of Marie Aeneral. The members are now in the progress of making plans for their welfare project and pledge week.

Gamma Sigma Sigma sorority is planning a pledge ceremony tonight at the home of Betty Cooke. A social get-together will follow for sisters and new pledges.

Delta Psi sorority had a successful luncheon at The Village last week. Sisters are preparing for their third affair at the home of Audrey Fones in the near future.

Deadline for all club news is Wednesday at 12 o'clock in The Guardsman office, S-304.

Alumni Group To Aid Horticulture Society Students

The Horticulture Society recently organized its first Alumni Association under director Harry E. Nelson for the purpose of bringing together former students and present members of the society in a common interest, according to Roosevelt Eatmon, Horticulture Club president.

This organization is of great value to members both past and present, he stated, because it ties them together and enables those now in business to help the current students.

The society sponsored a gathering March 24 of all members, including night students and those from the flower shop. Hank Sciaroni, San Mateo County farm adviser, was the guest and spoke on the qualifications, changing demands, and the need for specialization in the horticulture field. According to Eatmon, Sciaroni is "the most informed man in his profession." More meetings with guest speakers will be held in the future at different intervals, he added.

The organization is also looking forward to the annual Spring scholarship award presented by the Alice Eastwood Foundation to the most outstanding Horticulture student. The scholarship, amounting to $100, will be given on the basis of competition within the college and recommendation by director Nelson, Eatmon said. The actual presentation will be made sometime during the next semester at the Horticulture Center.

Field trips have been planned by the society, the first one being to the Ferry-Morse Seed Company in Mountain View Tuesday, April 8. Numerous other trips to the University of California's Botanical Gardens (April 29), Golden Gate Park (April 15), East Bay nurseries (April 22), and the Avasino-Mortenson Cut-Flower growers (May 20), are also scheduled, he added.

Eatmon mentioned that through the constant assistance and advice of Nelson, the students have become more intensely interested in all Horticulture events. "Mr. Nelson is more than just an instructor," he commented, "he puts in extra time to see that the students are helped in all phases of work in the department."

While the members often obtain spare time jobs correlating with horticulture, Nelson's guidance and "personal interest" in each student helps them to achieve permanent employment in the profession, Eatmon added. Positions including nursery inspector, plant and quarantine inspector, among others, are often made available to members through the efforts of Nelson.

"It's instructors and events like these that cause the society to come alive," Eatmon commented.

April 11 Meeting To Set Soph Week Plans

A Sophomore Class meeting will be held on Friday, April 11, during college hour in S-311 in order to form committees for the Soph-Prof softball game, to be held Friday, May 23, and the Soph Ball to be held Saturday night, May 24, according to Jerry Redford, class president here.

"I am very happy to announce," Redford said, "that the Soph Ball will be held at The Village, which has just recently been redecorated. Further details of the ball will be available after the class meeting," Redford added.

Mahanoy City, a town in Pennsylvania, has a population of 13,442.

18 Campus Clubs To Meet April 11 At College Hour

By Margaret Craton

With 18 clubs recognized and chartered by the Club Activities Board, all organizations will meet at college hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m., Friday, April 11, according to the official college hour schedule.

The 18 fully recognized organizations are Canterbury Club, which meets in S-132; Lutheran Club, S-256; Alpha Phi Omega (men's service fraternity), S-211; Engineering Society, S-200; Forum, S-257; Pick and Hammer (geology), S-45;

The Rally Committee, B-2; A Cappella Choir, B-6; Men's Glee Club, B-6; and Women's Treble Clef, B-6.

The following clubs meet in Cloud Hall: California Student Teachers Association, C-269; Chess Club, C-114; Hillel Foundation, C-221; Veterans Association, C-268; Alpha Gamma Sigma (scholarship society), C-232-233; while the Horticulture Society meets in the Greenhouse, and the Recreation Association in the women's gymnasium.

President of the CAB, Adolph Hersvick, said last week that although there are at present other clubs meeting on campus, they have not yet fulfilled all the necessary requirements to be sanctioned by the CAB.

The CAB encourages and aids all activities of the individual organizations for the benefit of the college as a whole, he declared, and membership is open to all recognized organizations.

Each organization on campus is required to send a representative to attend the CAB meetings which are held twice weekly, on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 1 to 2 p.m. in B-2. Failure to attend these meetings is punishable. A written warning is sent to representatives who are absent on three occasions. After five absences, representatives lose their voting power for 30 days and organizations are declared "off campus" in the event of seven absences.

Newly formed clubs include the Westminster Student Fellowship, open to those interested in the Christian faith (particularly Presbyterians), and the Wesley Group. The latter, although still in its "budding stage," has already held an introductory meeting. This group of Methodists meets in C-105.

City X-Ray Unit Due For College

Chest X-ray examinations for all new students will be given on April 16, 17 and 18, Gloria Anderson, the college nurse, stated today.

"The mobile unit furnished for the X-rays by the San Francisco TB and Health Association will be parked by the women's gymnasium for the first two days and will be moved to B-2 for the last day," Miss Anderson added.

"All new students must be X-rayed," Miss Anderson said, "and those who are absent will be given notice and must go down to the Health Department and have their chests X-rayed there."

Faculty members are also authorized to receive the chest X-rays but only new students are allowed to take them.

This is a process that takes place each semester and is an important part of preventative medicine, Miss Anderson pointed out.

"Tuberculosis is still with us," she said, "and in this age-group, it is of vital importance that chest X-rays be given. We have found cases of TB and quite often other conditions were discovered of which the students were unaware. These included such conditions as enlarged hearts and bone tumors. Even cancers can sometimes be detected."

Gamma Sig Now National Sorority

Gamma Sigma Sigma, the college's service sorority, had its constitution approved and was initiated as a national sorority, Phi Chapter, on February 23, according to Shelly Osborne, Gamma Sigma Sigma president.

This sorority has been at the college for four semesters, and was organized by a group of women interested in doing service for the college. The sorority has completed various successful projects, including ushering, serving at registration, hostessing, working on the blood drive and entertaining at veterans hospitals. Each pledge devotes a minimum of 10 hours of work to service projects. Most of this time is spent doing work in the reference section of the college library.

"The purpose of a service sorority is to unite college and university women in the spirit of service—to college and humanity," Miss Osborne said.

The officers of Gamma Sigma Sigma are Erla Theobald, first vice-president; Betty Cook, second vice-president; Diane Olson, secretary-treasurer, and Carol Soffer, historian.

Students Cooperating, Receive Fewer Tickets

Campus Police officers have issued 724 parking citations from February 17 to March 14, Deputy Chief Don Laufer announced last week.

Last semester at this time, the first midterm period, the campus officers issued 990 citations, meaning a decrease of 266 this semester. From March 3 to March 14, there were 428 citations issued.

"The students this semester are cooperating very well with the officers and our parking regulations," Laufer said. He added that "those who park in the college parking areas must have green permits." He also reminded the night students that an officer is checking then.

Doherty, Rogers Voted Cutest Pair

The contest, sponsored by the Freshman class and under the direction of Torres, class vice-president, was the climax to the ball held March 22 at the St. Francis Hotel. Trophies donated by Beta Phi Beta fraternity were presented to the couple and Miss Doherty received two dozen red roses donated by Alpha Phi Epsilon fraternity.

Miss Doherty is a second semester student at the college and is majoring in secretorial business. She is a member of Phi Beta Rho sorority.

Rogers, Inter-Fraternity Council president, is a pre-legal major here at the college. He plans to go to S. F. State College in the future and then to the University of San Francisco. He has been at the college for six semesters and is a member of the Beta Phi Beta fraternity.

The contest was judged by the Freshman Class officers and judged on the couples' dancing ability and how they looked together. Around 600 couples attended. One hundred dollars was made from those who were not AS members, Torres said.

Student Council Offers Six Proposals For Cleanup Campaign; Don Smith To Head Investigation Committee

By Lois Cosden

Six proposals were offered in Student Council last week when attention was devoted to the problem of keeping the campus clean and safe from litterbugs, and Associated Student President Jack Patterson appointed a committee headed by Don Smith to investigate the matter.

The suggestions ranged from direct appeal, to punishment. One plan was to have each member of council and cabinet talk to individual organizations during a specified college hour with the intention of finding a suitable slogan for a poster to publicize a clean-up campaign.

Another solution presented was for Inter-Fraternity Council members to form their own policing committee to maintain cleanliness.

A third idea was to incorporate the IFC, the Inter-Sorority Council and the Club Activities Board into action to submit a poster apiece for competition in winning an award, not named, for the best slogan to spark greater interest.

Parliamentarian Bob Rodriguez interjected an objection here, saying, "It seems we are running the contest stunt into the ground. We shouldn't need to be rewarded for taking pride in the appearance of the college grounds."

Fourth, KCSF would set up a public address system with an announcer alerted to watch and heckle offenders as trashy paths in the Grant Avenue sector chastise erring pedestrians.

Fifth was a direct appeal to clubs, sororities and fraternities to cooperate to solve the situation.

The last alternative was to create a judicial body by constitution to mete out justice to persons violating rules governing neatness of the premises, thereby starting a tri-partisan system instead of the two body government now functioning.

Helping Smith to come up with the right and equitable answers are his committee of Katie Aherne and Jerry Redford.

Publicity Committee representative Linda McArdle displayed a proposed revision of the college Handbook. The changed features are size, five inches by three inches, 112 pages with advertising and pictures.

The motion was made by Bill McDonald to rescind the $1,310.50 Campus Police budget allowance voted at a previous meeting. This posed a legal question. Is a budget approval by council a contract? Dean Ralph Hillsman gave his version of the proper answer as "Once voted upon, and approved by the Dean of Student Activities, AS President, and Finance Chairman, and money is spent, it becomes a legal contract." Chairman Patterson added his interpretation that budgets are expense allowances, not contracts.

If the Campus Police grant of funds is reduced, it will mean the demise of its pistol team because of stoppage of the supply of ammunition. This was tabled to next Tuesday's meeting.

Fashion Show, Tea Presented By AWS April 16

Plans are now being completed for the semi-annual Associated Women Student fashion show and tea to be held on Wednesday, April 16, at 2:50 p.m. in the library of Cloud Hall, Linda McArdle, AWS president, announced today.

Lure Of The Tropics will be the theme for the event, and refreshments and entertainment will be provided.

The fashion show will be presented by King's Specialty Shop, and it will feature everything from sportswear to formals to be modeled by AWS members.

Purpose of the fashion show and tea is to honor the high senior women of San Francisco public and parochial schools, and to acquaint them with the college, faculty women and women students, Miss McArdle added.

Committee chairmen appointed by Miss McArdle include the following: Marilou Von Kleist, programs; Joan White, refreshments; Lorraine Leong, decorations; Eunice Hall and Natalie Hougasian, models; Jane Wong, posters; Kitty Stein, registration; Esmeralda Aguilar, publicity; Diane Christoffersen, invitations; Mary Gilmartin, hospitality, and Hilda Losada, entertainment.

All women students interested in working with one of the committees may do so by signing up in Dean Mary Golding's office, S-160.

Ken Kahn Ugly Man On Campus Winner

With a total of 15,233 votes, Ken Kahn of the Hotel and Restaurant Society was awarded the perpetual and individual trophies for the annual Ugly Man On Campus contest. Brower Dimond, president of the Alpha Phi Omega fraternity, made the presentation at the UMOC dance last Friday.

Following far behind Kahn were Larry Vargo, sponsored by Zeta Chi sorority, and Josh Williams, sponsored by Alpha Phi Epsilon fraternity, with a total of 4,059 and 3,921 votes, respectively. Total money collected in the contest was $316, Dimond said.

William Pappas, Alice Fong Given Junior College Business Awards By Bank Of America

By Kathleen Burns

William Pappas and Alice Fong, both honor students here at the college, have been selected for the Bank of America Junior College Business awards.

These awards, presented to two selected students from accounting and secretarial courses, are presented annually by the Bank of America. It is a statewide program to encourage business department students of two-year colleges in planning their study for a business career and to complete their college program.

The two awards made in each college are $100 cash awards and certicates of recognition to each student. The students selected must have grade point averages among the highest in their occupational field. They must also be majors in their field and have a record of participation and leadership in campus activities.

The two students were chosen by a faculty selection committee. Members of the faculty on the committee were Dean Mary Golding, George Stewart, Harry Frustuck, Margaret Flournoy, Anka Perisich, and Glenn Mercer, chairman of the business department.

Pappas, in his last semester at the college, is originally from Alabama, and is a member of Alpha Gamma Sigma, scholastic honor society. Miss Fong, also in her last semester, is active in the Associated Women Students and Chinese Student Club, of which she is secretary. She is a native of San Francisco, and also a member of Alpha Gamma Sigma.

The $100 awards will be presented by the president of the Bank of America at a dinner tomorrow night in the St. Francis Hotel. Invited to the dinner are the college winners and their families, faculty representatives and prominent educators. Representing the college faculty will be Dr. Lloyd Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction, Dean Golding, Miss Flournoy and Miss Perisich.

Application Date For Scholarships Now This Friday

Application deadline for scholarships totaling $850 available to students of the college this semester has been extended from April 7 to Friday, April 18, Dean Mary Golding announced Friday. Students wishing to apply must have their applications in no later than this date to be eligible for a scholarship, Dean Golding said.

Available are two Denman scholarships of $125 each, for two women students of the college who are graduates of a San Francisco public high school and who have superior grades; an Alice Eastwood floriculture scholarship of $100 for a student enrolled in floriculture, and two $125 Square and Circle scholarships for two students of Chinese ancestry born in San Francisco.

Other scholarships offered are the Cloud scholarship of $50 available to a man or woman student; the Graduating Class of 1957 scholarships of $50 each, to be given to one man and one woman student, and two Chinese Student Club scholarships of $50 each.

Students applying for any of these scholarships, Dean Golding said, must send letters of application to the dean's office, stating in the letter their ambitions, needs and services rendered to the college or community. Women should send letters to Dean Golding in S-150; men should send letters to Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, S-147.

X-Ray Unit Here For 3 More Days

All new students must get their chest X-rays in the next three days, Nurse Gloria Anderson warned today as the mobile unit moved into its assigned area by the women's gymnasium.

Students who do not appear will have to go to the Health Department and have their chests X-rayed there, Miss Anderson emphasized. "The unit will open at 8:30 a.m. and close at 3 p.m., with an hour out for lunch, depending on the rush," she added. It is expected that approximately 1,200 students will be X-rayed in the next three days.

Faculty members are also authorized to receive the X-rays, but new students are the only others who are allowed to take them.

The unit will be parked by the women's gymnasium for the first two days and will move to a spot near B-2 on Friday.

"These X-rays are important to the student as well as the college," Miss Anderson stated, "since tuberculosis is a communicable disease and is transmitted directly from person to person."

Lifeline U.S.A. To Be Featured Friday In S-136

Lifeline U.S.A. is the name of the film scheduled to be shown at the college hour film series this Friday from 10 to 10:40 a.m. in S-136, according to Madison W. Devlin, audio visual aids instructor. The college hour is also highlighted by club meetings, according to the official college hour schedule.

The film shows the growth and development of the Merchant Marine in the United States. Its importance to this country, the benefits achieved by other nations with this kind of transportation, modern operations of loading and unloading and the different stages of transportation through which the cargo has to go are emphasized in this film.

Ships from the principal companies such as McCormick Lines, American President Lines and others are shown in actual operation.

The importance of engineering achievements that facilitate the time and cost of operation such as the Panama Canal and other important features are stressed all through the film.

College hour films are shown in college hour Fridays at 10 o'clock in S-136. Faculty and students are invited, and there is no door charge, Devlin stated.

Blood Donations Top Last Year

170 Pints Collected During Drive

Success, both in the number of donations received and the spirit of the rally, is the word that describes most closely this semester's annual blood drive on March 27 and 28, according to Jim Hecht, blood drive chairman.

Donations totaling 170 pints with 10 more pints still pledged, exceed last year's total of 134 pints. Organizations which won the trophies for the biggest percentage of donations are Inter-Fraternity Council, Beta Phi Beta (13 pints); Inter-Sorority Council, Theta Tau (14 pints), and independent organizations, Veterans Association (25 pints).

Proof that women are not truly the weaker sex is asserted by the fact that the leading sorority bested the leading fraternity by one pint.

Hecht is more than satisfied with the turnout at his rally. "I want to thank everyone who donated blood, and particularly all the organizations and individuals who contributed their time and efforts to make the drive a success," he said.

Tau Chi Sigma fraternity was commended by Ralph O. Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, for the success of the drive.

Hillsman said that although the credit for the success of the drive went to the fraternity as a whole, the drive would not have been possible except for the efforts of Hecht and his committee members, Dick Cottrell and Roland McNeil.

CSTA Demands Top Teachers

By Edward Bing

Ten City College students attended the annual Professional Problems Conference of the California Student Teachers Association in Fresno, March 29. Members of the CSTA chapter here met with 150 student teachers from northern and central California to discuss problems relating to teacher-training and practice.

Guest speaker at the conference was Dr. Irwin O. Addicott, executive dean of Fresno State College. In his opening address on Schools, Satellites and Survival, Dr. Addicott warned that as a result of the Sputnik episode, there is now a greater demand for schools to identify and give more encouragement to the gifted and talented students. This will require alert and better-education teachers at all levels of education, he said.

"Future teachers," Addicott stressed, "must be prepared to recognize the able students and give the proper aid and guidance to the less intelligent." This means colleges, particularly two-year colleges, must offer more courses in education theory and psychology.

This college currently offers one course in education, Introduction To Teaching.

Dr. Addicott commended two-year colleges for making higher education available to the masses at a minimum cost and with adequate day and night courses to include those whose outside obligations normally would prohibit further education.

"We are rapidly becoming a nation of students," he declared; "30 million people are now enrolled in some type of educational course, either full or part-time. We should encourage the able to go on as far as possible so that they will perfect their skills, and try to keep the less able in school as long as possible so that they will be of some benefit to society."

Committee meetings on specific education problems were held on the campus of Fresno State College. Representatives of this college agreed to sponsor several California Education Clubs in surrounding high schools and to explain the teacher-training program to interested junior high school students. An effort will also be made to include more education courses in the Fall semester.

The CSTA, which meets during college hours, enrolls as members those who are to enter the education profession. CSTA aims to supplement the teacher education curriculum at accredited institutions by providing the credential candidate an opportunity to participate voluntarily in the organizational affairs of his chosen profession.

Lure Of Tropics Taken As Theme Of Fashion Show

By Esmeralda Aguilar

With Lure Of The Tropics as a theme, plans are now completed for the semi-annual Associated Women Student fashion show and tea to be held today from 2:50 to 5 p.m. in the library of Cloud Hall, Linda McArdle, AWS president, announced this week.

Purpose of the fashion show and tea is to honor the graduating senior women of San Francisco's public and private high schools, and to enable them to get acquainted with the college, women members of its faculty, and women students in a strictly feminine setting, Miss McArdle said.

Entertainment will be provided, and it will feature modern dance selections by Muriel Shapiro, and selections from South Pacific by Jean Thompson, soloist.

High school seniors scheduled to attend include those from Mission, Lowell, Balboa, Washington, Lincoln, Galileo and Polytechnic.

All women students here are invited to attend, and they will be officially excused from their 3 o'clock classes, Mary Golding, dean of women, said. Special invitations have been sent to all AWS members and to women faculty members.

The fashion show will be presented by King's Campus Shop, and it will include everything from sportwear to evening dresses, to be modeled by AWS members and by members of the sororities and clubs on campus. Each model will have three changes. Background music will be provided by Deanna Thomas on the piano.

Models for the fashion show include Ruby Broadway, Barbara Conti, Hazel Davis, Chloe MacFarland, Sally Hart, Jackie Harrington, Pat Herkner, Marilyn Marino, Renada Marston, Helen Merril, Carol Ng, Rina Panattoni, Carol Spaulding and Karen Shute.

Special decorations will lend a tropical flavor to the affair, Miss McArdle added.

Tea following the fashion show will be served in Smith Hall by pledges from the different sororities on campus, and hostesses will be women students representing all departments of the college.

Committee chairmen include the following: Marilou Van Kleise, programs; Joan White, refreshments; Lorraine Leong, decorations; Eunice Hall and Natalie Hougasian, models; Jane Wong, posters; Kitty Stein, registration; Esmeraida Aguilar, publicity; Diane Christoffersen, invitations; Mary Gilmartin, hospitality, and Hilda Losada, entertainment.

Proper dress for the occasion will be cotton dresses and heels, Miss McArdle declared.

San Francisco Rowing Club Site For Gamma Phi Ypsilon's Ninth Annual Spring Fever Dance Friday

To salute the closing of Pledge Week, Gamma Phi Ypsilon fraternity will host the Ninth Annual Spring Fever, "the best dance of the semester," scheduled to be held this Friday night, April 18, at the San Francisco Rowing Club on 504 Jefferson Street, Karl Griepenburg, fraternity president, stated last week.

"Featured at the dance will be free parking, free food, free liquid refreshments and special entertainment," Bob Venturi, fraternity vice-president, said, "and because the Rowing Club has an unique atmosphere, if the weather permits, couples may dance on the balcony overlooking the bay."

Admission to this springtime affair will be by ticket only, at the cost of $2 per couple. Tickets may be purchased from the booth set up in Smith Hall, at the student bank in Smith Hall, from members and pledges of Gamma Phi Ypsilon, or at the entrance to the dance. "Brilliant" tallies will be given to each lady as she goes through the door, according to Venturi.

Couples will swing and dance to the music of George Vance, a five-piece combo which plays for local colleges dances. The dancing will go on from 9 p.m. to midnight, Venturi added.

Dress for the dance will be "light, gay and semi-formal," he said, in keeping with the spring season. The Rowing Club will be decorated to fit the theme with green and yellow, also the fraternity colors, and other special effects.

"We have spent a lot of time on the dance this year, and I am sure it will be the best dance ever put on by our fraternity," Don Malvestiti, publicity chairman, stated, adding that "everyone is promised a terrific evening."

Photography Show In Cloud Hall Now

History and Scope of Photography, a documentary exhibit dealing with the camera art, its techniques and the role it plays in today's world affairs, may be seen now at the faculty gallery in Cloud Hall.

With the assistance of the college's photography students, the presentation is directed by instructor Emmett F. Smith. It highlights the birth of the camera and the first photographic process developed simultaneously in France and England, in 1839.

Also shown in the Cloud Hall display are reproduction of the famous Matthews Brady's Civil War photographs, as well as some portraits taken in California during the last days of the 18th century.

Scheduled for showing next month is the college's 23-year-old history as seen through pictures and documents in a project Smith has named City College Scrap Book.

Students who have material dealing with the college's historic events are requested to submit it to him, in C-249, for the May presentation. All material borrowed will be returned to their owners, Smith said.

Public Schools Week Presents Opportunity To Observe Schools

EDUCATION, one of the greatest insurances for a better, safer, and a more harmonious future, is well described in this year's Public Schools Week slogan—"of the people, by the people, for the people."

These particular words have been around since the 18th century when the Constitution of the United States was first written. For 169 years these words have applied to the government of our country; it is easy to see, however, that they can simply be adopted to describe the educational system in the U.S. If it's a future that the peoples of the world are looking for, then it is through the educated that they will find it.

Many students are already aware of the fact that the week of April 21 through April 25 has been proclaimed Public Schools Week in San Francisco. For the 39th year this annual event will open the classroom doors of all public schools in the city to all citizens of the city. The interested parents, potential parents, and anyone else who is interested is invited to attend any of the schools and see just what youth is learning.

A special invitation is extended to those who question and attack modern education. It is these people who will most benefit by an experience such as this.

In conjunction with Public Schools Week is the annual Education-Business Day (E-B Day). On this day San Francisco schools will host members of the Chamber of Commerce and business men and women. The college plans an open house day with a morning coffee hour, conducted tours of the campus, and a luncheon.

The college will be open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. and from 7 to 10 p.m. on Thursday, April 24. Again it is mentioned that anyone who is interested may come.

Foresight — Give Away Programs Main Feature On TV

By Ray Hackett

NOW you folks at home can win"—these are becoming familiar words on many of the TV's giant give-away programs. Giving something away seems to be a good way to get and keep listeners and this was best proved on radio.

Bert Parks' Stop-the-Music programs used the device of telephoning listeners at home, asking them a question and awarding them an enormous sum; it would be meager now because of what we're used to, thanks to the "64" question.

This device hurt, hurt so much that the late Fred Allen, who was opposite Stop-the-Music, in desperation offered to his listeners the amount of loot they would lose if Mr. Parks called them while they were listening to him.

Now TV has the quiz programs and the situation is much the same. Arthur "Humility" Godfrey has a contest on his show. Yes, even Arthur is bribing listeners, rather, viewers. The $64,000 Question has now entered the contest period; actually it's not a contest but rather a glorified bingo game with the surname of the viewer used rather than numbers.

Viewers can win as much as $64,000 by playing this game. It's certain now that the giant "we don't want it, you take it" shows are here to stay and thus they will use bribes or contests, it's a matter of semantics, to keep and hold viewers.

On the other hand programs which must compete with these quiz shows will use the contest as a weapon and eventually entertainment may become obsolete and contests will control the airways, and people who "write" TV columns will remain at home viewing programs so they can win contests and retire.

Coming attraction: Get prepared; BKSM is coming.

A STRANGE GIRL called up the other night. She wanted to know if the teen-ager of the house was in. Asked her haughtily (but hopefully) if she were not getting too personal, and the lady replied: "Oh, no. I am just taking a poll. I wanted to get your opinion on Elvis Presley and 'Tab Hunter.'" She got her opinion of Tab and Elvis, all right, including such phrases as "murmuring moron" and "congo-crooner." It was pretty impolite of the gal to hang up the way she did. Without even saying goodby, yet.

Just as well. Have no patience with silly girls who ask silly questions. Would rather keep the telephone line, and door, open for the ones who are getting personal.

You know. Flipped its lid, put its top down. (oowww).

ONE COMMERCIAL, coming up. The coming city elections will find Proposition A, a tax limit increase issue, in the foreground. Up to this time, a certain limit has been set up for the amount of money to be made available to the San Francisco Public School system. Proposition A will ask that the limit be increased, so that more money can be made available for schools.

This extra money will be needed here, as well as throughout the school system, since more and more students are registering at college every year, and more and more teachers and space will be needed to meet their needs. So go out and vote. If you can't because of age, ask your parents to vote. One "Yes" is just as good as another.

Ceramics, Sculpture Classes—An Island Tucked In Far Corner Of Campus—Treasure House Of Beauty

By Lois Cosden

Tucked away in the back pocket of the college campus, just off Marston Avenue, is Annex C. It houses the art department's ceramics, sculpture and jewelry design class.

Much like Alaska or the Hawaiian Islands in relation to the United States, not quite the mainland, but serving as a storehouse of treasure enhancing the national wealth, this cottage's output of creative craftsmanship enhances the college's record of achievement.

Students, under the encouraging guidance of instructors Roy H. Walker and Robert Kovacic, are winning not only city-wide but national recognition for their artistry.

At the last Art Festival held in Columbus Square and sponsored by the San Francisco Art Commission, first and second prizes for ceramics were awarded Walker proteges, Barbara Brooks and Stella Kaufmann. Prize-winning jewelry designs at the show were further monopolized by Annex C occupants, Gerry Reubenstein, Dorothy Green, Connie Crothkopp and Claudia Williams.

Another leaf was added to the crown of laurels last year when Helen Peeke took home second prize for her ceramic entry at the State Fair in Sacramento.

In the national score Winfred Ng won one of four awards given for metal enamel in the Miami show, also in 1957. Gump's selected his work for inclusion in their collection of 2,000 years of Oriental art.

Walker spoke yesterday of the deep urge of the craftsman to create a beautiful, useful object.

"Man needs to re-form and re-state, in his own way, that which has been handed down from former generations or that which is new. The very urge to do so and to be all that a generation feels, thinks and can conceive is, by itself, the sign of a cultured man," he stated.

The cottage is divided into two main rooms, one for jewelry making and the other for pottery. A room adjacent on the east contains an enormous kiln. All shelves and cupboards are filled with clay models in various stages of development.

Some students have started their own ceramics studios and employ others or become foremen of already established plants. A few do research in the field of design, working with architects in mosaics, ceramics, plaques or sculpture. Many graduates enter the teaching profession.

Recreational leadership in community centers is another area which needs persons trained in handicrafts, as do institutions of correction for juvenile delinquents.

"The well-taught artisan opens the mind of a student to all that is basic in art without inhibiting the imagination and creative impulse to form and shape," Walker commented, adding that from developing an abstraction or idea and following it through to its concrete form in materials, one learns to discern good art from bad, what is honest and what is fake.

He established the department of metal arts, ceramics and sculpture here in 1946 after serving with the Air Force engineers in camouflage during World War II.

Examples of Walker's and the classes' productions will be exhibited in the Association of San Francisco Potters show at the De Young museum through May 11.

Court Flagpole New Meeting Spot For All

The leaning tower of City College—not Pisa—soon may rank with other towers of the world. The college flagpole located in the courtyard has not yet rated the San Francisco guidebooks, but it is decidedly the pliace for those students who like leaning.

This tower, which may really be classified as a pole, has, flying from its uppermost part, the pride of the 48. The flag of the United States is certainly something no college should be without, but there is doubt as to whether many students ever look up to see it.

The pole is always being leaned on by the lyric soprano, or any act that happens upon it. It is the official meeting place for in-between-class gag-sessions, snacks, smokes, or just a place to lean—except in the rain.

The problem of where to lean in damp weather is solved by using the Silver Pole, located in the main lobby of the Science Building, as a meeting place. There students can gather and laugh in delight as the rains fall . . .

The Silver Pole tends to be the counterpart of the Grandfather clock in the St. Francis Hotel, or that oversized tick-tock in the Grand Central Station. That is, everyone uses it as a meeting place; and if students stand around long enough, they might see all their friends pass by. (Sort of like the song, "Standing by the Silver Pole, watchin' all your girl friends go by.")

The courtyard pole does not list 15 feet as does the Tower of Pisa, nor has it the beauty of Saint Ignatius Church tower, but it's here, and besides, where else could students lean?

Counterpoint — Khrushchev: A Gremlin From The Kremlin

By Don Seratti

WITH his demotion of Nikolai Bulganin last month, Nikita Khrushchev finally eliminated the last obstacle to his establishing the same brand of one-man rule in Russia for which he so vehemently criticized Joseph Stalin in 1956.

He is now acknowledged as "The New Stalin," as a result of his recent seizure of almost unlimited control of power in the USSR. But he may be more than just "The New Stalin." His expert manipulation of Russia's domestic and foreign policies lead one to believe that "The New Stalin" represents a greater danger to the Western world than the old Stalin ever did.

In his handling of affairs inside the Soviet Union, we find powerful evidence to support the idea that he is more skillful in this field than Stalin.

MVD DOWNGRADED

Probably the best illustration of his deftness is his downgrading of the MVD, the dreaded secret police. This had been Stalin's pride and joy. But in its later years it had terrorized the people to such a degree that nationwide unrest was on the rise; the people were at the breaking point. Khrushchev recognized the danger of possible minor rebellions—a danger Stalin either disregarded or was oblivious to—and took steps to reduce the authority of the secret police, thereby ameliorating much unrest and at the same time appearing in the eyes of the public as the man who had relieved them of this oppressing element.

Arbitrary imprisonment was minimized, some intellectual barriers were lowered, and under Khrushchev's leadership the people of Russia were fed volumes of propaganda, re-instilling in them the national pride that has always been dominant in Russia. It was clear that Khrushchev wanted the people with him, not against him.

Where it once may have taken a Russian peasant four months' wages to buy a new suit, he now can buy one after only three months. Khrushchev has improved the people's lot enough to command their respect and to spur them on to greater efforts.

Where this gremlin from the Kremlin really outshines Stalin is in his foreign policy. Stalin was probably as narrow-minded abroad as he was at home. He had scarcely ever traveled beyond the confines of his homeland, which may explain his highly unimaginative desclsions regarding the spread of communism abroad. His foreign ministers—particularly Molotov—proved dangerously tactless by constantly walking out of meetings, balling at proposals, and stirring up universal enmity toward the USSR.

In direct contrast to these tactics is Khrushchev's active and more practical foreign policy, designed to win friends and influence people throughout the world rather than merely vaunt Russia's power.

HEAVY GAINS MADE

The Soviet Union gained control over Eastern Europe under Stalin, but Khrushchev, in his brief tenure, has made heavy gains for communism in the vital uncommitted countries of Asia and Africa that have the whole free world up in arms. Communist parties, many of which receive active support from Khrushchev, are actually winning elections in many strategic areas as Indonesia and India.

On occasions he slips, and the smiling facade wears away to expose a deep frown. But what concerns the West more every day is that communism under "The New Stalin" and his smile campaign has made greater strides than the real Stalin ever did in its latest bid to gain acceptance throughout the neutral countries of the world.

If you think Stalin was stubborn, relentless, and troublesome, watch out for wily Nikita Khrushchev. He possesses every trick of Joe's, plus many more, and can't wait to use them in the continuing struggle to prove which system is best for the world. And we fit into his plans.

One of the smallest countries in the world is Andorra with a population of 6,500 and an area of 612 square miles. It is located on the border between France and Spain in the Pyrenees mountains.

Track Trio Sets Marks At Santa Barbara

College Baseballers Drop Pair To Sacramento Panthers, 5-1, 7-0, Fall To Last In Big Eight

Lee Eisan's baseball nine travelled to Sacramento last Saturday and ran into a heat wave in the form of the weather and a hard hitting host squad being scorched in both games by excellent Panther pitching.

The locals dropped the first game of the twin bill by a 5-1 score and were blanked in the nightcap, 7-0. This unhappy turn of events left the Rams in the Big Eight cellar with an 0-3 league slate.

In the first game the Capitol City hardballers were paced by hurler Bill Enos, who pitched his team to victory over the luckless city slickers. Earning the hero's robes Enos also led the conquest of the Rams in the second game, being the big gun at the plate.

LEE EISAN, disappointed diamond coach.

The Panthers got off to a good start scoring twice in the initial frame and also added lone markers in the third, sixth, and eighth stanzas.

Outfielder Mike Warnock's single driving in first sacker Bud Williams garnered the college nine its only score of the day. Freddie Glosser went the distance for the Rams and was tagged with the loss.

Sacramento's ehuckers were stingy in the second fray, blanking the Rams in the seven inning windup.

Ram pitcher Earl Fauss was plagued by wildness and his teammates committed several key errors, which eventually spelled defeat for Eisan's charges.

Before Fauss was removed in the fifth inning in favor of George "Tom" Mix, the former Sacred Heart performer had given up seven free rides which helped to account for the 4-0 deficit Mix inherited.

College Golfers Down SR By 8-7

Tied for the first half of the match, the college's varsity golfers, with Gordon Gruber leading the way, downed Santa Rosa for an 8-7 victory.

At the ninth hole, Gruber, putting against leading opponent Simeon Akaka, sank the deciding point in the contest. "It was the closest game I've seen with five boys on each side," Coach Grover Klemmer pointed out. "I believe the boys did their best and I am proud of the way they came out of this situation."

Adding up the strokes for this match, Santa Rosa took 415, while the college took 413. Bob Patterson averaged a 79.6 and Elden Davis did 81.3. Shooting below 85 were Tony Agliolo, Charles Pierce and Gruber.

The squad met West Contra Costa and defeated the linksmen, 9-6. Outstanding low medalist for this match was Gary Lidein. Next on the schedule is the Oakland match on Friday at Harding Park.

April Big Month For Recreation Association

The month of April offers two major events that will be of great interest to members of the Recreation Association, Sandy Simonian, RA president, predicted yesterday.

This Saturday, an RA "first" will be presented in the form of a wiener roast in the outdoor area of the women's gymnasium. Then on Saturday, April 26, the largest state-wide playday will take place at Monterey.

Miss Simonian expressed her gratitude to the men students who are participating in the co-ed sports. Because of their big turnout this semester, the RA is enjoying "one of its finest semesters," she declared.

Burton, Gasper Lewis Standouts In Easter Relays

By John Henry

It took only three of Lou Vasquez's top track and field performers to grab fourth place in the two-year college division of the 20th annual Santa Barbara Easter Relays held on April 5.

Weightman Mike Lewis, highjumper and pole vaulter Will Gasper, and broadjumper Mack Burton traveled to the Southern California event along with Vasquez and turned in top performances, considering that it was their first actual competition of the '58 cinder season.

Lewis, the former prep phenom from Lincoln High, tossed the discus 147.2 feet to win his specialty. The blond bomber got off a throw of 50.6 feet which was good enough to grab third place in the shot put, and also broke the college record of 45.8 set by Jack Egan in 1955.

Gasper also broke his own high jump standard of 6-5½, set last year, when he leaped 6-5¾ to lead the two-year college jumpers. He saved enough strength to tie for second in the pole vault at 13 feet.

Another college record was broken when the highly touted Burton broadjumped 24.1 to eclipse the old mark of 22.7. Burton's leap tied the existing Santa Barbara Relays mark, but Burton was edged out of first place by ¼-inch to Jackson of L. A. Harbor.

Vasquez was pleased with the performances at Santa Barbara, and is hoping for continued sunny skies so the whole squad can improve its showing. The Rams were the only Northern California two-year college outfit at Santa Barbara, and if a few more tracksters had taken part they could have annexed the team title.

Ram Netters To Meet Modesto Pirates Monday

The Ram tennis team meets Modesto at Modesto this Friday in an important league match.

Modesto has for years been the strongest team in the Big Eight Conference, but this season they have been upset twice, once by a powerful San Mateo squad and once by a surprisingly strong Oakland team.

This is the next to last league match of the season for the Rams. Next Friday the college netters meet a tough Oakland team here at Balboa Park at 2:30 p.m.

The Big Eight Conference championship is to be played May 2 and 3 at Golden Gate Park.

Impressive Ram Cinder Team Whips Oakland 74-48; Field Event Wins Reveal Strength

Lou Vasquez's Ram trackmen paced by their "big three" of Mike Lewis, Mack Burton and Will Gasper, swept to an impressive 74-48 dual meet victory over Oakland's Thunderbirds last Saturday at the Castlemont High School Field. In the triangular activity the college tallied 89, the T-Birds 53, and weak Stockton College seven.

Displaying most of their power in the field events the Rams swept the broad jump and high jump while taking highest honors in the shot put, discus, and pole vault.

Lewis and Gaspar both captured two firsts while Burton was a shade behind with a first and a second. Gaspar, a standout on last semester's cinder corps, took the high jump at 6-5¼ and the vault at 12-6. The massive Lewis, destined for track greatness because of his ability to improve with every meet, putted to a 51-1½ shot victory and also contributed a winning 147-1 disc heave.

Burton made the winner's circle on the strength of his 22-10 broad jump. He also chipped in with a second in the 100, timed at 10.0. The only other first taken by the Ram contingency was the mile relay teams' excellent 3:27.8 showing.

WILL GASPER, double winner Saturday.

Other excellent performances were Don Nasser's second in the 440, Jim Thomas' two seconds in the low and high hurdles, LeRoy Shields' runner-up tosses in the shot and discus, Elvin Bridges' broad and high jumping, a fine high jump effort by Ed Costa, and Fred Skinner's fast 220.

Alpha Phi Omega Tops Fraternity League Standings

Phi Beta Delta broke into third place in the fraternity league by defeating Zeta Phi Sigma 37-31, April 8, in the men's gymnasium. The Phi Delts upped their record to 4-1 with the win over the Zetas. The week before the Delts coasted by Alpha Kappa Rho, 34-20.

Since Gamma Phi Ypsilon had a bye last week, Alpha Phi Epsilon moved into first place alone. The Alphas clipped Beta Tau, 33-32, led by Ray Harris' 22 points. Last week they cleaned Tau Chi Sigma, 54-14, and have a 5-0 record. The Gammas, in second place with a 4-0 record, beat Tau Chi Sigma 53-15 two weeks ago.

In the Club Activities Board league after one round, three teams are tied for first place. The Hotel & Restaurant Department won by the largest score over a hard fighting Guardsman five, 48-29. The Guardsman was hurt from lack of depth, but put up a good game considering H&R had six times as many reserves.

In other games that night the International Relations Club beat the Filipino Club, 31-22, and Sigma Tau Sigma, an honor fraternity, nipped the Recreation Association, 39-34.

McCormick, Corl Voted To All-Conference Squad

Rams Mal McCormick and Vic Corl were voted to the first team of the All-Big Eight Conference baseball squad, released by League Commissioner Russel Azarra last week.

Also awarded first team berths were Cornell Green (WCC) and Oakland's Joe Johnson and Rufus Hawkins. Second club selections included Stockton's Eddie Davidson and Ben Brenning, Bobby Sherrard (San Mateo), Bill Alexander (Saeramento), and John Carmelich (WCC).

Improved Braves Should Repeat As NL Champs; Cincy Dark Horse

RAMBLINGS — Youthful Pirates, Giants On Way Up, May Take First Division Berth

By Nick Peters

SPRING is in the air, the first pitches opening the 1958 National League baseball season have already been hurled, San Francisco and Los Angeles have been gifted with new franchises, and many new faces are evident on the eight senior loop squads, but it looks like the same 'ol Braves come World Series time. The NL as we see it:

1. MILWAUKEE BRAVES: Unquestionable strength, since last year's champs lost nothing while gaining Bob Rush (6-16 with the Cubs), who is a much better hurler than his '57 mark would indicate.

Gene Conley (9-9), outfielder Bill Bruton (.278), and first sacker Joe Adcock (.287) all had ailments of one sort or another last year, but should come through in sterling fashion this season barring injury.

The mound corps must be considered the best in the league with Warren Spahn (21-11), Lew Burdette (17-9), and Bob Buhl (18-7). Catching is excellent with Del Crandall (.253), and Del Rice (.229). Adcock, Red Schoendienst (.309), Eddie Mathews (.292), and Johnny Logan (.273) form baseball's best infield, and the outfield of Hank Aaron (.322), Wes Covington (.284), and Bruton possesses both speed and punch at the plate.

2. ST. LOUIS CARDINALS: A young team with one more year's experience and no major changes from last season's runner-up club. Pitching is definitely on the upgrade, with Vinegar Bend Mizell (8-10), Sam Jones (12-9), Larry Jackson (15-9), and Lindy McDaniel (15-9).

The great Stan Musial (.351), Alvin Dark (.290), Don Blasingame (.271), and sophomore Eddie Kasko (.273), comprise a more than adequate infield while the outer gardens are filled by a hard hitting trio in Del Ennis (.286), Wally Moon (.290), and Ken Boyer (.265). Catching is sound with Hal Smith (.279) and Hoble Landrith (.243).

3. CINCINNATI REDLEGS: Birdie Tebbetts' boys may be the "dark horse" of the league in '58. The front office sacrificed some power in trading away Ted Kluzewski and Wally Post, but now it has an excellent pitching staff with Harvey Haddix (10-13 with Philadelphia), Bob Purkey (11-14 with Pittsburgh), Willard Schmidt (10-3 with St. Louis), and vets Brooks Lawrence (16-13), Joe Nuxhall (10-10), and Hal Jeffcoat (12-13).

Catching is the best in the big tent with Ed Bailey (.261) and Smoky Burgess (.283). Defensively the infield is the best in the league and it can hit, too, as can be seen with Don Hoak (.293), Roy McMillan (.272), Johnny Temple (.284), George Crowe (.271), Dee Fondy (.313 with the Pirates and Cubs), and Steve Bilko (.300 with the now defunct Los Angeles Angels).

Outfielding chores will be handled by Frank Robinson (.322), Gus Bell, (.292), and Bob Thurman (.247) or Crowe.

4. LOS ANGELES DODGERS: A new town and new fans may act as a catalyst to revive the pennant fire in the Bums. Pitching is the strongpoint with Don Drysdale (17-9), Don Newcombe (11-12), Johnny Podres (12-9), and Roger Craig (6-9), all excellent hurlers. Roy Campanella will ready be missed at the backstop station. Rube Walker (.181) is good on defense, but can't hit a lick.

The infield isn't in good shape either, with the exception of Gil Hodges (.299) and Charley Neal (.270). Pee Wee Reese (.224) is at the end of the trail, Randy Jackson (.198) and Jim Gilliam (.250) have been disappointments. The outfield, on the other hand, is excellent with Carl Furillo (.306), Duke Snider (.274), and Gino Cimoli (.293).

5. SAN FRANCISCO GIANTS: Good bet for a first division berth if rookies come through. Not too much depth in pitching after Johnny Antonelli (12-18), Ramon Monzant (3-2), Ruben Gomez (15-13), and Al Worthington (8-11). Infield has experience but Bill Rigney is faced with problem of finding best positions for Whitey Lockman (.248), Bob Speake (.232 with Chicago), Danny O'Connell (.256), Daryl Spencer (.249), Ray Jablonski (.289), Andre Rodgers (.244), and rookies Jim Davenport and Orlando Cepeda.

The outfield maintains both hitting strength and fine defense spearheaded by Willie Mays (.333), Hank Sauer (.259), and rookie Willie Kirkland, recently discharged from military service. Backstop duties will be carried out by soph Valmy Thomas (.249) and rookie Bob Schmidt.

6. PITTSBURGH PIRATES: Branch Rickey's youth movement will finally start paying dividends. The entire pitching staff is comprised of players who have yet to reach their 31st birthday, including such established vets as Bob Friend (14-18), Elroy Face (4-6), Ron Kline (9-16), and Vern Law (10-8). Catching is adequate with Hank Foiles (.270) and soph Harding Peterson (.301).

Ted Kluzewski (.268) will bolster an already impressive infield of Dick Groat (.315), Gene Baker (.264), Gene Freese (.283), Bill Mazeroski (.283), and Frank Thomas (.290). The outfield consists of Bob Skinner (.305), Bill Virdon (.251), and Roberto Clemente (.253), not sluggers by any means, but good defensive players.

7. PHILADELPHIA PHILLIES: Nothing can save this club from a poor finish simply because its old players have gone way over the hill and there aren't enough new phenoms to make up the difference. Pitching is the team's strongest attribute with '57 Rookie-of-the-Year John Sanford (19-8), Robin Roberts (10-22), and Curt Simmons (12-11) heading the list. Catching is able with Stan Lopata (.237) and Joe Lonnett (.169).

The infield is miserable with Harry Anderson (.268), Ted Kazanski (.265), Willie Jones (.218), Chico Fernandez (.262), and Granny Hamner (.227). The outer gardens are manned in adequate fashion by Richie Ashburn (.297), Rip Repulski (.260), and Wally Post (.244 at Cincinnati).

8. CHICAGO CUBS: Dismal is the word describing a club that has to be rebuilt around its talented shortstop Ernie Banks (.283). Pitching is young but not deep enough beyond soph Dick Drott (15-11) and Moe Drabowsky (13-15). Catching is below average, but newcomer Cal Neeman (.258) did a good job last year.

The infield is also lacking in depth behind Banks and Dale Long (.298). Bobby Morgan (.207) and Bobby Adams (.251) will probably fill the two other positions. The outfield could be worse, but Bobby Thomson (.240 with the Giants and Braves), Walt Moryn (.289), Jim Bolger (.275), and Lee Walls (.237) will turn in a better-than-average job.

Next week: The American League.

College Invites Businessmen, Public To Open House April 24 For Schools Week Observance

By Kevin Mullen

Education-Business Day and an open house, to which all parents and friends of students are invited, will coincide on next Thursday, April 24, to mark the college's observance of Public Schools Week.

According to the college's coordinator of Educational Management, Oscar E. Anderson, who is in charge of the day's activities, Education-Business Day is one-half of a reciprocal agreement between the college and industries of the Bay Area. On one day of the year, faculty members of the college go out to the various industries in the area and observe how they function.

Next Thursday, between 70 and 80 leaders of industry will come to the college to be orientated and conducted on a tour of the educational facilities. They will be addressed upon their arrival in the morning by the college president, Louis G. Conlan.

Conlan will describe to the visitors the facilities and problems of the college. In addition, he will discuss a current problem facing education in San Francisco, Proposition A in the coming June 3 election. Proposition A deals with raising the school tax limit from $2.00 to $2.50.

The visitors will then be taken on a tour of the different departments of the college to observe the classes in progress.

Afterward, they will attend a luncheon at which Superintendent of Schools Harold Spears will discuss and explain the overall school program in San Francisco.

All during the day and until 10 p.m. there will also be an open house to which Anderson warmly invited all parents and friends of the students. "No special pains are being taken to prepare a program for the open house," Anderson said, "because we want the visitors to see the college just as it is on any other day."

When asked if any special emphasis would be put upon the scientific aspects of the college, Anderson replied, "We are definitely not going to minimize the importance of the social sciences, but there will be more interest created by the technical departments because the instructional methods are much more tangible and apparent in these departments.

"It is difficult to conceive of an English course in a bare classroom, but the varied apparatus and equipment in the laboratories make the instructional methods there much easier to comprehend. At the same time, we have an unusually large and well-equipped science plant for a two-year college."

The one special feature of the day is the admission-free presentation of The Admirable Crichton by the college drama group at 8 p.m. in the Little Theater.

President Conlan Tells Council Of New Buildings

By Lois Cosden

Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, outlined building plans expected here by 1959 to the Student Council last week, namely a football stadium, Arts Building and parking lot, and explained the proposal to raise the school tax limit through Proposition A in the June 3 election to provide for predicted growth of the San Francisco Unified School District.

"More than 200 new teachers are needed in the city next year," Conlan said, "and swollen enrollment rosters must be accommodated."

Contract estimates will be returned by next October for the stadium, which is to be situated between the men's and women's gymnasiums. The loss of half of the present student parking in that area will be made up by filling in of the northern reservoir on Phelan Avenue.

A start was made in the campus clean-up campaign Friday, when KSFC hooked up a public address system in the trees at the south end of the Science Building to enable an announcer to "spy on" and admonish students spilling litter and/or trash on the college grounds.

Darlene Enfield, Associated Student vice-president, announced additions to the Social Committee rules, mainly that the president and vice-president of AS should receive written invitations to all dances and affairs on the social calendar.

Also, refreshments for guests should be provided by the hosting club, not the club in charge of the concession. Clubs should have a member at the door at all times with a policeman at every event.

Police Chalk Up 781 Patrol Hours

Campus Police officers have worked a total of 781 patrol hours as of April 3, and have issued 1,204 citations as of the same date, according to Marion Timm, Campus Police chief.

During night classes, 46 citations were issued in the two-week period of March 19 through April 2. Most night class citations were issued for parking on the ramp and in red zones.

A total of 1,220 student parking permits have been issued this semester.

The annual Campus Police dinner is now being planned and will be held May 29. The dinner is for the present and past members of the Campus Police, and as a highlight, trophies will be awarded for the winners of the Campus Police annual pistol match to be held May 19.

Arthur Kilton of the Campus Police has been appointed to the Concord Police Department. Kilton is here at the college part time during the day and then goes to Concord for his new job.

Semi-Annual Band Concert Due May 9

With a variety of music ranging from musicals such as The King And I to the classics such as Afternoon Of A Faun, the college band will present its semi-annual concert during the college hour on Friday, May 9, Meyer Cahn, band director, announced last week.

Other numbers to be featured in the program will be a Folk Song Suite by Williams, Prelude to Faust by Gounod, and a March from Opus 99 by Prokofief. Several other numbers will fill out the program, and this will be the first such program to be opened to the public.

Men's Glee Club To Perform With Sixth Army Band

A special combined concert with the Sixth Army Band will be given by the Men's Glee Club at the Presidio Sunday, May 18, at 2 p.m., Robert Morton, choir director, announced.

For this program, the club will sing the entire 24-minute Testament Of Freedom, by Randall Thompson.

The Sixth Army Band will reciprocate with a combined concert with both the A Cappella Choir and the Glee Club during a double college hour, Friday, May 23.

For the program here, the Men's Glee Club will present the first and fourth movements of the Testament, while the choir will present a variety of music featuring an unusual version of the Battle Hymn Of The Republic and the combined forces of band and choir in a "startingly different and exciting version" of God Of Our Fathers, Morton said.

In addition to these two performances, to which everyone is invited, both groups will journey to San Jose State College for the Choir Festival there. Here, the Glee Club will sing the first and fourth movements of the Testament Of Freedom, while the choir will sing several Greek and Latin numbers.

"The Testimanet of Freedom is a choral work based on the writing of Thomas Jefferson," Morton explained, "and has for its principal theme, 'The God who gave us life gave us liberty at the same time; the hand of force may destroy but cannot disjoin them.'"

Break Pre-Reg Date, Lose Early Number

Students who fail to keep their pre-registration appointments with their counselors as scheduled will lose their registration numbers, effective immediately, according to Howard Schoon, counselor in charge of pre-registration.

Those who find they are unable to keep their appointments may call in person at S-160 or telephone the college at JU 7-7272, extension 8, prior to the appointment to arrange for counseling at a future date. Students who fail to follow this procedure must accept later registration numbers, Schoon warned.

The office recommended that all students comply with these regulations in order to keep their early registration numbers.

Summer Session Catalogue Lists 11 New Courses

Eleven new courses have been added to the summer session catalogue, according to Lloyd D. Luckmann, coordinator, Division of Instruction at the college.

Art 68AB, Astronomy 26, Business 61 (basic business arithmetic), Business 63 (applied business arithmetic), Chemistry 10, Economics 1B, Foreign Language, Humanities 41A, Physics 10, Psychology 33, and Sociology 1A have been added to a list of 60 other courses being offered during the summer session.

Probable preregistration dates are May 15 to June 5, Luckmann said, and the session will begin on June 23 and end of August 1.

Luckmann pointed out that the schedule is as yet tentative and subject to revision. "Many things must be considered before the schedule is made definite," he said, "and the number of students attending will be taken into consideration as well as the availability of instructors."

The session is limited to present students here and to San Francisco high school graduates, he added. There will be two holidays, July 3 and 4.

Students are permitted to take a maximum six units unless granted special permission by their counselors, Luckmann said.

Among other courses offered are Business Administration 1B; Business 50, 75A, 77, 80AB, 81AB; Chemistry 1A, 1B, G16; Communication G6, G5B; Criminology 52A; Economics 1A; Engineering 1A, 22, 90; English 1A, 1B, G9; Foreign Language Spanish 1 or French 1 based on preregistration enrollment); Health 21, 22; History 17A, 17B; Hotel and Restaurant 63; Journalism 26AB; L & P Science G11A; Math C, D1, D2, 3A, 3B, 90A, 90B; Music 21A, 27A; Physics 10; Political Science 1, 36; Psychology 1A; Speech 1A, and Zoology 1A, 1B and 10.

Eight Women From College Apply For 'Miss SF' Contest; Applications Still Available

Applications for the Miss San Francisco contest are still available at the office of Mary Golding, dean of women here, or from Larry Beldon, the San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce campus representative, at B-2.

So far, Beldon disclosed, only eight women from the college have entered the contest, but their names are not known since the applications, when filled, are mailed directly by the entrants to the Junior Chamber of Commerce, sponsors of the annual pageant.

Dissatisfied with the small number of college women participating in it, the JCC directors have extended their original April 10 deadline for applications. They have set a special college registration date, which expires tomorrow, in order to make the contest as fair and interesting as it has been in the past, Bob Scrofani, JCC chairman of the Public Relations committee, announced during the chamber's weekly luncheon at the Press Club last Wednesday.

Stressing the point a little further, Scrofani urged City College women to be especially interested in entering the pageant. "After all, in Lee Meriwether, Miss Amriea of 1955, you produced the only Miss Amerlea San Francisco has ever had. Who knows, there may just happen to be another one there this year."

Selection of the winner, Scrofani added, will not be based solely on the contestant's beauty for "as important as that, and of equal value to the judges' eyes, will be the talent, personality and poise of the womnn who is to represent San Francisco in the state contest at Santa Cruz."

Basic rules in the contest establish that the participants should be not younger than 18 or older than 28, by September 1, 1958. She must be a resident of San Francisco for the last six months, single, and should not have been married.

Among the prizes for the winner are a round trip to Mexico City and Acapulco, a week-end in Las Vegas for the winner and her first runner-up, a modeling course at the John Robert Powers School of Charm, an all-expenses paid trip to Santa Cruz for the state contest, a $1,000 scholarship and a gala gown to be worn by Miss San Francisco at the Santa Cruz finals exclusively made for her by the Italian designer, Yusef Beccini, formerly with the House of Dior of Paris.

Publicity wise," Serofani said, "the Miss San Francisco contest can become the basic step for any entertainment-minded lass to further her career in a dignified way. Since they will be in the public eye, the pageant should prove, for a start, a rather valuable experience for those women students who have set their goals in the fields of drama, dance, singing, modeling, radio, teicvision and the like."

There have been three previous Miss SF winners from the college. First was Barbara Huffman, who won the title in 1951, followed by Jan Darlyn in 1952, and finally by Miss Meriwether in 1954.

'Deadeyes' First In Intra League Pistol Matches

Living up to their name, the "Deadeyes," captained by Fred Fitzgerald, are still holding down the first place title in the intramural pistol matches at the half-way mark of the ten-week competition, with a top score of 5193 aggregate points.

In second place are Captain Marion Timm's "Dreamers" with 4910, followed by the "J. C. Six," under Captain Lou Paglierani with 4806. Newly appointed Captain Geraldine Rush and her "Alibiers" are in last position with 4784.

Competition is keen for top individual shooter and going into the sixth week of the matches, Paglierani is maintaining a very slight lead with 1361 points. Close behind is Fitzgerald 1359, followed by Charles Terry with 1352.

In off-campus competition, the Fort Ord pistol team showed superior marksmanship despite heavy rain and gusts of wind, as it edged out the college's special police pistol team at the Oakland pistol matches held on March 31 in Oakland.

The results of the matches found the college shooters taking second place, only 65 points behind the victorious Fort Ord team.

A new team, which is not as yet classified, was entered in the Sunday matches, and is composed of Lou Bording, Bill Donohoe, Larry Plott and Frank Williams.

IRC To Host 2nd Annual Latin American Fiesta

Cha-cha-chas, mambos, and sambas, as well as an hour and a half of Latin American entertainment, will be only part of the features of the second annual Latin America Fiesta presented here by the International Relations Club, Dr. Joseph Jacobsen, club adviser, said recently.

"The night of May 2 will be filled with music and laughter and everyone is invited to come to Smith Hall and join the fun," Alfredo Aubone, vice-president and general chairman of the affair, stated. Admission will be by Associated Student card or $1.25, and refreshments with a South of the Border flavor will be served, he added.

Drama Production Ends This Week

The Wayward Saint To Follow Crichton

Two last performances of The Admirable Crichton this Friday and Saturday will be followed by intensive rehearsal for the next production, Michael Griffin, Little Theater director, said today.

"With all the innovations and technical problems that have been overcome in this production, we can truthfully say that it is the most difficult production this group has ever attempted," Griffin declared.

A special performance of Crichton has been scheduled for Public Schools Week for an invited audience on the night of May 24, and this will actually be the final showing. "However," Griffin added, "the rehearsals for The Wayward Saint will already be in progress with the same sets being utilized for a while.

The Wayward Saint is the amusing story of an Irish cleric and his struggle with the devil and also with the bishop from his church. It is a comedy by Paul Vincent Carroll and is scheduled for production on May 9, 10, 16, 17, 23 and 24."

Griffin particularly praised the artistic aid given the present production by Virginia Evans, who not only did set design but also set up the "fine display in the library."

Open House Tomorrow Welcomes Public As Schools Issue Nears

Leaders Of City's Industries Will Visit Here In Annual Education-Business Day, Schools Week Program

Approximately 80 leading business persons from the San Francisco Bay Area will visit the college tomorrow to observe how the educational plant operates, according to Dr. Oscar E. Anderson, coordinator of Educational Management.

At the same time, from 8 a.m. until 10 p.m., there will be an open house during which any interested persons may visit and inspect the college.

The purpose of the visit from the leaders of industry is that they might better understand and appreciate the functions and problems of the college afterward.

Activities will start at 8 a.m. when Dr. Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, addresses the group by way of orientation. This visit on the part of the businessmen is considered especially timely because of the approaching elections which includes Proposition "A." Proposition "A" deals with raising the educational tax limit to allow for necessary expenditures to provide for increased enrollments.

While at the college, these businessmen can observe just where the needs exist in a specific instance. "Our present teaching staff is excellent," Anderson said, "but if we are going to maintain the same standards in the future we are in need of more teachers."

After the address by Conlan, the visitors will be conducted around the campus by members of council and cabinet who will describe to them the various parts of the college. They will see the different classes in action. Then, finally, the visitors will attend a luncheon at which Dr. Harold Spears, superintendent of schools, will discuss the entire educational structure of San Francisco.

Dr. Anderson extended a welcome to all interested persons that they might visit and inspect the college during open house. All the classrooms will be open to visitors who come to observe classes in progress. There will be no special arrangement made for the day except for an admission free presentation of The Admirable Crichton by the college drama group in the little theater at 8 p.m.

THE COLLEGE'S President, Dr. Louis G. Conlan, has been named chairman of the School Department's Campaign Committee For Proposition "A," Dr. Conlan, as chairman, will lead the campaign to raise the tax limit by vote on June 3; as President, he will welcome the city's business representatives here tomorrow.

Dr. Conlan Heads New Committee On Big 'A' Issue

First on the ballot in the coming June 3 elections is a proposition that is of primary interest to anyone in the San Francisco educational system.

Chairman of the school department's campaign committee is Louis G. Conlan, president of the college.

Proposition "A" deals with a raise of 50 cents in the statutory tax limit. This raise means that 50 more cents of every hundred tax dollars will be devoted to educational spending.

What this means to the students and faculty of the college is that more funds will be available to hire needed teachers and to purchase necessary equipment. The present tax limit of $2 for elementary school districts was established in 1937 and is still in effect despite rises in costs and salaries.

The situation, as it stands now, is that in the school year of 1957-58 the Superintendent of Schools has found it necessary to approve a budget that comes within two cents of the present tax limit. In the school year of 1958-59, to maintain the quality of educational facilities, it is necessary to have a budget that exceeds the present tax limit by five cents.

If these funds are not made available by the voters on June 3, it will necessitate deletion of the kindergarten program from the school system, and closer to home, it will mean more crowded classrooms and less educational equipment.

To date, students of the college have participated in the campaign to pass Proposition "A" by affixing stickers on their car reading Yes On "A."

Plans for a car parade to consist of 25 decorated automobiles are now in the making, according to Dean Ralph Hillsman. The parade will originate from the college on Wednesday, May 28, and on the following day, May 29. Interested students may sign up with Dean Hillsman in S-150.

Identical Dancers Kick-Off Festival Rally This Friday

The Moore Twins, a pair of dancing co-eds from San Francisco State College, will highlight Friday's Spring Festival Kick-Off rally in college hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m.

Rally Commissioner Jim Hickey said that plans are still underway to recruit several professional entertainers for the 40-minute rally, but as yet nothing has been decided.

The rally, to be held outdoors beside the Ram, is also expected to include performances by members of the college. "But," Hickey said, "response for performers has not been too good."

The program will also include the presentation of trophies to winners of the recent college blood drive by blood drive chairman Jim Hecht. These winners include Beta Phi Beta of the Inter-Fraternity Council, Theta Tau of the Inter-Sorority Council and the Veterans Club of the various independent organizations.

Friday's rally, Hickey said, is expected to be the last one this semester to include professional entertainers. The only other rally scheduled is the one before the Associated Student elections in May.

Should it rain, Hickey said, the rally will be conducted in the cafeteria.

Other college hour programs this semester include club meetings on May 2, band concert on May 9, the election rally May 16, and in a double college hour May 23, the Soph-Frosh softball game.

Forum Editor Sets Friday Deadline For Contributions

Deadline for contributing to Forum, the literary magazine at the college, has been extended until this Friday, Catherine Connolly, Forum adviser, announced yesterday.

Those who still want to submit their contributions of short stories, short one-act plays, essays of not more than 1,500 words, serious or humorous; critiques of books, authors or institutions; articles of current interest, poetry and light verse, may do so, she said. Satirical or humorous material in any form is especially encouraged.

Specifications provide that manuscripts be on 8½x11" paper and be typed and double spaced. Material can be submitted to the Forum office, C-331A, or to any member of the Forum staff.

Presently, Miss Connolly commented, most of the contributions have been submitted by men students. These contributions are for the greater part of a poetic nature, although some are stories and essays.

The staff editing the manuscripts is composed of 10 students. Headed by Alger Doane, the 21st editor of the publication, they have the responsibility for editing the contributions and selecting the ones for publication.

Forum will be distributed on June 2 to those with Associated Student cards. Non-AS members can purchase Forum for 50 cents.

Dance Band Debates Over Jailhouse Rock

Debate is raging among the members of the college dance band as they prepare their program for the Cow Palace Spring Festival this Friday night. The problem is a piece called Jailhouse Rock from a recent movie which starred a much publicized private now in the Army minus sideburns.

Leader of the For-Playing-It group is student band leader Nick Massenkoff who says, "It is the job of a dance band to play music for the public. That music can be of any type as long as the public likes it."

Opposition leader Cliff Cehand asks simply, "Is it music?"

While this awaits a vote and final decision, the 20 members of the dance band are busy rehearsing music in various fields including blues, popular hits, standards, Latin American, some swing and even a few waltzes.

Semi-Annual X-Ray Examination Makes Use Of New Low Radiation Machine, High Speed Photography

Equipped with a new machine that cuts radiation down to less than one-fourth of that previously used, the semi-annual chest X-ray examination started last week by the women's gymnasium.

Clifford Herbage, X-ray technician, who operated the machine, told this reporter that 310 students were X-rayed the first day. Scoffing at the fears of radiation present in some cases, he stated that with the new unit and the high speed film used, they had nothing to worry about.

"After all," he said, "I get more radiation than any of them and I'm still in good condition."

The total amount of radiation received is no more than the amount a person would get if he wore a luminous wristwatch for a year, Herbage added. "Part of the problem is the fear people have of things they don't understand. There is no need to fear properly shielded X-ray equipment which is as safe as this instrument," he said.

Pointing out that other diseases can often be detected with the machine, he added that "strange things have been caught besides tuberculosis. We have spotted enlarged hearts, cancers and once even a .22 bullet in a man who had been shot as a child."

The cost of X-rays compared to cures was another subject Herbage discussed. If $5,000 is the cost of the same number of X-rays and only one case is caught in the early stages, the county is still saving money, since an advanced case of TB will cost from $25,000 to $50,000 for curing and rehabilitation.

"I cannot stress the importance of catching the disease in its early stages," Herbage said; "the ones who really realize this are those who have been saved from a long and costly illness by such things as the X-rays. The skeptical are only those who have not had acquaintance with someone who was aided."

A small sign placed behind the machine states, "This service made possible by your purchase of Christmas seals."

Film To Feature St. Louis Cards

The college hour film series will present The Cardinal Story as the next feature to be seen this Friday during college hour from 10 to 10:40 a.m. in S-136, according to Madison W. Devlin, audio visual aids instructor.

The film tells the story of the young baseball team, how it started, who founded it, the way in which the first practices were held, the development of young stars on the ball field, and all the privations and satisfactions through which a player has to go in order to make the team.

Faculty and students are welcome to see the films every college hour Fridays at 10 a.m. in S-136.

Two Women Enter Miss SF Contest; Deadline Extended

Only two students from the college, Sue Bellinger and Leah Pashioan, have formally entered the Miss San Francisco 1958 contest as the pageant's sponsors, the San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce, set a new and final deadline for submitting applications, due today.

Entry blanks can still be obtained at the office of Mary Golding, dean of women here, in S-150, or from the chamber's representative on campus, Larry Beldon, at B-2.

Nevertheless, Beldon announced, women interested in participating in the pageant may also attend the chamber's last screening and interviewing session to be held tonight, from 7 to 9 p.m. at the John Robert Powers School of Charm, 312 Sutter Street, and officially apply there. "It's not necessary to bring with them their applications," Beldon said, adding that they will be furnished to the entrants at the interview's site.

Three former students here have won the Miss San Francisco title before, while attending the college. They are Barbara Huffman in 1951, Jan Darlyn in 1952 and Lee Meriwether in 1954, who later on was elected Miss California to become, afterward, the first San Francisco woman ever to win the Miss America title.

Requirements to enter the pageant provide that the participants should be not younger than 18 nor older than 28 by September 1, 1958. They must be residents of San Francisco for the last six months, single, and never married before.

Prizes for the winner include a round trip to Mexico City and Acapulco, a week-end in Las Vegas for the winner and her first runner-up, a modeling course at the John Robert Powers School of Charm worth $600, an all-expenses-paid trip to Santa Cruz for the state contest, a gala gown to be worn by Miss San Francisco at the Santa Cruz finals, which will be exclusively designed for her by the Italian designer Yusef Beccini, formerly with the House of Dior of Paris, France, and other prizes.

Judging of the contestants will be based in personality, talent (a three-minute routine), and beauty.

Festival Set For Cow Palace Friday

With a Cirque De Paris theme and prizes for the most original costumes which will accentuate clowns in a Parisian decor, the Spring Festival will be held this Friday night, 7 to 11 p.m.

A parade featuring a Grand Marshal, a well known faculty member whose identity remains a secret, will form at the southeast parking lot at 6:30 p.m. The marshal will ride in a 1958 Lincoln convertible followed by a retinue of floats and sportscars forming the letters CCSF Spring Festival. Their destination will be the Cow Palace, going by way of Persia Avenue on to Mission and Geneva Street.

San Francisco and campus police will escort the parade Freddy Hicks, Associated Men Student president, said, to assist the great number of floats and automobiles through the traffic on the way.

Trophies for the first three outstanding Cirque De Paris posters will be presented to the creators at the festival itself.

Dancing will be among the highlights of the evening after the parade has ended, beginning about 8:30 p.m., dancing will continue to 11 p.m.

Numerous amusements are planned for the evening, each concession set up by the various clubs and organizations here.

Hicks said that in addition to the "Mock Marriage," in which he was a bigamist three times over last year, there will be "Dunko Booths," "Turtle Races" and all sorts of throwing games.

Dinners and light snacks will be served by the college's Hotel and Restaurant Department. For the French touch and taste, the Newman Club is going to serve crepes suzette.

The Cow Palace's parking facilities will be available free of charge to those who plan on attending the festival. Hicks added that no college identification will be required to park on the premises or enter the palace itself.

Individual Capabilities Rate First In Education Set-Ups

WITH THE END of the second mid-term period in sight, students are beginning to realize that their efforts have been good, bad, or indifferent. For the students who realize that their efforts are bad or indifferent it is suggested that they get on the ball. It's difficult to point out to the apathetic student just why he should apply himself to the serious business of getting educated, for the first answer given is—because of the rising demand for educated personnel in specific fields. Although this is the truth, college students must be getting a little tired of hearing it.

Papers, parent-teacher associations, college boards, and most everyone else hits at "educating the youth in the fields of science, math, and physics." Not every student at this college, nor at any other college, is interested in these fields. At this stage of the game this is what is hard to explain to Mr. Citizen. He cannot understand why college curricula still include cooking, literature, and the like. One of these days, after the immediate reaction to Soviet learning has subsided, he may come around.

The college's answer to this question is obvious. Courses in fields other than the sciences are taught because many students have definite interests as well as great potentialities in these fields. Our theme here, however, is not the education of the masses as such; it is rather the education of the individual and the effort that he makes toward completing this offered education.

Possibly two of the most important features that the student must control are his attitude toward education as a whole, and the balance that he may or may not attain between education and conflicting situations. What we mean by attitude is nearly self-explanatory. The student of college level must enter the classroom with an open mind ready to accept or reject what he hears; but the student must give the educator an even break and not close his mind to new suggestions.

Balance, the second feature of importance, must be more carefully watched and understood, for here there are many conflicts that work their way into the student's situation. As mentioned above, there is the now present question of sciences versus fine arts. It is in this area that a balance is all-important. If educators do not strive for this balance then it is up to the individual student. The scientist can be as backward as the uneducated person unless he has some background in the arts; as is the artist backward unless he is familiar with current problems, scientific or otherwise. Here then is the first area where balance is necessary.

An area that applies to attitude, balance, and interest is that of outside activities in which the student participates. Group membership is influential in education; family relationships are essential for sociality; jobs more often than not contribute to both education and sociality. In the area of jobs, however, the student must be constantly careful to maintain not only an equal balance, but to give his studies the same chances that he gives his job. Jobs pay in dollars right now; education pays in dollars, security, and happiness in the future. To the working student the future is sometimes farther away than it should be, while the present paycheck is a great incentive to work, and it is often very necessary.

We then have the student; as one of the mass his significance is little, as an individual his significance and capabilities are unlimited. The apathetic student, then, is doing little more than taking up needed space in the classroom. In an educational set-up, education should be the first and not the second or third interest of the student.

Shots At Ramdom — Significant Signs Of Spring Have Sprung

By Tom Tatera

DON'T tell anyone, but it's that time again, and the signs of the season are coming in fast and thick.

• • •

SPRING IS HERE when Junior decides that heeding Mom's supper chant is not as important as finishing the last game of stickball in the street. In time and darkness the ball becomes a part of the shadows cast by the dim, yellow street lamp. Thus, activities cease till tomorrow, and thoughts turn once again to appetites.

• • •

SPRING IS HERE when Grandpa starts in on his ritualistic eulogy of the good ole' days, when baseball was rough and tough and not a sissy's game, and gals were really alluring instead of the anemic and spindly type that is the fashion today, and is described by men like Christian Dior (with a smack of their lips) as "magnifique."

• • •

SPRING IS HERE when the cold and blistering winds are tapped by a magic wand and transformed into warm and gentle breezes. Breezes that prelude the turning of young men's fancies, double dip ice cream cones, open top convertibles, and long, long strolls through the park.

• • •

SPRING IS HERE when the Mr. and Mrs., after months of cuddling next to their drugstore heater while watching the rains and cold winds rage outside, suddenly get the yen to dress up and catch a local movie.

• • •

SPRING IS ALSO HERE when the lost and near-lost, diffused among the doorways and alleys of lower Mission street, rise to their feet as one and begin the seasonal trek to Civic Center, where they will spend the summer with the pigeons outside the Public Library. Culture calls!

• • •

AND, LAST BUT NOT LEAST, spring is here when this writer gets stung in the face by a sudden spray of sun and has to fight down a piercing headache while feeling his way home where the shades are drawn, the icebox is comfortably filled with satisfying brew, and the bed is open and waiting.

There he can recuperate until the sun sets, at which time he can visit the local night-spot, seat himself behind a tall, familiar drink, and electfancies, double dip ice cream cones, date further on the glories of spring.

Algerian Rebels Bumbling

World Leadership Spells Major Problem As French Display Yankee Go Home Signs

By Paster Vale-Gray

French-made "Yankee Go Home" signs were circulating in Tunisia again as a result of the American military aid recently given there. France believes these weapons will go from Tunisia to Algeria, thus strengthening Algerian rebels in their three-year-long war for liberty, as a colony, from France.

Such happenings have left the United States, against its will, in the uncomfortable position of indirectly helping the friendly European nation's enemy.

With the Russians more than ready, willing and able to "accommodate" any country's needs, the State Department can do little but hope the French will understand that our nation has to give Tunisia the arms in order to keep the latter from turning to Russia's "generosity."

This is but one of the many delicate and intricate foreign aid puzzles with which the United States has to play now. It spells controversy and discontent among American taxpayers, and

Counterpoint

Brass Has Task Planning Army For Career GI

By Don Seratti

AS THE COST of maintaining armed forces grows, much time and thought are being expended in Washington in an effort to make a military career more attractive to the young man of America.

The military chiefs' ultimate aim is the formation of a regular army composed entirely of volunteers and career soldiers. With such a force in uniform, the services would have their men serving them for 20 years after training them.

Since present circumstances have proved that a military career simply isn't desirable to the average young man, government thinkers have initiated a plan calling for pay raises in the Army for career soldiers on all levels. Many planners feel that adoption of this plan will immediately insure an increase in the services' reenlistment rate.

This writer feels that the basic problem lies not in the pay rate, but in the nature of the Army itself — something that in all probability cannot and will not be altered.

Young men generally leave the Army after their initial enlistments, not because of the low pay, but because the Army simply hasn't as much to offer as does civilian life in the way of job variety, prestige, and freedom — as well as money.

The rigors of Army life aren't appealing to a great many people. Maintenance of discipline brings about many regulations which serve the best interests of the Army but the obedience to which becomes distasteful to young men.

In the Army, individualism" is drowned in the spate of manpower floating around, and promotion systems, placing length of service above ability, have discouraged many men.

Ton, Army's vaunted job opportunities are varied, but not nearly so much as the jobs available in the different phases of civilian life.

Weighing the above factors, the average GI says, "I readily admit our country needs a strong, capable Army —but it just isn't for me."

The Army could take a closer look at its regulations and see if some could be slightly modified to encourage the individual. Although this would undoubtedly attract more men, the basic concepts of the Army—those of demanding unquestioning adherence to authority—would be weakened.

The Army can't change and neither can the nature of American manhood. The two aren't incompatible by any means, as evidenced by the large number of career soldiers in uniform. But as long as men continue to find jobs, prestige and freedom in the "outside world," they will steer clear of the service.

In seeking an army of volunteers, the services are up against a dilemma that could cause them as many headaches as our enemies in recent wars.

Ousted by an American-backed revolution in 1954, the Arbenz regime was a shocking but worthy, if costly and bloody, experience. It proved the Latins don't want communism but that it, as in the case of Hungary, can be forced on the people.

Colonel Carlos Castillo Armas, who led the plot against Arbenz to emerge later on as Guatemala's democratically elected president, was assassinated six months ago by a palace guard who, investigations proved, was a communist follower.

After this second blow, the country is coming back to normal, but Guatemala, as many nations of the world do, needs and has to count on America's moral support to, in return, support American morally before another nation grabs. America realizes now Guatemala's problems and is helping her. But, on the other hand, America's policy of non-economic support toward another Latin nation, the Argentine, has recently forced the former to look officially for Russia's aid. Where this move will lead, no one dares to predict.

But should the United States do away with its foreign aid program the task of keeping here their lately-weakened world leadership would be critically augmented rather than diminished. Complete U. S. negativeness on the aid issue may eventually set the pace for America's downfall as a world power.

Under the dilemma of either aiding foreign countries or leaving them free to look for Russia's help, America should she take the second choice, still may choose between isolating herself in a do-it-yourself "dollar curtain," or start making "Russian Go Home" posters. Which do you prefer?

Education Is For Birds

THE OLD SAYING, "come in and get out of the rain," apparently doesn't hold true with the birds around the college. The bird above flew into Cloud Hall, after the worst of the rain was over and the sun had finally made its appearance. Alert Guardsman Photographer Kenneth Way, while on his way out to enjoy the sun, spotted the bird and out came the camera.

Well, the perverse bird will probably leave when the rain comes again, or in the dark of night when he thinks it might be raining.

Just hope he doesn't start the propaganda that education is for the birds.

Bulldozer On Science Roof? Take A Look!

Builders and construction workers surely did a fine job on the Science Building, but they seem to have forgotten one thing. They failed to remove part of their equipment. A bulldozer still remains on the roof.

How it got up there they don't know. According to all builders, normal bulldozers live on the ground. Apparently this isn't a normal bulldozer.

What should be done? Bring it down? That's out of the question! What would be done with a bulldozer that's been out of contact with other tractors for so long?

If desired, non-believers are invited to view this young tractor at any time. Directions for a good look are as follows: stand against the front, middle wall of Cloud Hall and gaze upward in the direction of the left side of the Science Building.

Ridiculous? Maybe, but what else would it be?

Northrup, Newcomb Rate High For Olympic Club In Recent National AAU Wrestling Bouts

Two top notch amateur wrestlers are now students at the college. Ben Northrup and Gil Newcomb are members of the outstanding Olympic Club wrestling team, and both recently won honors at the Amateur Athletic Union finals.

Northrup, who competes in the 147½-pound class, grabbed second place in the Greco-Roman wrestling and took fourth spot in the freestyle bouts. The Lowell High graduate won eight out of nine matches in the freestyle division and took nine out of ten bouts in the Greco-Roman affair. Northrup's only loss during the latter event was to the eventual champion, Bud Beltz of the U. S. Marines.

In two of his bouts, Northrup ran up against two of Japan's toughest amateur wrestlers and beat them both. Northrup has been wrestling for the Olympic Club for about five years. The 24-year-old grappler put in a two-year hitch in the Navy and was an All-Navy selection both years.

Newcomb, a history major, is a native of Palo Alto and is also in his second semester at the college. He is in the 174-pound class and brought the Winged O more honors when he ended in third place in the Greco-Roman bouts of his weight class. Newcomb won seven matches and dropped two during the tournament. One of his losses was to Zolt Csiba, a former Hungarian Olympic team member, who won the AAU title.

RA Athletic Teams Defeated By Preps

In the past few weeks the Recreation Association has been matching team with against various San Francisco high schools.

On March 27, the volleyball team met Mission High School and proved to be the stronger of the two; however, on April 10, George Washington High School left the court as the final winner. April 10 also marked the day that the RA foneing team tiled to hit Balboa High School from behind. The end of the match showed they didn't hit hard enough. The score was 3-2 men and 3-1 women, in favor of Balboa.

Powerful Ram Thinclads Whip Pirates 75½-60½; Sacramento Meet To Decide Title Saturday

By George Grasso

Paul Patton broke two school records and Mike Lewis broke his own shotput mark as the Ram thinclads knocked another power out of the way in their climb toward the Big Eight Championship when they defeated powerful Modesto in a triangular meet with San Mateo. The meet, which was held last Friday at Modesto, was scored CCSF 75½, Modesto 60½, and San Mateo 9.

At the beginning of the year, the three schools to beat were Oakland, Modesto and Sacramento. Oakland and Modesto have been defeated handily and Sacramento remains as the last big stumbling block to the championship. Tonight the Ram cindermen go to San Francisco State College for the State Relays.

The most outstanding Ram performer at Modesto was Paul Patton. Running with machine like precision for eight laps, Patton came across the winner in the two mile, and in doing so set a new school record of 9:41.8. Patton also broke the college's mile record, but that was unofficial as he was nosed out for first place by Modesto's Tom Brown, who ran a 4:26.6.

Mountainous Mike Lewis heaved the 16-pound shot 51-11 to brenk his own record. In unsurprising fashion, he moved to the discus pit and won that event with a throw of 148.9.

Not enough can be said about James Ray Thomas, who was performing like the athlete of old. He was all over the field. As soon as he caught his breath, he found himself entered in another event. Thomas won the 120 high hurdles in 15.4 as Jerry Beil came up to take second. He went on to win the 220 lows in 25.2 as Tom Skinner and Bell came up for second and third to sweep the event. In his spare time, he competed in the high jump and right after the 220 lows, he anchored the mile relay team.

The college's famous broadjumpers, who swept this event at previous meets, did it again at Modesto. Led by the fine jumping of Mack Burton, who took first with a 23-5, Elvin Bridges, Claude McWilliams, and Charles Tanher scored the next best jumps to hog the first four places.

Double winner, Will Gasper, is a man concerned with height. At Modesto, he tied the school record for the pole vault by clearing 13-6. Then followed a series of heartbreaking failures as he made attempts to reach 13-9. Gasper went on to win the high jump with a 6-3.

This Saturday, Coach Vasquez is looking for an all, out effort against the number two team in the conference—Sacramento. This meet will put the pressure on each individual event. A faulty or half-hearted performance from anyone on either side of the fence could mean the difference between champions and runners-up.

But the Rams have both barrels loaded for their rivals from the state capital. The strong field event men, led by Gasper, Lewis and Burton, are stronger than ever. The runners have improved in every meet with Patton, Thomas and Skinner the most notable improvements.

APE's Climb Top Rung, Lead Intra League With 6-0

By Dave Smith

Led by the terrific shooting of Rudy Vasquez, Gamma Phi Ypsilon fraternity edged Phi Beta Delta 38-30, April 15, in interfraternity intramural play in the men's gymnasium.

This win kept the Gammas in second place with a 5-0 record. The Phi Delts, who lost, are now in a third place tie with Zeta Phi Sigma.

Alpha Phi Epsilon stayed in first place when it dropped the Zetas, 35-25. This upped the Alphas' record to an impressive 6-0. The Alphas were led by Ray Harris and Gene Craft.

After the third round of play Sigma Tau Sigma fraternity and the Hotel & Restaurant Department, with 3-0 records, are leading the Club Activities Board league.

Sigma Tau Sigma put down Alpha Phi Omega April 9 with a score of 40-28. The next night the Sigma Taus edged the International Relations Club, 33-26.

The H&R ball club had two close games, but emerged on top of both, defeating the Filipino Club 20-14, and just nipping the Recreation Association, 40-38.

In other games the Recreation Association downed the IRC 31-21. The Guardsman, led by Warren Downes and Nick Peters, played the entire game with five men and no bench, losing to Alpha Phi Omega, 47-38. Bob Dottson hit 25 for the winners.

An all time attendance record for San Francisco's Cow Palace was set during the 1958 edition of the National Sports & Boat Show when 261,433 customers attended the ten-day event, purchasing over four million dollars worth of souvenirs and equipment.

Yankees Again Choice To Bring Home Bacon

RAMBLINGS

By Nick Peters

AS MUCH as we'd hate to see it, the New York Yankees are destined to win their tenth American League pennant in 11 years this baseball season. The Yanks have simply too much money, too much luck, and too many top-flight pitchers; therefore, there are great odds that they'll finish ahead of their nearest rivals, Boston, Detroit, and Chicago. The AL alignment for 1958:

1. NEW YORK YANKEES: With the greatest pitching depth in all of baseball, Casey Stengel is faced with the "problem" of having nine starting pitchers in Whitey Ford (11-5), Art Ditmar (8-3), Bob Turley (13-6), Don Larsen (10-4), Sal Maglie (8-6), Bobby Shantz (11-5), Tom Sturdivant (16-6), Johnny Kucks (8-10), and Bob Grim (12-8).

Yogi Berra (.251) is slipping, but is still the best backstop in the league. Mickey Mantle (.365) is tops, but the outfielders flanking him, Hank Bauer (.259), Elston Howard (.253), Enos Slaughter (.254), and Harry Simpson (.270), are a bit weak. After Bill Skowron (.304), Gil McDougald (.289), and Jerry Lumpe (.340), the infield is below average with Andy Carey (.255) and Bobby Richardson (.256).

2. BOSTON RED SOX: If Manager Pinky Higgins can decide on a full-time infield that will function properly, the Bosox may be just the team to show up the Yanks. Pitching should be better than the records indicate with a corps of Frank Sullivan (14-11), Tom Brewer (16-13), Willard Nixon (12-13), Mike Fornieles (10-13), and Dave Sisler (7-8).

A back injury to Haywood Sullivan (.293 with San Francisco) leaves the catching chores to disappointing Sammy White (.215) and Pete Daley (.225). The outfield is terrific with the great Ted Williams (.388), Jackie Jensen (.281), and Jimmy Piersall (.261). Infielding is youthful, but not very consistent with Billy Consolo (.270), Ken Aspromante (PCL bat champ with .334), Frank Malzone (.292), Pete Runnels (.230 with Washington), Dick Gernert (.237), service returnee Don Buddin, Ted Lepcio (.241), and Billy Klaus (.252).

3. DETROIT TIGERS: Main potential of this fine young club should be realized this semester with Billy Martin as on added attraction. Chucking is solid with the ilkes of Jim Bunning (20-8), Frank Lary (11-16), Billy Hoeft (9-11), and Paul Foytack (14-11). Jim Hegan (.216) from Cleveland is one of the smartest handlers of pitchers in the league. His catching understudy Red Wilson (.242) is a better sticker.

A sound but not spectacular infield consists of Martin (.251), Frank Bolling (.259), Ray Boone (.273), and Reno Bertoia (.275). Outfield is average with Harvey Kuenn (.277), Charley Maxwell (.276), and Gus Zernial (.236).

4. CHICAGO WHITE SOX: Everyone picks the Windy City boys for the runner-up spot in the league, but we can't see it. Al Lopez got two top pitchers, Early Wynn (14-17) and Ray Moore (11-13), in trades, but sacrificed one of his ace hurlers (Jack Harshman) and gave away all his power hitting in Larry Doby and Minnie Minoso.

Newcomers Wynn and Moore will be aided by Billy Pierce (20-12), Bob Keegan (10-8), Dick Donovan (16-6), and Jim Wilson (15-8) to form a highly reputable hill staff. Catching is good with Sherm Lollar (.256) and Les Moss (.270). The infield of Nellie Fox (.317), Billy Goodman (.294 with Baltimore), Walt Dropo (.256), Earl Torgeson (.286), Luis Aparicio (.257), Tom Umphlett (.272), and Lou Berberet (.261). The infield is poor with Herb Plews (.271), Eddie Yost (.251), Rocky Bridges (.228), and Norm Zauchin (.264). Jim Lemon (.285) joins with Sievers to give the Nats a powerful one-two punch in the garden. The other spot will be manned by either Albie Pearson or Whitey Herzog.

5. CLEVELAND INDIANS: The Injuns are being sold short because of last year's poor showing, but it must be granted that the team claims only one of the loop's most powerful outfields in Rocky Colavito (.252), Minnie Minoso (.310), and Larry Doby (.288), as well as baseball's finest young pitcher Herb Score, who was seriously injured in '57.

Bob Lemon (6-11), Mike Garcia (12-8), Ray Narleski (11-5), Don Mossi (11-10), and Cal McLish (9-7) are the other flingers. Catching is green with Hal Naragon (.256) and Russ Nixon (.281). Vic Wertz' broken ankle hurt the infield and all that's left are rundown Bobby Avila (.268), Chico Carrasquel (.276), Fred Hatfield (.202) and Mickey Vernon (.241).

6. BALTIMORE ORIOLES: Could surprise, having good pitching and many veteran clutch hitters. Spots of brilliance are often displayed by able moundsmen like Billy Loes (12-7), Connie Johnson (14-11), George Zuverink (10-8), and newly acquired Jack Harshman (8-8). Catching is above average with Gus Triandos (.254) and Joe Ginsberg (.274).

The ability of the infield is questionable when the stations are manned by unproved players like Bob Boyd (.318), Billy Gardner (.262), Brooks Robinson (.239), and Willie Miranda (.194). The outfield is good with Gene Woodling (.321), Jim Busby (.238), Al Pilarcik (.278), and Bob Nieman (.276).

7. WASHINGTON SENATORS: For years the cry labeling the Nats was "first in war, first in peace, and last in the American League." This year they are destined to climb to seventh on the strength of the great Roy Sievers (.301) and some rapidly developing youngsters. The pitchers are better than their marks would indicate, but the staff isn't deep enough. Pedro Ramos (12-16), Russ Kemmerer (7-11), Camlio Pascual (8-17), and Chuck Stobbs (8-20) are the big threats.

Catching is solid and deep with Clint Courtney (.267), Ed Fitzgerald (.272), and Lou Berberet (.261). The infield is poor with Herb Plews (.271), Eddie Yost (.251), Rocky Bridges (.228), and Norm Zauchin (.264). Jim Lemon (.285) joins with Sievers to give the Nats a powerful one-two punch in the garden. The other spot will be manned by either Albie Pearson or Whitey Herzog.

8. KANSAS CITY ATHLETICS: Things aren't looking up for the A's. Pitching is poor with Ned Garver (6-13), Virgil Trucks (9-7), and Duke Maas (10-14 with Detroit) the top guns. Catching is the strong attribute of this miserable squad with Hal Smith (.303) and Frank House (.259).

Infielding is below average with Vic Power (.259), Joe DeMaestri (.245), Billy Hunter (.191), Hector Lopez (.292), and Mike Baxes (.303 in International League). The outfield is fairly powerful, but not good. Bob Cerv (.272), Bob Martyn (.267), Bill Tuttle (.251 with Detroit) and Woody Held (.239) man the outer positions.

Red Sox, White Sox, Tigers Main Threats

Undefeated Ram Netters Face Oakland Friday; Victory Will Bring First Title To College

By Warren Downes

If the college's undefeated tennis team wins its match this Friday against Oakland it will win the first tennis championship in the college's history.

On April 9, the Ram team defeated previously undefeated San Mateo, 6-1. The Rams were victorious in all but one of the singles matches as Jim Watson won in straight sets, 6-1, 6-1; while Nick Scharf got off to a slow start, but won anyway, 1-6, 6-4, 6-3. Vic Saschin and Fred Watters also were victorious, 9-7, 6-2, and 6-3, 6-1, respectively. Doubles winners were Scharf-Saschin, 6-2, 6-3, and Watson-Watters, 6-0, 6-2.

In another league match, held on April 10, West Contra Costa fell before the college's tremendous strength, 7-0. Winners were Watson, Scharf, Saschin, Watters and Jim Howard in the singles, while Scharf-Saschin and Bill Chin-Watters won in the doubles.

On April 11 the Rams met and defeated Stockton, 6-1, in their third league match in as many days. Winners for the Rams were Watson, Scharf, Saschin, Watters and Howard in the singles, and Watters-Howard in the doubles.

Ram Divoters Drop Match With Oakland

Loss of a golf match against Oakland was possibly due to over-confidence, Coach Grover Kiemmer explained. At the start of the match the Rams seemed to have everything under control, but at the end the match depended on the work of one man.

Gordon Gruber's half point wasn't enough, as Rodge Earlson of Oakland made the one point difference that finished the match 8½ to 6½.

Low medalist for the college was Tony Agiolo, who has been consistently shooting in the mid 70's.

This Friday the golfers will clash with Stockton at Harding Park.

Roy Tripaldi Gets Five Hits As College Baseballers Drop Pair To Modesto Pirates, 14-0, 15-7

By John Henry

Modesto played host to Lee Eisan's Ram nine last Saturday and treated the locals like anything but guests as they swept both games of a double bill to hand the Rams their fifth straight Big Eight loss.

The luckless college squad fell prey to the heavy bats of the Pirates and had a mark of 29 runs and 25 hits scored on them in the slam bang afternoon of baseball on the Modesto campus.

Once again the Rams just couldn't get the hits when they were needed the most and continued to make mistakes when the chips were down. The twin loss Saturday gave the college's boys the cellar spot.

Modesto started fast in the first game and with the aid of several Ram miscues put across their first run of the long afternoon. A Modestan got to first on a walk and went to third on an infield grounder on which no play was made. When pitcher Freddie Glosser threw to second to stop a steal the Bue runner on third charged home with the initial score.

—In the second frame Modesto added another tally when Bill Nichols singled and was sent home when a hard hit single to right field got past Bud Williams. Glosser stopped another Modesto score when he picked up a bouncing grounder and threw to catcher John May who tagged the runner coming in. Glosser got in trouble in the third inning and gave up six runs which came about on only one hit and three Ram errors. The Bues continued hitting and George Mix relieved Glosser in the fourth.

The Rams came back stronger in the nightcap but still went down to defeat as Modesto pulled ahead in the fourth inning of the seven inning affair and added eight more runs in a wild sixth inning which spelled defeat for Elsan's charges. Ram starter Earl Fauss just didn't have it that day and was replaced by Al LeMire in the second inning. LeMire was tough until the fourth inning when Modesto tallied four runs to give them the lead they never relinquished.

Roy Tripaldi took his turn in the sixth and couldn't halt the rampaging Buck attack. Tripaldi, by the way, was the shining light in the Ram lineup as he hit 5 for 6 in both games and turned in a sparkling performance at shortstop. The Rams committed 12 errors compared to Modesto's three for the afternoon. This plus some all around good play by the Buc infield was too much for the college nine to cope with.

Anti-Litterbug Campaign Declared

Council Passes All Remaining Spring Budgets

By Lois Cosden

Don Smith, chairman of the special committee assigned to expedite campus clean-up, last week told the Student Council the results of the public address broadcast to picnickers and smokers outside the south end of the Science Building.

A mixture of soft music and firm admonishments to litterbugging offenders was wafted from the loudspeaker rigged in the trees during college hour. Smith asked council's approval to make the arrangement permanent to keep the student body conscious of how they dispose of cigarette butts, paper scraps and leftover snacks. Visiting canines have a limit to what they can consume in the latter line.

Isolating each item of individual organization budget requests for study and amendment, council completed allocations. The Spring 1958 budget as released by Finance Chairman Liz Thrush follows:

Physicists from the University of California and Stanford and diplomats from foreign consulates in San Francisco will be engaged to lecture. Four major speakers per semester are scheduled to appear. They are as yet unnamed.

Adolph Hersvick, Club Activities Board president, introduced a proposal to have the board composed of the 22 campus clubs' respective presidents.

Casting Completed For Production In May Of The Wayward Saint; Crichton Closes Tomorrow Night

Sets for Crichton come down tomorrow night, and Friday the set for The Wayward Saint starts going up, according to Michael Griffin, director of the little theater.

Already in intensive rehearsal with a complete cast selected and with several special effects being planned, The Wayward Saint is a story of the devil versus an Irish priest who seems to be well on the way to sainthood.

Exiled to a distant parish by the bishop because of his habit of talking to animals, persuading plum trees to bear cherries, and holding long conversations with two donkeys, the canon is confronted with a formidable housekeeper who does not believe in having birds around a house and is equally strict where other animals are concerned.

When the Baron de Baulbus moves in and starts a campaign to win the canon's soul, he finds such innocence and goodness that he has to corrupt those about the canon in order to capture him. This includes the beautiful Maura, the inflexible Kiilikat, and even the birds who sing for the canon.

The cast will include Fred Fisher in the role of the canon, Dave Terry as the Bishop, Virginia Rae as Miss Kiilikat, Leah Pashoian as Maura, Jordy Cooney as Peador the Puck, Dave Tipton as the Baron, Ann Osorno as the nymph Sabena, Virginia Evans as the nymph Serena, Jules Farmer as Salambo, Bob Carpenter as MeDara, and Bruce Johnson as Joe.

"This will be one of our most unusual productions," Griffin said. Certain special effects that have been around for a long time will be utilized, and with the new cast and set design already selected, we expect to produce a fine show."

Scheduled production dates for the play are May 9, 10, 16, 17, 23 and 24. Admission will be by Associated Student card or $1.

Council Appoints CJCSGA Delegates

Delegates to the semi-annual California Junior College Student Government Association conference to be held May 8-10 at the Huntington Hotel in Pasadena were chosen April 17 by the Student Council.

They are Freddie Hicks, Darlene Enfield, Elizabeth Thrush, Jack Patterson and Don Smith. These delegates will attend workshop sessions in athletics, activities, finance, student government and public relations.

Honor systems, scholarships, fraternities and the two-party system of student government are but a few of the numerous topics to be discussed at the conference.

This college was host to the last conference held at San Francisco in November, 1957.

Prep Day Hosts High School Leaders May 7

Student leaders from the public high schools in San Francisco will be here on Prep Day, Wednesday, May 7, to view for themselves an average day in and out of college classrooms, according to Darlene Enfield, Associated Student vice-president, in charge of Prep Day plans.

Fitzgerald Takes Lead In Pistol Matches

After holding first place as top individual shooter in the intramural pistol matches for the past six weeks, Lou Paglierani dropped back into second position with Fred Fitzgerald taking the lead.

Going into the seventh of the ten weekly matches, "The Deadeyes" are still maintaining a comfortable lead, followed by Marion Timm's "Dreamers." "The Alibiers," captained by Geraldine Rush, have moved to third place, thus relinquishing the cellar position to the "J. C. Six."

The three high individual scores of this week's match were Fitzgerald with 276, and Charles Terry and Paglierani tied with 270.

New Courses Offered In Effort To Boost Education Program

By Robert Liu

In a further stride to update the college's educational program, 15 new courses will be gradually introduced during the Fall 1958 and Spring 1959 semesters. Also within that period 30 presently offered courses will be deleted.

Coordinator Lloyd D. Luckmann, in announcing the changes, also expects a slight reshuffle in other courses to cope with expected student needs and recently announced changes in university transfer requirements for upper division standing.

Several of the new courses, Luckmann said, are actually present courses that have been revised.

As an example, he explained, the new Astronomy 20 (Astronautics), was previously offered as Astronomy 20 (Upper Atmosphere and Space Flight).

In several previous instances, he said, language requirements consisted of four years of no more than two foreign languages. Now that has been changed to three years of any language.

To meet that, Luckmann said, the college will introduce a four-unit intermediate Latin course dealing with a review of grammar, composition and reading.

The reason 22 courses are being deleted, he said, is because of the lack of enthusiasm among students to take them.

New courses added, with units in parentheses, are as follows:

- Astronomy 20—Astronautics (2). Physical characteristics of the upper atmosphere, rocket principles, instruments and vehicles for upper air research and space exploration, earth satellites, space stations, lunar and interplanetary flights, and environmental problems of man in space.
- Biological Sciences, Biological Concepts (2). Exploration of the growth and development of the science of biology, from its earliest beginnings down to the present day.
- Business 88—Secretarial Machine Transcription (2). A thorough review of letter setup with emphasis on punctuation, paragraphing, spelling and vocabulary.
- 154 — Air Transportation Methods and Practices (3). A survey of the fundamentals of air transportation in preparation for non-pilot employment by the airlines.
- 184 — Real Estate Practice and Problems (3). Emphasis on the fundamental practices of real estate that are involved in the ownership and transfer of real property interests and problems of operating a real estate business.
- Community Leadership 57—Work Experience (1-3). Service limited to college campus.
- Criminology 67 — Administration of Records Bureaus and Report Writing (2). Value, use and need for records, records division, complaint records, arrest and disposition records, property records, personal identification records, general index, administrative records, report writing and reporting regulations.
- Geography 3 — Introduction to Meteorology (3). A study of the behavior of the atmosphere to provide a basic foundation for those interested in weather observation and in weather forecasting, in the use of weather instruments and climatic studies, basic to those interested in aviation.
- Latin 3—Intermediate Latin (4). Review of grammar, composition and reading.
- Ornamental Horticulture 80 A-B-C-D (3-3-3-3). The study of the principles and the practice in arranging flowers used by florists. Covering design, theories of form, color, balance, scale, focus, composition and unity.
- Photography 115 — Photographic Problems (2). Supervised practical experience in illustrative photography. The student will have the complete responsibility in preparing pictures for actual publications.
- 117—Photographic Work Experience (2). Supervised photographic work off campus.
- Political Science 56—American Institutions (3). A study of American institutions, United States history, California state and local government, meeting the requirements of the State of California for graduation from the college.
- Spanish G11—Conversation Spanish (2). Practical conversation on subjects of general interest, designed to give fluency in speaking the language.
- Zoology 3—Microscopy and Micro-Photography (1). Discussion of and practical experience in the critical use of the microscope and photography through the microscope.

Pledging Antics Concluded; Organizations Preparing For Spring Festival, Midterms

By Jerry Redford

NOW that Hell Week has ended, the fraternities and sororities are quieted down and preparing for the Spring Festival this Friday, and making plans for the final initiation of pledges to active membership.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity has accepted 10 rushees as pledges to the fraternity. They are Ken Cooke, pledge captain; Len Slater, pledge treasurer; Dick Allen, Dave Ervin, Hasko Hofmeister, Robert Klotz, Ferd Marwedel, Roger Moreno and Jerry Wilson. Plans are now being made for a float and booth for the Spring Festival.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority observed a very successful Hell Week. New pledges accepted into the sorority are Yvonne Weisse, Rita Ramos and Mary Kelly. The sisters are now planning for the I.S.C. Ball, and the coming pinning dinner, to be held in May.

Phi Beta Rho sorority held its last business meeting in order to make plans for their Spring Festival float and booth. The coffee preference hour was held for prospective pledges at the home of Lonana Pariani.

Tonight the College of the Pacific band will give a band concert for those of San Francisco who enjoy fine band music. They plan to play a variety of all types of music. Time and place for the concert is 8 p.m. at the St. Ignatius High School auditorium, on Stanyan Street.

The Veterans Club of the college recently hosted a regional veterans conference here in order to iron out problems mutual to the clubs. They also drew up a preliminary constitution, which will be ratified at the next vets' conference to be held in May at Santa Rosa.

Alpha Phi Omega fraternity has initiated 12 pledges this semester. On the weekend of April 11, 12 and 13, the fraternity participated in the A.P.O. sectional meeting at Stanford University. Represented were colleges throughout the state, Hawaii and Arizona. Along with national officers from throughout the nation, they joined in a program of workshop discussions, tours, and orientation on the national convention to be held in Austin, Texas, this August.

Zeta Chi sorority accepted five pledges into its group during the recent Hell Week festivities. Plans are now being made for a float for the Spring Festival in conjunction with Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity.

The Filipino Club held its acquaintance party at the fountain area of Smith Hall last Friday. It was a very successful affair, with the attendance at almost 100. Plans are now in progress for a picnic later this semester.

Members of the Newman Club hold their meetings on the second and fourth Tuesday of each month at the St. Emydius Hall located at Jules and De Montford Streets. At the next meeting, nominations for next semester's officers will be made. Members of the organization are now making plans for popcorn, peanut and candied apple booth for the Spring Festival.

College Birdmen Acquire Own Plane

The birdmen of City College not only have the legal right to fly but also the means by which to do it, according to Hank Frolich, vice-president of the Flying Club.

The Flying Club was incorporated two weeks ago, Frolich said, all legal papers and proceedings having been completed.

Frolich said the club has acquired its own plane recently and quarters it at Kris-Mack near Harper Aviation. The plane itself is an L-3 (Bilson-3) and for those not too airminded, it is very similar to the Piper Cub type plane.

The club itself has a total of 14 members, and Frolich warned that any students wishing to join should apply immediately, because the membership may be closed in the near future. The initiation fee for the club is $50, and the dues are $1.50 per month, small enough fee, according to Frolich, for the opportunities presented. The club came into existence last semester.

A Cappella Choir Sings At San Jose

Plans have been completed and music selected for the Choir Festival at San Jose State College Friday, May 5, during which both the Men's Glee Club and the A Cappella Choir here will present a varied program.

Featured in the A Cappella Choir presentation will be four numbers in Greek including a communion hymn, Soma Christu. The group will also sing in Latin, Tenebrae Factae Sunt, and in English, Praise God In All His Glory, as well as several others.

Men's Glee Club will present the first and fourth movements only of Randall Thompson's Testament of Freedom for the Choir Festival, but will sing the entire 24-minute work for the combined concert with the Sixth Army Band in the Presidio Sunday, May 18, at 2 p.m.

The choir is also preparing to sing a musically exciting version of God Of Our Fathers with the Sixth Army Band in the concert here during the double college hour Friday, May 23, Robert Morton, director of both groups, said. "Everyone is invited to attend this performance and outside guests will be particularly welcome," he added.

IRS Presents Fiesta Latino Americana Friday

Music, Songs And Costumes To Highlight Night Of Frolicking In Smith Hall Starting At 8

By Alberto Salamanca

Fiesta Latino Americana, a 90-minute review followed by a general dance, will be presented this Friday night by the members of the International Relations Club, according to Alfredo Aubone, the club's social chairman and the student in charge of casting the affair to be held at Smith Hall from 8 p.m. to 12 midnight.

Dances, music and songs, south of the border folklore with displays of typical costumes and ornaments will be the show's highlights.

A potpourri of the latest Latin dances, such as Calypso from Jamaica, Cha Cha Cha from Cuba and the Merengue from the Dominican Republic, as well as the folkloric ones, Guatemala's Son, Mexican Hat Dance, Peru's Marinera, Bolivia's Huayno and Brazil's famous Samba will feature the first part of the program.

After-the-show entertainment will be provided by two bands, composed entirely of Latin-American students here.

Admission to the affair is $1 with IRC or Associated Student card, or $1.25 without. Dress for the occasion will be semi-formal.

Tickets may be obtained from Joseph M. Jacobsen, foreign student adviser here, in S-186, from members of the International Relations Club or at the door, Aubone stated.

Students won't be disappointed if they come to this event, Aubone added, saying, "We are doing the best we can so the show will be a success, even greater than the one we had last year."

Helping Aubone in the preparation of the Fiesta, the different committees heads are Chamberlin Febre, ticket sales; Hilda Lozada, refreshments; Alberto Salamanca, publicity; Alexander Bogdis, lighting; Jhavery Narendra, staging, and Mario Gutierrez, decorations.

Plans For 23rd Commencement Program Started

Tentative plans for the coming 23rd annual commencement exercises have begun in the office of John J. Brady, coordinator, Division of Student Welfare.

Brady, chairman of the commencement committee, said the exercises will be held in the Riordan High School auditorium Friday night, June 13.

According to Brady, the college usually has the use of Riordan auditorium for its commencement exercises. Prior to the completion of Riordan High School in 1948, the college's commencement exercises were often held in San Francisco Opera House.

Louis G. Conlan, president of the college, will preside at the ceremonies, and Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Harold Spears, will present the awards.

As yet the student speakers have not been selected, but tryouts will be announced soon, under the direction of William Culver of the English department.

The Scholastic Cups will be awarded to the student with the highest scholastic average, and the President's Award Plaque goes to the man and woman graduates who have given the most service to the college.

The size of the graduating class will determine the number of tickets received by students for their immediate relatives. As pointed out previously, the plans for the exercises have just begun and are neither complete nor definite.

There is an indication, however Brady said, that all of the approximately 1,400 seats in Riordan auditorium will be filled on June 13.

Transferring Vet Must Sign Form

Veterans who intend to transfer to another college or school at the end of this semester were advised this week by Robin Dunn, veterans counselor, to fill out a transfer form before leaving the college.

"If the form is not filled out before they leave, they will only have to return to do it in the Fall," Dunn said, "or they may lose time and benefits." The form must be filled out for both summer and fall classes, and the best time for completing it is somewhere around the middle of May, Dunn declared.

Band Seeking 'A' March For Parade Slated May 28-29

Plans are being completed for the band to get on the bandwagon for Proposition "A," according to Meyer M. Cahn, band director. It is hoped that a truck will be provided by the Citizen's Committee for Education which can haul the band from place to place in the city for impromptu performances supporting the proposition.

"In addition," Cahn said, "the band is running a small contest to try to find an original march to be used as The Proposition A March,' and offers a prize of $5.00 for a winning contribution."

Dates for the traveling performance are May 28 and 29, but the band has plans to entertain the student body twice before that time.

In addition to the semi-annual concert on Friday, May 9, plans are being completed for a jazz session in the little theater during the college hour on May 16. A committee of three including Nick Massenkoff as chairman, Cliff Cehand and Bill Forshay are busy making arrangements for the show.

Choir Groups In Festival At San Jose State

Approximately 50 members of the Men's Glee Club and the A Cappella Choir leave the campus next Monday for a Choir Festival at San Jose State College. All members of both groups are officially excused for the day as they travel to join nearly 700 other singers from several Northern California Junior Colleges, Robert Morton, choir director here and also chairman of the festival, said.

"This is not a competition," Morton stated, "but it is a splendid opportunity to see, hear, and compare our groups with the rest of the colleges in the area."

Other two-year colleges represented in the Festival are Modesto, Vallejo, East and West Contra Costa colleges, Santa Rosa, College of Marin, Oakland and several others.

Numbers by the choir will include four Greek hymns sung in the original language, one Latin number sung in Latin, and several numbers in English. The Men's Glee Club will present the First and Fourth Movements of Randall Thompson's Testament Of Freedom. This work is a 24-minute composition based on writings of Thomas Jefferson.

Plans are also in progress for the Men's Glee Club to appear with the Sixth Army Band on May 18, in the Presidio Club, Morton said, and there is a distant possibility of a television appearance at a later date.

2 H&R Students To Be Presented Sheraton Awards

Two students from the college's Hotel and Restaurant Department will receive the Sheraton Award donated annually by the Sheraton Hotel Corporation of America, Instructor Lawrence Wong announced today.

Winners of this year's awards are William Mason, Fall 1957, and Phillip Rauscher, Spring 1958. Both students will be presented with an individually engraved plaque and each will have his name added to the perpetual trophy which is here at the college.

Prior to receiving these awards, the winners and members of their classes will be guests at a dinner to be held in the English Room of the Sheraton-Palace Hotel at 6 p.m. today.

This year will be the third in which the awards have been presented to H&R students here, Wong said. Winners are selected by voting of faculty members and students, who select three candidates.

AS To Host High School Principals, 35 Student Leaders In Annual Prep Day Activities Here Next Wednesday

Student leaders from the seven public high schools in San Francisco along with their principals will be among the guests of this college for the Prep Day activities next Wednesday, starting at 9 a.m., according to Darlene Enfield, Associated Student vice-president, in charge of Prep Day plans.

Brower Dimond, president of Alpha Phi Omega, will receive the guests at the faculty dining room in Smith Hall where they will register and have coffee and doughnuts served to them by the Hotel and Restaurant staff.

Later on the principals will attend a conference in President Louis G. Conlan's office to discuss the secondary school situation.

With a set schedule in mind, guides Katie Ahern, Audrey Jones, Sandra Simonian, and Miss McArdle plus Dimond, Hicks, Jerry Redford and Frank Rogers, will conduct the visitors on a tour of the campus.

From 11 a.m. until noon, students will visit the classes of their choice, Miss Enfield added.

Peter X. Chevrier, graduate (class '51) of this college and now sales representative for the Carnation Milk Company in San Francisco, will be the guest speaker at the Prep Day luncheon.

As a lasting souvenir of this occasion, the visiting students will receive a group photograph of themselves taken earlier in the morning.

Village Scene Of Soph Ball To Be Held May 24

Stephen Paul and his orchestra have been engaged for the Soph Ball, which will be held Saturday, May 24, at The Village, according to Jerry Redford, president of the Sophomore Class here.

"Committees have been formed to prepare for the Soph-Prof softball game and the Soph Ball," Redford said. "Nick Peters is in charge of the game to be held Friday, May 23, and Beverly Castellacci is in charge of tallies for the Soph Ball."

The Village was a wise choice because of the large ballroom and the adequate parking facilities.

Construction Of Arts Building To Start Next Fall

Construction of a two million dollar Arts building will begin in September, Dr. Louis G. Conlan announced this week. The college president said the Board of Education has already approved preliminary plans for the structure and that excavation of an area north of the main campus will get underway as soon as contracts are let this summer.

The 27-classroom Arts Building will occupy 65,000 square feet of the former Hurley Village grounds and will take 18 months to complete. A three-story structure of contemporary design, it will include pastel-painted classrooms, 10 laboratories, a little theater and a closed-circuit television network. The little theater will accommodate 400 people and will include a small TV studio.

Hurley Village, named in honor of former instructor John Hurley who was killed in action during World War II, was closed early this year and the buildings removed. The housing project was built to meet the needs of World War II veterans returning to college in the late decade.

Upon completion of the Arts Building, the college will be able to accommodate 7,200 students for an increase of 1,200 over its present enrollment. Dr. Conlan emphasized that although no new courses are planned, the added facilities will enable the college to offer more classes in currently-available courses and to increase the number of science laboratory classes.

Chemise Here, Women Cheer, Men Jeer But . . .

Saggy Sack With Blousey Back Has Knack

By Robert Liu

Sack dresses, this year's controversy in feminite attire, have finally infiltrated into the college.

Co-eds, obviously conscious of the stir they're causing, coolly stroll on the campus in their versions of the chemise, some with bows, some without. Many bloat around the waist and taper toward the ends.

But all, as one critic commented, resemble "a combination of an oversized Hawaiian shirt and a Mother Hubbard nightgown."

A random poll of 12 students regarding the "Sack" revealed only one highly critical view.

Arthur R. Paul says they remind him of shopping bags.

"Women have not only dug back into the age of the flappers," he complains, "they've taken the togas off the backs of the Romans."

As a remedy, Paul suggests a modication so that "a fellow doesn't have to keep guessing as to what the girl's shaped like between the neck and knees."

Other opinions were almost identical.

Helen S. Merrill believes the style is here to stay.

William Gibbons: "For a girl with a lot to offer the dress makes the figure more mysterious. For the girl who doesn't have much to offer, it covers a lot. For the girl in between, it doesn't make much difference."

Barbara Brooks, a ceramics major, who thinks the dress looks best on slender girls, believes it should be introduced as standard uniform for ceramics majors.

Even the two co-eds registered for the Miss San Francisco 1958 contest, Sue Bellinger and Leah Pashoian, have their complaints.

Both agreed that it's more of a craze that's been projected into prominence by the publicity given it, and neither would "go out and buy one especially."

Leah said some of the more conservative versions were reasonable attire, but the others . . .

"After all," Sue added, "men don't really care for it and women dress for men, no?"

Even The Guardsman has proved that it isn't invulnerable where fashions are concerned.

One busy morning Editor-in-Chief Pat Metsack walked in wearing a flamboyant ensemble. Two seconds afer she closed the door even the cigarettes could be heard burning.

Pat's only comment: "It's comfortable."

Comments of the other reporters: "A feminine fad." "Reasonable." "Not bad — if modified." "(Censored).' Hmmm.

Voters Forget Issues, Play Yes-No Game At Election Time

SOMEONE, sometime must have said that one of the poorest informed persons in the United States is the voter. This statement, fortunately does not apply to ALL the voters. It does, however, apply to a large enough group to make one wonder just how our democracy has survived this long. Our editorial comment here is directed to these uninformed, who literally "goof-up the democratic process."

Most of the blame for this initial stupidity can be laid at the feet of the individual; the rest of it is the fault of the very groups who try to influence him one way or the other. About this time of year (with an election approaching on June 3) signs, TV and radio announcers, and the like make their appearance with a strong "vote yes on this" and a hearty "vote no on that." Obviously, the intended purpose of these groups is to aid the understanding of the voter. The purposes of the sponsoring groups are admirable (in most cases). The trouble lies in the fact that the voters pay little or no attention, and also in the fact that they are so easily swayed.

Because of a lack of understanding on the part of the individual, when voting day arrives he is so utterly confused that he neither remembers how he wanted to vote nor on what issue he is voting.

A question that comes to our mind is, why, when there is so much reading material on various issues available, doesn't the voter take the time to read it and try to understand just what is happening? This question remains unanswered in our minds. Although newspapers take definite stands they usually present both sides; explanatory material is mailed to registered voters, and reading material is available at all supporting campaign headquarters, some people cast their votes without the least idea of what the lever they are pulling signifies. The yes-no, yes-no technique seems to be most popular.

At the present this college is taking a firm stand on Proposition A. Vote Yes on A . . . our pass words until June 3. This issue will be emphasized and re-emphasized to the voting student and also to the non-voting student so that he may take home his understanding to parents. This paper is definitely for the proposition. Briefly, this issue is to increase the tax limit fifty cents in order to operate schools and supply them with adequate supplies and equipment, as well as with competent professional staff members.

Our point here, however, is not to emphasize the vote yes on A idea, for that will come later. Our point is to stress to the voter the necessity of becoming informed on both the pro's and con's of the various issues that will confront him on June 3.

A vote is better than no vote at all, but a vote cast with understanding and complete information is not only desirable but essential for the continuation of the democracy of which we are all so proud.

Foresight — Hard Boiled Eggs Key To Sherwood Success

By Ray Hackett

NOW is the time for all good fans to come to the aid of Don Sherwood, for this is the beginning of BKSM — Be Kind to Sherwood Month. Don, the bad boy of local TV, may be in trouble without realizing it. Don has a new television half-hour show called Sherwood's Unoriginal Amateur Hour tonight, KGO-TV, 6 o'clock; next week moves to 10 o'clock the same night).

The new show is a la Godfrey Talent Scouts, where every fourth week the three winners of the previous week compete, the champ receiving a week's engagement at Bimbo's 365 Club. But this new show has a gimmick which might turn on its star like Frankenstein did on his creator.

Sherwood's Frankenstein is the system of voting for the winner. All the voting will be done by postcards from viewers, which means it will be quite easy to figure out Don's popularity.

How popular is Don? Last week, asked about how he felt being opposite Perry Como, Don told the story of a fan who came up to him and asked why he wasn't on TV any more. Yes, Don is slipping, and this is the reason why the new show is on Wednesday.

Why is Don having so much trouble? Is it because on TV he has become conventional and has formed a pattern which he follows on every telecast? Now every viewer watching Sherwood can be almost certain he'll wear a suit, ride the sponsor and ask his guests embarrassing questions, but this isn't enough. This isn't the Sherwood who first captured the public fancy; this is a new Sherwood, a predictable Sherwood.

On the old San Francisco Tonight shows, Sherwood never, never wore a suit and he hated neckties. Don despised neckties so much he had a special tee-shirt made with a tie sewed to it which he wore when the local columnists complained of his sloppy appearance which was the "casual" look to all Don's fans. He was always unpredictable, missing something like 46 telecasts on the Tonight show.

This modern Sherwood would never think of walking on hard-boiled eggs, something which delighted viewers of the old Sherwood shows. Some will defend his new actions by stating he has become mature. Sure he has, and that's the trouble; Sherwood's great appeal was his unpredictability which many termed immaturity.

On radio it's a different story. Sherwood is the self-acclaimed "World's Greatest Disc Jockey." He has attacked Stockton; he has a club to top all clubs, the club club. Now he is even going to investigate the problems of the Navahoes. Don's radio personality leaves little to be desired. One of his favorite stunts, besides reading Tom Swift, is playing the top tunes which he hates. This wouldn't be worth mentioning except for the fact he plays them simultaneously.

If enough fans let Don know they preferred the old Sherwood, the walk-on-hard-boiled-eggs-barefooted Sherwood, Don may be his old self.

Being a loyal fan of the old Sherwood we are going to send him a hard-boiled egg. If any fans wish to participate in BKSM, they can do the same. Send the eggs to Don Sherwood, KGO-TV, Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco 2, or better yet deliver them personally. Number of eggs received will be printed in this space next week.

No Fad In Europe

Modern Jazz Breathes Rebellion, Is Wild, Subtle, But Most Of All Is Symbolic Of Freedom

By Mike Gibbons

Progressive jazz, being rebellious in nature and unconfined to any set compositional form save the instrumentalist's mind, might be considered anti-complacent. It is music that is never satisfied with remaining tranquil and calm. Its emotional content is keyed to the pitch of our time. Modern jazz breathes of rebellion and is both wild, yet subtle, but most of all it is free.

In Russia an American jazz long-playing record sells for as much as $100.00. Many Hungarians, during the last major upheaval, used jazz phrases as passwords to identify themselves to the guards at the Austrian border. These people regard jazz as synonymous with freedom.

Contemporary jazz is not viewed as a "fad" in Europe. The tremendous reception of our "jazz-ambassadors" demonstrates this. Brubeck and Armstrong never had it so good.

Still, only a minority of Americans seems to appreciate jazz as a true art form. Many people remain aloof and refuse to go beyond considering its origin, if they go that far. They barely scratch the surface in this field or in any other that is not looked upon as "public domain." Few of them realize that jazz was born, nourished and is now, painstakingly, growing into manhood in the United States.

Among other distinguishing characteristics, improvisation separates jazz from all other music forms. When spontaneity is lost in an artist's interpretation of a standard piece, so is true creative jazz.

Creative musicians strive to turn a simple repetitious melody into something unique. The conscientious artist doesn't lose sight of the initial melody. He creates extemporaneously, still allowing for and respecting the contributions of those accompanying him.

A few people might realize that it is not essentially important to recognize the persons playing a certain piece; but it is valuable to know how well the music is being rendered.

This ability to distinguish subtle polyrhythms from musical cliches is the main objective of a jazz club which is being formed on the campus.

Within a few months, a novice listener who joins this club will emerge from the inner sanctum of jazz musicology able to cast aside loud, hyperemotional blarings and repetitious, lackadaisical, meanderings for the vibrant, controlled efforts of a select few.

Aiding the novice and the curious will be an experienced number of rising musicians from the college.

For example, there is Earl Van, one of the top tenor sax men in the Bay Area. He has teamed up with Brew Moore on occasions.

In San Mateo is Larry Vucavich, who tingles a sparkling piano. A most swinging fingler, he is.

Then there's Phil Moore who tickles the ivories also, along with Jessie Hollins on his vibrant vibraphone. Moore just returned from Los Angeles where he left a tape recording with his "connection." It could click.

From the Westlake School of Music in Los Angeles comes George Fantages, drums and all. He was a member of the Westlake Big Band and it is big.

Doing a bit of arranging for different groups is Neal Pace. He also holds an alto sax the proper way, as he does an easel. The man dabbies in Art, no less.

Last but not least is Wally Stitch, who knocks out a mean beat on those canvas colored round things.

All these boys attend the college, and they don't just play; they also study here and are not anti-verbal in the least.

Anyone interested in joining this jazz club can attend the club's meeting during college hour on Fridays in B-4.

Vandals Do It Again

Gangsters Give Redwood Ram Coat Of Green

One incident that happened during the recent Hell Week remains a mystery: Who or what painted the Redwood Ram green for one day?

This occurrence is becoming extremely annoying since only last semester the same thing happened with black paint.

Although the culprits have not yet been discovered, rumor has it that the prank was done by the Wild Bunch Fraternity from Mafia County. This motorcycle gang delights in sabotaging Hell Week stunts on campuses all over the Bay Area. Since they strike at this most opportune time they are always certain of making a clean break and letting some naive pledge take the rap.

For those students who think they may have seen this motley group in action, the following is a description of the fraternity's standard costume: Mickey Mouse hat, blue suede shoes, Ivy league suspenders, fluorescent glow socks, and a black leather jacket with the words "Pelvis Pulverizers" on the back.

While the Redwood Ram is now back to normal color again, next semester new pledges may be detailed to guard the prized possession of the college. Constant vigilance alone can stop gangs like the Wild Bunch from sacking the college campus and causing such disturbances.

Shots At Ramdom

By Tom Tatera

A RATHER vigorous session of fisticuffs took place outside of the Smith Hall cafeteria a few Fridays back. Two college students, vying for the affections of one girl, decided to settle their differences in a gentlemanly manner. Namely, by trying to bash each other's brains in.

One small coin, tossed into the air, might have settled this argument with less wear and tear on the fists. But, when emotions overpower reason, succeeding actions tend to become highly illogical. (Sounds good, anyway.)

• • •

BELATED congratulations are in order for all those pledges who managed to come out of Hell Week alive. You are now big brothers and big sisters. You belong, in the truest sense of the word. However, don't throw away the beanies. Instead, save them for next semester's victims. See if they have what it takes to fit into them. This could be quite a ritual, the bestowing of the beanie!

• • •

SURPRISE, SURPRISE. That famous silver pole, located across from the main entrance of the Science Building, is not just a decorative piece. It acts as a base and balance for the college's telescope, and extends all the way from the basement to the observatory. This should come as quite a shock to those students who thought the pole was there soleiy to lean upon and meet friends by.

CLASSES are getting too noisy. What with a humanities instructor playing Wagner's Ride Of The Valkyries during one period, and a psychology instructor blowing off a firecracker during the next, it is getting so a guy has to go home to sleep.

Perhaps there is a conspiracy going on among the faculty to keep the students awake. Education fights back. (In a sneaky sort of way.)

Parents Blame Youth For Their Own Mistakes

By Don Seratti

WHEN something goes wrong in certain phases of life, people are quick to find a scapegoat on whom they can place the blame.

Some of the more thoughtful individuals go so far as to suggest alternate situations for the status quo. But in most cases, it seems that in the frantic effort to redress existing evils overnight, the crux of the problem is often overlooked.

This condition applies quite aptly to the current—and closely related—problems of juvenile violence and educational indifference.

Most observers of America's youth will readily admit that this group constitutes a problem of alarming proportions. Substantiating these convictions on a local basis are facts released recently by the state Attorney General's office, revealing that over the past two years in juvenile cases in California, traffic violations are up 25 per cent; delinquent acts, 24 per cent, and assault, 3 per cent. In addition, more than 60 per cent of those arrested for crimes of violence in California in 1956 were juveniles.

PROPOSALS MADE

To combat these frightening facts that make one wonder just what our youths are coming to, several proposals have recently been made. Some of these proposals would shift academically poor students into work programs, enact statewide curfew laws, crack down on narcotics peddlers, avoid sensationalism in reporting juvenile offenses, and reduce "education in crime" comic books and television programs.

Admittedly, these noble proposals will help to alleviate some of the difficulties, but to rely solely on these plans is tantamount to calling the horse back after he has escaped through the barn door.

What is needed much more than these preventive measures is to take a closer look into the deplorable situation regarding the homes and family lives of the troublesome youth—in short, to close the barn door before the horse has a chance to escape.

It is in the home, during the formative pre-school years, where the child —who of course doesn't know right from wrong when he is born—acquires the characteristics he will possess for the remainder of his life.

HOW WILL CHILD ACT?

How the child will act in later life depends greatly on the early influence he receives from his parents. If he is reared by parents who are conscious of the necessity of disciplining him properly and at the same time making his home life a pleasant one, chances are he'll grow up respecting authority and often depending on his family for needed advice and companionship for many years.

But as parents differ, so does the child. The real culprits behind today's juvenile delinquents are the parents who are indifferent to their child's behavior, who "can't be bothered" with his faults, who send him out into the street to play to "get rid of him" and the parents who, by their conflicting attitudes, make the child's home life a most unpleasant one and virtually force him to seek pleasure outside of the home at a much too early age.

The child's educational problems, which can only be touched upon here, also apply largely to his home environment. For example, the parents who think that the school is responsible for a child's personality development as for his scholastic achievements are contributing quite heavily to an education burden they could easily lighten by taking a more imaginative attitude.

One need not possess psychological insight to arrive at these conclusions —only a reasonable amount of common sense.

When youngsters are seen committing crimes or disregarding school work, don't blame the comic books and lack of curfew laws—blame the "delinquent parents" and the unsatisfactory home life they bring to their children. These people, rather than their children, are the ones who should be reformed.

The Democratic party of today claims lineal descent from the first Republican party, and President Jefferson as its founder.

Top Kickers In Local Amateur Soccer Scene Come From Roy Diederichsen's College Squad

By Pastor Valle-Garay

Not EVERYTHING in San Francisco is baseball. Not everything being played here is baseball, that is.

Soccer, the world's most popular sport, continues gaining fans and interest in the States as championships are held throughout the nation all year round and professional teams from the Old Continent and South America tour America rather frequently.

In the major-sports town of San Francisco soccer has received more than the expected welcome a cosmopolitan city gives to a foreign visitor, and it has been accepted by its people with warmth.

Thousands of Europeans and Latin American residents here, as well as "Yankee" fans, gather every Sunday at the Balboa Soccer Stadium, at the Beach Chalet, the Bay View and Ocean View playgrounds and at other places, to watch or play the sport of kicks.

A total of no less than 40 teams, with a minimum of 18 players to each squad, have been for years assembled by the California Football Association into various divisions (leagues), with the first division participants leading the local soccer ranks in game quality and teamwork skill.

Some of this division's teams have kickers who played professional soccer in the Western Hemisphere and in Europe. Their game is in the world's soccer standards what Triple-A baseball is in the U.S.A. as compared to major league play.

First division teams represent their cities in State competition, play afterward for the National Football (soccer) championship and from these teams players are selected who will represent the United States in international matches and the Olympic Games.

Nevertheless the fact that makes the soccer issue of special interest to the college is the role played by students here, former members of the Ram varsity squad, in this First Division.

The college's training program, because of soccer mentor Roy Diederichsen's interest in developing good teams here for the last ten years, or perhaps because of the college's international atmosphere, has contributed to the San Francisco leagues some of their squads' top kickers.

Diederichsen's pupils annually have the honor of being the only two-year college students participating in the Northern California Intercollegiate Soccer Conference, composed of four-year colleges and universities such as Stanford, USF, Santa Clara, Cal and others. Yet, the Ram socceriers have not finished worse than third in the NCISC championship for a long time, and last year took second place in the conference after tying their traditional "enemies," the USF champs, 2-2, and losing to the Cal Bears, 2-1.

Seven of that Ram eleven's first stringers are currently starring on First Division teams here. They are All-American half Roland Prydz, his All-Conference brother, center forward Richard, and left half Tom Erasmy, who play for the league-leading Vikings A.C.

Fullback Al Morales, the husky Nicaraguan, last December at the Block SF banquet took home everything but the microphone as he was awarded All-Star, All-Conference, All-American and Most Valuable Player honors. He is playing now for the Union Espanola squad, which holds third place in San Francisco's top division.

Other players are Herb Weiss, a member of the San Francisco All-Stars and one of the first division leading scorers, playing with the Hakoah kickers, and the brothers Al and Eddie Zelaya, first stringers for the Mexico A. C. squad.

Elden Davis Paces Golf Win Over Sacramento

Returning to San Francisco as victors after playing an out-of-city golf contest, the college varsity scored a 12 to 3 win over Sacramento. Elden Davis led the linksmen as second top scorer of the match. Mike Korich, who scored the only three points for Sacramento, shot a 76.

"Davis, who shot a 71," (one stroke under par), remarked Coach Grover Klemmer, "played an exceptional game of golf." On the last nine holes, Davis surprised all by hitting five birdies.

It was a rare day for the college squad, as this was undoubtedly the highest scoring match of the season. "If the boys shoot as they did in this match consistently for the rest of the season, we might be contenders for the championship," Coach Klemmer said. The whole squad broke 80.

Baseballers Win Pair From Santa Rosa, 8-3, 6-5

The college's horsehiders "found" themselves last Saturday and finally put together enough good ballplaying to upend Santa Rosa twice, 8-3 and 6-5 at Balboa.

In the opener workhorse Freddie Glosser went the route allowing only three runs and six hits. The lefty was aided by Roy Tripaldi, who continued to whack the apple with authority, getting six for nine in his afternoon's work, and Johnny May, who clouted a three-run 350-foot homer.

The excitement started in the third inning when the Bearcubs scored the game's first run. The SFers got three in their half of the inning on May's drive. The Rams added another run in the fourth when Bud Williams brought Joe Herbert home with a single to left, and three more in the sixth when Tripaldi's hard hit single brought Cic Williams and Al Lemire charging home. "Trip" scored on May's safety through short.

Earl Fauss hit and pitched the Rams to victory in the overtime second game as he went the eight frame distance. He helped his own cause in the second inning as he tripled home a run and later scored himself to give the locals a 4-1 lead.

Santa Rosa scored twice in the sixth and tied it up at five all in the seventh, but Tripaldi's triple scoring Gene Craft in the eighth sewed it up and sent the boys home.

Horsehiders Drop 12-8 Tilt To SM

The college's baseball squad ran its losing streak to six straight last Tuesday, bowing to San Mateo's Bulldogs at Balboa Park, 12-8.

Things looked bright in the first inning as Lee Eisan's nine put across four runs due to the wildness of the Bulldog chucker and a triple by Gene Craft, which scored the first tally. Freddie Glosser's single chased across two more runs. Four walks in succession accounted for the other run between Craft's and Glosser's run-producing hits.

The Rams added three more digits in the third frame and one more in the fifth, but it wasn't enough to hold back the Bulldog attack which put across six runs in the big second inning and followed through with two in the fifth, one more in the sixth and three to clinch the victory in the seventh. San Mateo outhit the locals, 13 to 10.

Sign-Up Sheets Ready For Soph-Prof Tangle

Sophomores eager to tangle with the Profs in their semi-annual softball tilt are asked to sign up on provided sheets either at 1) the men's gymnasium, 2) the main entrance of the Science Building, or 3) The Guardsman office, S-304.

The lists will be posted today, Nick Peters, chairman of the game, said.

The encounter, scheduled for college hour May 23, is limited to sophomores who have completed a minimum of 28 units, Peters added.

In their last softball tilt the Profs whipped the Sophs, 16-1, to boost their record to 15 wins, one-draw, and one-loss. The last Soph victory was in 1951. The tie occurred in January, 1957.

Track Team Nears Title

Gasper, Lewis, Patton Smash Own Records In 69-53 Panther Conquest; Loop Finale Saturday

By George Grasso

Yelling and singing not unlike a New Year's Eve party broke forth on the Ram track team's bus following the defeat of the number two power in the Big Eight, Sacramento, in a meet that was scored triangularly—CCSF 70, Sacramento 46, Stanford Frosh 41.

With the defeat of Sacramento and the other major track powers, the Rams have cinched at least a tie for the dual meet championship, and have only one meet left with a mild Santa Rosa squad this Saturday at Santa Rosa.

The dual meet score was CCSF 69, Sacramento 53, and CCSF 86, Stanford Frosh 44.

Leaping Will Gasper, after missing a record in the pole vault, moved over to the high jump pit where he cleared the bar at 6-6½. Gasper, who stands six foot even, broke his old record of 6-5½. Ed Costa took a second with 6-4, and Elvin Bridges and Marion Page tied for third.

Large Mike Lewis, who has a habit of winning weight events, brought home a new shot put mark of 51-10. He also went on to win the discus with a toss of 150-10, while his big buddy, Leroy Shields, took second.

Untiring Paul Patton ran a mile in 4:24.5 to break his own record of 4:26.6. Catching his breath after his great effort, he bounced back to win the two mile in 9:49.2, with his teammate Blake Westman coming up for third.

Tom Skinner, who was used earlier in the season for sprinting only, moved to the low hurdles. And it proved a lucky switch for the Rams as the ex-Hayward flash came in behind James Thomas to give the cindermen a much needed first-second in that event.

Mack Burton fouled on a jump of 24-6, and consequently had to settle for a 23-1 and second place behind Stanford's Townsend, who hit 23-5½. The Stanford broadjumpers finally broke up the college combination that swept this event in previous meets. In dual meet scoring, however, San Francisco swept the event against Sacramento.

Ram Trackster Burton Rated As Star Performer

One of the most outstanding performers on the star-studded 1958 Ram track team is broad-jumper-sprinter Mack Burton.

This modest, ex-Washington High star has continually turned in top performances since the beginning of the season. Against San Mateo, he won the broadjump with a 23-8. Then again at Oakland he won with a 22-10, and at Modesto with a 23-5. He was one of the few athletes to represent the college at the Santa Barbara Relays, where he was nosed out for first place by a quarter of an inch. Burton turned in a 24-1 that day.

The quiet, rangy star was one of the best prep broadjumpers in the nation last year, and recorded a 24-8 at the State Meet.

Burton as born in New Orleans 19 years ago. He attended Washington High School where he competed in the All-City meet, the Fresno Relays, and the State meet. Besides broadjumping, he was a fine sprinter, All-City in basketball, and a prep All-American in football. Washington High gave him the most valuable senior trophy.

Tracksters Place High At SF State

Don Nasser, James Thomas, Lionel Sims and Myron (Pappa) Zimmerman won the two-year college mile relay in 3:27 at the San Francisco State Relays last Wednesday night.

Over 250 athletes from 20 California teams set 12 new stadium records at these relays.

The Ram distance medley team with Gewald Temple in the 440; George Grasso, 880; Ken Dawdy, 1320, and Blake Westman, mile, took a second behind a record breaking Oakland team. Another second was taken by the sprint medley that had James Austin in the quarter, Nasser and Sims in the 220, and Paul Patton in the half.

Mack Burton, Gaynel McPherson, Will Gasper and Tom Skinner took third in the 440 relay, while Burton, Claude McWilliams, Elvin Bridges and Skinner grabbed third in the 880 relay.

Mike Lewis, competing against major college shot putters, managed to bring home a second place behind the Presidio's Bill Neider, who was the first man to put a shot over 60 feet while competing for Kansas U. Gaspar grabbed a second in the high jump.

Ram Netters Win 6-1 Over Modesto Pirates

The college's undefeated tennis team, which is heading for the first Big Eight Conference Tennis Championship in Ram history, bulied over their sixth straight conference opponent, Modesto, 6-1, on April 18.

The Rams were easy victors as they won all the matches except the number one doubles match. The Rams might have shut out their opponents had not Nick Scharf hurt his thumb during the doubles match. Winners were Jim Watson, 6-1, 6-1; Scharf, 7-5, 6-4; Vic Saschin, 6-0, 6-2; Jim Howard, 6-3, 6-0. In the singles, while Watson-Watters were winners in the doubles, 6-1, 6-0.

Ramblings

By Nick Peters

WITH major league baseball firmly established in San Francisco and Los Angeles, the Giant fans have already found reason to prove their supremacy over them Suth'ners. The fans down there must be acquiring an inferiority complex, what with their ball park the laughing stock of the majors and their Dodgers being soundly trounced by the Giants.

We must give Los Angeles credit, however, for introducing a new game to the national pastime. "Screeno," as it is called, was designed especially for the Coliseum. One wins at "Screeno" by almost effortlessly batting a pitched ball 250 feet against the screen in left field. If the batter has real prowess he may be skillful enough to pop the ball over the 42-foot Great Wall for a Chinese home run.

It is true that both teams have the same advantage, but the records that could possibly be established would surely be a farce. On the average the Dodgers should be good for two round-trippers per game at the Coliseum. In 77 home games that would total 154 homers, making it possible for the Hollywood Hoboes to break the major league record of 221 blasts with just 68 homers in 77 road games.

Situations like this make us wonder why major league ball park dimensions aren't standardized, as is the case in practically all other professional sports. The Coliseum problem could have been remedied had the Dodger brass spared the cost to cut into a concrete section of seats which would have moved the screen to a 350-foot distance. It's a shame when a shortstop can hurt himself crashing into a screen chasing a pop fly!

The Zanzibar Varsity, composed of the college's cage squad and coached by the talented John Henry, swept through its Prinz League play with a 5-0 record. The team won the title by defeating Hunter's Point Super Market in an overtime, 55-52. Winning this game was no easy task. HPSM (4-1) was powered by WCC stars Cornell Green, who hit for 24 in the title fray, Tyler Wilson and Lisa Dixon; All-Northern Cal prep great Phil "Bo" Hart from El Cerrito; Ike Walker, former Commerce and CCSF stalwart; and the incomparable Abyssius "Hands" Bryant.

"Henhouse's" boys weren't lacking talent, either. The college's Doug North, Mal McCormick, Freddie Williams, Mike Mullarkey, George Schnapp and Henry himself played a great part in the team's success. Other 2'ers included SF Stater Jim O'Connor, Bob Stoul (Oregon and Olympic Club), and Ike McArthur, former Ram star.

Two Teams Undefeated In Fraternity League; Sigma Tau Sigma Leads CAB

By Dave Smith

Sigma Tau Sigma broke the first place tie with the Hotel & Restaurant Department by downing the H&R 32-25 on April 16, in Club Activities Board action.

The H&R Department dropped down to second place after one defeat, although it still outscored the International Relations Club, 26-22. The H&R Department is still in the running if Sigma Tau Sigma loses two of its remaining three games.

The Filipino Club won its last two tilts beating a tough Guardsman five, 42-41, behind a 23-point outburst by Joe Cumagun. Filipino Club downed Alpha Phi Omega 35-27 for its second consecutive win. The IRC, losing to the H&R Department, came back the next night to down APO, 42-31.

The inexperienced Guardsman is the only team in the league that has failed to win a game. Led by sports editor Nick "the Greek" Peters, who tallied 43 points in the last two games to hold the club together, the paper's players were just nipped by the Filipino Club, but were cleaned by the Recreation Association, led by Al White's 26 points, 68-43.

Alpha Phi Epsilon raised its record to a 7-0 to stay in first place in the fraternity league. The Alphas' last win came when they downed Alpha Sigma Delta, 73-10, on April 22. Gene Craft led the team with 26 points.

Gamma Phi Ypsilon, a half game out of first place, dropped Zeta Phi Sigma, 48-24. Pacing the Gammas was Rudy Vasquez, sinking 23 points. The Gammas now have a clean 6-0 record. Led by their rough guard, Ted Sapling, Phi Beta Delta stayed in third place by beating Beta Tau, 26-21.

The championship of the fraternity league will be determined next Wednesday night in the men's gymnasium when Alpha Phi Epsilon (7-0) will shoot for all the marbles against Gamma Phi Ypsilon (6-0). The winner of this tilt will earn the right to play either Sigma Tau Sigma (4-0) or H&R (3-1), the CAB leaders, for the intramural crown in mid-May.

Inter-Sorority Council's Spring Cotillion Set For St. Francis Saturday In Colonial Room

Inter-Sorority Council's traditional Spring Cotillion will be held in the Colonial Room of the St. Francis Hotel this Saturday from 9:30 p.m. until 12:30 a.m., Audrey Fones, ISC president, announced last week.

After all have been presented, Miss Fones said, pledges and their escorts will dance the Presentation Waltz.

All students are invited to attend this event, she added, and tickets are $2.50 and will be on sale at the bank and also be sold at the door.

Attire for the evening is semi-formal, cocktail dresses for the women and dark suits, white shirts and ties for the men.

Sponsors for the ball will be Dean Mary Golding, ISC and Gamma Sigma Sigma; Katherine Hondlus, Kappa Phi; Ruth Inskipp, Zeta Chi; Evelyn Kerkhof, Phi Beta Rho; Marceline McDermott, Gamma Kappa Beta; Gertrude Norgard, Theta Tau; Olga Perkins, Delta Sigma Tau, and Martha Scott, Delta Psi.

AUDREY FONES, ISC president.

Patrons and patronesses attending the cotillion will include Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Cresci, Mr. and Mrs. G. Dores, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dutcher, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Jordan. Also attending this event, Miss Fones said, will be parents of the sorority presidents.

The arch to be used for the presentation of the pledges was donated by Alpha Phi Omega, the men's service fraternity.

Wayward Saint To Make West Coast Debut At College

With a period of only two weeks between the final performance of The Admirable Crichton and the first performance of The Wayward Saint, intensive rehearsals are well under way in the little theater, Michael Griffin, drama instructor, said today.

The new play, which is having its West Coast premiere at the college, was first presented on Broadway in 1955.

"This is a drama on the familiar Faust theme," Griffin said, "and it utilizes many stage deceptions and effects including blacklight and hidden entrances. The story of the Devil in quest of a certain soul is an old one, but here it is treated in a new and novel manner."

The play concerns the trials of an Irish priest who already has a reputation for saintliness since he talks to birds and animals, has caused a plum tree to bear cherries and raised a dead child to life.

His bishop is too practical and too much aware of the implications of having a saint in his parish and exiles him to a distant out-of-the-way parish where he hopes the canon will not cause trouble. As a watch over the canon, he has the redoubtable Miss Killikat, who is a forceful and formidable housekeeper who knits.

The special agent of the Devil enters the scene in the person of the Baron de Balbus, who has come as special emissary from Satan to win the canon's soul in any way he can because such souls are very rare in Hades. Balbus brings with him magic, nymphs and a guileful tongue.

Maura Monihan is a blithe, lovely girl who dreads the thought of being an old maid. She appeals to the canon for help and emerges as a heroine at the climax of the play. Special sound effects, dancing and a temporary suspension of the law of gravity all add to the final scene.

The production opens Friday, May 9, and continues on May 10, 16, 17, 23 and 24 in the little theater in the basement of the Science Building. Curtain time is at 8 p.m., and admission is by Associated Student card or $1.

Major roles will be played by Fred Fisher as the canon, Dave Terry as the bishop, Virginia Rae as Miss Killikat, Leah Pashoian as Maura, Jordy Cooney as Peador the Puck, Dave Tipton as the Baron, Ann Osorono as the nymph Sabena, and Virginia Evans as the nymph Serena.

Racing Car Films Shown Here Friday

Two films, both about car races, are scheduled to be shown this Friday during college hour as part of the college hour film series in S-136, according to Madison W. Devlin, audio visual aids instructor here.

The Monza Challenge, the famous Italian road race, will be the first shown. The film captures the thrills of European auto racing at its best, as American drivers take all honors at the famous Monza classic. The shots of actual racing in this dangerous open course are remarkable, Devlin stated.

Fabulous 500 is the name of the second film; it is about the annual Memorial Day classic at Indianapolis. This closed-circuit race is one of the best known in the sports world, and the film shows the highlights of the great drivers who have gone through this course.

"We are pleased by the increasing number of students coming to see the films presented in the series," Devlin said, "and we are looking forward to the day in which this large room will be filled to capacity; after all, there is no door price."

Plant-Men In All-Day Jaunt To Nurseries

By Richard Dyer

Students in the floriculture department and members of the Horticulture Society made an all-day field trip to many notable East Bay nurseries April 22, according to Roosevelt Eatmon, Horticulture Club president.

Members visited Mount Eden, a special wholesale rose company famed for its landscaping; W. C. Clark and Company, a San Jose wholesale nursery; the California Nursery in Niles, one of the largest retail outfits in the business, and the Domoto Nursery in Hayward, specialists in magnolias, camellias and bonsai type gardens.

"We were amazed at the Domoto Nursery to find a 150-year-old tree approximately three feet in height valued at $800," Eatmon commented.

He emphasized that such field trips are like "stepping stones" in the jump from college to actual business work. "The trips provide students with first hand experience in different phases of the industry and stimulate a deeper feeling for the business," he added.

He added that the department is now engaged in a project of re-landscaping the campus grounds on Ocean and Phelan Avenues near Smith Hall and replanting the territory between their center and the men's gymnasium.

Eatmon announced that the society is also scheduled to plant a cactus garden near the gymnasium and clean up the overall landscape in order to produce a "finished effect." The former project started several weeks ago, he stated, but because of the recent rain will take a week or so more to complete the job.

Ray Milani, superintendent of public school grounds in San Francisco, and horticulture director Harry E. Nelson are helping supervise the activity, Eatmon said.

Many Absences Will Jeopardize Student's Grades

Many students fail to see the importance of adhering to the college attendance regulations, according to John J. Brady, coordinator of Student Welfare.

"Whereas it is not always possible, because of illness, to attend classes consistently, many students do not grasp the fact that too many absences will jeopardize their courses," he commented.

A student may have an absence excused because he has been ill, or because he has been excused by the President of the college in order to participate in a recognized student activity. All other absences are classed as unexcuses.

To provide for such emergencies, the college allows a student to be absent from each class without an excuse for as many hours as the class meets weekly.

Lateness is also penalized, according to Brady; when a student has been late to class on three occasions he is charged with an unexcused absence.

Council Adopts Amendment To Revise Present Awards Section Of AS Constitution

By Lois Coeden

Awarding of jackets to letter-winning members of championship teams and three other changes written into the athletic code as an amendment to the Associated Student constitution were passed unanimously by Student Council last week for inclusion on the May AS ballot.

Remaining awards mentioned in Article V, coming under redefinition, apply to first and second year and multi-sport letter winners.

First year victors, if the amendment passes, would receive a certificate, a chenille block and the right to purchase and wear the official award sweater. Second year letter winners in the same sport would receive a certificate, a life bronze pass and sweater, or reimbursement for the procurement of one bought by a player in his first year as a letterman.

Multi-sport winners would be entitled to receive the certificate and an emblem for all other sports lettered in for the first time. Second year multi-sport letter winners would receive a certificate for all other sports awarded.

Boxing and all minor sports are to be deleted by passage of the amendment, leaving football, baseball, basketball, soccer, track, cross-country, tennis and golf as major sports.

The senior manager of each major sport is also eligible for a block letter.

The method of award is defined by certain specified games, and all conference competitions are to be recognized as block letter games.

Another departure from past procedure was introduced by Election Commissioner Steve Seltz. He announced the new ruling that candidates for Associated Student offices possibly will be required to have their pictures taken by an official college photographer for the purpose of pictorial uniformity in the Handbook and on posters. However, candidates can present pictures previously taken.

Petition signatures needed for office aspirants possibly will include that of the college's photographer as well as the usual counselor's, the bank's, the registrar's, the Dean of Student Activities, or the Dean of Women's signatures.

Elections Slated For May 22, 23

Student officers and constitutional amendments will be considered and decided upon in the semesterly student elections on May 22 and 23, according to Steve Seltz, election commissioner.

Election kits for this semester's candidates will be made available to interested students tomorrow, and must be returned to the election commission by Friday, May 9. The election kit is a packet composed of election rules as well as verification of the candidate's eligibility and desire to run for office.

"It looks as though it's going to be a big election this time," Seltz said; "we have no real publicity so there should be a worthwhile turnout."

Seltz is aided in his duties by the remainder of the election committee, composed of Steve Dreher, Jerry Hoffman, Ed King, Tom Skinner, Risk Willits and Bert Witte.

Club Cavalcade: Who Got The Kappa Phi Lamb?

By Jerry Redford

TIME is drawing near for the annual Inter-Sorority Council Ball, and the sororities are preparing for the presentation of their pledges to the rest of the fraternities and sororities of the campus. The fraternities of the campus have expressed regrets to Kappa Phi sorority on their loss of Phi, but cannot offer an explanation for its loss.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity had a very successful booth and float at the Spring Festival. Plans now include the semi-annual pledge dinner and a joint picnic with Zeta Chi sorority. (P.S. Kappa Rho DOESN'T have Phi.)

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority is now completing plans for the Inter-Sorority Council Ball, and the presentation of their pledges. Their pinning dinner will be held during May.

Delta Psi sorority pledges for the semester are Marlene Bohn, Darlene Checchi, Diane Christoffersen, Sue Curly, Barbara Denniston, Carolyn Heath, Sandy Hedger, Elaine Hathas, Carol Kearney, Lorraine Knauss, Arlene Nielson, Vivian Simth, Judy Sinonsohn and Kaye Wenderoth. The sorority held a joint with Gamma Phi Ypsilon during Hell Week, and a skating party with Tau Chi Sigma. They also took their pledges to Russian River for a social get-to-know-each-other day.

Zeta Chi sorority had a very successful booth and float for the Spring Festival. Plans on the agenda include the presenting of pledges at the ISC Ball this Saturday, a picnic with Alpha Kappa Rho, and the pledge pinning and dinner.

An important Block SF Society meeting will be held in C-247 during college hour this Friday. All letter winners are requested to attend the meeting. Movies will be shown.

Kappa Phi sorority pledges for this semester are Donna De Fount, Gay Fraunson, Marcy McNinch, Ann Quantz and Arlene Crabb. Kappa Phi recently lost one mascot, namely a little toy lamb called Phi. Phi, being a treasured item to the sorority, is missed very much, so Kappa Phi asks that Alpha Phi Omega fraternity return it to them. (Or any other group that may have Phi.)

Alpha Phi Omega fraternity members declared earlier this week that they definitely DON'T have Phi! Pledging activities for the fraternity will end this Friday night with a social affair. The pledge class, under the leadership of Scott Saddorsi, pledge president, is planning to build a sign on the hill below Smith Hall, prepare the staging for the ISC Ball, and construct cigarette receptacles for the campus.

At a special meeting of the Inter-Fraternity Council held last week, two of the fraternities on the campus were suspended from further participation in campus activities as groups until next semester. Those suspended were Tau Chi Sigma and Beta Phi Beta. Reason for the harsh action stemmed from activities taken by both groups toward the College of Marin. They went to the North Bay college, and gave it a salute, painting "Hello Marin" on a bench, and decorating the door handles of the college. Also a gummy dummy was hung from the flagpole in the center of the Marin campus.

Unfortunately for the fraternities, while they were carrying out their activities, a watchman appeared on the scene, disturbing them, so they hastily departed, but not before several license numbers were taken down. Also attributed to the unearthing of the culprits was the stuffing of the gummy dummy. Found in it were several copies of The Guardsman, and homework and examination papers of [illegible] of the readers.

Both Tau Chi Sigma and Beta Phi Beta fraternities wish to acknowledge the loss of Phi, but regret that neither of them has taken the mascot.

Gamma Phi Ypsilon fraternity sends its most sincere regrets to Kappa Phi, but admits no knowledge of the whereabouts of Phi.

Beta Tau fraternity regrets Phi's loss, but can offer no suggestions as to where Phi is.

Alpha Phi Epsilon wonders who got the Phi, but can offer no explanation as to its loss.

Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity has been on an extensive hunting trip, but regrets that they haven't located any lambs, much less Phi.

AS Hosts Prep Visitors

Student Leaders To Attend CJCSGA State Conference At Pasadena For Three Day Meet

Headed by Associated Student President Jack Patterson, six student leaders of the college will attend the state conference of the California Junior College Student Government Association at Pasadena starting tomorrow and ending Saturday.

Besides Patterson, Darlene Enfield, Freddie Hicks, Don Smith, and Liz Thrush will represent the college. The sixth member had not yet been selected at press time.

Student government leaders from two-year colleges all over the state will be present.

"Since the college does not have a student union, the main reason we're going to the conference is to find out about one," Patterson said. "Each delegate has a workshop to go to, but the delegate will find out all he can to contribute to the information on the student union," he added.

Six workshops are slated to be held at the conference. They are student government, activities and organizations, athletics, publication and public relations, finance under $35,000, and finance over $35,000.

Patterson will handle the student government workshop and will look into the matter of a student union. Miss Thrush will attend the finance under $35,000 and see if she can pick up some pointers on methods to sell AS cards.

Miss Enfield will take charge of activities and organizations and sit-in on the session. Smith will attend the publication and public relations to see what type of pressures should be used to get a student union. Hicks is to find out about the 10-game football schedule system.

AMS PRESIDENT FREDDIE HICKS.

Patterson added that he and the rest of the delegates from the college are going to the CJCSGA to "learn, participate, and receive" in anything they take part. "The conference, particularly the workshop sessions, gives the delegates the opportunity to compare and discuss our student government, plans, and programs and exchange ideas on them with other two-year colleges," Patterson said.

Ralph Hillsman, dean of Student Activities, will accompany the delegates to the conference. The group will leave International Airport tomorrow at 12:30 p.m. and arrive in Pasadena via United Airlines at 2:11 p.m. From there they will go to the Huntington Hotel, the site of the conference, to register.

The group will leave Pasadena Saturday, May 10, at 4 p.m. and is to arrive in San Francisco at 5:40 p.m. All expenses are taken care of by Associated Student funds.

LIZ THRUSH, Associated Student Finance Chairman, is one of the officers scheduled to attend the State Conference meet.

ALUMNI LIAISON OFFICER Don Smith is another of the delegates who will leave for Pasadena tomorrow.

ASSOCIATED STUDENT PRESIDENT Jack Patterson will act as chairman of the college's delegation to the CJCSGA.

Petitions For AS Elections Due In By This Friday

Petitions for candidacy in the Associated Student elections on May 22 and 23 were made available to interested students at the beginning of this week and are due back Friday, according to Steve Sietz, election commissioner.

Potential candidates may pick up election kits, of which the petition is a part, either at Dean Ralph Hillsman's office, S-148, or at the student bank in Smith Hall.

The 20 offices to be filled are AS President and Vice-President, Presidents of the Sophomore and Freshman classes, Associated Men Student and Women Student Presidents, as well as the seven seats each for Sophomore and Freshman Council members.

In addition to the petition, the election kit contains the official rules and regulations for the election. In general, the rules require that each candidate must have a 2 (C) average in at least 12 units of work.

"When he picks up his petition, the candidate must first take it to the student bank for signed verification of his deposit of the one dollar election fee," Sietz added. "Then, he goes to the registrar who checks his grades before signing. Next, he gains the signature of his counselor who must also approve his candidacy." After securing the signatures of 15 AS card holders as vouchers he takes the petition to the Dean of Student Activities.

This semester, in addition to his petition, each candidate must submit a letter of intent to run for office in his own writing. The reason for this, Sietz stated, is that in the past, candidates have been put up by other students and have thus run unwillingly.

A Phi E Names Forest Hill Site For Friday Dance

Reminiscing In Blue will be the theme for the second annual dance presented by Alpha Phi Epsilon fraternity, to be held at the Forest Hill Lodge this Friday night, according to Gene Craft, fraternity president.

"Highlight of the evening will be dancing on the patio near the fireplace," Craft said, adding, "the fraternity members will be wearing formal bermudas, which should look very sharp."

Couples may dance from 9 p.m. to midnight to the music of Steven Paul, well known band leader throughout the Bay Area, who played for the Frosh Ball last semester. He will also play at the Soph Ball this semester.

Admission to the dance is $2.50 per couple. Tickets may be secured from the student bank, from any brother or pledge of Alpha Phi Epsilon fraternity, at the booth in Smith Hall, or at the door. Dress for the dance will be semi-formal.

"Tickets are now being sold at the University of California, San Jose State, University of San Francisco, and San Francisco State. This dance will be a terrific chance to meet many new people and also to see old friends from other colleges. I expect the turnout to be really great," Craft declared.

The Forest Hill Lodge is located at 266 Laguna Honda Boulevard, which is between the Forest Hill Station and the Seventh Avenue Reservoir. There will also be plenty of free parking directly in front of the Lodge and to the sides, Craft added.

Floriculturists In Annual Garden Show At Oakland

Floriculture students and members of the Horticulture Society are currently involved in the 26th Annual Spring Home and Garden Show at the Exposition Hall in Oakland which started last Saturday and ends this Sunday, according to Roosevelt Eatmon, Horticulture club president.

The purpose of this affair is to stimulate college competition, give the department recognition, and enable the students to get further experience in flower arrangement and design, he said.

Eatmon stated that the event, which is being sponsored by the First District Agricultural Association, is the biggest show of its kind in Northern California. "First prize of $270 is our goal," he said, "but the experience of competition is alone worth the months of preparation and all-out effort that the students have put into this festival."

Venice is the theme and the department's particular entry is a Mediterranean landscape. Twenty gondolas loaded with flowers, garden fountains, and other such settings are also on display, he added.

Representing the college are Harry E. Nelson, horticulture director; Mary Hope Cummings, flower shop instructor, and Eatmon's committee composed of Doug Ebert, vice-president; John Isaacs, Frank Salet and Ed Schuster.

The show runs from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily during the stated period and students may visit the building at 920 Fallon Street in Oakland after purchasing a one dollar ticket there. Associated Student cards are not usable, Eatmon added.

College Offers Entertainment, Tours, Lunch For Thirty-Five High School Leaders Here Today

By Mike Gibbons

Thirty-five "future leaders of America," representing the seven public high schools in San Francisco, together with their respective principals will arrive here today at 9 a.m. to join in the Prep Day activities, according to Darlene Enfield, Associated Student vice-president, in charge of Prep Day plans.

Miss Enfield commented that since the acquiring of a college education is increasingly becoming more important, the two-year colleges are taking a greater role in carrying the burden of overpopulated college conditions. She stressed the fact that this college, besides having an excellent faculty, is meeting the challenge of more students by expanding its facilities to accommodate 7,200 students (1,200 over the present enrollment) in the near future.

IN CHARGE of today's planned Prep Day is Darlene Enfield, AS vice-president. Miss Enfield is also a delegate to the CJCSGA.

Pauline Mathios, accompanied by Brower Dimond, will receive the guests at the faculty dining room in Smith Hall, where they will register and obtain folders containing information concerning the college. While the visitors browse through the folder members of the Associated Women Students will serve them coffee and doughnuts.

After this break, the principals will attend a conference in President Louis G. Conlan's office to discuss the secondary school situation; in the meantime the visiting leaders will hear Miss Enfield outline the coming events of the day.

Next on the agenda is a scheduled group photo of the representatives, after which they will be escorted to the planetarium atop the Science Building where Louis Berman, astronomy instructor here, will conduct an astronomical exhibit, lasting approximately 20 minutes.

A tour of the campus will follow with the college's delegates acting as guides. Representing the Associated Women Students will be Katie Ahern, Su Bellinger, Audrey Fones, Pat Metsaek, Sandra Simonian, Linda McArdle and Miss Mathios. Sam Franzella, Jim Hickey, Freddie Hicks, Ralph Prior, Jerry Redford, Frank Rogers and Dimond will represent the Associated Men Students.

By 11 a.m. groups of student leaders, each accompanied by a guide, will be visiting the class of their choice, Miss Enfield added.

Guests and guides will proceed from the classes to the faculty dining room in Smith Hall where the Hotel and Restaurant staff will serve luncheon.

Guest speaker Peter Chevrier, 1951 graduate and AS president, and present sales representative for the Carnation Milk Company, will describe the value of an education at this college.

Entertainment will be provided by Charlene French, a member of the A Cappella choir here, and Vick Mason of the Campus Police who is also a singer.

Balboa Park Pool To Offer Swim Classes In Fall

Nine classes in swimming will be offered by the college next semester as a result of the opening of San Francisco's new $363,000 Balboa Park pool, Jack Gaddy, men's physical education director, announced this week.

The chairman of the department said classes for both men and women students will include elementary and advanced swimming instruction as well as a special course in life saving. The courses will be free of charge and students will be furnished swim suits, towels and lockers. Approximately 200 students may register for the courses in September.

Gaddy emphasized that only experienced swimmers will be permitted to enroll in the two advanced courses.

Helen Center, supervisor of aquatics for the city Recreation and Park department, said the pool will be opened in early June and that on June 16 an extensive "learn to swim" campaign will get underway for children under 18.

The city agreed to make the pool available to the college several hours daily beginning in the fall and will furnish qualified lifeguards to assist physical education swim instructors. Classes for men will meet 10 to 12 o'clock daily and for women 1 to 2 o'clock. Women must wear swim caps and men must omit oily hair lotions.

The Balboa Park pool is considered to be the city's finest indoor swimming facility. One hundred feet long and 40 feet wide, the pool ranges in depth from 36 inches to 10 feet. Prominent features of the pool include overhead and underhead lighting and hairdryers for the women.

Although students in registered classes will be admitted free, all college students may use the pool daily from 10 to 11:30 a.m., 1:30 to 5:30 p.m., and 7 to 10 p.m. at a charge of 50 cents. Fifteen swim scrip tickets can be purchased for $5.

The pool will accommodate 350 people a day with one lifeguard assigned for every 75 swimmers. Individuals are permitted to bring their own suits and towels or can rent them for 15 cents.

Besides the college, the Recreation Department has made the pool available to Balboa, Denman, Lick and Riordan high schools.

CSTA Members To Hold Elections This Friday

College members of the California Student Teachers Association will elect new officers and plan the fall semester program at a meeting in C-269 Friday at college hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m., according to Bev J. Pasqualetti, chapter counselor.

Pasqualetti has also taken steps to make his Education 30 classes more interesting. His students, many of them CSTA members, will be excused one day to take a survey of public school teaching methods, a new experiment in education instruction.

Significance Of Education Pointed Out To Prep Leaders

GIVE ME a base and I move the world."

On the south end of the Science Building a modern mosaic spells out this sentence. It is wondered if the originator of these words realized the impact that they could have if people would take the time to occasionally refer to them.

Aside from the mythological Atlas who supported the earth on his shoulders, the prospect of the world being "moved about" is rather slim. However, if it could be done it is our suggestion that it should be done by the educated.

The base needed to move the world is education, and the sooner the powers of the world realize it, the sooner international problems are settled over a conference table instead of from the laboratory of the atomic physicist.

It seems to be difficult, even to some of the intellects, to figure out the why's of our modern world. Perhaps one day someone will come up with the answer. In the meantime Americans, Russians and Britons will have to go on floundering around looking for an answer that seems to be well hidden. One thing is sure, however, this old world is here to stay for awhile and shooting ICBM's at one another won't solve much.

The way things look now the only way to avoid war is through negotiations over a conference table. This is no area for the layman to try out some of his ideas. This is the area where the high I.Q. men and women must use their brains. This is the area where a lack of education can be fatal.

Today, as part of a traditional college function to introduce students and their administrators to the benefits of higher education, students from San Francisco high schools and their principals will be guests of this college. It is the hope of the administrators and the Associated Students that today's visit will impress upon these students the values of a higher education. Perhaps with what they see here today some of them will decide to attend college.

It is the hope of this paper that as they pass the south end of the Science Building they will read the words ". . . give me a base and I move the world," and that they will stop and seriously think about the significance of these words.

Here, then, is The Guardsman's welcome to these student leaders on behalf of the faculty and students of the college.

Free, Fun Loving Foreigners Make Up Furious Pace Of San Francisco; They're Natives, Beyond Any Doubt

By Pastor Valle-Garay

In the city where names range from Seratti to Aguilar, from Liu to Papidas to Swartsfager, a foreigner is someone named Smith, born in America, who took two years of high school Spanish, now forgotten, but who still knows how to say "c'est la vie," "mañana," "arrivederel," and "pay taxes on time."

He speaks not English but American, chews gum and works like mad.

The city is cosmopolitan San Francisco where creeds and colors walk hand in hand and the waiters talk Giants today, 49ers tomorrow, weather all the time and sell, sell, sell. San Francisco, where the rains send the tourist bureau's "sunny California" signs screaming and where the weathermen are Las Vegas' losers.

By definition a foreigner here is someone who comes through the Golden Gate doors from another land. He is here to stay or to visit, to work, to study or loaf, if he can get away with it, and he ends up in the armed forces, the factory, the Mayor's office, the unemployment agency or college.

He dances at El Patio, dines once in the Top o' the Mark, sees Chinatown, rides the cable cars, loves Twin Peaks at night and eats hamburgers with his girl friend in a drive-in restaurant after a formal date at the Fairmont.

The foreigner is the type, in general, of the happy-go-lucky fellow who has traveled and owns a car he pays for on the installment plan.

He also detests "cops" but as a good, law-abiding citizen won't mention it to them. Says horrible words when the city is "cold as hell," complains when it pours and blasts the municipality when the sun over-heats the streets, but just won't exchange San Francisco for the Garden of Eden ever.

The city itself presents a wonderful, somewhat mixed-up community, where the Mexicans begin to realize that California is not their's anymore and the Americans wonder if the city with the Saint's name still belongs to America or to the whole wide world that loves it.

And then there are those private parties. The guy who sits next to you as you drive to one of them as his guest, speaks with a heavy accent. He's been here for ages but he figures that for his own plans it's convenient and rather impressive to talk to the American senoritas like a just-arrived foreigner.

No luck, though. For ages also he's been planning to make love to every blonde, blue-eyed female citizen and now, wherever he goes, he finds nothing but countrymen and country-women of his own backyard who just "love to know how things are back home in the motherland." He hates them. He is a college student.

He sips cocktails all night long. Introduces you to a couple of friends and, if you don't get on the ball with them, you'll be bored to death for the rest of the party.

Yes, this is San Francisco foreign—where the Chinatown section is as much of a city landmark as Coit Tower, the hills, or the nightclubs closing at 2 a.m.

San Francisco, where the Central Americans prepare and dream of imaginary never-carried-out revolutions, where the natives are referred to as "the world's most polite citizens," where the food is good, the women can wear sacks and still look beautiful and the men are just plain husbands, eternal bachelors or, what's worse, college students.

This is San Francisco foreign—the city with a thousand faces where a thousand races blend together in a jewel of a bay. The city where the foreigner is at home and the "natives" are restless. You ought to know, if you are a foreign native yourself.

Diane Schubert And Friend

AS THE MANNEQUIN GOES, so goes Diane Schubert of the advertising art department. The mannequin, in this case, happens to be a 20-inch wooden doll, used by the art students to simulate the canformations of a human body. The arms, legs and even head of the dummy can be pushed, pradded or twisted into any anatomical position. Miss Schubert, in this case, is doing something quite out of the way. Instead of having the mannequin imitate her, she is imitating it, and doing a very nice job at that.

TV Idiot Board Hero Takes Sound Drubbing

By Ray Hackett

MIDTERMS are now here and thus no TV can be viewed, so here are some ideas about the "opiate of the American people," as Carl Sandburg described television.

TV is a comparatively new medium of entertainment, but it has already caused startling changes in the American way of life.

Before TV, radio was the main source of entertainment for the homebody, unless you had a relative who did bird calls or card tricks or possessed some other talent. Radio didn't disturb home life too much, except possibly in the early days of radio when two entertainers captured the hearts of the American people and everyone, that's everyone, stayed home on Sundays to hear Amos and Andy.

These were the early days of radio, when to get tuned to a station was an adventure which sometimes proved frustrating. But it was fun, also, for it was part of the family entertainment. Radio was a family project.

Another thing which was never attributed to radio was the rush dinner. Who has ever heard of a radio dinner? Now the TV buffet is as American as the pinball machine.

The most beautiful illusion destroyed by TV is the hero. On radio the hero left to the imagination of the listener, while on TV this is impossible. Besides that, it's very difficult to view a live TV show and look on your hero as a hero while he is reading his lines from an idiot board.

These are only a few differences between old time radio and TV. The TV dinner and the lost art of conversation can't be attributed to radio, but TV can't make the same statement. Perhaps, as TV matures, it will rid itself of some of these faults, especially the idiot board hero. Sometimes it's difficult to tell the board from the hero when applying the adjective.

Next week, back to TV. After midterms, everything looks better—can it look worse?

Shots At Ramdom

By Tom Tatera

ONE of the major catastrophies of modern living occurred last Friday, when a student found his bath hour coinciding with his favorite television program. Poor Mr. Perplexed lingered so long in front of his radiation chamber that, by the time he got around to stepping into the bathtub, it was like trying to pierce a path to the Arctic using the toes as an icebreaker. Brrr!

• • •

IN KEEPING with the above, another student ran into the same kind of dilemma and came up with a solution. He bought an extension cord, and dragged the set along into his soapy sanetuary. Such luxury! This happy genius now reports that he can wash with Martha or croon with Como to his heart's content.

A FEW YEARS BACK, two Eddies in show business collaborated for the benefit of one. Eddie Cantor, beloved by America, extended his help to Eddie Fisher, a young unknown who was still struggling for that one big break. What happened is history. Mr. Fisher got his break, as well as money, a beautiful wife, and a television show of his own.

Last week Fisher disregarded the fact that Eddie Cantor is now a victim of age and a delicate heart condition, and exhibited him on TV as a three-second, no talking flunkie who grinned sheepishly from a "Juke-O-Vac" stunt machine. And how Fisher laughed as he thusly paid tribute to the man who gave him the necessary boost. That's Show Biz!

NEXT WEDNESDAY NIGHT is dad's time to howl. For once he won't have to stay cooped up in that soft Morris chair, encased in a cloud of his favorite cigar smoke. Instead he can rise up, dress up, and join his son at the college for the AMS Smoker, an evening of noisy activities.

Have fun, Pop. Even if it kills you.

THE HOTEL AND RESTAURANT boys, under able guidance of Lawrence Wong, will have their hands full this month. Besides tending to the normal affairs of their department, they will have to prepare for the Pacific Area Hotel Seminar which will drop in for a peek on Tuesday, May 13.

This Seminar group, consisting of hotel managers and owners from various Pacific countries and islands, have only to taste of some H&R delicacies to find out how much progress is being made in hotel-education at the college. Two to one they come back for seconds.

'How To Teach' Courses Keep Teachers Idle

By Don Seratti

IN ATTEMPTING to alleviate the teacher shortage currently plaguing this country, national and state officials are calling for a salary increase for people in the teaching profession.

A teaching career already offers numerous advantages. The raising of salaries will doubtless induce many individuals, who had heretofore rejected teaching only because of its low pay scale, to reconsider the classroom as a profession, and will also facilitate recruitment of prospective educators.

But there's more than low salaries affecting the number and the quality of our teachers. There is a certain set of "professional requirements"—the number of educational theory (pedagogy) courses a person must have before receiving teaching credentials—which is quite likely to have a detrimental effect on the number of teachers and on the quality of education in this country.

The question of whether these "how to teach" courses or the normal academic courses should take priority in the curricula of aspiring teachers is being debated all over the country. While the controversy rages, thousands of capable college graduates are sitting on the sidelines because they haven't had sufficient courses in the methods of teaching which are required in most states before a person can so much as pick up a piece of chalk in a classroom.

OHIO'S 15 NOT ENOUGH

Here's an example of how this emphasis on pedagogy affects teachers. A woman who had taught in high schools in Ohio for 15 years moved to Los Angeles and found that she had to take a semester of education courses before she could teach in California.

Here's an even more interesting parallel—under present systems, the late Dr. Albert Einstein would not have been qualified to teach physics in any public school in the United States.

Defenders of the present laws say that a relaxation of current pedagogy requirements would result in a large number of teachers who couldn't conduct a class nor handle children properly.

Another argument in favor of retaining pedagogical requirements is that teaching is moving toward a full professional status and that teachers should have the formal training that doctors and lawyers have.

Is it wise, though, to bar so many skilled people from the classrooms at a time when one of America's biggest needs is for more teachers? The individuals who insist on their students having only teachers who are well versed in "how" to teach are thus denying them the opportunity of learning from teachers who certainly know "what" they are teaching. They are also denying those teachers the jobs they deserve and therefore are sustaining the present teacher shortage.

QUALITY SUFFERS

The quality of American education also suffers greatly from these regulations which demand so many pedagogy courses of teachers.

A teacher should be an absolute expert in his field of instruction to be able to properly and effectively convey his subject to his pupils. And yet the prospective teachers in many states, rather than being allowed to gain an infinite knowledge of the subjects they intend to teach, must spend a large part of their time learning how to teach those subjects.

Some states require future teachers to devote almost a third of their college programs to "how to teach" courses. While bearing this burden, the future teacher doesn't have much time for a well-rounded program of academic studies that would not only enhance his knowledge of his particular subject but would considerably broaden his knowledge of general subjects, which would undeniably have a favorable bearing on his relations with his students.

These teachers could, if necessary, receive instruction in "how to teach" while on the job. But above all, if America's immediate educational crisis is to be relieved, all possible steps should be taken to allow qualified teachers to teach now, when they are needed most.

Paul Patton's Distance Double Helps Trackmen Cinch Big 8 Conference Dual Meet Crown

By George Grasso

Paul Patton won a pair of distance races as the Ram thinclads sewed up the Big Eight Conference dual meet title in a four-college clash at Santa Rosa, which was scored: San Francisco 80, Oakland 32, Santa Rosa 31, and Yuba 8.

There is a possibility of one more dual meet this season, and if it is arranged, it will be against West Contra Costa.

Paleing Paul Patton had everybody after his scalp at Santa Rosa. In the two-mile, he was forced to duel Oakland's Rene Rodgers in a neck and neck race that finished in a wild sprint for the tape. Patton won in 9:44.8. Then Craig Spillman, the former great Carlmont High star now attending College of Marin, entered the mile unattached to put the pressure on Patton again. But the Ram distance ace came across first winning in 4:29.3.

Ken Dawdy and George Grasso teamed up to give the college a rare first and second in the half-mile. Dawdy recorded a 2:01.7. The team also welcomed long injured Russ Nichols into the scoring column, as the heavily bandaged hurdler came through for a second in the 120 lows. Oakland's Sam Perry won in 15.3.

Mack Burton and Elvin Bridges grabbed first and second in the broad-jump, while Charles Tanner and pole vault star Will Gasper were involved in a three-way tie for third. Burton hit 23-10. Gasper and Ed Costa shared the first place spot in the high jump at 6-4½.

The mile relay team ran its best time of the year as Coach Lou Vasquez is beginning to polish them up for the Fresno Relays. Avenging 51 seconds per man, Lionel Sims, James Thomas, Don Nasser and anchor man Myron (Maverick) Zimmerman won the race in 3:23.9.

Iron man Mike Lewis was a little off in the discus event, as Tom Daniels of Santa Rosa beat him with a toss of 149-10. Lewis turned the tables around in the shotput and beat Daniels with a sound throw of 51-7½.

Ramblings

By Nick Peters

WITH the intramural basketball races coming to a close, one team worthy of mention is Doc Zarchin's Sigma Tau Sigma honor fraternity club. The team's players have cinched the CAB championship and will probably end up undefeated for their seven contests.

Dr. Michael Zarchin, the sponsor of this fraternity, is finally hanging up the shoes after teaching at the college since its start in 1935, and as a result the boys on the team want to win the intramural crown for the well-liked instructor.

Leading the squad in its quest for the championship against a fraternity league opponent will be guard and playmaker Jerry McDaniel, an All-State performer from Idaho, who has a basketball scholarship to San Jose State. The team shows excellent balance with footballer Dennis "Doc" O'Conner providing scoring punch and needed board control.

MAJOR LEAGUE ball in San Francisco has provided occupational opportunities for many college students. Several co-eds can be seen wearing the orange and beige spangles of the Seals Stadium usherettes, while Ram baseballer Mike Warnock is the visiting team batboy for the Giant organization. "Wheels" Warnock fortunately inherited the job after the Westward movement, since he was a batboy for the 1957 pennant-winning Seals of the Pacific Coast League.

• • •

DURING a recent Giant-Phillies broadcast the locals were down 7-4 going into the ninth. The first batter, Whitey Lockman, got on base and announcer Russ Hodges stated, "Where there's life, there's (pause) . . . etcetera." You see that sounds a bit like a Budweiser advertisement, while the Giants are sponsored by Falstaff! Easy, Russ boy, it's not done that way.

Linkers Defeated By Mustangs 10-5

Playing Stockton in league competition last April 25, the college's varsity golfers lost to the Mustang linksmen, 10 to 5.

Loss of this match changes the Rams' standings in the Big Eight Conference; unless the Rams pick up a win against undefeated San Mateo, the team will be out of the race as contenders for the championship.

It was the fourth and fifth place squad members, Gordon Gruber and Gene Krome, who brought in the points for this match. Both of these men shot in the upper 80's.

Out of 10 matches, both conference and practice, this squad has averaged as follows: Elden Davis 78.8, Tony Agliolo 80, Charles Pierce 84, Gruber 84.5, and Krome 84.7.

"San Mateo will be a big challenge to the team," Coach Grover Klemmer declared, "but the squad works hard and has improved each match so far this season. The boys have been working to their capacity and don't choke under pressure. It is unusual in a college squad, but each member has been shooting consistently as compared with each other."

Five men on the San Mateo squad have been shooting consistently in the 70's. "We're going to have to scramble if we're going to win this match," Klemmer added.

Ty Cobb maintains the highest lifetime batting average, belting a robust .367 in his 24 years of play.

Eisanmen Whip Comets 3-2 In Eleven Innings

By Warren Downes

With two men out in the last of the 11th inning, Lou Marks seored the winning run as the Ram baseball team defeated West Contra Costa, 3-2, last Tuesday at Balboa Park.

The run was scored when Roy Tripaldi hit a ground ball to the Comets' third sacker, Bob Millinieh, who threw wild to first base allowing Marks to score the winning run.

The Rams scored first in the contest in the fourth inning when they put aeross two runs. With one man down, the Comet pitcher developed a case of wildness and walked Johnny May, Rich DeMarco and Al LeMire. Then, with the bases loaded, Joe Herbert hit a sacrifice fly to center field allowing May to score and advancing DeMarco to third, whence he scored on Cie Williams' single to right.

In the sixth inning the Comets came fighting back, getting two runs on two hits and three walks as Ram pitcher Earl Fauss walked the first three batters in the inning. Ram right fielder Bud Williams saved the day in this inning as he cut off a potential run with a perfect throw which was relayed to the plate in time to catch the Comet runner at the plate.

Winning pitcher for the Rams was LeMire, who pitched the last two innings. He followed George Mix, who had pitched the ninth after starter Fauss tired from pitching the first eight frames.

In winning their third straight league game of the season, the Rams collected only three hits, but were helped along by the three Comet pitchers who issued seven walks and hit three batters. Although the Comet moundsmen were wild, they managed to strike out 13 Ram batters.

Score by innings:	R	H	E
WCC 000 002 000 00—2	6	1
CCSF 000 200 000 01—3	3	2

Fauss, Mix (9), LeMire (10), and May; Simmons, Burrdy (8), Larey (9) and Doller.

League Leaders Edge Rams In Ninth, 3-2

Lee Eisan's Ram baseball squad had its win streak snapped at three games last Saturday when the West Contra Costa Comets came out on top of a 3 to 2 score in a game played at Richmond.

The Comets pulled the game out in the ninth inning when Carroll Lee lined a Freddy Glosser delivery into left field for a single which brought home teammate Bob Millinich with the winning tally.

This victory avenged an earlier loss to the Rams last Tuesday. The Rams managed to get only three hits while their East Bay foes rapped out eight safeties. West Contra Costa now leads the league with a .7 and 3 record while the locals are down on the list with a 3 and 7 mark.—J.H.

RA Awards Social To Be Presented May 26

Recreation Association members will present an awards social in Smith Hall on Monday, May 26, for RA and Student Council members only. Because of a dance following the awards presentation, the fashion for the evening will be dressy-dress.

On April 26, the RA attended the largest state playday at Monterey. The teams placed as follows: Tennis, first place; archery and bowling, second place; and volleyball, third place.

Fifty people attended the wiener roast on April 19, and a sport night in the gymnasium wound up the day's activities.

Sandy Simonian, RA president, stated that there will be several more recreational and social events taking place before the end of the semester, and all persons interested may take part.

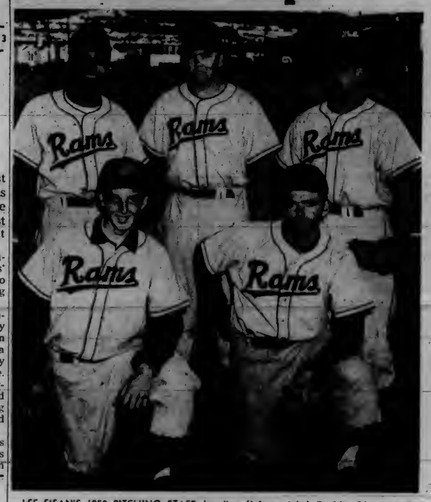
Block SF Dance Set For Smith Hall On May 16

Block SF President John Henry announced that a dance will be sponsored by the society. The dance will be held at Smith Hall on Friday, May 16. Prices will begin at 75 cents stag, and $1.25 for couples.

With a Spring theme in mind, the dress will be informal, and a combo will be featured. Later details will appear in next week's Guardsman.

Tennis Championships Saturday At Modesto

With sectional tennis championships scheduled this Saturday at Modesto, the Big Eight Conference will be represented by its top eight single players and its top eight doubles teams.



Players who win at the sectionals will then travel to Visalia the following Saturday for the state finals.

The Rams, Big Eight Conference champions, have entered all players on the squad. Jim Watson and Nick Seharf are top men on the college tennis team and have the best chance of qualifying for the state finals.

In the last league match of the season the Rams trounced Oakland, 6-1, on April 25. This match assured the college team of the conference championship.

The Rams won all single matches, but dropped one of the doubles matches. Winners were Watson, 6-0, 6-2; Seharf, 6-0, 6-0; Vic Sasehin, 6-1, 7-5; Fred Watters, 6-2, 6-2; and Jim Howard, 6-0, 6-0, in the singles, while Watson-Watters won their doubles match, 6-1, 6-2.

Veteran Pitcher Fred Glosser Leads Hurling Staff As Rams Close Out Season On Saturday

By John Henry

Although the college's horsehiders have had a pretty rough time of it this season, one of the bright spots on the team has been the all around good play of veteran Freddy Glosser.

The 20-year-old pitcher - first baseman has been one of the Rams' most consistent performers during the '58 campaign with his coolness on the mound and his play around the first sack to go with his come-through ability at the plate. Glosser is hitting the ball at about a .350 clip, which is good for a pitcher in any man's league.

At 5'10" and 150 pounds, he is a fiery competitor who doesn't quit until the last man is out. Glosser is a native San Francisean and attended school at Parkside, Aptos and Lincoln High. While at the Mustang institution he was a standout basketball player as well as a top-notch baseballer. In fact, he lettered for three years in both sports and received All-City honors for three years.

Glosser is in his second complete semester at the college, having dropped out in Spring 1956, but not until he helped pitch the Rams to the Big Eight title and second place in Northern California that year. This season, after the first six games were dropped, Glosser got some well-needed help from his teammates and allowed Santa Rosa only three runs on six hits to give the Rams their first win of the year a week ago Saturday. That victory gave him only a 1-3 record, but in all three losses he was hampered by several key errors and mistakes which hurt his chances for victory.

Glosser prefers his mound duties to those at first base, but turns in a steady job whenever he is on the initial sack for Coach Lee Eisan.

When asked about this year's squad, Glosser stated, "We were a little slow in getting together as a team, but we're improving all the time. We've made quite a few boners which have hurt us in a lot of our games, but we're always hustling."

Glosser believes that Sacramento is one of the top teams he has faced this year in the Big Eight pennant chase.

He started playing ball as a youngster in the police league and also is a past American Legion performer. For the past few summers he has been playing ball at Mount Shasta while working at a lumber company and hopes to go back up there this summer.

He'll return to the college next semester and continue studying to be a physical education teacher at the high school level. When not playing baseball, Glosser enjoys a good game of golf where he shoots in the low 80's.

Ably assisting Glosser with the hill chores are former Sacred Heart ace Earl Fauss, Polytechnic's Al LeMire, Sacred Heart's Roy Tripaldi, who is also the leading Ram stieker, Ernie Webster and George "Tom" Mix.

Fauss is the Rams' right-handed starter, who has rounded into shape very well and has been counted on many times this year by Coach Eisan.

Mix is another member of the Ram mound staff. "Tom" is mainly used in relief roles, but at times is called upon for a starting role. He played his high school ball at Polytechnic.

Another member of Eisan's mound corps, Webster, is used mainly in relief roles. His big pitch is his curve ball, which is a great help to him in his relief appearances.

LeMire is the Rams' regular second baseman but can be used as a relief hurler also, being an excellent pitcher. Tripaldi takes his turn on the hill when needed, but like LeMire, does not do much hurling for the team because he is used regularly at shortstop.

The last player to sock six hits in a major league game was San Francisco's Joe DeMaestri, while playing for Kansas City on July 8, 1955.

STS Wins CAB Basketball League

Sigma Tau Sigma, first place team in the Club Aetivities Board basketball league, increased its league standing by walloping The Guardsman 63-32, April 24 in the men's gymnasium.

The game started even up until the first ten minutes. After that Sigma Tau Sigma broke loose, led by Doc O'Connor, who hit 21 points. Niek Peters led The Guardsman with 17 markers.

Second place Hotel & Restaurant dropped its game to Alpha Phi Omega 41-32. Although losing the last game the H&R is still in second place.

The Filipino Club upset the Recreation Association in a close tilt, 32-31, to stop the RA from gaining second place.

Sigma Tau Sigma has definately won the CAB league and will play the winner of the Alpha Phi Epsilon Gamma Phi Ypsilon tilt for the Intramural laurels.—D.S.

Johnny Vander Meer, ex-Cincinnati Reds and Oakland Oaks pitcher, hurled two consecutive no-hit games for the Reds against Boston on June 11, 1939, and Brooklyn on June 15.

Wayward Saint Makes Bow In College's Little Theater Friday; Fisher In Lead Role

Imps and nymphs gambol across the Little Theater stage this Friday night as The Wayward Saint grapples with an agent of the devil for possession of his soul.

"This is a delightful, satirical comedy by the noted Irish playwright Paul Vincent Carroll," Michael Griffin, director of the production, said today, "and it is full of unusual and exciting effects."

Other strange aspects of the play include ghostly appearances of the nymphs, floating chairs and a talking lion. Stranger magic happens to cause lights to turn off and on at command, and clocks to start and stop at will.

Fred Fisher, who has been seen in the last three college productions, takes on a new and even more varied character than he has played in his last roles.

Now he adopts an Irish accent, and his character becomes that of a simple, kindly priest who is already being acclaimed as a saint in his native parish. He talks to birds and animals and persuades cherry trees to bear plums while settling the problems of his friends. The raising of a child believed to be dead brings the wrath of his bishop down upon him and he is exiled to a distant parish and placed in the care of an inflexible housekeeper named Killikat.

"Virginia Rae plays the part of this harsh and unfeeling woman and undergoes a startling transformation," Griffin stated. "It is her best role to date."

Baron de Balbus appears on the scene as an agent of the devil and rapidly charms all he meets. Played by Dave Tipton, the baron is a suave, much-traveled gentleman with a passion for women and love. He soon works his way into the canon's confidence by helping him get back his friends, two mules.

Maura Monihan, a pretty lass with a dreadful fear of becoming an old maid, comes on the scene and in the final act lends support to the canon in the face of all the powers of hell. Played by Leah Fashoian, this role too is filled by an actress who has been seen in all of the college productions this year.

Others in the cast include Jules Farmer as Salambo, Ann Asorno the nymph, Bob Carpenter as Mellara, making their first appearance on the Little Theater stage. Regularly seen David Terry, Jordy Cooney, Virginia Evans and Bruce Johnson round out the cast.

Curtain time for the production is 8 p.m., and admission is by Associated Student card or one-dollar general admission. A special price of fifty cents is offered for students from other schools and colleges. Dates for the production include the next three weekends, May 9, 10, 16, 17, 23 and 24.

Club Cavalcade

Organizations In Full Swing After Second Midterms

By Jerry Redford

WITH another midterm period having come and passed, the campus fraternities, sororities and clubs are focusing on the pinning of new members, and on social get-togethers and picnics.

Alpha Kappa Rho fraternity held a meeting during college hour last Friday in order to set a definite date for their piedge pinning and dinner. The date decided upon by the group was May 17. The site of the dinner hasn't been decided upon yet. Plans are also being made for a pledge-active softball game, to be held soon, and for a picnic with Zeta Chi sorority.

Several of the brothers and pledges of Alpha Phi Omega fraternity recently attended a steak dinner at the San Jose State College A.P.O. house, and later joined one of their meetings. Discussion centered around the coming national convention of the fraternity to be held at Austin, Texas, in August. Plans being drawn up now include a picnic with Gamma Sigma Sigma sorority, a joint with Zeta Chi sorority, and a formal dinner, to be held later in the month.

Gamma Kappa Beta sorority presented Mary Kelly, Rita Ramos, and Evonne Weisse at the annual Spring Cotillion Ball last Saturday. They are now completing plans for their pinning ceremony and dinner to be held on May 29.

Members of the International Relations Club are planning for a picnic to be held May 10. Site of the affair will be somewhere in Marin County. The IRC Fiesta Latino America was a great success, with an overflow crowd attending the show and dance.

Theta Tau sorority is making plans for the pinning of their pledges at the Claremont Hotel in Berkeley next Saturday. The pledges who will receive their pins are Lea Calderon, Dawnine Campbell, Diane Fowler, Lucy Hooker, Edie Lauihati, Pat Morton and Terry Pfotenhauer.

Members of the Engineering Society and their guests will attend the semi-annual dinner on May 24 at the El Portal Restaurant.

Marilyn Kotkas, June Ulan Receive Denman Awards

Denman scholarships of $125 each will be awarded here today to Marilyn Kotkas and June Ulan, two outstanding women students of the college, Mary Goiding, dean of women, announced.

The scholarships, which will be awarded at the Prep Day luncheon today, will be presented to the women by the principals of their high schools.

Miss Kotkas, a sociology major, is a member of Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society here, and in high school she was active in Tri Y and Job's Daughters. Her sister, Elaine, also attends classes here.

Miss Ulan, a language major, is manager of a folk dance group and is active in choir work in her church. Her ambition is to be a professor of Slavic languages.

Student Wins Award For Dramatic Poetry

Walter Conley, a student here, was named the winner of the Browning Society 1958 Poetry Competition on April 25.

Conley was presented with a check for $100 at a luncheon honoring his achievement at the Women's Athletic Club, San Francisco. Mrs. B. Franklin Nourse, retiring president of the Browning Society, made the presentation.

A transfer student from San Diego State, Conley is an English major. His winning poem was written in Browning's dramatic monologue, and was titled Jonah Outside The Whale.

Band Ready For Concert Performance On Friday

Music from musical comedy, opera and folklore will be featured in the City College Concert Band performance this Friday, under the direction of Meyer M. Cahn, band instructor here.

In addition to the plans for this college hour concert, the band is already busy on next week's program for jazz lovers at which a combo from the band will play several popular numbers. Jules Farmer, who recently appeared on Don Sherwood's television show, will sing two numbers at this show.

The band concert is planned for Cloud Hall library, while it is hoped that the jazz show can be outdoors by the Ram.

Student band director Nick Massenkoff will conduct the combo and arrange the program for the jazz show.

Beauty, Talent Combined In Drama Major

Sandra Hedger Among 16 Miss SF Finalists

By Pastor Valle-Garay

One of the city's 16 most beautiful and talented single young ladies is a student from the college, according to the San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce officers judging the preliminaries of the Miss San Francisco 1958 contest.

She is Sandra Hedger, a 5'10", brown-haired and green-eyed drama major, who was graduated from George Washington High School and is a Delta Psi sorority sister of one of the college's beautiful alumnae, Mrs. Frank Aletter, better known here as Lee Meriwether, Miss America 1955.

Eighteen years old two weeks ago, Miss Hedger will have the opportunity of becoming the city's official hostess during the finals of the Miss San Francisco Pageant of 1958, to be held at the Marines Memorial Theater on the evenings of May 13, 14 and 15.

The statuesque Miss Hedger likes all outdoor sports, especially ice skating and swimming. Her ambition, though, is to become a dramatic actress and, she admits with a warm smile, that she is "thrilled and nervous at the same time about the contest's final outcome."

SANDRA HEDGER, the college's Miss SF finalist.

She successfully went through with the pageant's preliminaries April 27 at the Fairmont Hotel, where her personality test and her three-minute talent routine, a comedy reading entitled At The Theater, won her the applause of the officers judging the contest and a place among the lucky, pretty 16 finalists.

Asked for her opinion on interplanetary flights, Miss Hedger convinced them that she was no moon-goer. "It would be nice to reach the moon," she said, "but I'm not exactly anxious to go. I was born here, love it here and plan to stay here. Besides, I'd rather swim than fly."

Prizes for the contest consist, among other things, of a complete course at the John Robert Powers School of Charm; a round trip to Mexico City and Acapulco via Western Airlines, a complete wardrobe, a three-day weekend in Las Vegas for the winner and her first runner-up and an all-expenses paid trip to the Miss California contest at Santa Cruz.

Tickets for the Miss San Francisco Pageant are $5 per person and they cover the three-night long affair. They may be obtained at the Junior Chamber of Commerce offices, 333 Pine Street; at the Powers School of Charm, 312 Sutter Street; at Sherman Clay, Kearny and Sutter Streets, or from one of the contestants.

Employment Interviews To Highlight Business Graduate Recruitment Day On May 15

Leaders from business, industry and government, representing 30 different institutions, will meet on the campus Thursday, May 15, when the Third Annual Business Graduate Recruitment Day is staged for February and June business graduates, Joseph A. Amori, director of placement here, announced last week.

Two hundred graduates, the largest number in the college's history, will be scheduled for 20-minute personal interviews with employers of their choice, leading to possible job placement in the San Francisco Bay Area.

Recruitment and procurement teams, composed of three staff members from each participating organization, will meet at 8 a.m. in the faculty dinning room, Smith Hall, for the traditional "kick-off" breakfast.

Leading the list of visiting institutional recruitment and procurement teams is the Pacific Gas and Electric Company of Northern California, whose personnel staffs throughout the State include many of the college's graduates.

The Emporium and Macy's represent the retail merchandising field. Finance firms include the Bank of America, the Crocker-Anglo National Bank and Wells Fargo. Insurance delegates from California Western, Fireman's Fund, Metropolitan Life, and Royal Globe will also be on hand.

Government representatives will be the California State Personnel Board and the United States Veterans Administration together with teams of the U. S. Civil Service Commission.

In addition to the above list, recruitment groups are looking for the airlines, food processing and manufacturing firms, oils and railroads are to be available when the interviews begin at 9:30 a.m. in Cloud Hall, where each company has been assigned private quarters.

Shooters Place 2nd In Matches

Despite low-ranking in comparison with their competition, the Campus Police pistol team walked off with the second place trophy at the annual San Mateo County Police Pistol Matches.

Placing first in the matches, which were held at the Colma Police Range on April 27, was the San Mateo Sheriff's Department with 1,105 total points, followed by the college's marksmen with 1,096. Scores of those sharpshooters who made up the Campus Police entries were Marion Timm's 278, high score for the day; Lou Paglierani scored 275, Bill Donohoe 273 and Larry Piott 270.

Other contestants in the Sunday matches were the Colma Police Department with 1,091, the Daly City police with 1,036, and the California Highway Patrol with 1,014.

May 14 Last Day For Filing Leave Of Absence Slips

Last day to file a petition for a leave of absence is next Wednesday, May 14, Howard Schoon, counselor, announced today.

Students who desire to take a leave must first make out the petition with their counselor and then file it with the registrar in her office, he stated. Those who file such a petition and intend to enroll in the fall will be admitted on the basis of their previous grades. "If students feel that by taking a leave they can disregard their midterm grades, they are mistaken," he said; "in fact, they may be disqualified from re-enrolling in September if they have poor grades."

Petitions may be granted if a student has no excess absences and provided he obtains the necessary signatures in doing so.

Schoon also reminded all students who are unable to keep their assigned pre-registration appointments with their counselor here either to come in person to S-160 or telephone the college at JU 7-7272, extension 8, prior to their appointment, and arrange counseling for a future date. He again encouraged students to comply with these regulations in order to avoid losing their early registration numbers.

"The students have responded fairly well, and so far only 105 have lost their original numbers," he commented.

Registration Day Deadline Set For Summer Session

Any student who wishes to attend the summer session of 1958 at the college must first plan his program with his counselor, pre-register during the period from May 12 to June 5, and confirm his registration on June 19, according to Olga Perkins, assistant to the registrar.

Summer session is a benefit to students here and to San Francisco high school graduates who have not as yet attended a college. Since confirming the registration is of the utmost importance, all who fail to do so will consequently be dropped from the list, Mrs. Perkins stated. Anyone who does confirm his registration and does not come during the summer will receive a grade of "F" in each course unless an official leave of absence is filed.

The place to pre-register for summer session is in the office of the registrar. There students will make out registration booklets and receive confirmation cards. The student must bring the card to the registrar's office on June 19 in order to officially confirm registration, Mrs. Perkins said.

She encouraged all interested students to check the tentative list of subjects which will be offered during the session, either in the registrar's office or in any of the counseling offices.

McClellan To Address Students, Faculty Friday

Dr. Charles McClellan, professor of political science at San Francisco State College and holder of a $100,000 grant for the study of international relations, will address students and faculty in S-100 Friday during college hour, Irving M. Witt, chairman of the Student-Faculty Lecture Committee, announced this week.

The lecture, the second of three academic presentations at the college this semester, will be open to all interested students and faculty.

This series began in April as a result of an editorial in The Guardsman, November 20, 1957, which called on the college to foster outside cultural events and bring these events to the college and to the attention of students and public alike.

Student Speaker Sought For 23rd Commencement

The quest for a student speaker to participate in the 23rd annual commencement exercises is underway, according to William E. Culver of the English department.

Culver announced that all students graduating at the end of this semester carrying a 3.5 grade average or better will be notified by letter of their eligibility to try out for the role of student speaker.

The try-out time, according to Culver, will be at 2 p.m. next Wednesday, May 14, in C-245, when the students will perform in the presence of a committee of 10 faculty members.

The committee members who will select the winning student are Culver, chairman; Lloyd D. Luckmann, Mary Golding, Ralph O. Hillsman, Mary Jane Learnard, Gertrude Somerville, Marcelline McDermott, Anka Persich, Claude T. Silva and John O. French.

The topic for the speech to be made by the student will be selected by the committee and the winning student. It will center around the general theme of the commencement exercises.

According to Culver, the more students trying out for the part, the better the chance of the winning student being the very best.

"The try-outs will not be open to non-participating students, because it seems to make the participants a little nervous," Culver said.

Today Slated As Deadline For Candidates To File Petitions; Campaigns On For 20 Offices

After two extensions, the final deadline for filing petitions of candidacy in Associated Student elections scheduled next Thursday and Friday, has been set for today, according to Steve Seitz, Election commissioner.

Campaigning for the 20 offices started yesterday, with the result that anyone submitting a petition at this time will be behind the other candidates.

"We should field a sizeable number of candidates in this election, because at this time there are three separate groups or tentative tickets taking shape," Seitz said. These are the Inter-Fraternity Council ticket, the Independent Party ticket, and a group of unnamed independents.

"It is too early to foretell how the situation will shape up by voting time, but at this point prospects look good for a hotly contested election," Seitz added.

Election activities move into full swing this week with the various campaigns conducted by different candidates and the election rally to be held on Friday. Campaigns consisting of poster displays and stunts, approved by the Election Commissioner, will continue through next week up to voting time.

The election rally will be held during college hour on Friday at the cafeteria. Each of the candidates for executive office will speak and candidates for the seats on council will be introduced.

Voting booths this semester, as in past semesters, will be set up at the silver pole in the Science Building, the fountain in Smith Hall, and at the library entrance to Cloud Hall. An innovation this time is that the ballots will be filled out by the individual, rather than by voting machine. The reason for this is that, because of the proximity of city elections, the machines cannot be released.

The New Reform Inter-Fraternity-Inter-Sorority Council Party met last Friday at Smith Hall to plan their campaign and to solidify their platform. Terry Chever presided over the convention as chairman.

Rally, Concert, Film On College Hour Slate Friday

Candidates for the forthcoming election of Associated Student officers will be presented at the election rally, to be held in the cafeteria during college hour, 10 to 10:40 a.m., this Friday. Steve Seitz, Election commissioner, expressed the hope that as many students as possible will attend because, he said, "This is certain to be an interesting event."

The college's dance band, under the direction of Nick Massenkoff, student band leader, will hold the Jazz Show during college hour on this date in the little theater or in the courtyard, dependent upon the weather, Meyer Cahn, band director, announced.

Because of a meeting of the Faculty Association in Room S-100, there will be no speaker during college hour this Friday, but a film entitled Frontier Vacationland, will be shown in S-136, according to Ralph Hilisman, dean of Student Activities. This is a travel picture showing Wyoming and the Far West vacation land area, with magnificent mountain shots.

Prop 'A' Passage In June 3 Vote To Benefit All

By Kevin Mullen

To keep abreast of the building program now underway at the college more funds will be necessary in the near future to staff and equip the new facilities, college authorities said today.

In 1956, the voters of San Francisco approved a bond issue to provide for increased building expenditures at the college along with other San Francisco schools.

The college's plans include a Fine Arts building to be constructed in the Hurley Village area now being torn down. The building will have an auditorium for the use of the Little Theater group, as well as music and ceramic rooms.

Proposition "A," if it is passed in the June 3 city elections, will make available more funds for hiring needed instructors and required equipment. If it is not passed, the present staff will have to be thinned out over the more extensive facilities.

Building plans also make provision for additions to the men's and women's gymnasiums and a track for the use of the college and local high schools.

Jack Patterson, Associated Student president, and his delegation of student leaders attended the California Junior College Student Government Association conference at Pasadena over the last weekend to discuss the feasibility of constructing a Student Union building on the campus.

If this dream is eventually realized along with the other building plans now taking shape, observers pointed out it will even more necessitate increased spending for staff and equipment.

The educational facilities are now available or are in the building stage, but to complete the picture, the passage of Proposition "A" is listed as a "must."

Awards Highlight Commencement

Highlighting the 23rd annual commencement exercises will be the presentation of top honor awards, according to John Brady, commencement committee chairman.

The Alice Eastwood Award consists of $100 in cash and is given to the student on the basis of potential contribution to horticulture. It honors the late Alice Eastwood of the California Academy of Sciences, a renowned botanist and horticulturist.

Students nominated for this prize are screened by the Alice Eastwood Awards committee.

Winners of the Alpha Gamma Sigma honor society awards will receive pins and life membership in the society and the top members will receive the Scholastic Cup.

Three other presentations are the Wall Street Journal Award going to a top business student, and the President's Award Plaque to the man and woman graduate who have given the most service to the college.

ASTE Scholarship To Robert Menzies

One of 12 international scholarships, donated annually by the American Society of Tool Engineering to students in this field, has gone to a student of the college, according to Wilbur D. Russell, engineering instructor here.

Recipient of the $400 International Education Award for 1958-1959 is student Robert W. Menzies. He is currently enrolled in the mechanical technology program here and is a student member of the San Francisco chapter No. 147 of the ASTE.

Menzies is planning a career in the tool engineering and manufacturing fields.

The scholarships, which for some years have been awarded to upper class university students of Canada and the United States by the ASTE, were offered for the first time this year to students attending two-year colleges and technical institutes.

Associated Collegiate Press Awards Guardsman 28th All-American Rating

Cited for superior achievement on all counts, The Guardsman was awarded its 28th All-American honor rating by the Associated Collegiate Press for the Fall 1957 volume.

The All-American rating given by the ACP is indicative of superior quality, and is the highest honor rating given by the association. Critical service awards include All-American, First Class, Second Class, and Third Class.

Semi-annually honor ratings are given to college's and universities entered in the competition from all over the United States. Entries are judged on the basis of general content, style, writing and coverage.

Of the 33 semesters that The Guardsman has been entered in the ACP ratings only five times has the paper received any other award than All-American. These five times the award given was First Class; first class is comparable to excellent in the ratings.

Special mention was given to the treatment of copy, make-up on all four pages, writing and coverage, and to headlines. Typography, style and creativeness were also graded excellent.

Members of the All-American editorial staff were Carol Harris, Editor-in-Chief; Pat Metsack, Managing Editor; Jacquie Waite, News Editor; Tom Tatera, Feature Editor; Nick Peters, Sports Editor; and Jerry Redford, Staff Editor. Editorial assistants for last semester include George Grasso, Esmeralda Aquilar, Ray Hackett, Ames Swartsfager, and Pastor Valle-Garay.

In addition to the certificate given by the ACP, the editorial board members of the winning semester are given special All-American award keys by the Associated Students.

Soph King, Queen Deadline Friday

Petitions for the Sophomore King and Queen contest will be due by 2 p.m. Friday, Jerry Redford, class president, announced last week.

Sign-up petitions are posted throughout the campus, Redford stated, including one in front of Dean Ralph Hilisman's office and one in the cafeteria of Smith Hall. Voting, which will begin Monday in the cafeteria, will be open only to Associated Students, Redford added.

He also reminded students that the Sophomore Ball will be held Saturday night, May 24, at the Village. At that time the winners of the Queen and King contest will be announced.

Redford also indicated that four sign-up lists are on campus for participants in the annual Soph-Prof softball game, to be held during a double college hour Friday, May 23. Deadline for sign-ups will be this Friday.

Mediterranean Display Wins

Horticulture Department Gets $270 Award, First Place Blue Ribbon For Plant Composition

The Floriculture Society of the college won first prize of $270, a blue ribbon for their display, plant composition and consistency in following the Mediterranean theme and was also rated second highest in outdoor structural design at the 26th Annual Spring Home and Garden Show that ended last Sunday in Oakland, according to Roosevelt Eatmon, horticulture club president.

The entries were judged by three top landseape architeets from Los Angeles, Santa Rosa and Sacramento and the awards were presented by the First District Agricultural Associatin on May 2.

The department's entry, which won in the University - College Division, was a 13 by 25 foot Mediterranean landscape, and consisted of a pathway of white gravel leading to an entrance with elevated courts, two columns, a pool, and a special four-foot dwarf orange tree with 30 oranges and an eight-foot olive tree. Eatmon mentioned (particularly for botany lovers) that the botanical name for the former is Oleaeuropaea and the latter one is called Citrus sinensis variety Shamouti.

"While Davis College, Oakland Junior College, and the Hilliside Gardeners of Mount Clair, a prominent women's club, gave us formidable competition," he stated, "we still managed to win first prize in our division."

Harry E. Nelson, horticulture director here, had the honor of judging entries in the individual flower division and Mary Hope Cummings, flower shop instructor, and her class also entered in the floristry division in a non-competitive display. According to Eatmon, this display was the "standout" for best flower arrangement.

Industries such as Western States Rock Company in Oakland often help the Horticulture Society in shows of this nature by lending white marble rock and many other necessary materials needed in preparing the displays, he added.

"The students showed such an intense interest in the affair that many even contributed entries on their own," he stated. Eatmon remarked that the show was the high-point in the semester for the department and that the students probably derived more experience from it than from any other event in the past.

Block SF To Sponsor Spring Dance Friday

With the proceeds going for trophies for the championship track and tennis teams, the Block SF will hold a dance this Friday night, May 16, from 9 p.m. to 12 midnight in Smith Hall, John Henry, Block SF president, announced last week.

The Swing Six combo will provide the music and dress will be sport. Theme for the dance, selected by the lettermen society, will be Spring 'n' Sports, with admission $1.25 drag and 75 cents stag.

Some profits from the dance will go to the spring sports awards banquet to be held Monday, June 2, Henry added. Officers of the Block SF are Mal McCormick, secretary; Doug North, treasurer, and Josh Williams, sergeant-at-arms. Dance committee members are McCormick, Larry Beldon, Marion Page and Henry.

Union Gives $500 To H&R Division

A $500 endowment fund was given to the college's Hotel and Restaurant division by the Executive Stewards and Caterers Association May 2, Lawrence Wong, H&R instructor here, said yesterday.

It was decided by H&R executives that a fund was necessary to encourage trained personnel in food preparation and service. The E.S.C.A. donated the endowment fund which will be offered here and at the University of Denver in Colorado during 1958.

Present at the meeting to accept the award for the H&R department were Dr. Louis Conlan, president of the college, and also attending the meeting were Louis Batmale, dean of Semiprofessional Courses, and Wong.

A Board of Trustees, composed of members of the H&R Foundation Inc. here, will decide on the administering of the fund, Wong said. Board members include Dean Batmale, President Conlan, Richard Flambert, restaurant consultant; John P. Gifford, United States Department of Education; Trim Loud, managing owner of the California Hotel; Wendell Muntz, director of school cafeterias; Carl Rutledge, manager of Navy shipyard cafeterias; and George D. Smith, owner-operator of Hotel Mark Hopkins.

CSTA'ers Discuss Earning Credential

The credential program was the subject of discussion at the May 9 meeting of the college California Student Teachers Association chapter.

San Francisco State College professors in education, Mrs. Lucile T. Engle and Dr. Paul B. Hale, addressed chapter members during college hour on the problems of obtaining a general elementary or secondary teaching credential. According to the speakers, a planned revision of credential requirements may include more courses in science and mathematics.

Increased Standard Of Living Necessitates Proposition 'A'

IN 1937, a man paid $700 for a new Ford. He also could purchase a three-bedroom house in a good neighborhood for $5,400. In 1937, the voters of San Francisco, who thought of a dollar in terms of its post depression value, set the statutory tax limit for the Board of Education at $2.00.

Since then, many things have changed. This country has lived through a world war and a police action. San Franciscans have filled the sandy wastes of the Sunset District with neat, white rows of homes and migrated in droves to the "country," the Peninsula.

However, the tax limit established in 1937 remains unchanged. This year, the Board of Education has found it necessary to come within two cents of this previously established limit. To maintain present educational standards during the 1958-59 school year, the board has estimated that a budget five cents in excess of the present limit will be necessary. To offset the difference, the Board of Education has placed Proposition "A" before the voters in the June 3rd elections. Proposition "A" allows for a raise in the tax limit from $2.00 to $2.50, a raise of 50 cents.

This means that the educational system will be alloted $2.50 out of every 100 tax dollars collected.

If the proposition is not adopted, it will mean that the school system will have to operate under the present tax limit. This means that needed instructors cannot be hired with the result that the size of classes will be increased and individual instruction decreased even more.

The kindergarten program will have to be eliminated, necessary maintenance will be postponed, and the purchase of necessary supplies and educational equipment will be limited.

In 1958 a new Ford costs over $3,000 and a three bedroom home in a good neighborhood costs upward of $20,000. To keep educational standards consistent with these drastic changes since 1937, it seems logical to adopt a raise in the statutory tax limit.—By Kevin Mullen.

Shots At Ramdom — Bohemianism Aped By Beat Generation

By Tom Tatera

BOHEMIANISM, the practice of striving for one's art to the exclusion of daily luxuries and necessities, is taking quite a drubbing from the new crop of Beat Generation boys who are mimicking them down at North Beach.

Though these two groups may have a similar surface appearance, they are actually miles apart in their basic principles. Where the Bohemian lives in squalor for his art, the Beat Generation boy is trying to make an art out of this kind of living. One starves out of necessity; the other starves because it is the thing to do.

There's no comparison between Greenwich Village and North Beach! But if there were, the Village wouldn't admit it!

A FEW of the track team were whooping it up on the return bus from Santa Rosa, when sudden calamity struck. Mean Mike Lewis grabbed Don Nasser's lucky ten-gallon hat from his head, and in the midst of the monkeyshines he accidentally threw it too near an open window.

Nasser's last words, as he stuck his tear-stained face out of the window, were "Come back, little sombrero." Quite dramatic, really. Wonder if the hat heard.

THE LITTLE THEATER has taken its place with the other Actors' Workshops in San Francisco. Its forthcoming play, Wayward Saint, is being given good mentions in the theatrical sections of the Sunday newspapers.

San Francisco recognizes the quality of these thespians, but the student's here still seem to be ignoring them. Perhaps it's a case of not being able to see the forest for the trees.

THAT LIGHT which glowed so brightly from the eyes of the invading high school clan last week was one of admiration! They were getting their first real glimpse of college students at work, and loving every minute of it. Ah, to be young again!

Just hope the light doesn't die down once they become inaugurated in the college's schedule.

Reporter Greeted By Teeth, Tables, Pretty Gals In Lab

By George Grasso

On the third floor of the Science Building, there's a room full of teeth, tables, and various other apparatus used by a number of young ladies studying dental assisting.

Dental assisting is a little-known, sometimes lampooned section of the college that stirs up in the minds of many, pictures of a group of girls sadistically pulling teeth. The average person is ignorant of what these people are like, and what induces them to try for such a job.

As this reporter toured the dental assisting lab guided by students Janice Brown and Barbara Crawford, he found that an assistant must also be a private secretary and a receptionist; that in the beginning, the drop out rate in this course is about half the class number.

One of the first shocks one gets when visiting the lab is that the girls are prettier than average. This could be one of the reasons that they usually marry within the first two years on the job. This is also one of the reasons there is a large turnover and a constant demand for more dental assistants.

The work and training is varied and includes everything from handling a blowtorch to comforting a small child in the chair. They melt gold, make teeth impressions, and in supplementary courses even dissect rats.

When pressed for a reason as to why they choose this field, the answers differ. But it usually boils down to wanting to help people. Monetary reward would scarcely enter into it, as the starting salary is about $300 per month.

Out Of Town Student Tells Of Experiences At College; Mom Getting Gray Hairs??

• • •

May 14, 1958

Dear Mom:

Just a short note to let everyone know what yours truly arrived safely in San Francisco last year! Would have written sooner, but studies keep us busy day and night. You know how it is.

Yes, studies take up a lot of time here. From the first class of the semester to the final examination, every instructor is doing his utmost to cram as much knowledge as possible into the student's head. They even go so far as to hand out homework and expect it to be done by the next day.

Gee, high school was never like this. Things get so bad at times that a guy doesn't even have time to take in a few extra-curricular activities, such as dances, parties, club meetings, dates, dinner gatherings and card parties with the boys.

If worse comes to worst, some instructors may even expect assignments to be done over the weekend. There ought to be a law!

Thanks a lot for the Christmas shirt which you and Dad sent. It's just the thing for college. A button down collar, with hot red, yellow and purple stripes running up and down and sideways. All the guys here say it's really different.

Would also like to put in a word of thanks for the sport shirts which you sent on New Year's and Easter. They, too, were different. By the way, where did you happen to buy these shirts?

Have been living in a two-room flat since last year, the address of which is on this envelope. Would appreciate you mailing any further gifts or letter here, instead of to the college. That last fruitcake you sent got lost in a corner of the registration room. They would never have found it, except that the package began to throw off some peculiar odors after awhile.

Not that the cake was ruined. It's just that you had soaked it in rum, and rum begins to ferment if it stands too long. So please, send any future gifts to the address on this envelope.

It's really great to be living alone in a flat. Am learning a lot about cooking this way, too. The cupboard is just filled with jars of instant coffee, packages of instant soup, and cans upon cans of pork and beans.

There's nothing to making this stuff, either. Just swish the can-opener around a few times, dump the contents into a pot, and turn on the old heat. That's all!

Of course, you have to be careful when using a sharp can-opener. Got a slight cut by one last week. Nothing serious. The doctor said it had missed the bone entirely, and should heal perfectly in a few months.

But aren't you proud that your son is learning to live by himself so well?

Have to sign off now. Left the water running in the bathtub, and its' beginning to flow over the sides.

Be seeing ya,

—Your loving Junior.

P.S. If Dad gets a court order, tell him not to worry. Got a parking ticket on the car before leaving, and forgot to tell him about it.

USSR's Foreign Policy Danger To Free World

By Don Seratti

HAVING heard about how Communists have never ruled anywhere in the world with the consent of the governed, people often claim the only way they can stay in power is by force, that they wouldn't stand a chance in a free election.

Such a belief, however, is no longer valid, for Communists and Communist sympathizers have recently succeeded in winning high political positions in such countries as India and Indonesia not by force, but through free elections.

When Communists are able to promote their nefarious objectives through free elections in many uncommitted nations, the West has a problem of enormous magnitude on its hands.

Heretofore, our knowledge that Russia had to resort to force to rule a country shifted our emphasis to military assistance for questionably inclined countries, on the premise that weapons shipments would be sufficient to thwart the advance of communism and to keep the recipient nations on our side.

This has caused many Americans to overlook the establishments of economic and cultural ties with the world's neutral countries. It is in this vital field where Russia is pulling the rug out from under us while we sit back and maintain that our way of life is superior to all others and that all other countries will one day see things as we do.

If this indifference isn't halted and a more imaginative and practical policy adopted, we will soon be reading reports similar to the ones explaining how we lost China. Only this time they will be entitled, "How We Lost India," and "How We Lost Syria."

What is wrong with the current American attitude toward the uncommitted countries? It may be that we still have not sufficiently modified our policy to meet the new threat offered by Russia since 1945. On the other hand, Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev have formed an extremely active foreign policy.

Soviet propaganda experts are hard at work convincing the countries in Asia and Africa that they have a great deal in common with each other. Russia and these nations are both on the rise, economically speaking, and a favorite Communist line is, "We're both in the process of building our economies. Why not do it together?"

Also, the Russians play on the bitterly remembered Western colonization of such nations as Egypt and India. They announce that they want to join these countries in driving out all remaining Western "oppressors."

With their proximity to these areas, their shrewd propaganda tactics and their establishment of common ground with these countries, the Soviets at this time hold all the aces in the vital battle for men's minds.

We can no longer disdain the advances made by Russia in the cold war, nor can we merely hope for a drastic change in the world's way of thinking.

What is needed is a more active American policy towards the uncommitted peoples, a policy that can spring only from an increased awareness of what we stand to lose if this is not carried out.

The American citizen, sitting complacently in his new home and with a new car in his garage, has to be made to realize that these luxuries can be enjoyed only as long as our country's foreign friends and the trade and assistance they offer, are maintained.

Russia's ultimate aim is to isolate us from our friends aboard so that one day America will be virtually surrounded by hostile forces.

But if the American populace can be made to apply pressure on the government to take action overseas, this country can still regain its loss of prestige abroad before it is too late. It can increase foreign aid to the neutrals, try to solve their most pressing problems by raising their educational and living standards, and initiate cultural exchanges with them.

This is what we must do to retain the friendship of the uncommitted countries whose choices of allegiance will one day make us either strong favorites or weak underdogs in the struggle against communism.

Actually, March doesn't ask any questions. He gives her orders on the bowling shots which she must complete successfully to win the loot.

Miss Craig is undoubtedly a good bowler, but is the 64 show the place for it? What happened to championship bowling?

Ramblings — Ram Netter Climbs High In Local Tennis

By Nick Peters

NINETEEN-year-old Jim Watson, the college's number one tennis player, recently made people take notice of his exceptional racket wizardry by upsetting fourth-seeded Chet Bulwa 9-7, 6-3, 7-5, to win the 14th Annual Northern California Tennis Championships at Golden Gate Park on May 5.

With this happy turn of events, Watson must be considered one of the best young players in California, since he also won the Big Eight Conference championship that same weekend.

Watson, however, isn't the only promising young netman from this area. Others who will have to be reckoned with in the immediate future are Chris Crawford and Bobby Siska. Piedmont High's 18-year-old Crawford was the recent winner of the Claremont Country Club's men's invitational tourney by besting University of California stalwart Cliff Mayne, who reached the quarterfinals at Forest Hills last summer. Watson and Crawford, incidentally, were both unseeded upon entering the tourneys.

Another San Franciscan, Lincoln High's 15-year-old Siska, might well be the best of the talented trio. At his young age he already has won several key tourneys, including the 1958 AAA title, and is a good bet for future stardom. It's within the realm of possibility that these three racketeers may someday be battling it out for national laurels . . . We wouldn't bet against it.

Romans may have contributed a great deal to the development of our civilization, but they did no justice to our Giants in recent baseball series at the Stadium. Philadelphia Phillies righthander Roman Semproch became the first batter to shutout the local pros when he turned the trick a couple of weeks back with a neat six-hitter. Not that this wasn't enough, Pittsburgh Pirate outfielder Roman Mejias proceeded to singlehandedly conquer the Giants with a three-homer output on May 4. These boys literally had a Roman Holiday!

Incidentally, it's a shame that Mejias had to carry on in such a manner because now ignorant Easterners can continue belching that the ball parks on the West Coast aren't fit for big league baseball. We buy that when the finger is pointed toward the Coliseum, but no one in his right senses can say that Seals Stadium is lacking in major league luster, as far as the playing field is concerned.

A quick look at the figures will show that the Giants' ball field is larger statistically than the rest of the National League homes. The average distances of the six other NL parks (excluding the controversial cracker-box at LA) fall short of Seals Stadium standards with the exception of the center-field distance.

The average left field dimension is 343.8 (330.5 with LA) while the Giants' fence is listed as 365 feet away, a relatively large 21.2 difference. In right field the average is 328.8 (324.7 with LA), while the 16th and Bryant park boasts of a 26.2 increase with a 355-foot distance barrier. Center field at Seals Stadium is 410 feet away, a bit under the 419.8 (422.7 with LA) average standard, but still not as noticeable a distance as the Giants' superiority in left and right field measurements.

The point is before opening one's mouth and cutting down a park beautiful as San Francisco's one should look at the figures and finally agree that San Francisco baseball is Major League baseball.

Former college baseballer Ben Dito, who was an All-Conference second baseman for Bill Fischer's Rams in '53 and '54, is now the sports editor of the USF Nite Owl, the official publication of the evening division students at the Hilltop.

Talented Dito, a marketing major scheduled for commencement, is rated by Fischer as his All-Star second baseman in an all-time team chosen by the retired skipper in 1953. The Nite Owl sports section is actually better, in our book, than its much publicized daytime adversary, The Foghorn.

Besides holding the major league record for hitting in 56 consceutive games in 1941, Joe DiMaggio also holds the Pacific Coast League record in that department with a 61-game streak for the Seals in 1933.

Profs Break Out Rubbing Oil

Soph Softballers Seek Revenge For 16 To 1 Trouncing Last Year

With the closing of the spring semester coming up fast, ball fans are looking forward to the annual Soph-Prof softball scrap which will be held this year on Friday, May 23, during a double college hour.

Soph hopefuls are signing up to meet the challenge of the slugging faculty members who have made life miserable for the student outfits in the past. Soph manager Nick Peters thinks he has a new rookie prospect who can really chuck the apple over the plate with a blaze of speed, but for fear of reprisal from the prof camp, Peters is hesitant in naming this new hurling ace.

A few well-known names have appeared on the signup sheet, and it looks as though the underdog collegians will field a hard-hitting squad that will offer the veteran faculty nine some tough competition. Among those signed up so far are several basketballers who are hoping to get back at the physical education department instructors who persist in giving the eggers a bad time. Mal McCormick, Doug North and Stan Rosenberg are ready to go against the Prof varsity.

Ram gridders Jeff Stahl and Josh Williams are getting their arms in shape and looking for a win over the big bad profs.

On the other side of the fence it looks as though the Profs will send their ace chucker, "Rapid" Roy Diederichsen, to the hill to face the student hitters. Of course, the other members of the men's physical education outfit will be in shape for this tussle. Sid Phelan will use his famous "Elephant" arm from his outfield spot, and roughhousers "Acid" Alex Schwarz and Grover "Tremor" Klemmer are sharpening up their spikes.

Other well-known faculty members who have played in the annual game in the past and who are looking forward to see action again this time around are "Rugged" Ralph Hillsman, who was one of the outstanding hitters in last year's 16 to 1 route of the Sophs, and catcher "Jolting" Joe Amert.

Even though the Profs swamped the Sophs last year and hold an edge of 15 wins to the students' one victory, this year's crop of Sophs are hopeful of fielding a rough and ready team to match the Profs.

There's a lot of action in store for any sophomore who has earned at least 24 units and is not the recipient of a Block SF for baseball. All he has to do is see Peters and sign on the roster for the chance to avenge the many losses to the Profs in the past and take part in a great ball game.—J.H.

Netters In State Finals

Big Eight Champions Saschin, Watson, Watters, Scharf To Represent College At Visalia

By Warren Downes

State tennis championships are slated to be held at Visalia this Friday and Saturday.

The winners from the state sectional matches, which were held last Friday and Saturday at Modesto, will play for the state championships in both singles and doubles competition.

The week preceding the sectionals the Big Eight Conference teams held their championships at Golden Gate Park here in the city, to determine who would represent the conference in the state sectionals. The eight top players in the singles and the eight top teams in the doubles were decided during this tournament.

Jim Watson and Nick Scharf, both from the college, won the right to represent the conference along with Don Mordecai and Ed Dunlap, Santa Rosa; Bob Burton, Oakland; George Powers, San Mateo; Bill Harader, Modesto, and Ray Rich, Sacramento.

In the doubles matches the conference representatives were Fred Watters-Jim Watson and Vic Saschin-Nick Scharf of the Ram squad; Dunlap-Modacsi and Tom Caufield-Jerry Sundahl, Santa Rosa; Jerry Nicolet-Russ Wickwire and Warren Mines-Bob Burton, Oakland; Bob Roster-Bill Harader, Modesto; and Tony Fadelli-George Powers, San Mateo.

After the eight representatives of the conference were decided, the tournament continued until a champion had been determined. The singles winner was Watson of the Ram squad, who defeated his teammate Scharf, 6-3, 5-7, 12-10, for the conference championship. Watson also won the doubles title, combining with Watters to defeat Powers-Fidelli, 6-4, 6-2.

During the regular season the Ram tennis squad was undefeated and easily won the Big Eight Conference championship. Santa Rosa, San Mateo, Stockton, Modesto and Oakland all fell to the Ram power, but were able to win one match. Sacramento and West Contra Costa were shutout by the college netters.

Watson, Scharf, Saschin and Watters were undefeated in league competition and Jim Howard won all but one of his singles matches. Watson-Watters were victors in all their doubles matches and proved their strength by winning the conference doubles crown. Scharf-Saschin, the number two doubles team on the Ram squad, proved their strength by powering their way to the sectionals.

GYP Champions Of Fraternity Cage Tourney

Gamma Phi Ypsilon won the fraternity laurels edging Alpha Phi Epsilon 19-18, May 6, in the men's gymnasium.

Although the tilt was tied several times, the Gammas never lost the lead. At the half the score was 10-8. After the tip-off opening the second half, the Gammas jumped to a six-point lead, the biggest of the night.

The most exciting part of the game was within 40 seconds of the final buzzer. The Gammas were in possession of the ball when John Cahalan was fouled. Shooting one and one, Cahalan hit the first shot and missed the second. With six seconds left in the game Willie Holman and Larry Morgan got off a shot apiece, but failed to make them.

At the same time as the Alpha Phi loss, the Gamma second team downed Alpha Sigma Delta fraternity, 58-8, led by Ron Rahmer's 20 points.

In other games, Zeta Phi Sigma nipped Alpha Kappa Rho, 30-27. This loss for the Kappa Rhos dropped them out of their third place tie. Since they lost this game, Phi Beta Delta, who took a practice game from Beta Tau 30-27, finished in an undisputed third place, losing only to the first and second place teams.

The Gammas finished the fraternity league with a clean 8-0 record. They scored 420 points to their opponents' 138. They averaged 52 points a game to their opponents' 17. Next Wednesday, May 21, the Gammas will play Sigma Tau Sigma of the Club Activities Board for the intramural title.

Title Hopes Dim With Link Loss

Chances for the Big Eight Conference Championship were diminished last May 2 for the City College golfers. The Rams, who took on the undefeated San Mateo squad, lost the match after the first nine holes. At the conclusion, the score was 12 to 3.

"Actually this was quite an even match, despite the large scoring margin," Coach Grover Klemmer stated, "for all the boys on both sides were shooting similar strokes."

Elden Davis led the team in strokes, hitting 78 and scoring one point. Charles Pierce shot 79 and split the round; Gordon Gruber also hit 79 to score ½ point.

A conference match in Santa Rosa was held last May 8 to determine the first top six golfers in the league. Trophies were awarded to these top medalists, and the results of this match will be published next week.

As it now stands, every other team that the college has played has dropped two or more matches. This means that after the league positions are officially totaled, the squad should appear in good standing.

Coaches Call Meeting For Fall Footballers

All eligible men students who are interested in playing or managing football for the college this fall are openly invited to attend a brief meeting at the men's gymnasium on Monday, May 26, at 12 noon.

This meeting, conducted by Coaches Grover Klemmer and Alex Schwarz, will consist of a general information briefing and a football signup. Men who cannot attend should see Klemmer or Schwarz at the men's gymnasium.

Top Ram Hitter Could Prove To Be Pro Prospect

By John Henry

Hard-hitting Ram shortstop Ray Tripaldi is one of the Big Eight's outstanding hitters as he is slugging the ball at an unofficial .425 mark as of last week. If Coach Lee Eisan had a few more sluggers like "Trip" the Red Rams would be fighting it out for top honors in the conference.

Tripaldi stands 5'9", tips the scale at about 175 and will celebrate his 19th birthday next week. All of these statistics along with a lot of baseball "savvy" produce a top professional prospect.

The former Sacred Heart athlete started playing baseball when he was in grade school and has been at it ever since. He played American Legion ball like most high school performers, and is a veteran of semi-pro battles on Sunday afternoons. While at Sacred Heart, where many outstanding hardballers are produced, Tripaldi played third base and shortstop, and in his senior year did a little pitching for Coach Dick Murray, coming through with two wins and no losses. Tripaldi prefers shortstop to the other spots and that's where he performs for the college nine.

Earlier in the year Tripaldi had a big afternoon for himself at Modesto when he went five for six in a twin bill. The following weekend when the Rams played host to league-leading Santa Rosa, the Bearcubs were knocked from their perch thanks to a six for nine hit parade by the shortstop, as the Rams won both games of the doubleheader. It was "Trip's" three bagger that brought home teammate Gene Craft with the winning run of the nightcapper.

Tripaldi believes that the team got a late start and was in the hole before the season was several weeks old. "We weren't playing together the first part of the season," Tripaldi remarked, "but now we're looking a lot better and playing as a team."

He is a physical education major and would like to coach someday in a high school or perhaps a college. As far as professional ball is concerned, "Trip" stated that, "If I get the chance, I'd like to give it a try." After graduation from the college, he expects to continue his education at San Jose State.

During his leisure time the slugging shortstop enjoys just "taking it easy" and during football season backs the 49'ers.

Ram Thinclads In Big 8 Title Meet

The Ram thinclads, following a two week rest, move to Modesto this Saturday to compete in the annual Big Eight Championship track and field meet.

Last Saturday at the Fresno Relays, the college's mile relay team took a fifth in 3:21, along with Mike Lewis, who set a shot record at 53-11.

Two weeks ago the powerful eindermen sewed up the Big Eight dual meet championship in a four-way meet at Santa Rosa. With their strong field event men, the Rams stand a good chance to bring home the Modesto championship also. Medals will be awarded to the first six places. Trials will be run off at 10 a.m. and the finals at 3 p.m.

The first four men in the finals will travel to the Northern California meet at Santa Rosa Saturday, May 24. From this meet, the participants will be chosen for the State Relays at Modesto Saturday.—Sp. 31

League Leaders Edge Rams In Tenth, 3-2

The colleges' hardball nine dropped their second straight game by a 3 to 2 score when they were edged by Oakland's T-Birds last Tuesday, May 6, at Bushrod Park across the Bay Bridge.

Oakland grabbed the league lead as they scored the winning marker in the tenth inning to hand the Rams their second loss in a row after Lee Elsan's troops pulled out of their slump to cop three straight wins.

Men Plentiful Here

Washington High, Nineteen Year Olds Lead Enrollment

By Richard Dyer

San Franciscans account for 61 per cent of the total enrollment here this semester, 337 students hail from foreign countries, and men outnumber women students almost three to one, according to recent figures released by Mary Jane Leanard, registrar.

George Washington High School leads in the field of San Francisco high school graduates with 620 students, followed by Lincoln's total of 481.

Other school totals include the following: Balboa 383, Lowell 340, Polytechnic 303, Galileo 295, Mission 246, Commerce and Benjamin Franklin 138, Gompers and John O'Connell 24, Continuation 7, San Francisco Unified School District 17, private schools 601, East Bay 239, other California 554, non-high school graduates 347, and other United States 728.

Of the 337 foreign students here, the Philippine Islands has the highest total with 59. Next in order are Japan with 34, Nicaragua 32, China 29, Iran 19, British Isles 16 and El Salvador 14.

Ages of students range from 15 to over 40, with 19-year-olds dominating with 1,206. There are 113 who are over 40 compared to the 25-year-old bracket with 1,316.

Miss Learnard added that breakdown of enrollment on states, although never compiled here before, will be made next semester.

Photography Scrapbook Project Put Off Till Next Semester; Other Exhibitions In Cloud Hall

Presentation of the City College Scrapbook, a photo display covering the campus' 23-year-old history, has been cancelled.

Originally scheduled to take place this month at the Cloud Hall gallery, the project will now be shown there next semester, according to Emmett E. Smith, photography instructor here in charge of the presentation.

The cancellation is due to the fact that many special events shows have been arranged this semester, Smith said, adding that he also hopes to obtain, with the postponement, "more response from the students as well as from the faculty" for the fall-scheduled display.

"We are very much interested in pictures and some documents concerning the West Campus, faculty members, outstanding students, special social affairs and exceptional sports events," he said. "In general, it's our desire to present the students here with a scrapbook that will record completely and accurately the history of the college as seen through photographs."

These "shots" can be submitted to Smith at C-249 and they will be returned to their owners after the presentation.
